Are our faces red? They are! But we believe you will understand when we explain it to you. As you know, we are using the facilities of East Carolina College in which to entertain the Seventh Nationwide Free Will Baptist League Conference on June 12-14. In our advertising, we told you the price of the rooms in the dormitories "included linens." And here is where we are embarrassed:

The College finds it is unable to furnish the linens; so we are having to ask you to "bring your own linens." When you pack your bags to come, slip in a couple of sheets (either single or double width), one pillow case and a couple of towels.

Please forgive us for having to ask you to do this, but it is a situation over which we have no control. Do hurry and be here for the very first session; we promise to make up this inconvenience to you in some other way.

ily of God makes up the Church of God; and when we read of the family of God in the Scriptures, we read of the children of God. Unto Him be the glory of the Church in all ages—the first age before the flood, the second age from the flood to Christ, and the third age in which we live. Some people seem to think there was no spiritual Church under the law but let us notice the following Scripture: "And did all eat the same spiritual meat; And did all drink the same spiritual drink: for they drank of that spiritual Rock that followed them: and that Rock was Christ" (1 Corinthians 10:3, 4). The foundation of the Church was laid when God offered the Seed of the woman which was Christ. Since that time men have been saved in all ages.

"And to Seth, to him also there was born a son; and he called his name Enos; then began men to call upon the name of the LORD" (Genesis 4:26). The children of God who constitute the Church are called by the same names in the Old Testament as they are in the New Testament. In conclusion let us notice some of these names:

In the Old Testament they are called saints (Psalm 89:5).

In the New Testament they are called saints (Ephesians 1:1).

In the Old Testament they are called brethren (Psalm 133:1).

In the New Testament they are called brethren (1 Corinthians 10:1).

In the Old Testament they are called the flock (Ezekiel 34:17).

In the New Testament they are called the flock (1 Peter 5:2).

In the Old Testament they are called children (Deuteronomy 14:1).

In the New Testament they are called children (Romans 8:16).

In the Old Testament they are called sheep (Psalm 79:13).

In the New Testament they are called sheep (John 10:11).

Only One to Please

A young man had just become pastor of a large church. At a reception given him by his people, one of the gossips, a woman with a dangerous tongue, came up and said: "I do not understand how you dared attempt the task of pleasing seven hundred people."

Quick as a flash the Lord gave him the answer. He replied: "I did not come to this city to please seven hundred people. I have to please only One; and if I please Him all will be well."—The Watchman Examiner.

Six Months on the Field for # Superannuation

K. V. Shutes
National Secretary

I HAVE been thinking for several days of giving you my findings of six months on the field:

First, The Joys: There have come many joys to my heart by visiting in so many churches, meeting so many fine ministers that I never knew, so many fine folk I never knew, and probably whom I would have never met had I not been on the field. I have also seen many conversions in these one-night services.

I have been to many places, churches and homes where they treated me as royally as a statesman or king.

Second, The Sorrows: The sorrows have been many. I have found many of the ministers working at other occupations and who will soon draw Social Security; therefore, they are not interested in the plan of retirement for the minister. I have driven many miles to find a church dark and no one there to tell me anything, because the one who did the advertising failed or the one who got the news failed to tell it.

I have found the job of getting itineraries about the hardest job of all. The doors are closed in so many places because of budgets, programs, special meetings, ceremonies, sings, homecomings, etc.

I have found so many of the dear men of God who are not getting one dime from their state superannuation funds. Many of them went through heat and cold to get to a brush arbor, store house, home or some old building to get a church started that now is a full-time church with a full-time pastor. Many of these who pioneered for Jesus and Free Will Baptists have been forgotten by the people whom they served.

Third, The Purpose of this Program: It is the purpose of the program of National Superannuation to try to endow every minister between the ages of 21 and 55 with $1,000 or $2,000 insurance to begin with, and more later when funds are sufficient to do so. We also purpose to get every state board to functioning to the point that the elderly minister who needs help now can have a monthly check from his state board.

We are asking the churches to come to our aid by paying an amount equivalent to the minister's half of his yearly premium. I have found many churches willing to pay half of their minister's premium, and some that wanted to pay all of it. Yet there are some who are against it because it will cost a few dollars.

Fourth, The Response: The response in many places has been good, yet in other places it will not pay my gas bill. But all the secretaries have found this true. One cannot judge all the good done by one single service.

I have found quarterly meetings and associations where there was not a single person in them subscribing to either of our church papers. We are not reaching one-fourth of our folk by all three papers.

I earnestly solicit your prayers for this department of our work, and not only this department, but for every department. I am interested in every department and I feel that every good Free Will Baptist should be too.

THE MAIL BOX

Churches Desire Pastor

"The Trinity Free Will Baptist Church and the Belhaven Free Will Baptist Church of Beaufort County, North Carolina, are trying to secure a pastor to serve both churches for the coming year. Services are to be divided between the two churches: two Sundays at Trinity and two Sundays at Belhaven. These two churches are located only 15 miles apart, and it is the desire of both churches to have the pastor live in this locality."—Delma R. Tolan, Clerk, Belhaven Free Will Baptist Church, Belhaven, North Carolina.

North Carolina Visitors

"We would like all of our friends to know that we are now in North Carolina for a few days. We recently left Davis, North Carolina, where two precious souls were won for Christ. We are feeling the presence of the Lord in all of our meetings.

"We completed two revivals in North Missouri before coming to North Carolina, and we hope to see many of our friends in this state before leaving. All mail should be sent to Harker's Island where we are staying in the home of Brother and Sister Chesson."—Rev. and Mrs. H. M. McAdams, Route 3, Huntsville, Texas.

Freewill Offerings for Wabash Church

"Six years ago a group of people came to the state of Indiana from various Free Will Baptist churches in eastern Kentucky to find employment. At that time we started having cottage prayer meetings and had only one ordained deacon in the group.

"Since coming to this state, we have organized six churches and established our Indiana Conference known as the Kosciusko County Conference of Indiana. We now have a total of ten ordained ministers, four licensed ministers and three that are not licensed as yet.

"We, at Wabash, are, at the present, renting a building in which to worship. However, we have under construction a new building which measures 35 by 50 feet which, when completed, will cost approximately $8,000. Since we have only 61 members at the present time, and have spent $3,500 of our own money and borrowed by way of note an additional $3,000 with which to continue construction, we are desperately in need of financial help.

"We would appreciate a freewill offering from your church to aid in the completion of this church as we believe we are in a great work in the state of Indiana.

"When completed we will send you by return mail a notice of dedication date."—Robert McCarty, Clerk, Free Will Baptist Church, Wabash, Indiana.

Questions and Answers ON THE BIBLE

Conducted by J. F. BARROW

3824 Richland Avenue, Nashville 5, Tennessee

Question: Is there not some good in Spiritualism? Might a Christian attend the meetings and gain some good thereby?—A. G.

Answer: No there is absolutely no good at all in Spiritualism and therefore no good to be gained from the attendance at any of the meetings. No one may attend such meetings without being hurt or hurting some one else in doing so. We are called upon to be separated from all such. The same may be said of Christian Science, Russellism (Jehovah's Witnesses, Millennial Dawnism), Seventh-Day Adventism, Catholicism, etc. They are all fakes, diabolical in plan and purpose and will have a deceiving influence on any who take up time with them, whether in reading their literature, listening to their programs over the radio, seeing them on television or taking up time with their personal contact, men and women and literature distributors. They have a form of godliness, but deny the power of God and His unmixed truth as is found in our Bible.

In the first place God commands spiritual mediums and their predecessors to be put to death. "Thou shalt not suffer a witch to live" (Exodus 22:18); one who has dealings with spiritualism is thereby spiritually defiled and unfit to appear before God to worship Him. "Regard not them that have familiar spirits, neither seek after wizards, to be defiled by them: I am the LORD your God" (Leviticus 19:31).

God will cut off from among his people all who go after spiritism. "And the soul that turneth after such as have familiar spirits, and after wizards, to go a whoring after them, I will even set my face against that soul, and will cut him off from among his people" (Leviticus 20:6). Capital punishment by stoning was God's sentence on a spiritual medium. "A man also or a woman that hath a familiar spirit, or that is a wizard, shall surely be put to death: they shall stone them with stones: their blood shall be upon them" (Leviticus 20:27).

spiritism and are equally condemned by God in the Bible. "There shall not be found among you any one that maketh his son or his daughter to pass through the fire, or that useth divination, or an observer of times, or an enchanter, or a witch" (Deuteronomy 18:10). Trafficking in spiritism was the main reason for which God destroyed the Canaanite nations. See Deuteronomy 18:10 above. "Or a charmer, or a consulter with familiar spirits, or a wizard, or a necromancer. For all that do these things are an abomination unto the LORD: and because of these abominations the LORD thy God doth drive them out from before thee" (Deuteronomy 18:11, 12).

Samuel, as God's spokesman, linked Saul's unforgivable disobedience with spiritistic witchcraft. "For rebellion is as the sin of witchcraft, and stubbornness is as iniquity and idolatry. Because thou hast rejected the word of the LORD, he hath also rejected thee from being king" (1 Samuel 15:23). When Saul, King of Israel, was zealous for God and desirous of carrying out His will he cleansed the whole land of spiritual mediums. "... And Saul had put away those that had familiar spirits, and the wizards out of the land" (1 Samuel 28:3).

Saul himself consulted a spiritual medium only after he had lost communication with God. "And when Saul enquired of the LORD, the LORD answered him not, neither by dreams, nor by Urim, nor by prophets. Then said Saul unto his servants, Seek me a woman that hath a familiar spirit, that I may go to her, and inquire of her. And his servants said to him, Behold, there is a woman that hath a familiar spirit at Endor" (1 Samuel 28:6, 7). The loss of Saul's crown and his wretched death were God's judgment upon him because he had had dealings in spiritism. "So Saul died for his transgressions which he committed against the LORD, even against the word of the LORD, which he kept not, and also for asking counsel of one that had a familiar spirit, to enquire of it; And enquired not of the LORD: therefore he slew him, and turned the kingdom unto David the son of Jesse" (1 Chronicles 10:13, 14).

Among the sins of wicked Manasseh was spiritism. "And he caused his children to pass through the fire in the valley of the son of Hinnom: also he observed times, and used enchantments, and used witchcraft, and dealt with a familiar spirit, and with wizards: he wrought much evil in the sight of the LORD, to provoke him to anger" (2 Chronicles 33:6).

The traffic in spiritism was given as a reason for God's rejection of Israel. "Therefore thou hast forsaken thy people the house of Jacob, because they be replenished from the east, and are soothsayers like the Philistines, and they please themselves in the children of strangers" (Isaiah 2:6). God is insulted when one who may consult Him appeals to the dead instead. "And when they shall say unto you, Seek unto them that have familiar spirits, and unto wizards that peep, and that mutter: should not a people seek unto their God? for the living to the dead?" (Isaiah 8:19).

Like that girl in Philippi out of whom, in the name of Jesus, Paul cast out an unclean spirit, the spiritual medium is demon possessed. "And it came to pass, as we went to prayer, a certain damsel possessed with a spirit of divination met us, which brought her masters much gain by soothsaying: The same followed Paul and us, and cried, saying, These men are the servants of the most high God, which shew unto us the way of salvation. And this did she many days. But Paul, being grieved, turned and said to the spirit, I command thee in the name of Jesus Christ to come out of her. And he came out the same hour" (Acts 16:16-18).

The true Christian, like those at Ephesus, must have nothing whatever to do with the dark practices of spiritism. "Many of them also which used curious arts brought their books together and burned them before all men: and they counted the price of them, and found it fifty thousand pieces of silver" (Acts 19:19).

The teachings of spiritism are "doctrines of demons." "Now the Spirit speaketh expressly, that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of devils" (1 Timothy 4:1).

Spiritism is not the works of the Spirit of God, but is of the "flesh," and those guilty of the works of the "flesh" cannot inherit the kingdom of God. Those who have to do with spiritism in any form have no place in heaven. "For without are dogs, and sorcerers, and whoremon-

The Lighted Pathway

Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path (PSALM 119:105).

REV. WILLET L. MORETZ
SWANNANOVA, N. C.

"And that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem" (Luke 24:47).

These words are part of Christ's final discourse and instructions to His disciples before His ascension, as recorded by Luke. The words of Jesus are clear and conclusive. There is no room for doubt, nor is there excuse for drifting from this plain teaching of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. But if we face the facts as they are we will be compelled to go back to that most important text in Hebrews 2:1, "Therefore we ought to give the more earnest heed to the things which we have heard, lest at any time we should let them slip."

So many people tell me that they do not know what is meant by repentance. This is especially true among young people. They tell me that their preachers never preach on such subjects. Notwithstanding the fact that Jesus said that repentance and remission of sins should be preached. No message is of more importance to the world of lost sinners than that of repentance, yet I doubt if there is any subject more grossly neglected by present day preachers. Most of us have just drifted away from it. Some even talk about having outgrown it.

The following story gives the condition of multitudes all about us. But why? Whose is the fault? People will know about and experience repentance if we preach it.

"It pleased God to visit one of the daughters of a wicked father with a mortal sickness; but before her death she was instrumental in exciting the attention of her parent to the concerns of his soul. 'Father,' inquired the dying child, 'can you spell repentance?' This artless question, through the blessing of God, was effectual to awaken concern. 'Spell repentance!' repeated the astonished father; 'why, what is repentance?' Thus he became desirous of knowing, and ultimately was taught its sacred meaning; and discovered that he had been a stranger to it, both in theory and experience. He also discovered that he needed repentance; that he was a guilty condemned sinner, deserving God's wrath and everlasting misery; and repentance unto life was granted to him. He spelled out its divine import; and obtained an acquaintance with that Saviour whom God has exalted to give repentance and remission of sins; and, by bringing forth the fruits of righteousness, he in after life supported and adorned his Christian profession."—Selected.

Christ insists on our repentance and on our preaching repentance to others. The Redeemer gave it as the purpose of His coming to the earth to call sinners to repentance (Luke 5:31, 32). He pointed the Jews to the people of Nineveh (Luke 11:32), who repented at the preaching of Jonah, and said, ". . . and, behold, a great than Jonah is here." We need to keep before the world the necessity of repentance in view of God's righteous judgment as recorded in Acts 17:30, 31. That day may seem to some far away and not at all threatening; but it is sure to come, and woe to who are not ready for it. We can only prepare for that day by repentance and living in obedience to God's commands.

Our Lord, who began His preaching with the call to repentance, ended it by instructing His apostles to go forth to all nations preaching repentance and remission of sins. This must be the burden of Christian preaching, Christian evangelism and Christian missions.

THE HOLY SPIRIT

Two things have happened recently which lead us to believe that there is confusion among our ministers concerning the Holy Spirit. The April 15 program in the Senior-Adult League Quarterly confuses the second coming of Christ and the coming of the Holy Spirit, and in the question and answer section of Contact it is stated that the baptism of the Holy Ghost is not essential to salvation.

It is our belief that the Holy Spirit, or the Holy Ghost, is the third Person of the Trinity, that He has distinct and definite personality of his own, and that He should not be confused with the other Persons in the Trinity. Of course, we recognize that God is One, the eternal Supreme Being. But we feel that Jesus is the name given to the second Person of the Trinity and that the Holy Spirit is the name given to the third Person of the Trinity and that there is no reason to confuse them.

We believe the Scriptures make it plain that every person is baptized by the Holy Spirit, or Holy Ghost, at the moment of salvation. This is expressly stated in 1 Corinthians 12:13, "For by one Spirit are we all baptized into one body, whether we be Jews or Gentiles, whether we be bond or free; and have all been made to drink into one Spirit." It is evident from this passage that all Christians are baptized by the Holy Spirit. It may be noted that this passage is found in an epistle addressed to a church which is guilty of gross sins, or factions and defections from the faith. Yet they are reminded that they are baptized by the Spirit.

We believe it is significant that Christians are never exhorted to seek the baptism of the Holy Spirit in the Scriptures. There is, of course, exhortations to be filled with the Spirit. The filling of the Spirit is a process that may be repeated many times in the life of a believer. But we believe that the baptism of the Holy Ghost, or Holy Spirit, is co-extensive with salvation.

We are well acquainted with the brethren who wrote the two articles referred to above. We know that they are sound fundamental gospel preachers. We feel that they simply made a mistake without thinking. We also know the editors of the publications that carried the articles and we know that these statements do not reflect their doctrinal view. We believe that these matters simply slipped through without notice. We have been an editor and we know from experience that such a thing can and does happen. We simply wanted to set the record straight on the doctrine of the Holy Spirit.

The Light Is Come

The goodness of God pours forth from the throne for every one. God wills that no man shall walk in darkness. His light hath appeared unto all men. Our prayer—the prayer of all who walk in darkness, should be not, “Lord, give me light,” for the blazing light of eternal truth is all about us, but, “Lord, cure my blindness; give me sight.” Sin, and sin alone, prevents the entrance of the light of God to the soul. When any man anywhere will turn from sin, seek pardon and cleansing, he will be flooded with the light of God.—Youth's Comrade.

No Indispensable Man

Sometime, when you're feeling important,

Sometime, when your ego's in bloom,
Sometime, when you take it for granted
You're the best qualified in the room;

Sometime, when you feel that your going

Would leave an unfillable hole,
Just follow this simple instruction
And see how it humbles your soul.

Take a bucket and fill it with water,
Put your hand in it up to the wrist;
Pull it out, and the hole that's remaining
Is a measure of how you'll be missed.

You may splash all you please as you enter,

You can stir up the water galore;
But stop and you'll find in a minute
That it looks quite the same as before.

The moral in this quaint example
Is do just the best you can;
Be proud of yourself, but remember,
There's no indispensable man.

WHAT FREE WILL BAPTISTS BELIEVE AND WHY

(Based on the Treatise of the Faith and Practices of the Original Free Will Baptists)

THE BELIEVER AND MISSIONS

When I talk about missions, I mean both foreign and home missions. In fact I think we should use the term as implied by the Lord Jesus when He said, "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost" (Matthew 28:19). Jesus Himself was both a foreign missionary and a home missionary. He said to His disciples, "But ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you: and ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judaea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth" (Acts 1:8). So these disciples were instructed to witness at home and to the uttermost part of the earth.

If we believe in Christ we believe in both foreign and home missions. As I see it, we do not believe in Christ if we do not believe in missions. We may believe about Christ; we may have a historical belief about Christ. To believe in Christ is to believe the record that God hath given to us concerning Christ. The angel announced to Mary that His name should be called "... JESUS: for he shall save his people from their sins" (Matthew 1:21). To believe in Jesus Christ as the Saviour, we must believe what He said to be the truth from God, the Father. Jesus Himself said, "For I have not spoken of myself; but the Father which sent me, he gave me a commandment, what I should say, and what I should speak. And I know that his commandment is life everlasting: whatsoever I speak therefore, even as the Father said unto me, so I speak" (John 12:49, 50). So, this being true, the commandment, Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, was really a commandment from God. It was a message the Father told Jesus to deliver to the disciples to be transmitted to a lost world that men might be saved.

Religion Without Christ

There are hundreds of religions. There is a religion which teaches one to believe in God but not in Christ. But I say a religion that does not accept the Lord Jesus Christ as the Son of God and the Saviour of men, does not promise eternal life to any person. Peter, in speaking of Jesus Christ, said, "Neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved" (Acts 4:12). To believe in the Father is to believe in the Son. It is an insult to God to claim the Father and to reject the Son of the Father. "He that believeth on the Son of God hath the witness in himself: he that believeth not God hath made him a liar; because he believeth not the record that God gave of his Son. And this is the record, that God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in his Son. He that hath the Son hath life; and he that hath not the Son of God hath not life" (1 John 5:10-12).

There Is No Separation

No man can separate God, the Father, from Christ. If we accept one we must accept the other. If we reject one we reject both. If we disbelieve the word of one we disbelieve the word of both. Thus we say, "I do not believe in foreign missions," if we do not believe the Word of God. If we do not believe the Word of God, we are condemned before God and the Lord Jesus Christ. The mission of God in sending His Son into the world was that whosoever believed on Him should have everlasting life. Jesus said, "... I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly" (John 10:10). Jesus Christ came to earth on a mission; thus, He was a missionary.

The Early Church Was Largely Composed of Missionaries

The disciples and the apostles were not unmindful of the responsibility placed upon them in sending forth the message of salvation. However Jesus promised them "But the Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my name, he shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you" (John 14:26). So as God, through the Holy Ghost, worked signs and wonders, He stimulated a great missionary spirit. "Now they which were scattered abroad upon the persecution that arose about Stephen travelled as far as Phenice, and Cyprus, and Antioch, preaching the word to none but unto the Jews only" (Acts 11:19). But there were others who went everywhere. "Therefore they that were scattered abroad went everywhere preaching the word. Then Philip went down to the city of Samaria, and preached Christ unto them" (Acts 8:4, 5).

The early Church was forced to be missionary minded. But they had to suffer some before they became full-fledged missionaries. If we had to suffer some persecution today, perhaps it would make us more missionary minded.

Our Failure

We have failed God the Father, and God the Son and God the Holy Ghost in spreading the message of salvation to lost humanity. We have built fine church edifices. This is grand if we built them for the glory of God. We have stressed benevolence, which is a good work, and one which our Lord stressed and the disciples practiced. But the alarming situation is that we have striven to build houses, purchase automobiles and televisions, create bank accounts and purchase stocks and bonds, and have been more anxious about the material things that perish than we are about the salvation of lost souls. Some church members spend more money for the pleasures of life than for the life which Jesus came to give. Some even attend church and sing "Oh, How I Love Jesus," and then flatly refuse to obey His great command to go into all the world. Do you pray for the missionaries? Do you give any money to support the mission of the Lord Jesus? If not, do not sing "Oh, How I Love Jesus." You cannot love Jesus and not obey His commands—all of His commands. Let's be honest Christians.

gers, and murderers, and idolaters, and whosoever loveth and maketh a lie" (Revelation 22:15), but they are to be cast into the lake of fire and brimstone, "But the fearful, and unbelieving, and the abominable, and murderers, and whoremongers, and sorcerers, and idolaters, and all liars, shall have their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone: which is the second death" (Revelation 21:8).

The so-called spirits of the dead are simply hypocritical impersonations by the demons. See 1 Timothy 4:1. The phenomenal growth of spiritism in these years since World War I is something God has predicted in the Bible. It is one of the signs of the "last days" and the near approach of God's judgment.

STORIES

—FOR OUR—

BOYS and GIRLS

Helping Mother

Ruth Knight

MARY and Johnny loved their mother and liked to help her. Every day after lunch, Mary would wash the dishes and Johnny would dry them. Mary would often sweep the porch while Johnny would dust the furniture. Mother loved Mary and Johnny.

One day mother got sick. The doctor told her that she had to stay in bed for awhile. Mother kindly asked her children if they would take care of the house for her until she got better. It made Mary and Johnny feel so big to take care of the house by themselves! They would bring mother her meals and do everything for her. Sometimes Mary and Johnny would even go to the corner store and do the shopping. My, how happy this made them to do things for mother!

Finally Jesus made mother well and she was able to get up again. She was very pleased to find the house looking so nice. The furniture was not dusty, and even the window sills were clean. Mother was proud of Mary and Johnny for helping her so well.

Mary and Johnny helped their mother so nicely because they loved her. When we love others, we always like to help them. If we love Jesus, we will want to help Him too. We will want to live for Him every day. How can you help Jesus? You can be kind and loving to others. You can tell others about Jesus. You can give your pennies to Him at Sunday school. You can invite your friends to come to God's house with you. Each day look for ways in which to serve Jesus.—Selected.

The Biggest Piece of Money

IT was so cold. Jimmy was trying hard to sell papers. Everyone on the street hurried as fast as he could. No one would stop to buy a paper.

But Jimmy did not have a coat. The cold swept through his rags. He shivered so. A cup of coffee would warm him up so much, but he didn't have even a nickel. If he could only sell a paper!

Ah, there was a man. "Buy a paper, Mister?" he asked.

The man looked at him. "I don't have any use for a paper," said he. But would you like a nickel for a warm drink?"

"Thank you," said Jimmy. "That's why I wanted to sell a paper."

The man put his hand in his pocket. He brought out a handful of change. He said, "Here, Sonny, you may have one piece of money."

Jimmy picked up a nickel. "Oh, thank you," he said, and started off. Then he began to think.

Back he ran. "Mister," he said, "you said I could have a piece of money. Could I have a dime?"

"Yes," said the man, "I told you that you could have one piece of money." Jimmy gave him back the nickel and took a dime. Off he started again.

But there was a fifty-cent piece there. He turned back. "Could I have the fifty cents, Mister?"

"I said you could have one piece of money," said the man. Jimmy put back the dime, and took the fifty-cent piece. "Thank you," he said.

"Wait a minute," said the man. "I am glad you took the biggest piece. I wanted you to take it. But you took the smaller ones first. God has many gifts. You take them every day. He gives you air to breathe, food, a home, a mother.

But God has a big gift—His best Gift for you. He wants you to take it. It is the gift of His Son. And if you take His best Gift, He will give you a home in heaven, besides His other gifts. Won't you take His best Gift now and thank Him?"

"For God so loved the world, that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life" (John 3:16).—Selected.

At Apple-Ripe Time

DID you ever go for a walk at apple-ripe time? And did you stop a moment after you were breathless with romping through the rustling heaps of golden and crimson leaves to wonder how each tree and vine managed to get just what it wanted from the same brown earth? How the chestnut tree sent its roots, down, down and brought up the flavor of nuts while the pear tree brought up the lusciousness of pears? And the grape vine that taste of grapes? How the elm tree had found yellow for its leaves and the apple tree had found red for its fruit, while the wild aster nodding by the brook had found blue?

And did you ever wonder how it was that two boys could go hunting for pleasure in the same place and one would find one thing and the other something else? Just watch the next time your class goes tramping. Perhaps Fred will name every auto that passes. Edward will tell you the birds from their songs. George will have eyes only for the animals in the fields.

It is just the same way when you are looking at folks. Perhaps there is a new boy in school. Fred will say:

"Don't believe we'll like him. Aren't his clothes odd and doesn't he talk queer?"

But Don will say:

"Oh, I am sure we shall. He can throw a ball faster and farther than any of us, and I saw him give half of his lunch to a little dog."

Suppose you look for something good about every person you meet this week.

Don't try it just with your brothers and playmates and the ones you like.

Find something good about the boy whom you have never asked to share your games and the cross man on the grocer's wagon who won't let you ride.

If you look for something to like about each one you will find it just as surely as the apple tree finds the red for its apples at apple-ripe time.—The Child's Gem.

What About You?

A lot of members are wheelbarrows—not much good unless pushed.

Some are like kites—if you don't keep a string on them, they'll fly away.

Some are like kittens—they are more contented when petted.

Some are like lights—they keep going on and off.

And many are like the North Star—there when you need them, dependable, ever loyal, and a guide to all people.—Selected.

HOW I FOUND CHRIST

(Testimony of a Japanese Christian)

Mrs. Haseyo Horii

One night after supper I heard a beautiful melody of a hymn through the window when I was washing dishes in the kitchen. At that time my heart was stirred and filled with a certain inspiration. I thought I could not stand still so I stopped washing dishes, notwithstanding there were some dishes which I had to do. Then I went to the meeting place close to my house without even taking my apron off. This is the meeting that Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Calvery began in May of last year.

I had been troubled with many problems and yet I had been unable to solve them before I knew of the meeting. There was neither true peace nor satisfaction in my heart. My life was really miserable. However, God did not forsake me, who was a sinner and against His will, but led me to Him. When I began to attend the meetings, at first I liked to sing songs rather than to study the Bible, because it made me so happy to sing. But it was only while I was singing in the meeting with other people that I felt happiness. Therefore, I was still troubled and unhappy. My heart was full of misery and desires of the flesh. I continued to live in the same way even after I began going to the meeting. Oh, but praise the Lord, He talked to me and touched my heart by His word, love and power through the person who was the leader of the meeting. I recognized that I was a sinner to be judged and so I had to confess that I needed a Saviour.

Over six months have passed since I was saved. I have learned to understand God's love increasingly. I give thanks to God because He keeps me in His great mercy and joy which is given to those only that believe in Him.

Praise the Lord! I have been upheld by God since I was saved. I was so weak and feeble that I could not but stumble if there was not God's help. Day by day I'm studying the Scripture with victory. May God give me strong faith and guide me every moment. I give all the thanks to God and have great joy in Him.

"Money Appreciated For Milk"

Raymond Riggs

When Mrs. Harold Stevens was home on furlough, there were many of our people who made pledges to send money to Africa to help in the support of orphan children. Those of you who have done so will be glad to know that the Lord is blessing this endeavor. Following is a letter recently received from the person in charge regarding your support to this work. May God bless each of you as you continue to keep your pledge that those in this dark continent may be helped by your support.

May 3, 1956

Dear Rev. Riggs,

We have just received your gift for milk for our babies and certainly want to thank you. Finding enough funds to keep the assorted babies in milk is quite a problem for us. I don't know how much you know about Catota as you are a stranger to us, but we have a general hospital of 30 beds with a few tuberculosis patients in a special camp, a leprosarium of 120 and a large daily clinic. We also run a nurses' training school. The course is 3 years and we have 12 students at present. Keeps us busy.

The babies we feed are mostly children whose mothers died at birth or soon after and they bring the child to us. When the baby is close to a year, either we put him up for adoption by a Christian family or his relatives say he may stay at the mission. Right now we also have a new set of twins whose mother can't produce enough to keep up with them, and another child a year old who already has a little brother. One of the student nurses keeps busy all morning just making formulas and checking up on babies as they come to carry away their daily supply. I forgot the babies of mothers with tuberculosis also have to be kept separately and fed; so you see how much we can use your help. Once more, thank you to all those who contribute to your organization. As these babies grow up they are taught the Word and Way of God by their parents or adopted parents.

The Mission Board of the Western Conference of North Carolina endeavored during the months of March and April to put on a drive for home missions. This was done with great success. Out of the 52 churches in the conference we were able to speak in 35 of them.

We secured 175 individual pledges for the support of home missions. We want to thank all of the churches who had a part in our special drive. May the Lord richly bless each of you who contributed or made a pledge.

The members of the board who worked faithfully for this special drive were Norman Adams, chairman, Joe Haas, Hilery Minchew, E. B. Williams and Douglas Johnson.

Gifts from the following churches have been received and are as follows:

Ambassador in Bonds

Lesson: Acts 26:2-8, 19-23.

Golden Text: 2 Timothy 1:12.

I. INTRODUCTION

Even a rank skeptic is forced to bow in recognition of Paul's experience with God. That he was a man of rare and unusual abilities is widely acknowledged, but the validity of his experience in grace is paramount from any angle you may behold him. He knew in whom he had believed. Paul never said, "I hope I know," or "I believe I know in whom my faith is centered." You can also say of him that he stood one day at the top of the list. The reigns of position, fame and fortune were grimly grasped in his able hands and he was driven along a broad, glittering avenue by a burning, consuming ambition to use his great abilities to maneuver others to his best advantage; but he met the lowly Nazarene and, ever after, all that had been dear and promising to him became as dung when compared to his Saviour and His promises.—Advanced Quarterly (F. W. B.).

II. HELPFUL HINTS

1. The man who knows that he is right is glad for a chance to speak for himself (Vv. 2, 3).
2. One's manner of life is of little concern to those who are raging with cruel spite (Vv. 4, 5).
3. To be judged and impeached by the enemies of Christ is no disgrace to the children of light (Vv. 6, 7).
4. A god who cannot raise the dead to life again is unworthy to be honored and worshiped by men (Vs. 8).
5. Those who are obedient to the call of Christ stand ready to go at the Lord's command (Vv. 19, 20).
6. The pioneers in the service of Christ oftentimes are the ones who have to pay the greatest price (Vs. 21).
7. It is only by the help of the Lord Jesus Christ that His servants are able to carry on the fight (Vs. 22).
8. Those who stick to the Word of God cannot but win the victory in the battle with sin (Vs. 23).—The Bible Teacher (F. W. B.).

III. ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

1. In this twenty-sixth chapter of Acts we approach the end of the book of the Acts. We find the great apostle in the hands of his enemies, his enemies because they were the enemies of the gospel. More than two years before the history contained in this chapter was made, the Lord had spoken to Paul during the memorable night in the castle of Antonia, saying, "... Be of good cheer, Paul: for as thou hast testified of me in Jerusalem, so must thou bear witness also at Rome" (23:11). When finally Paul stood before Festus and was not accorded justice, he appealed to Caesar, and Festus answered him, "Unto Caesar shalt thou go." Through the action of Festus the apostle came into the presence of King Agrippa II. This record is found in Acts 26.—W. S. Hottel, D. D.

2. Agrippa II was the son of the Herod mentioned in Acts 12 who killed James and imprisoned Peter. Drusilla (Acts 24:24) and Bernice were sisters of Agrippa II. Bernice was noted for her beauty and immoral character.

3. Paul begins his defense with a testimony of his own conversion. This is often an effective way to present the gospel. Our own experience, if not exaggerated, can be a powerful argument for the saving grace of God. This is the third time we have an account of Paul's conversion on the Damascus road. Some have imagined discrepancies between these accounts, but by putting all of them together it is not difficult to reconcile these slight differences.

An account of Paul's early life as a Jew and a Pharisee follows. As a Jew he had been zealous and as a Pharisee he had always believed in the resurrection of the dead. Both of these facts proved Paul's innocence of the charge brought against him. It was indeed very strange that a man should have been arrested and imprisoned for believing and preaching what the twelve tribes and the sect of the Pharisees fervently believed.

This is followed by an account of his persecuting zeal as a Pharisee. He had sincerely believed he was serving God when he sought to uproot the believers in Jesus Christ.—The Bible Illustrator.

4. Man's hope centers in the resurrection of the dead. Paul appealed to Agrippa on this point. He asked him if it were a thing incredible with you, that God should raise the dead?

It seems that this was a stumbling-block to the Jews. Although the Pharisees believed in life beyond the grave, they could not accept the fact that Christ, whom they had crucified, had risen and was alive again. Paul knew that Jesus was risen because He had spoken to Paul on the Damascus road. He knew, furthermore, that man's only hope was that he, by faith in Christ, would also be resurrected. He knew that this was God's plan for giving man life beyond the grave. Paul devotes the entire fifteenth chapter of 1 Corinthians to a convincing discussion of this great truth.—The Bible Student (F. W. B.).

5. A presupposition of the apostle is that Christ had risen. It was this fact that had made Christianity a going concern. Without the resurrection of Jesus the Christian movement would have come to an end before it really got under way. In sending Jesus to the cross, the Jewish leaders thought they were effectually disposing of something that carried a threat to their ideas and institutions and prerogatives. They were getting rid of a man who assumed superior authority and who was able to carry many with Him because of the miracles He performed. The plans and expectations of the Jewish authorities would have been fulfilled except for one thing—that Christ rose from the dead. But here was a fact that was startling, breathtaking, incredible; yet the soldiers whom they had placed at the tomb reported the facts, and the Jews were bewildered. They would do anything, even pay large money to the soldiers to tell a lie, in order to try to nullify this unexpected development. But the truth of Christ's resurrection could not be nullified. The evidence of its reality was inescapable. His friends had seen Him and talked with Him after He arose from the dead. It was the fact of His resurrection that brought new understanding and new confidence to the original Christian group, and that, together with the outpouring of the Spirit, inspired them with zeal to live and die in the service of their divine Lord. It was this that helped to bring conviction to thousands of others and that became to them the supreme proof that the Christian movement was of God. The term "risen" attained such significance that it was applied by Paul even to conversion. That was a rising from spiritual death.—Select-ed.

MY DAD

If you have not already done so, ask several children who is the greatest man in the world. You will get a variety of answers if you ask children of different ages. Those children who are too young to have discovered differently will, almost without exception, say, "My daddy." To them he is greater even than David Crockett or Santa Claus. This is as God intended, for He ordained that the father should hold an unique place in the life of the child.

It is tragic that, in so many instances, children grow up to become disappointed and disillusioned concerning the parent whom they had thought to be the greatest man in the world. This is most assuredly one of the contributing factors in the child maladjustment and juvenile delinquency which prevail in such great measure today. These children have grown up cherishing certain ideals concerning their fathers only to have them shattered when they find out what types of men their fathers really are. Then the real foundation for their lives is dragged from under them and, in their confusion, they conclude that there is no real virtue in right living.

It has been our lot to try to help some of these children find again a solid foundation upon which they could reconstruct their lives. And one of the greatest obstacles which we have encountered has been the sinful lives of parents. In counseling with children one faces the delicate problem of advising the child against certain habits and practices when he knows that the child's parents are setting that very same bad example before him every day. Have you ever wondered what runs through the mind of the pre-adolescent child in the Sunday school class when the teacher points out the evils of strong drink, swearing profanely, quarreling and fighting, if that child has just come from a home where these things prevail? It must be a terrible shock to the child to discover that the people he loves best are walking so far from the path of right. Is it any wonder that many of these children become confused and develop a warped perspective of life.

Parents, this situation ought not to exist. It is unfair to your children. Father, the chief responsibility for setting this situation right is yours. If you don't set it straight you will, in great measure, destroy the influence of the church for good in the life of your child. You should take the initiative and let the church, together with the other social institutions, assist you in preparing your child for a full and free life in this world and an eternity with Christ in heaven.

Fathers, do you realize that God expects you to be the priest of the household? You should lead your family in daily devotions. You should explain the Word of God to your family; planting the seeds of eternal truth in the hearts of your children that they may produce fruits of righteousness. In your household you should stand for God to your children, giving protection, provision and example, until they reach the age of finding God in Christ to the salvation of their souls. You should be the lawgiver and judge in your home, teaching your children to respect righteous principles. If fathers will take their places as righteous heads of their households, mothers will not be forced to get out of their proper places and assume it. And, mothers, you will be doing God's will to not only submit to the husband's headship of the home under God but to pray and urge that he assume it. That is God's plan and we cannot improve upon it. Then your children will grow up in the proper home environment and will not be driven to confusion upon finding out that their parents have failed God.

MINISTERS' CONFERENCE

The editor has just returned from a most enjoyable stay at Cragmont Assembly, Black Mountain, North Carolina. The occasion for the trip was to attend the North Carolina Ministers' Conference. It was his pleasure and privilege also to speak to the group on Tuesday morning. The president of the conference, Rev. E. E. Edwards, together with the others who were responsible for planning and conducting the conference, should be highly commended for doing an excellent job. Everything was in order and the sessions ran smoothly throughout the time in which we were there. Believe it or not, the program ran on schedule despite the presence of so many ministers. We say this because ministers are traditionally accused of being long-winded.

Although our pressing duties in the office called us back before the conference ended, we received immeasurable blessing by having gone. In the first place, the vacation in the crisp air of the mountains was just what we needed physically. Then the food was extremely good. We do not know whether it was the mountain air that sharpened our appetite or the selection and preparation of the food by the cooks, perhaps both; but it was probably best from the standpoint of our weight that we were not permitted to stay long.

We should like to pay special tribute to those whom we heard speak while we were there. We have never heard better preaching. Everyone whom we heard speak had evidently given a great deal of prayer, meditation and preparation to his topic, for the subjects were handled in masterly fashion. Furthermore, the Holy Spirit manifested Himself powerfully in every session. Tears flowed freely as the ministers rejoiced in their hearts.

A larger group of ministers appeared to be in attendance upon this conference than attended the one last year. Although we did not count them, we judged the group to be at least a fourth larger. However, we missed the faces of some who attended last year. We were informed that the necessary change in the date of this conference caught some of the ministers with other activities already scheduled so they could not attend.

Are Offences Necessary?

Naaman Borders, Waverly, Ohio

DID not Jesus say that it was needful for offenses to come, but woe unto them by whom they come? (Matthew 18:7). Sometimes we ask ourselves the questions, "Why do we have so much opposition, trials and even persecutions? Why does the Lord permit these things to come when I am living as pure as I know how?" We have all asked questions like these at times, and we will never be able to answer all such questions while in this world. But I think that our Lord will reveal the answers to all these questions in the sweet by and by. He said that the trial of your faith is much more precious than gold that is tried in the fire (1 Peter 1:7). Paul says "For whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth, . . ." (Hebrews 12:6). No chastening is pleasant at the time. Someone has said, "The harder you squeeze an orange, the more juice you get out of it." The Lord sometimes chastises us not because we have sinned, but because of what we have failed to do. Maybe we did not go forward when He gave us orders to march. Maybe we did not obey His orders. Maybe this is why He laid on the rod.

Upon leaving this world Jesus told His disciples to go into all the world and preach the gospel to all nations. But they seemed to be slow to do what He had commanded. They seemed to want to hang around the Mother Church at Jerusalem, which was much easier than to go as the Lord had instructed them. Fifteen years later there arose a great persecution and the disciples went everywhere preaching the Word, and they literally turned the world upside down.

If Jesus was persecuted why shouldn't we be persecuted? People will not always sing praises to you. In John 16:33, Jesus said, ". . . In the world ye shall have tribulation: but be of good cheer; I have overcome the world." The Christian must count on a warfare; we will have no victories if we have no battles. If we follow His instructions, we will always come out victorious. He did not promise us an easy time, but He did promise that we would not be left alone.

If we had it too easy we would get indifferent and maybe forget to trust the Lord. The sheep will not go to a rock house for shelter unless there comes a storm. All these offenses and persecutions will drive us closer to God. Peter says for us not to think it strange if we have fiery trials. "But and if ye suffer for righteousness' sake, happy are ye: and be not afraid of their terror, neither be troubled" (1 Peter 3:14). "And who is he that will harm you, if ye be followers of that which is good?" (1 Peter 3:13).

Paul says, ". . . being reviled, we bless; being persecuted, we suffer it: Being defamed, we intreat: we are made as the filth of the world, and are the off-scouring of all things unto this day" (1 Corinthians 4:12, 13). What is Paul's answer to this? ". . . forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus" (Philippians 3:14). Let us say:

Sure I must fight, if I would reign;
Increase my courage, Lord;
I'll bear the toil, endure the pain,
Supported by Thy word.

Persecution always heightens the actions of an indifferent church. It serves to arouse the complacency of a lifeless church. Jesus said, "Every branch in me that beareth not fruit he taketh away: and every branch that beareth fruit, he purgeth it, that it may bring forth more fruit. . . . If a man abide not in me, he is cast forth as a branch, and is withered; and men gather them, and cast them into the fire, and they are burned" (John 15:2-6).

I am reminded of the time three or four years ago when the high courts banned the teaching of the Bible in public schools. This so aroused the churches that they began the movement of the Youth for Christ, which helped the churches more than anything in the world. It seems that we need a little persecution sometimes to get ourselves aroused enough to go about our Father's business.

During the third and fourth centuries there arose the greatest persecution the church ever faced. It is said that hundreds of thousands of saints suffered martyrdom in ever conceivable and brutal way which could be devised. They were burned at the stake, crucified, thrown to wild beasts, burned in scalding oil, hung, stoned to death and hurled from buildings on swords. This went on until the horrible sight was so sickening and revolting that the persecutors called a halt to it saying, "What's the use? We are getting nowhere. Every time we kill one Christian, two spring up to take his place." So therefore, persecution always backfires, and the devil sets a trap and gets caught in it himself.

Jesus said, ". . . upon this rock I will build my church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it" (Matthew 16:18). Yes, infidels and sceptics have fought it for nearly two thousand years, but the church is greater now than in any other age of the world. The church is as firm as the Rock of Gibraltar—the waves, floods and storms beat upon it, but it is still there when the storms are over. Jesus never raised an army nor drafted a soldier to establish His Kingdom, but He is leading more volunteers than all the generals in the world put together. He causes the enemy to fall at His feet and cry for mercy. Bless God! His church moves on!

Seeking the Lost

Miss Colleen Murray
Wilson, North Carolina

The time is near at hand,
And there's work still left undone;
We must hasten Christian people,
Bring in the wandering ones.

We can sing our hymns of joy,
We can hear our preachers preach;
But we need to wake up, Christians,
For the lost sheep we must reach.

When the sheep are in the pasture,
And there's one that's gone astray;
We should be concerned about it
For it we should humbly pray.

And when our work is finished,
And our life on earth is done;
We'll rejoice with angels in heaven
Over lost sheep we have won.

Letter from a Father

Edward Raymond Anderson

I AM the father of a fine boy, seven years old. As things went, I figured I was pretty good, since I provided for the family as best I could. But then all of a sudden, I found out what an awful mistake I had been making all these years, and of what a failure as a father I had been.

Father's Day will soon be here. That's why I think this is the best time to write this letter to you, as one father to all fathers everywhere.

This whole thing is so sharp and clear. Not only that, but it has made the greatest change in my heart and life. It's so real to me that I want to share it with you, because I want you to make this change, and like me, become a "complete father."

My name? Well, that's not important. I work on the 3 to 11 shift at a large factory in our city. Have been working there on that shift for the last nine years. Every afternoon at about quarter after two, I leave the house, walk the long hill down to the corner, turn right, then slip into the East End Grill for a quick drink. Just one, you understand, or maybe two, once in a while. Never any more. Sort of "sets me up" for the job in a way. At least, that's what I used to think.

Well, it started the same way that particular afternoon. Had been snowing the day before, and when I opened the door it lay there, crisp and heavy and white. The sound of my boots biting through it sounded like firecrackers as I started out. About half-way down I heard my boy call to me. Turning around I saw him there in the snow, trying to put his feet into the tracks I had made. Looked so funny I started to laugh. Then he waved his hands and yelled, "Watch me, dad! I'm following right in your tracks!"

I don't know just what it was, but those words hit me like a whip. All at once I saw a picture of myself sneaking around for that "set-me-up," and I felt sick and ashamed deep inside. You see, my boy knew nothing about that. And now, he never would—never! Right then and there I said to myself, "No, my boy, no! You're not going to follow me at all." And from that moment, I haven't touched the stuff.

Told some of the boys about it at supper-time as we sat in a group over by the tool-crib. Felt kind of proud of myself, too! And I could see the way they looked up to me for it.

Just about time to get back on the job, when one of them reached over. He was a quiet sort of chap, serious looking, never mingled much with the others. He said something to me that I'll never forget. Set me to thinking real hard, and then to make the big change. Let me give it to you, fathers everywhere, just as he said it.

"You were wrong, friend. Very wrong. You have only given that boy of yours half an example of what a father should be. And the least important half at that. You have shown him what not to do, but that will never be enough for him or for yourself in the sight of Almighty God. In a way, you're only half a father. A whole lot more has to be done for your boy—the other half of the example; the more important part. You have to show him what to do—the right thing to do. And that comes when you accept the Lord Jesus Christ as personal Saviour, become a new creature. You'll really be a failure as a father unless and until you do that. That's the example that counts, because being saved is the most important thing for this world and the next. Give that boy of yours the sight of a real Christian father!"

All at once I saw it like a flash. And now I know that it came from the Lord, who is now my personal Saviour. "Neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved" (Acts 4:12). Now, praise His name, I am a "complete father." I had not something, but SOME ONE, to show my boy, and I'm glad to say that he is now trusting the Lord for himself. Fathers, please take this letter from my heart, to your own heart. I mean every word of it, and my blessed Lord Jesus stands behind it with all of His Calvary grace, mercy and love.

"... Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved" (Acts 16:31).

The Story of The Prodigal Father

A CERTAIN man had two sons; and the younger of them said to his father, "Father, give me the portion of thy time, thy attention, and companionship, and thy counsel which falleth to me."

And he divided unto him his living in that he paid the boy's bills and sent him to a select preparatory school, and to dancing schools, and to college, and tried to believe that he was doing his full duty to the boy.

And not many days after, the father gathered all his interests and aspirations and ambitions and took his journey into a far country, into a line of stocks and bonds and securities and other things which do not interest a boy; and there he wasted his precious opportunity of being a chum to his own son.

And when he had spent the very best of his life, and had gained money but had failed to find satisfaction, there arose a mighty famine in his heart; and he began to be in want of sympathy and real companionship.

And he went and joined himself to one of the clubs of that country and they elected him chairman of the house committee and president of the club and sent him to Congress, and he would fain have satisfied himself with the husks that other men did eat, and no man gave him any real friendship.

But when he came to himself, he said, "How many men of my acquaintance have boys whom they understand and who understand them, who talk about their boys and associate with their boys and seem perfectly happy in the comradeship of their sons, and I perish here with heart hunger? I will arise and go to my son and will say to him, Son, I have sinned against heaven and in thy sight; I am no more worthy to be called thy father; make me as one of thy acquaintances."

And he arose and came to his son, but while he was yet afar off, his son saw him and was moved with astonishment, and instead of running and falling on

J. C. Griffin-

Pastor-Evangelist

Dallas Mallison
Oriental, North Carolina

HISTORIANS will surely say that the Rev. J. C. Griffin, who will be 77 years old on June 22, has earned a place at the very top of Tar Heel Free Will Baptist leadership during the first half of the twentieth century. Even today there are few if any persons who would deny him that rank.

Very few if any leaders of the Free Will Baptist faith in this State today have the stature, prestige, length of service, scope and versatility of activities, and profundity of scholarship and theology possessed by this man of God who styles himself simply as pastor-evangelist.

In the nearly 50 years of continuous and active ministry in the church he loves, he has made an indelible imprint. The impact of his work and faith will continue and never end. His contributions are many, varied and significant in theology, scholarship, church growth and extension, evangelism, religious literature, church organization and the elevation of the ministry itself.

In many ways he has been the church pioneer and promoter—always its builder. Never hesitating to boldly strike out in new paths, he has had the satisfaction of doing and creating; this has been one of his greatest rewards and stimuli. But the new and untried have never kept him from hewing a line straight to and from the fundamental and literal in Biblical interpretation and Christian theology.

He is a much respected, deeply beloved and greatly venerated man of the cloth—magnetic, eloquent and persuasive; profound yet simple; humble yet great; sensitive yet practical; of the people yet above the people; loving the soil and the country from which he sprang; but above all, having a consuming passion to serve—these describe in part the man and the leader, J. C. Griffin.

Few if any men in the Free Will Baptist faith today have written as much as this man. The impact of his writings, especially upon Free Will Baptist theology and practices, will grow with the years. He is an author and correspondent of some repute and an effective pamphleteer of the old American school.

Jesse Griffin has served as pastor of 28 different churches one or more times during a ministry of 46 years that began on June 12, 1910, in Nash County, North Carolina, at a little rural church (White Oak Hill). He has served full-time only three churches—the Goldsboro, North Carolina, Church on Simmons Street and St. Mary's and Ruth's Chapel which are both located in New Bern, North Carolina.

He has served churches in eight counties—all in Eastern North Carolina—which are Tyrrell, Beaufort, Pamlico, Carteret, Craven, Pitt, Nash and Lenoir. He has been serving Ruth's Chapel—New Bern's second and newest Free Will Baptist church—since 1949, the first two years part-time and the last five years as full-time pastor.

Brother Griffin is not only an eloquent speaker and a great reader, but he is also one of the most prolific writers among Free Will Baptists today. He can write with either hand and also types. He spends many hours—especially the early morning hours—in study and research and in writing. His contributions in this field will loom larger as time passes.

For over 30 years he has been a faithful contributor to The Free Will Baptist, and these writings alone would constitute a small library. His column soon grew into the full-page "Notes and Quotes," so familiar to readers today. In this very issue this feature can be found.

He is the author of half a dozen books, tracts and pamphlets. These include "The Upper Room Ought," a doctrinal treatise on church ordinances; "Hell, or Endless Punishment of the Wicked"; and "The One Foundation." A fourth and more recent book is a preachers' guidebook called "A Manual for Ministers."

At his earnest pleading, the Ruth's Chapel Church board has reluctantly agreed for Brother Griffin to end his ministry with this church in June of 1957. He is planning that this will be his last regular pastorate.

From next June to the glorious end, he wishes to spend his time among the 28 churches he has pastored in the past. He hopes to spend at least a week in ev-

My Church

Mrs. Irvin Custer, Johnstown, Pa.

I love to go to the house of God,
And leave the world outside;
Enter in with prayerful thoughts,
With reverence there to abide.

I love to go to meet my God,
To see Him face to face;
With quietness and peace,
In this His Holy Place.

I love to go to talk to God,
And feel His presence near,
Within my heart—a silent prayer
I know—that He will hear.

I love to go to do His will
And worship Him in love,
Sing praises to His Holy name,
That reach to realms above.

I love to go to this hallowed spot
I'm sure that you do too,
And share with me the blessings
That God has there for you.

To my church, I love to go
The place where I can meet,
And fellowship with God's people
His servants there to greet.

Questions and Answers ON THE BIBLE

Conducted by J. F. BARROW

3824 Richland Avenue, Nashville 5, Tennessee

Question: Please explain "For for this cause was the gospel preached also to them that are dead, that they might be judged according to men in the flesh, but live according to God in the spirit" (1 Peter 4:6). Who are these dead that are spoken of as having had the gospel preached to them?—B. Fulcher, Bridgeton, North Carolina.

Answer: I think these are Christians that are now dead or as other Scriptures would put it, absent from the body and present with Christ. See 2 Corinthians 5:6, 8. This first epistle of Peter has several verses throughout its five short chapters that present difficulty in interpretation to most of us.

K. S. Wuest, in his book, First Peter in the Greek New Testament, says on Pages 113, 114:

"The key to the understanding of this difficult verse is found in the context of the entire book. In 1:6, 7 we are told that the recipients are in heaviness in the midst of manifold trials. In 2:18-25 we have the case of Christian household slaves being unjustly punished because of their Christian testimony. In 3:8-17 the saints are instructed as to their behavior when undergoing persecution. In 4:12-19 the apostle deals with the glory of suffering for righteousness' sake. He speaks of this persecution of the saints by the world as a judgment that begins at the house of God, the Church (4:17). In 4:1-11 he speaks of the necessity of having the mind of Christ as armored protection against the persecution of the world. Thus the phrase 'judged according to men,' refers to the judgment spoken of in 4:17 which is defined as to its nature by the words in Verse 14, 'If ye be reproached for the name of Christ.'

"The words 'them that are dead,' refer to Christian believers who had died. The gospel had been preached to them and they become Christians. As a result of this they had been judged according to men while they were on earth. This judgment was in the form of persecution because of their Christian testimony. The word translated 'according to' means literally 'down,' and speaks of domination. The judgment was in the hands of men and was administered by them.

"The words 'in the flesh' are to be construed with 'might be judged,' for they balance up the words 'in the spirit' which clearly are to be understood with 'live.' We have here the dative of respect. These Christians were judged with respect to the flesh, that is, with respect to their earthly existence in the body. The natural result of accepting the gospel would be the living of a Christian life, and the natural result of that would be persecution. But these Christians died, many of them as martyrs. Now, in heaven they were living according to the Word of God with respect to their spirits, their human spirits. They in their disembodied state were serving the Lord in the future life."

Albert Barnes, in Notes on 1 Peter, says, on Pages 191, 192:

"It seems to me that the most natural and obvious interpretation is to refer it to those who were then dead, to whom the gospel had been preached when living, and who had become true Christians. This is the interpretation proposed by Wetstein, Rosenmuller, Bloomfield, and others. In support of this it may be said, (1) that this is the natural and obvious meaning of the word dead, which should be understood literally, unless there is some good reason in the connection for departing from the common meaning of the word. (2) The apostle had just used the word in that sense in the previous verse. (3) This will suit the connection, and accord with the design of the apostle. He was addressing those who were suffering persecution. It was natural, in such a connection, to refer to those who had died in the faith, and to show, for their encouragement, that though they had been put to death, yet they still lived to God. He therefore says, that the design in publishing the gospel to them was, that though they might be judged by men in the usual manner, and put to death, yet that in respect to their higher and nobler nature, the Spirit, they might live unto God. It was not uncommon nor unnatural for the apostles, in writing to those who were suffering persecution, to refer to those who had been removed by death, and to make their condition and example an argument for fidelity and perseverance."

That the Bible contains quite a few passages of Scripture which are awaiting the final word in interpretation from the best of commentators is not to be denied. Those of antiquity as well as those of our day have said what they have to say with some caution and uncertainty. The commentators that I have consulted on this passage have in general quoted other comments and evaluated what other scholars have said. To me this means that they themselves were not certain as to the full meaning of the passage. The grammatical construction of this verse is such that my opinion might be wrong as well as that of the two scholars here quoted. Robertson and Lange, both excellent scholars, differ with the view set forth by Wuest and Barnes.

And the father said unto him, "Son, I have sinned against heaven, and in thy sight! I am no more worthy to be called thy father. Forgive me now and let me be your friend."

But the son said, "Not so, I wish it were possible, but it is too late. There was a time when I wanted to know things, when I wanted companionship and counsel, but you were too busy; I got the information, and I got the companionship but I got the wrong kind; and now, alas, I am wrecked in soul and body, and there is nothing you can do for me. It is too late, too late, too late."

The Lighted Pathway

Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path
(PSALM 119:105).

REV. WILLET L. MORETZ
SWANNANOA, N. C.

"Not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is; . . ." (Hebrews 10:25).

There is no greater evidence of drifting away from God and His teaching than the fact that we are forsaking the attendance of the worship and fellowship of the church. A careful study of the four Gospels with a view of Christ's example of church attendance will demonstrate that it was His custom to go and take part in the services.

In considering the text I want to call your attention to the fact that Verses 23, 24 and 25 are all used to make a complete sentence, and each verse presents a very important command to all true believers in Christ. Now notice Verse 26, "For if we sin wilfully after that we have received the knowledge of the truth . . ." Is not this the plain teaching that if we willfully break the commands as set forth in the preceding verses, including non-attendance of church, we are sinning?

One of the best articles on this subject that I have read was published in a recent issue of The Atlanta Journal, and written by Pierce Harris, under the title

"CHURCH-GOING MUST BE A FULL-TIME EFFORT"

"Do you go to church? And if you're average, you'll say, 'Sure—I am a regular attendant.'

"The cold truth is an average church member's attendance record would look mighty bad anywhere else. I've just laid down a club program in which the president was calling attention to the fact that four unexpected absences automatically expelled a member from his club. Think of that in connection with your church attendance. Just four misses—and out you go.

"Maybe you're one of these fellows who is regular at the morning service but have other things on the schedule, so miss the night service—or do you know if they have a night service?

"What's wrong with going to just one service every Sunday?" And if you're asking for an answer, then there's the same thing wrong with that that there would be in missing half your classes in college.

"You wouldn't want me to come at night and sleep all through the service?" says a friend, about going to church at night. I wouldn't care. It would please me to see this big fat friend peacefully snoring away in his pew. At least I'd know he was where he ought to be . . .

"It's a mighty small cup that can be filled with a week's supply at one dip. Most of us need to attend some sort of worship at every opportunity. Even then, we wobble at a distressing rate when the pressure is applied on some day between Sundays.

"Don't ever tell your pastor, 'I'll be with you in spirit.' Your intentions are probably all right but the effect is depressing. Imagine how you'd feel standing there in the pulpit with the first four pews filled by the spirits of people who just could not get there in person.

"They're hard to preach to. You never can tell if they're paying any attention. You don't know for sure if they're even there. And that section of the congregation never has any part in the collection. They never sing along with the ones present in person, and otherwise throw a damper over the meeting.

"If you are part of the problem of the empty pew, the only way you can help solve the problem is to be there when the bell rings. Your preacher will love you for it, and the good Lord will put a gold star over your name."—Selected.

A Teen-Ager's Code For The Young

Dallas, Texas—A teen-age girl has found her way into the public press of this city by drawing up a code of ethics and of conduct for her contemporaries which many bewildered yet complacent parents would do well to "read, mark and inwardly digest." In submitting her ten commandments the youthful author, Virginia Chose, suggests that "if every teen-ager would follow these simple rules, the world would be a safer place to live in." To which one may add, "Amen."

1. Don't let your parents down. They brought you up.

2. Stop and think before you drink.

6. He causes division in the Church (1 Corinthians 3:4; 1:10-13).

7. He produces the fruit of carnality (Hebrews 5:11-14).

III. THE SPIRITUAL MAN (1 Corinthians 2:9-16)

1. He is led by the Spirit (Romans 8:14).

2. He is not of the world (John 17:16).

3. He is not understood by the world (1 John 3:1).

4. He has the mind of Christ (Philippians 2:5).

5. He seeks God's deeper things (1 Corinthians 3:1, 2; Psalm 1:2).

6. He is able to overcome the world (1 John 5:4, 5).

7. He is producing the fruit of the Spirit (Galatians 6:16-22).

IV. CONCLUSION

1. We are one of the three classes.

2. We should ask ourselves where are we.

3. We should seek to be out-and-out for Christ.

The Old Faith

The old faith holds the universe to be a Divine creation. It holds the Bible to be a Divine revelation and points to the highest forms of civilization to prove its contention.

It holds that religion is supernatural. Its religion rests in the supernatural Saviour—Jesus, virgin born miracle-working, triumphant over death and the grave; in supernatural revelation—wisdom beyond that of man; in supernatural experience—the regeneration of the human heart.—W. B. Riley.

3. Ditch dirty thoughts fast, or they'll ditch you.

4. Show-off driving is juvenile. Don't act your age.

5. Be smart, obey. You'll give orders yourself, some day.

6. Choose your friends carefully. You are what they are.

7. Choose a date fit for a mate.

8. Don't go steady unless you're ready.

9. Go to church regularly. God gives you a week. Give Him back an hour.

10. Live carefully. The soul you save may be your own.—The Church Advocate.

Look Up

If we look down, then our shoulders stoop. If our thoughts look down, our character bends. It is only when our thoughts go up that our life becomes erect. The Bible tells us who are Christians to "seek those things which are above, where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God." We are to set our affections on things above, not on things on the earth. Our life can be upright and pleasing to God only when we obey Him in this matter.—Good Tidings.

WHAT FREE WILL BAPTISTS BELIEVE AND WHY CHURCH ACTIVITIES

Vacation Bible School

It is now time for vacation Bible schools to convene, and many churches are having or planning these schools. What is the purpose of the vacation Bible school? If true to its name, the Bible school should make the Bible pre-eminent in the course of study. Of course there may be singing and general activities that are in keeping with sound thinking and prayerful meditations. There may be suitable recreation periods and refreshments, but when the Bible is on the sideline the whole program is faulty.

Thus it takes consecrated teachers who are studious themselves to the extent they know what they are teaching and how to teach the Word of God so plainly that all their students who are not saved may come to a saving knowledge of the Lord Jesus Christ.

Revivals

It is very essential that we have revivals in our churches, and I have fully decided that we need two or three revival seasons each year. We, who are leaders, should be so steeped in the love of God that we can present the Word of God with such enthusiasm and spiritual fervor that the cold, indifferent church members and the unsaved professors would feel the very fire of God burning in the church and be constrained to get near enough to catch on fire to the extent that all sin and weaknesses may be burned up completely. How we need an old fashioned revival meeting! Even though we need revival meetings in our churches there are some seasons in the year that we should refrain from holding these meetings in our churches.

When Are These Seasons?

Since it is very helpful to our ministers to have special fellowship together, we should not have our revivals during the time of the ministers' conferences which usually are held each year. It is very necessary that ministers have a better knowledge and understanding of each other as ministers. It is vitally necessary that we have a better understanding of each other's problems, and that we have an interest of each other's work at heart. It is also important that we get on higher spiritual ground so we may go back to our churches with so much of the fire of God's love burning in our hearts that our congregations may be warmed by the pastoral fervor as manifested as we speak from the pulpit and as God speaks in power to us. The ministers' conference is an ideal place for the pastor to be drawn closer to the Lord, provided he goes for a spiritual filling. Praying together and having Godly fellowship will help the ministers' work a great deal at home. Every church should send its pastor to the ministers' conference and pay his expenses.

The State Convention

Our churches should not take on revival meetings during the week of the state convention. This is done by many, but it should not be so, for we should lay everything aside and dedicate that week to the business of our Lord and the church and its institutions. In attending the state convention, we not only help our church at home, but we help our denomination at large.

How should we go to the state convention? We should go with brotherly love in our hearts for one another. We should go there with a world-wide vision of the need of lost humanity. We should go to pray, work and help create a state of deep interest in missions, Christian education, superannuation, benevolence and every phase of our program for the ongoing of the church. We should not go with any selfish interest, but with a spirit perfectly yielded to the will of God.

So let us refrain from conducting evangelistic meetings during the dates set for the ministers' conference and the state convention. I would also like to add that we should stay off the evangelistic field during the time of the National Association of Free Will Baptists. Every preacher should attend these meetings, and we should all be more consecrated to the business end of our denomination.

Why Should the Minister Attend All Public Meetings of the Church?

If the ministers attend these meetings it shows they are interested in the success of the church as a whole. It sets a good example before the congregation, and when they see that their own minister is interested they will respond to the requests and demands of the church as a whole.

If you want to find a live church, you should look around and find one with a minister who is deeply interested in the whole program of the church— so minutely interested that his interest reaches the union or quarterly meetings and regular worship services in his own church. In most cases when the preacher is not interested in a world-wide ministry, his church is dying for the lack of vision. "Where there is no vision, the people perish: but he that keepeth the law, happy is he" (Proverbs 29:18).

The law of the New Testament Church is the law of love. Jesus gave us the law of love in that He loved a lost world of sinners and came willingly and gave Himself that we sinners might be saved from eternal hell fire and know the joy of His presence. As Jesus left the disciples He said, "A new commandment I give unto you, That ye love one another; as I have loved you, that ye also love one another. By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another" (John 13:34, 35). Jesus also said, "... All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth. Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world. Amen" (Matthew 28: 18-20).

Who Is God?

Mrs. Fannie T. Swindell
Arapahoe, North Carolina

God is more than Love,
That sent our Saviour from above.
He is more than Light,
That can dispel the darkest night—
Who is God?

God is more than Idea,
He is far more than a Cause.
He is more than Principle or Force
More than fundamental Truth or Laws—
Who is God?

God is the Holy Spirit,
He is a Person, too;
He is our Saviour and Father
Though earthly friends be few—
Who is God?

God is our Helper and our Lord,
This pilgrim journey through;
So we need never fear,
What mortal man can do—
He is our God!

A Narrow Escape

George H. Clement

DADDY," said Lawrence, to his father one Saturday afternoon, "let us go for a hike up Powell Mountain Trail."

Well, hiking, to his missionary-father was like asking a bus driver to go for an afternoon drive. However, he wanted to encourage his son to seek his times of recreation in wholesome ways, so he consented. Lawrence packed a lunch, and soon he, his sister, and his father were on their way up Powell Mountain. They followed the Powell River for some distance, and then Lawrence suggested getting off the trail and hiking through the forest. Walking up a beaten path was not adventuresome enough. So they left the trail and were soon pushing and pulling their way through the tangled forest underbrush, like Indians used to do. Lowlying rhododendron made them stoop as they made their way beneath their branches. Everything did seem more wild and beautiful off the trail than it did on it.

Finally the three of them were ready to stop and eat, and the setting sun told them they must soon be starting back down toward home. Heading homeward after lunch, they once more went through the underbrush, rather than follow the comparatively tame trail. Lawrence wanted to take the lead. His father followed, making a way for Carolyn, his little daughter. Chattering and laughing, no one thought of danger. Suddenly, the missionary glanced down just ahead of him. There was a deadly copperhead, and Lawrence's heel just missed it, for he had not seen it.

"Watch out!" shouted his father, "it's a copperhead;"

Lawrence jumped quickly to one side, and Carolyn almost fell backward. Lawrence's father grabbed some rocks, and a long stick, and soon killed the copperhead. They found that it had not been damaged much, so they took it with them, and soon had it preserved in a fruit jar full of alcohol. How thankful they were that no one had been bitten.

Boys and girls, we sing a chorus with these words: "Climb, climb, up Sunshine Mountain, Heavenly breezes blow . . ." Christian children are climbing that mountain home-ward bound to heaven. Jesus is the safe and only Way to follow to get to that land of eternal joy. But sometimes the narrow trail seems dull. Off the strait and narrow pathway seems to be so many dazzling

BREAK, creak, creak. The door of the carriage house swung on its hinges. On the top of it sat Robbie. It was only half a door, so Robbie could sit on top of it when it was shut. It was great fun to swing on the door, almost as much fun as riding on the merry-go-round.

"Come on and ride," called Robbie to Myrtle, who came out of the house at that moment with Lucy.

"Maybe Grandpa wouldn't like it," said Myrtle.

"Oh! he won't care."

"I can't sit on alone, I'll fall off," cried Lucy, as she tried to balance herself on the narrow top of the door.

"Get up and hold her on, Myrtle, and I'll sit on the other side and push, and we'll ride all together."

Myrtle climbed up beside Lucy, and Robbie took his place on the other side.

"All aboard! Here we go!" he shouted, giving a vigorous shove with his foot.

The door swung open a little way, then rip, rip, crack, its free end settled to the ground.

"Oh, it's breaking, it's breaking!" shrieked Lucy and Myrtle, scrambling down from the door as fast as they could.

The top hinge had pulled away from the wood, there could be no mistake about that. Grandpa would be very angry. Robbie thought of this as he stood looking at the broken door. He didn't want to see Grandpa just then; he wanted to go home. It was one of and enticing things to attract. But from my own bitter experience when I was a boy, may I say this: Off the narrow trail dangers lurk. That old serpent the devil hides there, just as the deadly copperhead hid in the leaves off that Powell Mountain Trail. He is ever watching to seek to devour all who go to the right or left side of the narrow trail up Sunshine Mountain. Remember that Jesus can only protect you and bless you as you stay close by His side. The serpents of sin can never intrude on that path!

And as you keep on that narrow trail you discover that although there may not be dazzling and enticing attractions, yet Jesus brings into your life such joy and peace and satisfaction that it makes the glittering things of the world look so cheap and unnecessary. You soon discover that each step you take up that trail on Sunshine Mountain opens up to you a pathway that shines more and more, "unto that perfect day."

—My Pleasure.

Owning Up

Robbie's failings not to want to face trouble when he got into it.

"Let's go to the woods and play," said he.

"Why, Robbie Moore, I'm ashamed of you. We'll do nothing of the kind, we'll go out to the field and tell Grandpa what we have done, and ask him how we can fix it," said Myrtle, indignantly.

It was a hard task for Robbie to do, but he marched off with the girls, and before they reached the field he said he would tell Grandpa himself.

Myrtle felt very proud of her brother, because she knew how much courage it took for him to own up when he had done wrong.

Grandpa didn't scold very hard when he saw how sorry the children were.

"We'd like to pay for fixing it," said Robbie, who was surprised to find how much pleasanter it was to face trouble than to run away from it.

"Well, I don't know what I can give you to do," replied Grandpa, at Robbie's unusual thoughtfulness; "perhaps you could pull a few weeds in the garden."

When dinner time came three tired, but very happy children washed their hands in the tin basin on the back porch. They felt that they had at least paid for part of the fixing of the broken door.

"Owning up is better than running away, isn't it?" said Myrtle.

"Yes, but it's pretty hard at first," replied Robbie.—The Little Chronicle.

Mrs. Levi Hill

Funeral services were conducted at Hull Road Free Will Baptist Church, Snow Hill, North Carolina, on April 19, 1956, for Mrs. Edith Herring Hill, age 74, who died at Parrott Hospital, Kinston, on April 17. She had been in declining health for a number of years and critically ill with cancer for two months.

Rev. Michael Pelt, her pastor, conducted the funeral services. A double quartet rendered beautiful music. The body lay in state at the church one hour before the services. Interment followed in the church cemetery.

Mrs. Hill had been a member of Hull Road Church and Woman's Auxiliary for a number of years. She was happiest when she had the opportunity to serve her church, family and community. The numerous floral designs and large crowd in attendance at the funeral showed the high esteem in which she was held.

Surviving are her husband; two daughters, Mrs. Milton Harrison and Mrs. Carl Barrow; two grandsons and two great grandsons; one sister, Miss Lillie Herring; and one brother, W. A. Herring.

J. Lawton Howard

On July 30, 1955, the angel of death visited this earth, and the spirit of J. Lawton Howard winged its flight back to God who gave it. Louis Moulton, and burial took place in the church cemetery.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Alligene Howard, and one son, Hubert Howard. They rest assured that death is only a passage to the great beyond where the hope of eternal life is realized and where the soul may delight itself in the fullness of God's love.

May God bless and comfort the family with the assurance that there is a morning after a night, a sunrise after a sunset and happiness after sorrow.

You are greatly missed, Lawton,
Tho' we know you are at rest

Report on Trip To Hokkaido

May 19, 1956
Tokyo, Japan

Description of Hokkaido:

Hokkaido is the northernmost island of the four largest islands of Japan. It is second largest, but because of the extreme cold it is very sparsely populated. The population is about 5 million. It has many year-round snow capped mountains with large fertile valleys in between. The houses are built very much on western style because the ordinary Japanese house is not built for cold weather. Snow is on the ground 4 or 5 months out of the year. Hokkaido is a pioneer country similar to the western part of the United States about 50 years ago. It is expected to develop into a prosperous island because of the opportunity there and the overpopulation in the rest of Japan.

We have just returned from a survey trip to Hokkaido. As you know we are looking over the various possibilities for a field for Free Will Baptists in Japan; thus we accepted an invitation to visit Hokkaido. Our itinerary was as follows: May 5—Left Tokyo.

May 6, 7—Muroran, Hokkaido, With the Swedish Evangelical Mission.

May 8, 9—Sapporo, Hokkaido, Attending the Hokkaido Missionary Fellowship.

May 10—Taiki, Hokkaido, With Mennonite Missionaries.

May 11—Hombestu, Hokkaido, With Mennonite Missionaries.

May 12, 13—Nakashibetsu, Hokkaido, With Mennonite Missionaries.

May 14—Shari and Abashiri, Hokkaido, With Lee Kanagy, Mennonite missionary, looking for a possible field.

May 15—Bihoro and Kitami, Hokkaido, With Mr. Kanagy and a Presbyterian Japanese pastor looking for a possible field. At Kitami we visited three Overseas Missionary Fellowship missionaries.

May 17—We arrived home.

At the missionary fellowship we sought the advice of most every group represented about doing work in the Hokkaido area. Since missionary comity is practiced in Hokkaido (nowhere else in Japan is it practiced), we were obligated to seek their advice. We learned about several needy places where no one is doing any Christian work. There are several prosperous and fast growing valleys with no Christian witness. The two valleys we were most impressed with was the Bihoro area and the Shari-Kawayu area. Abashiri is a town of 50 thousand with a Catholic and Episcopal church. The Shari-Kawayu area has no witness at all. Between Abashiri and Kitami there is no witness. Even the Catholics haven't come to these places yet. Kitami has a good Presbyterian church, but since the town has 60 thousand people it can't reach them all.

We found a place where two couples could work very well. Also there are nearby places where others could go if we have more missionaries to come. These two places are divided by a mountain range which can be crossed in the summer, but in the winter a longer route connects them. It seems it would be good if we were in one valley and plan for the Herseys to be in the other. One is the Kawayu-Shari Valley and the other is the Bihoro Valley.

We were most impressed by the immediate possibilities of the Bihoro Valley. Bihoro itself is 30 thousand, but there are also many more thousands within an hour's train ride. There is only one Christian in the town. He was converted in Tokyo and is a Northern Baptist. He is quite anxious for someone to establish a Christian work there. Near Bihoro is an Ainu village (the aboriginals of Japan). There is one unbaptized believer among them. He begged us to come to his village with the gospel. There is also one Catholic believer and, according to the Baptist man, the Catholics are planning to enter that area soon.

The Presbyterian church welcomed us to come and work in that area. They are by far the strongest evangelical witness in northeastern Hokkaido.

We were inspired by the possibilities there, but there are some things we must gain victory over before going. We want to be led by the Holy Spirit in making our choice, but we must face the facts: First, it is quite lonely there. Foreign fellowship would be almost impossible. Second, it is rather distant to civilization such as we are accustomed to, even here in Tokyo. Third, the weather is quite severe in the winter. Help us pray about these things because it would not do for us to go without gaining victory over them. We have given our lives to Him to be used sacrificially; so if He speaks to us we want to be willing to do as He leads no matter what the circumstances are. Please pray as we seek God's will. A decision must be made soon in order to get housing before winter. We feel very weak in times like these when such important decisions must be made, but we are trusting the Lord for strength.

The Continuing Mission Of the Church

Lesson: Acts 28:16, 23-31.

Golden Text: Matthew 28:19, 20.

I. INTRODUCTION

Last Sunday's lesson closed with Paul's reasoning with King Agrippa about the accusation of the Jews which brought about his imprisonment. The results of that conference were that Festus, the district governor cried out, "... Paul, thou art beside thyself; much learning doth make thee mad" (Acts 26:24). King Agrippa had said, "... Paul, Almost thou persuadest me to be a Christian" (Acts 26:28). In a conversation after Paul had departed, Agrippa told Festus that Paul would have gone free if he had not appealed to Caesar.

In a very short time Paul, in the custody of a centurion, set sail for Rome where he would be tried before Caesar. The voyage was packed with thrills and adventure. The ship encountered a storm and Paul had to calm the nerves of the pagan captain and crew; they were shipwrecked among barbarians; Paul was bitten by a poisonous serpent but received no ill effects whatever. Finally they secured passage on another ship to Rome.—The Bible Student (F. W. B.).

II. HELPFUL HINTS

1. The Lord knows how to prepare the way for His servants to accomplish His will for them (Vs. 16).
2. Those who expound the Kingdom of God will have to preach Christ and Him crucified (Vs. 23).
3. His command is to preach the gospel everywhere regardless of whether people believe it or not (Vs. 24).
4. Though the Lord knows already whether people will believe, He commands His preachers to give them a chance (Vv. 25, 26).
5. People don't have to believe and be saved, but they are held guilty for rejecting Christ (Vs. 27).
6. There are always men and women somewhere who are dying of hunger for the Bread of Life (Vs. 28).

7. Some will argue for the gospel of Christ though they don't have faith enough to be saved (Vs. 29).

8. The first obligation of the Great Commission is to preach the gospel to men everywhere (Vv. 30, 31).—The Bible Teacher (F. W. B.).

III. ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

1. Each sailor had his little idol image, and, as in the days of Jonah, each prayed to his god for help. But Paul is the only one who hears an answer. And once more there comes to this intrepid follower of Jesus Christ the opportunity to declare his faith. "Whose I am." Come on, you worshipers of Jupiter, Venus, Juno, Neptune and what not, listen to me. The God to whom I belong has spoken. The Romans put a little brass button on their slaves bearing the name of the owner and the word slave. Paul rejoiced in his insignia of divine ownership. He was not his own, he had been bought with a price; he was the bond slave of Jesus Christ. Are you ashamed to have any mark about you to indicate that you are the property of Jesus Christ? If so, He will be ashamed of you. "Whom I serve."—Selected.

2. When Mr. Moody was on one of his trips across the Atlantic in connection with his evangelistic work, the main shaft of the steamer broke, in a great storm, tearing a hole in the bottom of the ship. A prayer meeting was called. Mr. Moody read Psalm 91 and Psalm 107, and then offered an earnest prayer. That very night a rescue ship reached them.

The storm of Jonah, Chapter 1 and Acts 27, could be compared with profit. Jonah was disobedient, while Paul was living in the Center of God's will.

3. Two years before the history of the shipwreck, when Paul was yet in Jerusalem, God had said to him that he should witness for Him at Rome also (Acts 23:11). During the awful storm, on his journey toward Rome, this promise was renewed to him. He was assured that he should stand before Caesar. In addition to this the lives of all those aboard the ship were promised him (27:24).

But Paul's faith was energetic and active. When divinely assured, he did not sit down, fold his hands and do nothing, and say, "The Lord has purposed, willed, ordained and promised that we shall be saved, and He will bring it to pass." No, from that very hour he began to labor for the realization of the promise of God. His faith was energetic, active, and lively and so moved him to wise and careful action. He heartily cooperated with the Lord in fulfilling His purposes.

4. "Foreign missionaries are the biggest humbug on earth," was the sneering remark made by a business man to his pastor. "The missionary lives knee-deep in clover." This statement was repeated to a missionary at home on furlough after his first eight years of service in the interior of China. "I wish that man could see our clover," he replied. "I should like to take him with me on one of our itinerating trips. I should like to have him for a companion just one night at a Chinese wayside inn. I would have him sleep with me on the filthy excuse for a bed, and with me fight the vermin which abound there." Then, as if fearful that his words might be interpreted as a complaint, he added, with flashing eyes: "But how I wish I could go back to it all tomorrow! Did your friend say knee-deep in clover? He was wrong! The missionary is soul-deep in clover, for God is with him, and his soul is so full of peace that he understands the message of Paul to the Colossians, 'Now I rejoice in my sufferings for your sake.' Yes, I wish I could go back tomorrow."—Forward (Courtesy Eerdmans).

5. It has been said that the same sun that melts also hardens clay. The truth of God can accomplish either of two things—it will harden or it will melt. Either is something of a slow process and implies the often or repeated hearing of the Word of God. If it is not received in faith believing, if it is often set aside, a hardening process will set in. It will perhaps be one of which the sinner is not conscious. He is confirmed in his evils; he may hear and hear and remain entirely unmoved by the sweet claims of Christ upon his heart. This is warning to those who hear!—The Bible Illustrator.

Man talks of the survival of the fittest but the glory of the gospel is that it transforms the unfit.—Selected

Responsibilities gravitate to the shoulders best able to bear them.—Elbert Hubbard

RUTH'S CHAPEL CHURCH

Ruth's Chapel Church is located in New Bern, North Carolina, in the Woodrow section just across Jack's Creek and just outside the city limits. This section or suburb got its start during World War I and is named for Woodrow Wilson. The only church there, it is named for Mrs. Ruth Stocks who conducted a Sunday school there in a small frame building which is the forerunner of the present structure.

When the Rev. J. C. Griffin assumed the pastorate of this church in 1949, the building was unfinished, unpainted and consisted of one small auditorium. Only the sub-flooring had been laid, and the ceiling was of cull flooring.

On April 24, 1955, the new building was dedicated. The building was finished and painted, and a hardwood floor, dark oak in color, had been laid. A choir loft had been built. Gas heating had been installed. Eleven classrooms had been added; one, 28 by 14 feet, is an annex which can be opened up into the auditorium when needed.

There were 39 members about 20 of whom were active when Brother Griffin took over. There are now about 160 members with about 100 being active. In 1949 the Sunday school's six classes had about 50 members, all in one auditorium. There are now 12 classes with over 230 enrolled and an average attendance of nearly 175.

There has been no borrowing of money and there is no indebtedness. All the improvements have been paid for through tithes and offerings. No money has been raised through contests, suppers or shows. The church supports fully the programs of both the national and state bodies.

In addition to the morning and evening worship services every Sunday, and the mid-week prayer meetings, Ruth's Chapel has a most active woman's auxiliary. There is also a strong young people's league of which Raymond Heath is general director. There are two choirs—a senior and a junior choir. The church sponsors a boy scout troop and also a radio program. Marcel Perry is the Sunday school superintendent.

ery one of his former churches until he has made a complete round of them. And then he would like to do the same thing all over again and again!

This in itself is indeed something new in evangelism. He calls it stewardship evangelism. Again, he is the pioneer! This has been a long-cherished dream of his and no sudden fancy.

It is easy to see that he is looking forward to this new kind of pastorate with the same eagerness with which the youth fresh out of school looks forward to the long and adventuresome future ahead of him! At this point we bid him Godspeed and pray that God may make possible this new endeavor of his!

It is a worthy and dramatic climax to a long and productive career that will loom larger as future generations view our own.

GROUND BREAKING SERVICES ELIZABETHTON, TENN., CHURCH

The Rev. Winfred Floyd, pastor, was in charge of the ground breaking services held on Easter Sunday at the First Free Will Baptist Church, Elizabethton, Tennessee. At that time ground was broken for a new education addition, estimated to cost about $18,000. The new addition will house the nursery, two rest rooms, a young people's assembly room and additional Sunday school classrooms.

Monroe Winters, chairman of the board of trustees and the first building fund chairman for the addition, was selected to remove the first shovel of dirt. Assisting in the service as pictured above, were: The Rev. Mr. Floyd, Mr. Winters, John Campbell, building committee and church treasurer; O. C. Bowers, chairman of the building committee; and John Morgan, chairman of the board of deacons.

The actual excavation on the new building has begun and is expected to be completed in about four months.

CHURCH MUSIC

Among the many problems facing the pastor in the administration of his church affairs is that of church music. The wide-awake minister realizes the importance of music in the service of worship. But, alas, establishing a satisfactory program sometimes proves to be quite a headache to him in some churches.

The first problem to be solved is that of securing the person who will play the piano or the organ. Sometimes it is a question of not having anyone in the congregation who can play the instrument; sometimes the problem arises because there are several people who desire to perform the service and they are envious of one another. We must certainly admit that it is most childish for people to cause trouble in the church because of their petty prejudices. In this case the pastor has to sit by and watch the spirit of unity of the church broken.

The alert pastor will also be concerned about the kind of music used in the worship services. Lee Olson, retiring president of the National Church Music Fellowship, said recently, "A 'musical reformation' is a pressing need of evangelical churches. . . . We are not looking at the sad musical state of our churches as an object of mere criticism, but as an object for responsible action—action which is not going to be easy." Carl Halter, dean of Concordia Teachers' College, Maywood, Illinois, said that songs and music for worship services should not be selected on the basis of congregational popularity, emotional pull or sheer musical worth. "Music in the church has a prophetic function," he said. "The preacher is an artist using words and ideas no less than the musician is an artist using musical sounds and ideas. Music . . . must deal with the task of the church which is to preach the gospel."

We quote the following excerpt from The Free Methodist dealing with the musician's place in divine worship:

"The Sunday school teachers have just completed their presentation of the lesson. The five-minute intermission period is about to begin—the organist starts to play the prelude to the morning worship service. Classes are reluctantly discontinued, and people begin finding their seats for the period of worship. The younger parents quickly endeavor to gather little Susans and Billys and find their accustomed places in the sanctuary. Then groups, couples old and young, and lone worshipers are ushered to their seats.

"I wonder what the organist will play this morning?" muses a mother of six children, as she hurries to her seat. The week has been one of many problems. She always draws closer to God through music than at any other time during the service. 'The song of her soul since the Lord made her whole has been the old story so blessed!' That 'Haven of Rest'—how often she has steered her little barge into that safe cove! 'Will the music feed my soul, and meet my need? I hope so!' She feels 'the time and effort will be wasted if it does not benefit her 'this morning. 'Those familiar hymns certainly do something 'to me—which beautiful songs with pleasant words never do!'

"It is the old hymns—written out of the depth of experience while on the mountaintop of ecstasy, or from the 'mountain in converse'—the valley of distress and despair—which really count when the soul is crying out for courage and relief from the onslaughts of the enemy! They lift the soul, and the heart reaches out to the God of our salvation—or if repentance is the need, they give courage to approach the mighty and just God, who has in His love provided Jesus, the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world! 'The Name of Jesus,' 'Jesus, the Very Thought of Thee,' 'There is a Fountain Filled with Blood,' 'Jesus, Lover of my Soul,' 'Rock of Ages,' 'Hiding in Thee,' and countless others bring God so near.

"The organist bows his head in silent prayer before beginning that grand old anthem, 'Holy, Holy, Holy!' Worshipers are summoned into the presence of almighty God, and find their places around the Great White Throne. The gentle breezes of heaven soothe their cheeks and inspire them to give God praise and glory for lifting them personally out of the mire and clay of sin.

"What is that next tune? 'Great Is Thy Faithfulness,' thanking God for helping poor and helpless humanity. How does the organist know that the minister has been facing many difficulties this week, and that Mrs. Jones' husband has been drinking heavily again, and that Mrs. Brown has been carrying an unusually heavy burden for her unsaved boy overseas?

"Hark! the organist is playing with confidence and firmness, 'Elijah's God Still Lives Today!' Now—how does he know what to play? He is just a very ordinary person.

"Could it be that something was told the organist when practicing? No, it was not that. A passerby peering through an open window saw him walk slowly down the aisle toward the altar and kneel near the end of the rail. Bowing his head, he waited for some time, imbibing the serenity of the sanctuary, and then proceeded to address the Father on behalf of the Sunday services.

"O Father, through my playing, help me to lift the hearts of the people. Those in sorrow, let them have light for their darkness and healing for their bleeding hearts! The one who lost her child—bind up that broken heart and help her to sing again! That one who has not fully yielded to Christ whose inner heart wishes to follow fully but the carnal mind still is in evidence—help such to see that 'It Will Be Worth It All When We See Jesus.' Grant, O God, that those in the church many years, who are now passing into a life of lessened activity because of advancing age, may find rest of soul through 'How Firm a Foundation.' Those precious little children who recently found Jesus, make them know that they are loved of God and the church when I play, just for them, 'Saviour, Like a Shepherd Lead Us.'

Playing at Praying

Edwin Raymond Anderson
Hartford, Connecticut

THERE are times when a slip of the finger on the typewriter keys may not prove to be a mistake at all. Truth is often brought to burning light in strange ways.

The other day while typing an article on the subject of Prayer, I found that, at one point, my finger had slipped while seeking to type the word praying. Instead the word was typed playing. Of course, I immediately set about to correct the error, and was brought up short!

Here is the difference of a letter; the difference between "r" and "l." But measured in the light of spiritual truth, there is surely a greater distance than could ever be measured. In cold truth a good deal of so-called praying may, to the sight of a holy and grieved Lord, be nothing short of playing. It is trivial rather than tremendous—going through the motions rather than being engaged in such a movement in the soul which indicates a genuine meeting with the Lord. The knees may be bent, but alas! the inner knees of the heart are strangely stiff. Those words which flit all too easily across the lips find but the hollow note for there is no corresponding passion in the innermost recesses. In short, we have turned out as players, not prayers, and for such a serious time as the present.

Somewhere I have read that Andrew Bonar never entered upon a session of holy prayer without undergoing a fierce battle at the threshold. Here was an intense or real business which gripped him to the spiritual marrow. There was a wrestling, a real struggle, a coming to tight grips and close quarters, and cutting through enemy territory with all the baptized passion of heaven. And Bonar found it a costly thing, putting a tremendous drain upon every facet of his being and calling for the deepest of demands.

Of course, this may be rather easy to write or to scan lightly with the eyes, but such a way of ease is the greater condemnation. One has well spoken of the serious danger of trafficking in unfelt truth, and one fears that the highway is filled with many saints in so tragic a condition. There is more than enough in the Word of the Lord to reveal the great gap between our pretense of prayer and the pertinent practice of genuine Spirit-directed praying which is therein revealed. Read the lives of the heroes of the faith, the noble ones listed in the Word, and you will be brought up short with burning conviction at the revelation of the exceeding fruitfulness of their lives and ways—all of which but leaves the many of us without excuse.

Somehow we have failed to realize that this matter of praying is a vital business in the concern and conduct of the Christian life. The Word truly speaks of "... praying in the Holy Ghost" (Jude 20), but alas! somehow it does not seem to become an issue of practical concern. We have poor credit at the counter of heaven and all too easily fall prey to counterfeit merchandise. It is more than "... high time to awake out of sleep ..." (Romans 13:11). It is high time to revive from this deadly slumber of prayer playing.

You and I are either praying or playing. There simply can be no middle ground. The Lord in heaven will not allow it, and He assigns all His forces to soul calling, demanding complete allegiance. We stand upon critical ground, and if we be not praying, of a solemn surety the enemy will be preying upon us for spiritual disaster. We are, as the apostle indicated, rather to be thoroughly occupied with "Praying always with all prayer ..." (Ephesians 6:18), as the sufficient and final answer for all that concerns the Christian testimony and welfare.

FIRST CENTURY VERSUS TWENTIETH CENTURY

Elva McAllister

First Century: "And Jesus saith unto him, The foxes have holes, and the birds of the air have nests; but the Son of man hath not where to lay his head" (Matthew 8:20).

Twentieth Century: The thing to do is get the finest house you can possibly afford or even a little finer than you can really afford. Fill it with handsome, elegant furniture, lovely rugs, sterling silver and exquisite china. It's your money, go ahead and spend it.

First Century: "But godliness with contentment is great gain. For we brought nothing into this world, and it is certain we can carry nothing out. And having food and raiment let us be therewith content" (1 Timothy 6:6-8).

Twentieth Century: Having delicately seasoned food, daintily served with cut glass and fine linens, and having fashionably styled clothing of beautiful fabric and latest design; let us be therewith discontent.

And let us increase our discontent by watching enviously the passing parade of other Americans who are even more self-indulgent and luxury loving than we, while we forget the millions of people in other nations who are starving and in rags.

First Century: "But seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you" (Matthew 6:33).

Twentieth Century: You have to make a living, of course. Business is business, and I'm like all the rest—I don't really have much time for church work, now that I'm on this new job.

Yeah, I'd like to help the church, but a man's got to eat.

My tithe? Huh, what's that? One tenth of my money for the church? Are you kidding? And the payments due on the television set and the deep freeze, and two payments behind on the car? What a laugh!

Oh, somebody will support the missionaries, I guess. It's not my worry.

First Century: "And he said to them, Take heed, and beware of covetousness: for a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth" (Luke 12:15).

Twentieth Century: How much does he make? ... So they sold the other car to us and bought that Cadillac convertible they've been dreaming about. ... And you ought to see the way she has redecorated her downstairs! It's a dream! ... But, mother, it's only $25 more, and it does look nicer on me than the brown one. ... And his folks gave him another motor boat for his birthday. ... Yes, she was going to teach in the church college, but she gets $1,500 more a year where she is, you know. ... Subscribe to the Missionary Tidings? Oh, I can't afford it! ...

First Century: "Thrice was I beaten with rods, once was I stoned, thrice I suffered shipwreck, a night and a day I have been in the deep; ... In weariness and painfulness, in watchings often, in

Care for Souls

Rev. R. P. Harris
Rocky Mount, North Carolina

"... no man cared for my soul" (Psalm 142:4).

THERE are many people living in the world today who believe that no man cares for their soul. They have never believed God, have not been introduced to the God-Man, Jesus Christ; and, therefore, they feel that no one cares for them. The most lonely feeling one can have may come from a feeling that no one cares for one. A child whose parents never show signs of love, devotion and interest is most miserable. None of us ever grow so old but that we love and cherish an interest from others. Many old people become problems to handle because they are led to believe that they are in the way and that no one cares for them. Many have become so disturbed that they have taken their own lives rather than to feel that they are in the way.

What do we mean by care for souls? To understand what we mean by this question, one must have a firm conviction of the value of a soul. One way of considering the value of a soul is to consider that Christ died to save the soul. If every person in the world had been saved but one, Christ would have come to earth, lived as He did, suffered as He did and died as He did to redeem that one soul. Jesus Christ placed great, great value on one human soul. He tells us that even if there were the ninety and nine safely in the fold, the truly good shepherd would go out after the one which was lost and would find him and return rejoicing because he had found the one lost sheep.

To care for souls means that we will cherish tender solicitude for their welfare. We will imagine ourselves in his condition and we will have great compassion and love for him. We will suffer great danger so that we might make him comfortable. We would forget our personal feelings and ambitions in order to help the one who is in need or in great danger. It means that we would be alarmed because of their danger and would risk our very lives to deliver them from danger. You know how it is when one you love is in great danger. You feel that you'd rather be in that same danger yourself than to know that the one you love is in danger.

Christ loved us so much that He made zealous exertions for our salvation. Jesus was put on the spot for you and for me. We would be ungrateful if we did not feel seriously concerned for others when they are in danger.

There are many jealous minded people who will help only so much. If they see that someone is going to benefit more than they, they withdraw their support right away. Then, again, some people will go all out for certain individuals and will do absolutely nothing for others.

Some people care for the soul of the preacher and will risk their lives to hold his hand up so that the work might go on. There are others who fasten weights on the pastor's hand to weight him down so that he is unable to do his job. The fact remains that the hands of Moses had to be uplifted if Israel was to prosper. When his hands became tired and heavy, two men came and held them up so that Israel could win the battle.

Those who find fault and accuse those who are engaged in Christian service are wolves in sheep's clothing and will attack the flock, bringing confusion and fright which might upset the whole work of the Lord in that church. Sometimes it is necessary to have a back-door revival before a church can move forward. Let us every one examine our own hearts to see if there is any wicked thing in us.

A Sad Disappointment

A. L. Sellers
Quitman, Georgia

DID you ever see anyone disappointed after having received what he was promised? This is a sad experience, but that is the experience thousands of people are receiving daily.

That was the experience of Adam and Eve as Satan promised them that they should become as wise as gods if they would eat of the forbidden fruit. They ate and became as wise as gods to know good and evil. They had been good, but now they were evil, for God said, "... Behold, the man is become as one of us, to know good and evil: ..." (Genesis 3:22). They also were experiencing the reality of what God had promised them. God had told them that the day they ate of that fruit they should surely die. They had already lost the pleasure of that garden, and the satisfaction of being at peace with God; instead, a fear and dread like they had never experienced before was there to be endured regardless of what the results might be. They had gotten what they were promised, and were experiencing the meaning of the word, death. But the greatness of this disappointment cannot be expressed in words. When they ate the forbidden fruit they did not go out of existence, but they died to the joy of the Garden of Eden and received what they were promised.

So are you, my dear reader, going to receive what you have been promised. There are only two classes of people with the Father, the believers and the unbelievers. The promise to the believers is salvation; to the unbelievers, damnation. Which class do you belong to? Each class is going to get what is promised it.

The Father's promises are dependable: they did not fail in the Garden of Eden with Adam and Eve; they did not fail with the children of Israel; they did not fail with Christ; they did not fail with the apostles; neither are they going to fail with you. When you have complied with the conditions on which they are promised, you can depend on the promise being yours to enjoy or endure, as the results may be. We know Adam and Eve did not have any pleasure when they were being driven out of the Garden of Eden, but they had to endure it. The fact that the children of Israel had to remain in the wilderness was not a pleasant experience, but they had to put up with it. The day of decision had passed for them and they were having to abide by the decision that was present and make the best of it. The day of decision comes to all, but it does not tarry, and we have to use it as it passes by. The way we use it determines whether our future will be a disappointment or a satisfaction. For that reason let me persuade you to accept Christ, if you have not already done so, and let His word abide in you so that you may be led in making the right decision. To Christ, being crucified was not pleasant; but when He arose triumphant over death and the grave and took that flight back to the glory land, there was joy, not only for Him, but for all that believed on Him. That is the reason that He could pray to the Father while in such great agony. "... O my Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me: nevertheless not as I will, but as thou wilt" (Matthew 26:39).

Those that were disappointed when they had gotten what they were promised were those who did not listen to their Instructor. Adam and Eve listened a while and the joy they experienced during this time, no one knows; but one day they failed to listen, and received the promise of death for what they did. This was a sad disappointment for them, but it was what they were promised.

while and were greatly blessed, but later they refused to listen and received the destruction that was promised to those who disobeyed God. They got what was promised them.

Christ listened and did that which was always pleasing to the Father. Though He was persecuted, He was blessed and not disappointed. The apostles also suffered persecution, but they were wonderfully blessed and were not disappointed. Yes, they listened to God.

Dear reader, if you will listen and believe what Christ has to say, you will not do those things that will disappoint you; for there is no one who wants to receive a disappointment. If you will listen to get the message and let it be a reality in your life, you will keep His Word; the Father will also love you and will come and make His abode with you. Misunderstanding and unbelief are the causes of all our troubles.

Worth of a Family Altar

Carolyn Lee

(Editor's Note: This article is an adaptation of the winning essay by Carolyn Lee, age 12, in the North Carolina State Declamation Contest at the State Woman's Auxiliary Convention on May 24, 1956.)

"... whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap" (Galatians 6:7).

AS surely as a farmer reaps what he sows in his fields, the parents of children will reap what they sow in the minds, thoughts and lives of their children. If they do not pray with and tell their children about the Lord in family worship services, they will probably reap children that are not Christians. Children who are brought up with family altar services may not be Christians at first, but these services and prayers will come back to them in later life. Most children who are brought up in Christian homes with Christian parents will accept the Lord early in life and continue to serve Him. When they have homes of their own they will start altar services in them to teach their children the wonderful love of God that they learned as children.

Sometimes the family altar means the winning of lost souls to Christ, and many men become great speakers and soul winners for Him. There is a story which tells of a fine Christian youth who worked at a large broadcasting company. One day he was told that he had to make a recording without making one mistake. If he made one slip of the tongue or mispronounced one word the whole recording would have to be made over and would cost the company a considerable expense. He recorded the statement which lasted fifteen minutes without making a single error! When a fellow worker complimented him on his ability to read difficult scripts he gave the credit to the training he received as a child when he had taken his turn regularly in reading aloud from the Bible during family devotions around the breakfast table. The young man's sterling character and life are evidences that these devotional moments with his family did far more for him than merely to perfect his enunciation. Who can tell what seeds of faith and hope were sown in his life as a child in the presence of his family? Through these devotions he familiarized himself with the teachings of the Bible and spoke to God in prayer.

We are living in a very difficult times in which to maintain family altars. In the modern days of which we are living there are so many diversions such as radios and televisions that families may find it hard to have altar services, but the need for family worship was never greater.

All too soon, the young people leave their homes to go out into the world to make their livings. Some go to colleges; others go to the far ends of the earth to serve their country in military service. Age old temptations are often placed before them in their loneliness in being away from their families, and often by the trying situations into which young people are thrown. It has been said by chaplains and other religious leaders that they can tell young people from homes where religion has been given a prominent place by their very strong religious faith.

"Train up a child in the way he should go: and when he is old, he will not depart from it" (Proverbs 22:6). We have a very beautiful example of this in the Bible as we see Timothy around his mother and grandmother's knees, learning about the love of God when he was a child. His early training had a great influence on his later life.

"Cast thy bread upon the waters: for thou shalt find it after many days" (Ecclesiastes 11:1). There is no better place in the world than the family altar to cast our bread for rich returns will be ours.

And So the Years Pass On

"When I'm a woman, you'll see what I'll do;

I'll be great and good, and noble and true;

I'll visit the sick, and relieve the poor
No one shall ever be turned from my door:

But I'm only a little girl now."

And so the years pass on!

"When I'm older, I'll have more time
To think of heaven and things sublime:
My time is now full of studies and play,
But I really mean to begin some day:

But I'm only a little girl now."

And so the years pass on!

"When I'm a woman," a gay maiden said,
"I'll try to do right, and not be afraid;
I'll be a Christian, and give up the joys
Of the world, with all its dazzling toys:

But I'm only a young girl now."

And so the years pass on!

"Dear me!" sighed a woman gray with years.

With a heart full of cares and doubts and fears,

"I've kept putting off the time to be good,
Instead of beginning to do as I should;

And I'm an old woman now."

And so the years pass on!

Now is the time to begin to do right;
Today, whether skies be dark or bright.
Make others happy by good deeds of love,

Looking to Jesus for help from above;

And you will be happy now,

And so the years pass on!

Thanks For Cragmont Repair Funds

Mrs. Gertrude Ballard, Bladenboro, North Carolina, wishes to thank all who have responded to Cragmont's call for repair funds. She states as follows:

"We do truly praise the Lord for our people who have a full vision of exalting Christ through the support of all our institutions. All of them have their place in fulfilling the Great Commission—to go, to tell, to serve. The urgency of the need of repairing and adding extra rooms, etc., at Cragmont Assembly, Black Mountain, North Carolina, is very evident as I write these lines.

"For the past week registrations for the youth conference of June 18-23 have run over our present capacity because more people have not responded to our drive for repair funds. A note asking that the overrunning group register for a later conference has had to go out. Oh, that everyone shall be able to go to these conferences which are Christ centered and will mean that our church of tomorrow will be a greater church because of these experiences! The Crag-

"You Need Not Worry Over Your Sins!"

A British military hospital was full of badly wounded soldiers. A nurse said to a dying soldier, "You have no need to worry over your sins. Anyone who gives his life for his country, as you have done, is all right." The soldier smiled faintly, and said, "That is a mistake. When I lay out there in the open, I knew I had done my bit. I hadn't failed my king and country. But that didn't help me to face God. I wasn't fit to die, and I knew it. I was greatly troubled until I heard a Christian lady, who visits us here, pray. Then I saw that the Lord Jesus was punished for all my sins that I might go free, and peace came into my heart! How wonderful of Him to die for me!"—Selected.

Woman, 100, Follows Rule of "Trust in the Lord"

"Trust in the Lord" is the motto of Mrs. Jollie Potter, of Clifton City, Missouri, who is 100 years old.

Thus Speaketh Christ

Ye call Me Master and obey Me not.
 Ye call Me light and seek Me not.
 Ye call Me way and walk Me not.
 Ye call Me life and desire Me not.
 Ye call Me wise and follow Me not.
 Ye call Me fair and love Me not.
 Ye call Me rich and ask Me not.
 Ye call Me eternal and seek Me not.
 Ye call Me gracious and trust Me not.
 Ye call Me noble and serve Me not.
 Ye call Me mighty and honor Me not.
 Ye call Me just and fear Me not.
 —If I condemn you, blame Me not.

Some people think it a disgrace to be found out as being Christians. It is not a disgrace, unless there are those who profess to be Christians and yet are not what they profess to be. Those should be ashamed of their profession.—Selected.

Questions and Answers ON THE BIBLE

Conducted by J. F. BARROW

3824 Richland Avenue, Nashville 5, Tennessee

Question: Are there any Old Testament Scriptures that clearly predict the coming of Christ? Are there any Scriptures that teach the pre-existence and immutability of Christ?—G. R. T.

Answer: I think that there are some clear enough so that one with ordinary intelligence would recognize them as predicting His advent and teach of His pre-existence. In the Old Testament we find an abundance of prophecies which give details of Christ's birth, life and ministry. Just a few verses quoted here will give evidence to this fact. We are told that He should be born of a virgin: "Therefore the Lord himself shall give you a sign; Behold, a virgin shall conceive, and bear a son, and shall call his name Immanuel" (Isaiah 7:14). Compare Matthew 1:18-25 and Luke 1:35. We were also told that He would be born in Bethlehem of Judaea; "But thou, Bethlehem Ephratah, though thou be little among the thousands of Judah, yet out of thee shall he come forth unto me that is to be ruler in Israel; whose goings forth have been from of old, from everlasting" (Micah 5:2). Compare Matthew 2:5, 6. We are told that He was to be a man of sorrow; "He is despised and rejected of men; a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief: and we hid as it were our faces from him; he was despised, and we esteemed him not" (Isaiah 53:3). His triumphal entry into Jerusalem was predicted, "Rejoice greatly, O daughter of Zion; shout, O daughter of Jerusalem: behold, thy King cometh unto thee: he is just, and having salvation; lowly, and riding upon an ass, and upon a colt the foal of an ass" (Zechariah 9:9). Compare Matthew 21:1-16; Luke 19:30-40. We read of His betrayal for thirty pieces of silver, "And I said unto them, If ye think good, give me my price; and if not, forbear. So they weighed for my price thirty pieces of silver" (Zechariah 11:12). See Matthew 27:3

The use of the betrayal money for a potter's field is predicted. "And the LORD said unto me, Cast it unto the potter: a goodly price that I was prized at of them. And I took the thirty pieces of silver, and cast them to the potter in the house of the LORD" (Zechariah 11:13). See Matthew 27:4-8. The nailing of His hands is set forth in, "And one shall say unto him, What are these wounds in thine hands? Then he shall answer, Those with which I was wounded in the house of my friends" (Zechariah 13:6); and "For dogs have compassed me: the assembly of the wicked have inclosed me: they pierced my hands and my feet" (Psalm 22:16). Not a bone in His body was to be broken, "He keepeth all his bones: not one of them is broken" (Psalm 34:20). It was prophesied that He would die in the presence of criminals, "He was taken from prison and from judgment: and who shall declare his generation? for he was cut off out of the land of the living: for the transgression of my people was he stricken. And he made his grave with the wicked, and with the rich in his death; because he had done no violence, neither was any deceit in his mouth" (Isaiah 53:8, 9). The atonement which He wrought was predicted, "Surely he hath borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows: yet we did esteem him stricken, smitten of God and afflicted. But he was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities: the chastisement of our peace was upon him; and with his stripes we are healed" (Isaiah 53:4, 5). We are told of His resurrection, "For thou wilt not leave my soul in hell; neither wilt thou suffer thine Holy One to see corruption" (Psalm 16:10). His cheeks were to be smitten, "Now gather thyself in troops, O daughter of troops: he hath laid siege against us: they shall smite the judge of Israel with a rod upon the cheek" (Micah 5:1).

Jesus Himself taught His pre-existence. Jesus' pre-existence may be seen in the following Scriptures: "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God" (John 1:1); "Jesus said unto them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, Before Abraham was, I am" (John 8:58); "That which was from the beginning, which we have heard, which we have seen with our eyes, which we have looked upon, and our hands have handled, of the Word of life" (1 John 1:1); "And now, O Father, glorify thou me with thine own self with the glory which I had with thee before the world was" (John 17:5); "I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end, the first and the last" (Revelation 22:13).

The following set forth His immutability: "Jesus Christ the same yesterday, and to day, and for ever" (Hebrews 13:8); "And as a vesture shalt thou fold them up, and they shall be changed: but thou art the same, and thy years shall not fail" (Hebrews 1:12).

Resting by the Way

A poor father started out one day to find and prepare a home for his wife and little child. He told them that when it was ready he would send for them.

One day the happy news came. They were too poor to ride the train, so they started out to walk. It was a long way to the new home, but they rested often by the way. Picture in your mind the sweet mother sitting on a step. The dear child is sitting beside her, resting its weary head upon her knee. How happy they are, though they are very poor! But they gladly suffer on their way, for they will soon be with the kind husband and father.

Our precious Lord Jesus has also gone to Heaven to prepare a home for His dear ones. We may become weary, too, sometimes on the way. But like the little child, we can lay our head by faith upon His breast and rest in peace and confidence. That is, we can trust in Him and rest, for trusting in Him gives us rest. If we love Him, we enjoy suffering for Him by the way, for we know we shall soon see Him and be with Him.—

Jesus Suffered for Us

All our sins and sorrows sore,
Jesus in His body bore;
He was mocked, despised and bruised,
And most terribly abused.

To the Cross He went one day,
Having not a word to say;
There He suffered, bled and died,
'Neath His Blood our sins to hide.

Yes, He gladly bore the pain,
And He suffered not in vain,
For sins He put away
When, in love, He died that day.

The Lighted Pathway

This word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path (PSALM 119:105).

REV. WILLET L. MORETZ
SWANNANOA, N. C.

"Knowing this first, that there shall come in the last days scoffers, walking after their own lusts, And saying, Where is the promise of his coming? for since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were from the beginning of the creation" (2 Peter 3:3, 4).

For this week's devotional thoughts I want to bring to your attention the following short paragraph and the poetical paraphrase based on 2 Peter 3:3-14. I strongly suggest that you read these verses of Scripture before you continue with the quotations.

"The words of Peter, as inspired by God, here lead us to say, How precisely the Scripture foretells the conduct of its adversaries, our own deists not excepted, and thereby renders their wicked opposition a proof of its own divine inspiration! In what tremendous manner will Jesus come at last! What perishing of heavens, melting of elements, and burning of earth, will attend it! How terrible for carnal men, to have that world they have chosen for their portion, universally kindled into flames to give them a final adieu, and fearful introduction into hell! What a blessed change will ensue! New heavens and a new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness! In the contemplation and faith of these glorious events how circumspect, holy, and religious we ought to be."

"Lo! in the last of days behold
A faithless race arise;
Their lawless lust their only rule;
And thus the scoffer cries;
Where is the promise, deem'd so true,
That spoke the Saviour near?
E'er since our fathers slept in dust,
No change has reach'd our ear.

"Years roll'd on years successive glide,
Since first the world began,
And on the tide of time still floats,
Secure, the bark of man.
Thus spake the scoffer; but his words
Conceal the truth he knows,
That from the waters' dark abyss
The earth at first arose.

"But when the sons of men began
With one consent to stray,
At heav'n's command a deluge swept
The godless race away.
A different fate is now prepar'd
For Nature's trembling frame;

Soon shall her orbs be all enwrapt
In one devouring frame.

"Reserved are sinners for that hour
When to the gulf below,
Arm'd with the hand of sov'reign pow'r,
The Judge consigns his foe.
Though now, ye just! the time appears
Protracted, dark, unknown,
An hour, a day, a thousand years,
To heav'n's great Lord are one.

"Still all may share his sov'reign grace,
In ev'ry change secure;
The meek, the suppliant contrite race,
Shall find his mercy sure.
The contrite race he counts his friends,
Forbids the suppliant's fall;
Condemns reluctant, but extends
The hope of grace to all.

"Yet as the night-wrapp'd thief who lurks
To seize th' expected prize,

Thus steals the hour when Christ shall come,
And thunder rend the skies.
Then at the loud, the solemn peal,
The heav'ns shall burst away,
The elements shall melt in flame
At nature's final day.

"Since all this frame of things must end,
As heav'n has so decreed,
How wise our inmost thoughts to guard,
And watch o'er ev'ry deed;
Expected calm th' appointed hour,
When, nature's conflict o'er,
A new and better world shall rise,
Where sin is known no more."

—Selected.

"Seeing then that all these things shall be dissolved, what manner of persons ought ye to be in all holy conversion and godliness" (2 Peter 3:11).

College Takes Up Option On Land

Directors of Mount Olive College, Mount Olive, North Carolina, at a meeting May 28, approved the purchase of 50 acres of land near the Mount Olive Elementary School from Mr. and Mrs.

Jesse Martin.

The college has held an option on the property for some time, and at the board meeting a committee was designated to complete the purchase of the land. Appointed to the committee were President W. Burkette Raper; David Hansley, chairman of the board; M. L. Johnson, treasurer; Hardy Talton, board member; and R. N. Hinnant, secretary.

The additional property, located several blocks from the present campus, will be used for future expansion of the educational plant. Johnson, assistant to President Raper, said the college hopes to take over the property in October. There are no immediate plans for erecting more buildings, he declared. He stated an architect will be asked to make a complete drawing of the buildings needed and that the structures will be erected as needed or as funds are available.

In adopting the resolution to purchase the property, the board noted that additional facilities are needed to accommodate the expected increase in the size of the student body and to meet the requirements for accreditation.

Three local citizens of Mount Olive worked with the directors in securing the land for the college and they have been asked to continue to work with the board in planning the school's expansion. They are: Dr. C. C. Henderson, B. E. Bryan and Ray Scarborough.

6. Be not conformed to this world (Romans 12:2; Colossians 3:1-4).

THE HOLY SPIRIT IN THE BOOK OF ACTS

1. His presence and guidance (2:1-4; 8:29).
2. His administration and His deeds (9:17; 10:44-47).
3. His leadership and His sanctions (11:24; 12:1-8).
4. His love and His care (13:46-52; 14:7-10).
5. His advice and His court (15:1-31; 19:1-7).
6. His calling and His orders (13:1-4; 14:20-28).
7. His acts and wonders (16:6; 16:9, 10; 16:25-34).
8. His wisdom and grace (17:24-34).
9. His fruit and His methods (18:1-28; 19:20-40).
10. His testimony and His power (20:23-21:4).
11. His doctrine and His success (20:28; 28:28).

Do we know that we are of God, born of God, children of God, heirs of God—of God in every sense? It will be for our profit and help if we all afresh lay this question to our hearts. This is an age of thought, as men say. Men glory in being men of "modern thought," and they are content to spend their days thinking, without ever seeking to reach this Divine certainty: "We know." But the child of God can say, "I know"; and in so far as we are taught of God we know both the condition of the world and the end of its course; and we know something at least of the glory and dignity of the calling of God's people, and what the end of their course shall be.—W. H. Bennet.

By J. C. Griffin

THE MINISTERS' CONFERENCE AT CRAGMONT

It has been my happy privilege to attend the meetings at Cragmont Assembly, near Black Mountain, North Carolina, during the Ministers' Conference ever since the birth of the organization, and we have had some wonderful mountaintop experiences. Of course we have had some meetings that were not so wonderful, but may I say with all sincerity that the session held on June 4-8, 1956, surpassed any conference held heretofore. The preaching was extra good, and one trend was followed all the way through the conference. Our hearts were stirred to be better preachers and pastors. A prayer of dedication to that affect was offered and all present went down to the altar and prayed fervently and rejoicingly. We are sure that God answered and will answer continually as we perform the service of consecrated ministers of the gospel.

A period of testimonies was enjoyed during the conference in which many worthwhile expressions of real joy in the fellowship that was manifested in this session were made. The following are a few of these expressions which I would like to pass on to our readers:

Rev. Homer Willis said, "I appreciate the real gospel preaching at Cragmont and the warm spirit of fellowship." Brother Willis, as many of you know, is the North Carolina state missionary. It was a glorious asset to have Brother Willis at this session of the Ministers' Conference.

Rev. Clyde Cox said, "Thank the Lord for this week at Cragmont. It has been a great blessing and inspiration to me." Brother Cox was the pianist for the conference and did a fine job. His playing helped us all to sing better.

Rev. W. S. Burns said, "This has been the greatest session of my attendance here at Cragmont. The fellowship here is akin to the fellowship we shall have in heaven." Brother Burns delivered a soul-stirring message on the work of the Lord during the conference.

Rev. H. M. Minchew said, "I thank the Lord for the manifestation of His Holy Spirit at Cragmont. I can say with David, My cup runneth over, for my soul has been refreshed."

Rev. W. E. Renfrow said, "I thank the Lord for our Ministers' Conference and for the spiritual blessing I have received in this meeting at Cragmont."

Rev. L. L. Parker said, "This week has been a great blessing to me. The Spirit of God has blessed my heart. The fellowship has been wonderful."

Rev. D. W. Hansley said, "The fellowship and inspiration at Cragmont this year have meant more to me than any previous session."

Rev. P. D. Jenkins said, "Thank God for this week at Cragmont. It has meant much to me."

Rev. K. V. Shutes said, "I am thankful for two nights and one day of wonderful fellowship in this heavenly place on earth with my brethren in the ministry."

Rev. J. B. Starnes said, "This week at Cragmont has been a mountaintop experience that one cannot forget."

Rev. Johnny Eason said, "Of all the blessings that God has given me, I have never spent a happier week in the Lord with my brethren than this one at Cragmont."

Rev. Charles E. Keith said, "This week has proved a real blessing to my life, and I believe if more of our ministers could come to Cragmont, they too would receive a real blessing for God is no respecter of persons."

Rev. Robert L. Edwards said, "Thank God for His spiritual blessings to me during this Ministers' Conference at Cragmont. I urge others to come and take a part in the blessings of the coming years with us."

Rev. E. E. Edwards said "At Cragmont we have a mountaintop experience with the Lord and receive the richest of blessings from our Lord."

Rev. Ernest Strickland said, "To be at Cragmont has been to me a great blessing and an inspiration, and I have been drawn closer to the Lord."

Rev. C. J. Harris said, "Thank God for Cragmont, a place where I meet my brother ministers and chat with them. We feel the very presence of God as we worship and fellowship together. It is just wonderful to know that the Holy Spirit is with us."

Brother E. B. McDonald, treasurer of the Free Will Baptist Bible College, Nashville, Tennessee, said, "Being at Cragmont is like coming home to me. I have enjoyed the spiritual emphasis and fellowship, as well as the opportunity of becoming acquainted with many more ministers."

Rev. L. H. Boykin said, "I have attended most all the conferences that have been held here at Cragmont. This one has been greater than any one yet, thank the Lord. The Holy Spirit has inspired my heart. May God continue to bless us as His ministers."

As the writer of Notes and Quotes, I am glad to report these wonderful testimonies to our readers regarding the Ministers' Conference at Cragmont Assembly. We were very sorry that some of our ministers had to return home before the end in order to take care of some work at home. We are also very sorry that some of the ministers could not attend due to the fact of obligations in vacation Bible schools and revivals which had been arranged for the week. This conflict perhaps was due to the change of dates for the conference.

The newly elected officers are Rev. E. E. Edwards, president; Rev. J. B. Starnes, vice-president; Rev. W. S. Burns, secretary; Rev. W. E. Renfrow, treasurer. The time set for the conference next year will be the first Sunday in June.

There is much need for repairs and enlargement of the buildings at Cragmont. So, let us as ministers lead the way in securing funds to make Cragmont property more attractive and to create more facilities for the care of more people. We should have room for more than two hundred at one time. This can be arranged if we will get busy and do our part. The Lord is ready to do His part, but God will not do that which we can do ourselves. God will not open our pocketbooks. He will give us the power and the grace to open up if we will let Him. What say ye, brethren?

First Century Versus Twentieth Century

hunger and thirst, in fastings often, in cold and nakedness. Beside those things that are without, that which cometh upon me daily, the care of all the churches" (2 Corinthians 11:25-28).

Twentieth Century: No, Mary, we won't go to Sunday school this morning; see it's raining a little already. . . . We never make it to church on Sunday evening any more; it's the only time John has with the youngsters. . . . Witness at work? Not me? I tried to talk to a man about the Lord once, and he laughed at me. . . . Oh, I couldn't possibly teach a class. . . . Aren't there enough on the committee without me?

"For where your treasure is; there will your heart be also" (Matthew 6:21).

"Thou God Seest Me"

WILLIAM BENTLEY opened his eyes to find the warm, summer sunshine streaming through his window and filling his room with beautiful light and warmth.

Oh yes, he remembered now! Today was his birthday and he was now nine years old—quite a man, he thought. Then a knock at his door interrupted his reflections. A sweet, white-haired lady stepped inside.

"Oh, good morning, Grandma," he said.

"Good morning, dear," she replied. "Today is your birthday, isn't it? Look what I have brought you." She drew from a large envelope a beautiful motto finished in black and white with this verse on it, Thou God seest me. "We will hang it right here," she said. Walking to the wall just opposite William's bed, she hung the picture upon the nail.

"Oh, thank you, Grandma. It is so pretty."

"I want you to especially remember the verse on it, William. Better get up soon. Mother said she had your breakfast ready." With this his grandmother left the room.

William looked up at the motto again and again while dressing. This was the first birthday gift on his ninth birthday and too, he must remember the verse to please Grandma.

"Oh, come on, Will! Be a sport. Your mom wouldn't care. Besides she'll never know the difference. Neither will your Father." This was Robert Kite, the oldest of the group with whom William was playing.

"No, Bob. I can't. I know my folk would never approve of such things."

"Oh, Mamma's baby! Tied to Mamma's apron strings, huh?" said another of the group.

Now William could take his stand, but when it came to being called such names, it was just about too much, and after all, he was nine today.

The afternoon of his birthday William's chums had happened along and the group of boys had gone fishing. For a time they had all enjoyed themselves with the sport, but now he was having anything but a good time. For the boys had wanted him to go with them on an expedition of stealing apples from a nearby orchard.

"Coward! Mamma's darling little boy," came from one of the other boys.

William thought, "They've never called me that before and now I cannot let them think that."

"Maybe I'll go with you," he said at last. He had no intention in his heart of taking apples but he felt that he must prove that he was not a coward.

He had gone only a few steps down the road when suddenly as though something had struck him, the words Thou God seest me! flashed into his mind.

Yes, God did see him in company with these boys who were going to steal apples. If they were caught, he would be accused along with the rest. "Even if I'm not caught, God sees me here as close to sin as I can get. Oh, God help me," he prayed under his breath.

"Boys," he said then, "I'm not going. Good-by," and he turned and ran back to his fishing.

Somehow he felt happier than usual that night as he handed a whole string of fish to Mrs. Bentley. It was not exactly because he had caught the fish; but it was because he had remembered his motto.—Unknown.

Prayer and Praise Letter

June 4, 1956

Dear Readers,

The month of May has been filled with constant activity. We were in revival with Rev. H. L. Knighton in Albany, Georgia. From Albany we went to Detroit, Michigan, in meeting with the Free Will Baptist Temple where Rev. N. P. Gates is the pastor. While in Detroit it was our privilege to be present in pastor's meeting where the constitution of the Michigan State Association of Free Will Baptists was approved. It is a thrill to my heart to see the work in Michigan unite and move forward with great stride. Then too, we were with Rev. A. J. Lambert in Florence, Alabama, for six days. In each place the cause of foreign missions is becoming more and more endeared.

DID YOU KNOW?

The cost of our atomic bomb would send and maintain 1,800 missionaries for one year.

As a nation we spend $750 on pleasure for every $1.00 given to missions.

It is easier to use Bible language than to obey Bible commands.

If a hundred members of a church each gave a postage stamp a day, they could support a missionary.

Every man has a religion, but millions do not have salvation.

To carry out the command of Christ we are to witness by our stewardship. You need but turn a page or two in the book of Acts before you find these Spirit-intoxicated Christians laying all their possessions at the feet of Jesus Christ and at the disposal of His church. In Chapter 4, Verse 32, we read: "neither said any of them that ought of the things he possessed was his own; . . ."

How much there is of Christ in the economic life of today is an open question. One thing is sure: the economics that most students study and that most Americans practice is not the same as Christian stewardship. Stewardship is partnership with our Lord Jesus Christ in the possession and use of material goods. As one of our most thoughtful advocates of stewardship puts it, "Economics says of things: these must satisfy man. But stewardship says of

MISSIONARIES ON THE MOVE

Miss Lucy Wisehart moves from Cuba to the states for her first furlough.

The Cronks leave New York, June 6, enroute to India.

Miss Volena Wilson is scheduled to leave Bombay on July 27. This will be her first furlough after five years in India. Please pray for each of these during these days. Pray especially for little "Randy Cronk" that no illness shall befall him enroute.

ASSIGNMENT IN AFRICA OFFICIAL

Following is a statement taken from letter dated May 11, from Mr. George Constance regarding territory in Africa: "Your board's petition was studied by the federation of missions in French West Africa, and it was decided to cede an area in Ivory Coast which borders on Gold Coast and lies north and northeast of the Methodist, Christian and Missionary Alliance areas. It also borders on the Conservative Baptist region. This is called the Bondougou Circle and constitutes a tremendous missionary challenge. This area has officially been placed at your disposal should the Lord so lead and you desire to take up work there."

Plans have been made for Rev. and Mrs. Harold Stevens to make a personal survey of this area beginning July 21, and continue to the end of August. Money has already been advanced to Brother Stevens for this project and we have faith that God will repay fourfold. In recent letter Brother Stevens says: "We must not minimize the far reaching effects of prayer in such an endeavor as this. I believe that this special call to prayer will serve a fourfold purpose: (1) Prevent us from the possibility of making a "flop" of the survey. (The trip will involve 8,000 miles in travel.) (2) Stimulate interest in the cause of missions as a whole. (3) Challenge the hearts of young people to staff this new field. (4) Partly, if not entirely defray the expenses of the survey. (The cost will be about $1,200.) Will you place this special prayer request on your list?"

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION SPECIAL MISSIONARY NIGHT!

On Wednesday night, July 11, 1956, during the convening of the National Association, a special missionary service will be held. Those appearing on the program from the Foreign Mission Department will be Rev. Thomas H. Wiley and Miss Lucy Wisehart from Cuba; also, three of our Cuban pastors, Benito Rodriquez, Melitino and Estenio. Make your plans now to attend and if you have a special offering for foreign missions, please bring it to the foreign mission exhibit. We hope to see you in Huntington, West Virginia, July 10-12. Please watch our papers for full program.

Sincerely yours,
Raymond Riggs
Promotional Sec'y-Treas.

Dear Brother Riggs:

Enclosed you will find $27.50. This was our mission Sunday night in the Pleasant Plain League again. We truly have been blessed in our hearts from this giving a portion to those who have the fields for their labor. We thank God for the little vision we have for the lost and those that are willing to go with His Word to them. Use this gift where needed most is our humble sincere prayer.

Writings for Perilous Times

Lesson: 1 Peter 2:19-25; Jude 3, 17-25.

Golden Text: Jude 3.

I. INTRODUCTION

In the lesson we pass from apostolic history to apostolic teaching. The genuineness of the Petrine epistles has been acknowledged from the beginning. They were evidently written shortly before Peter's martyrdom (2 Peter 1:1-4), which was by crucifixion at Rome about 64 to 65 A. D. There is an interval of fourteen years from the council at Jerusalem in the year forty-nine till his appearance at Rome, during which we have no account of his activities. His epistles are addressed to the dispersed Jews and proselyted gentiles. They are general in their scope and are designed (1) to explain more fully the doctrines of Christianity, (2) to direct and persuade to holy living and the faithful discharge of personal and relative duties; (3) to encourage to patience and perseverance in the faith in the midst of persecutions.—Selected.

II. HELPFUL HINTS FROM JUDE

1. God keeps us because we belong to Him (Vv. 1, 2).
2. God keeps us because we are the repository of His truth (Vs. 3).
3. God keeps us that we might contend for the faith (Vs. 3).
4. God keeps us that we might testify to the divine Lordship of Jesus Christ (Vs. 4).
5. God keeps us by the warning examples of those who fell (Vv. 5-7).
6. God keeps us from railing, against majesties (Vv. 8-10).
7. God keeps us through a bloody offering, by removing our guilt, and from rebellion against divine authority (Vs. 11).
8. God keeps us though apostates may be present among us (Vv. 12, 13).
9. God keeps us from the judgment of the wicked (Vv. 14-19).
10. God keeps us when we build ourselves up on our most holy faith (Vs. 20).

11. God keeps us when we pray in the Holy Ghost (Vs. 20).

12. God keeps us when we abide in His love (Vs. 21).

13. God keeps us when we look for Christ's return (Vs. 21).

14. God keeps us when we are busy for Him (Vv. 22, 23).

15. And now comes the wonderful doxology, one of the grandest in the whole Bible. It is God alone who can keep us from falling, and even from stumbling. No matter how dark the night, He can keep us if we walk close to Him. That is the condition. If we wander away from Him we stumble. What exceeding joy it will be for God and for the Lord Jesus Christ—and for us, too—when we are at last faultless in His own presence in the Glory!—Select.

III. ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

1. The world's most horrible spectacle was the sinless Son of God dying an ignominious death on the cruel Cross. "He knew no sin; He did no sin; in Him was no sin." He was "holy, harmless, undefiled." Pilate's verdict was: "I find no fault in Him." Why did He thus so shamefully suffer? It was because of His great love for you, for me, that He thus voluntarily offered up Himself as "the Lamb of God," without blemish and without spot. "He," said Isaiah "was wounded for our transgressions, He was bruised for our iniquities." The Lord Jesus said, "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends." Not only for His friends did He lay down His life, but for His enemies as well.

2. Live the suffering life. "Now is your trial. Let you Saviour see how much of His bitter portion you can pledge. Then you shall see how much of His glory He can afford you. As snow is of itself cold, yet it warms and refreshes the earth, so afflictions, though in themselves grievous, yet they keep the soul of the Christian warm and make it fruitful. Let the most afflicted know and remember that it is better to be preserved in brine than to rot in honey. After a forest fire has raged furiously, it has been found that many pine cones have had their seeds released by the heat, which ordinarily would have remained unsown.

The future forest sprang from the ashes of the former. Some Christian graces, such as humility, patience, sympathy, have been evolved from the sufferings of the saints."—G. W. Griffith, D. D.

3. Jude exhorts to remember the predictions of the apostles of our Lord Jesus Christ, about the coming of mockers so that they might be known and shunned when they did arise. St. Peter gives a clear testimony about these mockers (2 Peter 2:1-3). The apostle Paul has a great deal to say about apostasy and false teachers (1 Timothy 4:1-3; 2 Timothy 3:1-5; 4:3, 4). What do we understand by a mocker? The word translated "mockers" literally rendered is "scoffers." Dr. Young suggests this word signifies "acting inwardly as boys." The reference may be too trifling, folly, smartness, self-esteem and big feelingness, all of which is usual characteristic of boys. Such are the characteristics of the scoffers against whom Jude warns. A scoffer is a person who makes light of and ridicules sacred things (Genesis 3:1-4; 2 Peter 2:3, 4). A scoffer may be very amiable and smooth tongued, but at heart he is ungodly, having no real regard for God (Vv. 4, 16). Our Lord compared false prophets to wolves in sheep's clothing (Matthew 7:15).—W. S. Hottel, D. D.

4. "I am almost afraid to use this beautiful table," said the owner. The cabinet-maker ran his hand over the smooth, polished surface, and felt of the thickness of the wood. "What are you afraid of?" he asked brusquely. "You cannot wear out that table. Why, do you know they would make fifty veneered tables out of the wood you've got in this one? But this—the more you use it the better for it, madam. The only flaw on it now is the wormhole you say came there when you had it stored away in the attic."

"You are too bright and lovely to be wearing yourself out doing so much for other people," said one girl to another. "I cannot be made of very good stuff to begin with then," was the girl's retort. "Trying to live happily with one's neighbors never wore anybody out yet, unless the person was of such thin veneer that she was afraid that some people would find her out."

There is one law for the solid people and for the solid woods, that is the law of well-sunned, well-aired, constant and cherry use. Only veneer is injured by the common, practical, wholesome duties of everyday life.—Forward.

5. The student should read the entire epistle of 1 Peter and Jude, and then study all the lesson material in our quarterlies. Pray for all Christians.

It is said of Mr. Haynes, the colored preacher, that, some time after the publication of his sermon on the text, "Ye shall not surely die," two reckless young men having agreed together to try his wit, one of them said, "Father Haynes, have you heard the good news?" "No," said Mr. Haynes; "what is it?" "It is great news indeed," said the other; "and if true, your business is done." "What is it?" again inquired Mr. Haynes. "Why," said the first, "the devil is dead." In a moment the old gentleman replied, lifting up both hands, and placing them on the heads of the young men, and in a tone of solemn concern, "Oh, poor fatherless children! What will become of you?" —Dictionary of Anecdote.

Mose, the colored janitor, philosophized thus:

"Seem lak dese h'ar Christians, when dey wants a preacher, dey cries out to de Lawd to send'em a man; but when dey wants t' get rid uf him, dey don' want de Lawd a messin' around'. Dey does de job demse'ves."—Hickory Chapel F. W. B. Church Bulletin, Ahoskie, N. C.

VACATION BIBLE SCHOOL AT HULL ROAD CHURCH

The people at Hull Road Church, Snow Hill, North Carolina, have been sold on the idea of the vacation Bible school ever since they held their first one in the summer of 1947. For the first time this year they tried the recommended two-week schedule and the results were simply wonderful. The attendance during the second week was much better than during the first one. Each day's session was limited to two hours, from 8:30 to 10:30 a. m. Thus everyone, including teachers and pupils, could give their best to their work.

The average attendance for the two-week period was 214. The highest number, 251, attended the last day. The total enrollment was 299.

Interest and enthusiasm for the Bible school was high throughout the entire two weeks. The pastor, the Rev. Michael Pelt, preached a sermon on Sunday, May 27, on the importance of the Bible school in the total program of the Church and charged the workers and parents to fulfill their respective duties toward the school.

A very important reason for the interest and consequent success of the Bible school at Hull Road was the fine staff of workers under the leadership of the director, Mrs. H. C. Hill. These workers gave unselfishly of their time, talents and energy in order to teach and train pupils in their various departments. A real effort was made to win the lost to Christ and to help Christians toward living a more consecrated life.

Classes were held for all age groups, including adults. The adult group was taught during the second week by the Rev. J. P. Barrow, instructor in Bible at the Free Will Baptist Bible College and a member of Hull Road Church.

There were numerous persons who gave assistance in one form or another. Many left their work at home, used their cars for transportation, and prayed that God would bless their labor for His cause.

We believe that the Bible school this year was the best ever held at Hull Road Church. Moreover, the experience gained from this year's work should pave the way toward an even better school next year.

City Auditorium, Huntington, West Virginia

The Woman's National Auxiliary Convention and the National Association of Free Will Baptists will meet in the City Auditorium in Huntington, West Virginia, July 9-12, 1956, with the local churches and state conventions of Kentucky, Ohio and West Virginia as hosts. Many people in the tri-state area have worked many weeks to make our stay in Huntington a pleasant one.

Convention headquarters, consisting of a convention office and two committee rooms, have been maintained at the Prichard Hotel. The convention office will be staffed all day and will handle phone calls and mail, as well as inquiries. We are welcome to use any of the facilities of this office. Also, three day nurseries are recommended for parents who wish to leave their children there during the session.

Many fine exhibits may be seen in the lobby and hall of the auditorium. Some of the material will be for sale, but there will also be a wealth of free material and information available at these exhibit booths. Visit all of them during the convention.

WRITERS' CONFERENCE

Will the Free Will Baptist Writers' Conference which was held at Mount Olive College, June 18-21, contribute to better literature for the denomination? In part, the answer will be found in the future work of the writers who attended. On the other hand, the question was partly answered when the registration for the conference was completed. Only eight of the thirteen writers on the staff were present at the conference. Only a very few ministers and one layman attended with any degree of regularity. Therefore, the editor, who has the responsibility of directing the conference, wonders if the expenditure of money and effort is justifiable. However, he was more than gratified when, at the close of the conference, those present voted unanimously recommending that another conference be held next year and that every writer on the staff be required to attend. We are sure that no greater endorsement could be given the conference than this. By this resolution the writers were saying that this conference had done so much in helping them to be better writers they wanted more of such assistance.

The Free Will Baptist Press is doing a marvelous thing in that it is underwriting the expense of these conferences. The Press pays traveling expense of the writers to and from the conference; it also pays room and board of the writers while they are at the conference. Furthermore, the Press pays the specialist who gives classes in journalism during the conference and holds individual conferences with the writers, helping each to solve the particular problems facing him.

During this conference every writer expressed deep gratitude to Dr. Walter Spearman from the school of journalism of the University of North Carolina for his excellent service to them. Certainly, he was the right man in the right place during those days. His altogether pleasing personality, his sympathetic understanding of our problems and hopes, together with his superb wisdom and knowledge, proved to be a great blessing to all of us.

We also express our deep appreciation to the following persons who appeared on the conference program: Dr. J. P. Barrow, Dr. F. B. Cherry, the Reverend Henry Melvin, the Reverend R. N. Hinnant, the Reverend Michael Pelt and Mr. James W. Butler. Each of these brethren provoked deep thought and presented a definite challenge to us.

It would be impossible to say too much in praise of Mount Olive College for the most satisfactory manner in which we were entertained. President Burkette Raper and Assistant M. L. Johnson left no stone unturned to make our stay enjoyable. Mrs. D. W. Hansley, her assistant and the girls who served as waitresses could not possibly have prepared and served better meals; nor could anyone have been nicer and more pleasant in serving us. Our thanks go also to all others at the college who may have contributed to our enjoyment during the conference.

The editor wishes to express his personal thanks to the members of the staff of writers who made such fine contributions to the conference program. Every one of you served efficiently and nobly. We are highly honored in being associated with individuals who have your interest, enthusiasm and desire to prepare yourselves for even more efficient service to Christ and the denomination through religious writing. You are going to justify, through your writing, the expense and effort entailed in holding that writers' conference.

To the members of the staff who did not attend the conference may we say that we missed you; we feel also that you missed much which would have given you considerable help in getting the message of Christ to many people through the written Word.

MOUNT OLIVE COLLEGE

All of our people, and particularly those in North Carolina, will be glad to receive the information that a sum more than $66,000 has been pledged by our churches in North Carolina during the college campaign. The information is given elsewhere in this issue, together with a list of the churches which have reported to date. These pledges are in addition to those made by our friends outside the denomination in recent months.

We call attention to a letter sent out by the college to the churches in the state, the text of which follows:

"Present registration now indicates that more young people will enter college this fall than ever before in the history of the United States. In North Carolina alone there will be approximately 50,000 students who will enter college in September, and it is safe to say that five hundred of these college students will be Free Will Baptists. These five hundred Free Will Baptist college students will be our best young men and women, and our Church desperately needs the kind of trained leadership these future leaders can give us. If we are to retain the services of our youth, it is absolutely imperative that we provide a Christian college where they can prepare for their life's work.

"Mount Olive Junior College is dedicated to the task of saving our Church by saving our youth. All of our teachers are Christian men and women. Our program of study includes a strong Christian emphasis. In September we are expecting the largest enrollment we have ever had. We need your help, and the help of our church, Sunday school, leagues, and auxiliary to enable us to carry on this great ministry of Christian education.

"July is designated by the North Carolina State Convention as Education month, and we are looking to you for a contribution during July. When you write a check to Mount Olive College, you are helping to write the future of our youth. The opportunity is almost unlimited, and with your continued prayers, and support, we shall do our best for your sons and daughters."

Love

Thinketh No Evil

Naaman Borders
Waverly, Ohio

ONE of the last admonitions Jesus gave to the disciples was to love one another. "A new commandment I give unto you, That ye love one another; as I have loved you, that ye also love one another. By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another" (John 13:34, 35). Love brings about unity, and unity brings power. The Lord knows how much we need power in the church. Sam Jones, a great evangelist, once said that if the Baptists with all their water and the Methodists with their fire would get together they could make enough steam to really move the church. But I'm sorry to say that the Methodists have lost the old-time power and the Baptists have got things watered down too much.

The good Book says that love covereth a multitude of sins. In other words, if we really love someone, we can look over their faults to a great extent and love them in spite of their shortcomings. When we were yet in our sins, Christ loved us and died for us. Someone may ask, "How can I love someone whom I don't love? Can I make myself love him?" No, you can't. But if you will pray for him, you will soon find yourself loving him. How that comes about, I don't know, but it surely works.

When we were first converted we had love for everyone, and we felt deep down in our hearts that all who professed Christ were saints of God. It was easy to love then, and it really thrilled us when someone said, Let us go into the house of the Lord. How true was the song which said:

The hour I first believed,
What a joy I received
What a heaven in Jesus' name.

The whole world takes on a different look when one becomes a Christian. It is as natural for us to love as it is to drink when we are thirsty or to eat when we are hungry. "And now abideth faith, hope, charity, these three; but the greatest of these is charity" (1 Corinthians 13:13). How true it is that we hate the things we once loved and love the things we once hated. Faith can remove mountains, and hope is the anchor of the soul; but love is greater than these. Love is of God and he that hath God hath love for God is love (1 John 4:7, 8).

The greatest of doctors tell us that love will increase and multiply the brain cells, while hate and envy will destroy them. So if we want our brain capacity to increase we must think on love or in other words we must think of God for God is love. We must read God's Word and meditate upon it. We must thank Him and praise Him; we must pray much. If we sincerely do these things, we will saturate our lives with His love; and we will soon be loving everyone.

Let us think about human love for instance. When a child is sick or in trouble, the parents will spend everything they have to help it. If it should die, they spare no pains to give it the best burial possible and to place a beautiful marker at its grave. They visit the grave with beautiful flowers each year, and the mother will ask the privilege to be placed by its side when she is called to go. Therefore, love is stronger than death itself. Love caused Ruth to leave her native land and her kindred, her friends and even her idol gods to follow Naomi. Love caused Jonathan to surrender his title to the throne so his beloved friend, David, could have it. There have been very few men who have given their lives to spare their friends. Jesus said, "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends" (John 15:13).

Not only did He die for His friends, but He prayed for His enemies in His dying moments.

The closer one gets to God, the more of God he gets into his heart. The more one loves God, the less he thinks of the world. David said that his and Jonathan's love was stronger than that of a woman. He said that God's love was sweeter than honey or the honeycomb. Human love from the hearts of true lovers is sweet. When true lovers gaze into each others eyes, there is a greater magnetism and pulling power than that which all the poets and philosophers in the world can put into words or in a book. Such love just cannot be explained by mortal tongue. And yet, how feeble is this human love when compared to the love of God.

How sweet is the love of God as a sinner turns to Him when He is crushed in despair and forsaken by all that are near and dear to him—when he feels the weight of his sins drowning him and when everything is dark as night itself. When the Light bursts upon him and he looks up into the face of a smiling Saviour who says unto him, "Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest" (Matthew 12:28), then he realizes what David meant when he said, "He brought me up also out of an horrible pit, out of the miry clay, and set my feet upon a rock, and established my goings" (Psalm 40:2). The Lord placed a song on David's lips, prepared a table for him in the presence of his enemies, and anointed his head with oil. Yes, we may all dwell in the house of the Lord forever. We may all sing together:

The great Physician now is near,
The sympathizing Jesus,
He speaks the drooping heart to cheer.
Oh! hear the voice of Jesus.

Sweetest note in seraph song,
Sweetest name on mortal tongue;
Sweetest carol ever sung,
Jesus, blessed Jesus.

Unless truth reaches the heart, the grace of God can produce no permanent change in the life. Superficial impressions are good, but they are transient. The heart must become the depository of God's Word as the bank is of his money. The Word of God must be hid away, or the devil will catch it and take it as the fowls do the uncovered seed.—Gospel Banner.

North Carolina Pastor Visits Mission Field

Raymond Riggs

For the past several years there has been some interested pastors and, in some instances, laymen who have attended the Annual Free Will Baptist Convention in Cuba. This year Rev. and Mrs. Henry Melvin of Winterville, North Carolina, went as visitors, and of course we asked Brother Melvin to observe the work and report to us his findings and observations.

Brother Melvin is seen here speaking to the convention while Benito Rodriguez is the interpreter.

Following are excerpts taken from Brother Melvin's recent letter after his return:

Dear Brother Riggs:

First, let me say that Lola and I had a wonderful trip: safe travel, no problems in any manner whatsoever, pleasant weather. In short a perfect trip.

We had aside from our personal luggage; three large trunks of used clothing for the workers, plus several packages picked up in Miami. We went through customs without a hitch. I carried my car over, and the Cuban government now has a customs inspector on the boat and before we had pulled out of harbor at Key West, I was already through customs, so that when we reached Havana all I had to do was drive off the boat. For the first part of my report, let me make some general observations:

1. All the missionaries, both American and native, are doing a highly commendable job. They are doing a noble piece of sacrificial work. Our people can never fully appreciate this.

2. There is full harmony and agreement among the American missionaries and full cooperation between the American personnel and the native workers.

3. The Phenicians are doing a marvelous job. I dare say that not even the board is fully aware of Herbert's value to the mission.

4. Lucy has done a very fine job in her three years there and is well liked and respected by all.

5. In contrast to what we had and what has been accomplished in the 13 years since I was in Cuba, we must, as a people, be ever grateful for the superhuman and marvellous job which Tom and Mabel have done. (I am not forgetful of His blessings, but am speaking

Skipping School

Alice M. Brawand

"Be sure your sin will find you out" (Numbers 32:23).

ENE bright sunny morning Sammy decided to go fishing instead of going to school. He thought no one would ever know, not even his mother.

Quietly Sammy got his fishing tackle together and started out. He walked down one of the back roads and cut through a vacant lot. Yes, Sammy went fishing instead of going to school, but he didn't have a good time knowing he was skipping school.

Sammy wasn't as smart as he thought he was. The vacant lot he went through could be seen from the school. The teacher happened to be looking out of the window and saw Sammy.

The following day Sammy went to school thinking no one knew a thing about his deed. He promptly handed this note to the teacher:

"Dear teacher, please excuse Sammy for not coming to school yesterday. I tore my pants. Mrs. Stuart."

After reading the note the teacher told Sammy that she saw him walking through the vacant lot with a fishing pole across his shoulders.

Sammy's sin did find him out. Boys and girls, always remember that your sin will find you out too.

Questions and Answers ON THE BIBLE

Conducted by J. F. BARROW

3824 Richland Avenue, Nashville 5, Tennessee

Question: What is the difference, if any, between the bottomless pit, the lake of fire and hell?—B. Hill.

Answer: Perhaps no one here on the earth knows all the difference there is between these places of punishment which have been prepared of God for His arch enemy, Satan, and which will be shared by all evil workers. I am sure that I fall short of a complete understanding of the Bible's teaching on the places of punishment prepared of God for the satanic forces of evil; yet I know that the Bible makes clear to us that God has prepared for Satan and his followers punishment commensurate to their disobedience and evil works. "And that servant, which knew his lord's will, and prepared not himself, neither did according to his will, shall be beaten with many stripes. But he that knew not, and did commit things worthy of stripes, shall be beaten with few stripes. For unto whomsoever much is given, of him shall be much required: and to whom men have committed much, of him they will ask the more" (Luke 12:47, 48).

The bottomless pit into which Satan is chained and cast for a thousand years (Revelation 20:1-3), is not the same place wherein he is imprisoned for ever and ever. "And the devil that deceived them was cast into the lake of fire and brimstone, where the beast and the false prophet are, and shall be tormented day and night for ever and ever" (Revelation 20:10). The former holds him for one thousand years, the latter for ever and ever. "And death and hell were cast into the lake of fire. This is the second death" (Revelation 20:14). Here it is said that "death and hell (hades) were cast into the lake of fire." (Hades, a Greek word in the New Testament means the same as sheol, a Hebrew word in the Old Testament.) Sheol or hades is the place to which both Lazarus and the rich man of Luke 16:19-31 went when they died. The only difference being that of a great gulf separating them as seen in Luke 16:26. One side of this gulf is called Abraham's bosom, the other a place of torment, Luke 16:23. This, where Lazarus is, is the same place that Jesus calls paradise in Luke 23:43.

The Scriptures seem quite definite in their teaching that after Jesus' resurrection the paradise part or Abraham's bosom ceased to be the abode of the departed saints. Now they go, at the time of physical death, to be present with Christ who now appears in our behalf at God's right hand in heaven. See 2 Corinthians 5:6-8. "We are confident, I say, and willing rather to be absent from the body, and to be present with the Lord" (2 Corinthians 5:8).

Dr. P. B. Fitzwater in "Christian Theology," Page 346, says:

"Gehenna. This name first referred to the Valley of Hinnom, south of Jerusalem, where sacrifices were offered to Molech, and the filth of the city was continually burning. Later the name was used in reference to the place of punishment of the wicked. Besides the eleven times used by Jesus as the place of the undying worm and ever burning fire, it is only used once by James.

"Sheol. This Hebrew word is used in the Old Testament, and translated as 'pit,' 'grave' and 'hell.' It means the abode of the dead, where life and all its activity has ceased; also where the wicked dead are consigned, a place of sorrow and consciousness.

"Hades. The Greek translation of the Hebrew sheol always uses this word, meaning the unseen world, a place of detention of human spirits between death and the resurrection. The American Version also translates this as 'hell.'

"Before Christ ascended it appears that this place had two compartments, one holding the wicked in conscious torment; the other called 'Abraham's bosom' and 'paradise,' where the saved went. These divisions had a 'great gulf fixed' between them (Luke 16:22, 23, 26; 23:43).

"When Christ ascended, after He had 'preached to the spirits in prison,' He 'led captivity captive,' so that now paradise is in heaven (1 Peter 3:19, Ephesians 4:8-10, 2 Corinthians 12:1-4). So now the spirits of the saved go at once to be with the Lord.

"Finally, hades will deliver up its inhabitants, the wicked dead, for judgment before the Great White Throne, and to be cast into the lake of fire."

J. A. Seiss in "The Apocalypse," Pages 446, 447, says:

"The question thus arises, What is the difference between 'the abyss' and 'the lake of fire?' I might answer truly, that 'the lake of fire' is the final hell, the place of the eternal punishment of the damned; whilst 'the abyss' is a sort of fore-hell, a prison in which evil spirits are detained prior to their final judgment. The relation between the two is much like that of the county gaol in which accused criminals are detained prior to their sentence, and the state penitentiary to which they are assigned for final punishment.

"A careful inventory of all the passages conclusively proves that sheol or hades is the name of a place in the unseen world, altogether distinct from the hell or final punishment or the heaven of final glory. Its true and only meaning is 'the place of departed spirits,'—the receptacle of souls which have left the body. To this place all departed spirits, good and bad, up to the time of the resurrection of Christ, went. In it there was a department for the bad. Thus both the rich man and Lazarus went to hades when they died; for the word is, 'in hades he lifted up his eyes, and seeth Abraham afar off and Lazarus in his bosom.' Lazarus was then in hades too, as well as Abraham; and the only difference between them and Dives was, that the good were separated from the bad by an impassable gulf, and that Lazarus was comforted and Dives tormented. So the dying Saviour told the penitent malefactor that they would yet that day be together in paradise; that is, in the more favorable part of hades. There they were neither in heaven proper, nor in hell proper; but simply in hades."

For a more comprehensive view of this subject one may secure the following books: Dr. H. A. Ironside's, Lectures on the Revelation; Clarence Larkin's, Book of Revelation; and R. A. Torrey's What the Bible Teaches.

The will of God is always accomplished. The man who sets himself to do it, therefore, is in the line of sure victory. He cannot be defeated, no matter how many obstacles rise before him, or how great discouragements overshadow his path. All he has to do is to go forward, and always forward, enduring, overcoming, pressing on to the ultimate triumph, no matter how delayed it seems.—J. R. Miller.

The Lighted Pathway

Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path (PSALM 119:105).

REV. WILLET L. MORETZ
SWANNANOVA, N. C.

"Thine, O LORD, is the greatness, and the power, and the glory, and the victory, and the majesty: for all that is in the heaven and in the earth is thine; thine is the kingdom, O LORD, and thou art exalted as head above all" (1 Chronicles 29:11).

This verse is a part of David's great thanksgiving and praise to God after he had caused the princes and people to make offerings for the house of God, which his son Solomon was to build. In connection with this verse I want to ask you to read the entire 19th Psalm. There is a very close relation to David's method of ascribing majesty and praise to God in both passages.

I read, the other day, a beautiful commentary, in verse, on the 19th Psalm, which I believe you will like. After reading this Psalm please read the following prayerfully, and I believe it will prove a blessing to you as it did to me:

"The heav'ns God's glory do declare,
The skies his hand-work preach:
Day utters speech to day, and night
To night doth knowledge teach.
There is no speech nor tongue to which
Their voice doth not extend:
Their line is gone through all the earth,
Their words to the world's end.

"In them he set the sun a tent;
Who, bridegroom-like, goes forth
From's chamber, as a strong man
To run his race rejoice.
From heav'n's end is his going forth,
Circling to th' end again;
And there is nothing from his heat
That hidden doth remain.

"God's law is perfect, and converts
The soul in sin that lies:
God's testimony is most sure,
And makes the simple wise.
The statutes of the Lord are right,
And do rejoice the heart:
The Lord's command is pure, and doth
Light to the eyes impart.

"Unspotted is the fear of God,
And doth endure for ever:
The judgments of the Lord are true
And righteous altogether.
They more than gold, yea, much fine gold,
To be desired are:
Than honey, honey from the comb
That droppeth, sweeter far.

"Moreover, they thy servant warn
How he his life should frame:

A great reward provided is
For them that keep the same.
Who can his errors understand?
O cleanse thou me within From secret faults. Thy servant keep
From all presumptuous sin.

"And do not suffer them to have Dominion over me:
Then, righteous and innocent,
I from much sin shall be.
The words which from my mouth proceed,
The thoughts sent from my heart,
Accept, O Lord, for thou my strength
And my Redeemer art."
—Selected.

David is not alone in his praises of the greatness of his God. Many of the others, who by divine inspiration wrote the Bible, expressed the same thoughts.

Isaiah gave us the following beautiful verses:

"It is he that sitteth upon the circle of the earth, and the inhabitants thereof are as grasshoppers; that stretcheth out the heavens as a curtain, and spreadeth them out as a tent to dwell in: That bringeth the princes to nothing; he maketh the judges of the earth as vanity" (Isaiah 40:22, 23).

It is a good safe rule to sojourn in every place as if you meant to spend your life there, never omitting an opportunity of doing a kindness, or speaking a true word, or making a friend.—John Ruskin.

NOTES — AND — QUOTES

By J. C. Griffin

BLESSINGS IN DISGUISE

Recently a good brother whom I love and who I believe loves me said, "I have some criticism to offer in regards to your 'Notes and Quotes' of late." As I questioned him, he went on to say, "You used to tell what you were doing, where you were going, and etc." My reply was, "The reason is that I am doing so little. I have one church, about three-fourths of a mile from where I live, and I am trying to pastor that, but I have no great things to report."

Criticism

I have been criticized so much in my life that after nearly half a century, I am getting pretty well used to criticism. Had I have stopped my work on the account of criticism, I would have been on the dead list, lying somewhere in the rubbish dumps. However, criticism like the brother gave me a few days ago, is highly appreciated because it is constructive. I welcome constructive criticism and take the destructive with regrets. Constructive criticism is good for us, providing we make use of it for betterment.

Many Good Things Are Given to Us

When we begin to count our blessings, we get to wits end. They have been so numerous in life and some of the blessings came in disguise, and some in instances hard to be appropriate.

Once when I was much younger, I received a call to conduct a revival meeting. When I was being introduced by the pastor, who did not know so much about me, he said, "You know that Brother Griffin was our fourth choice for this revival." Well, it was a big church, and they had tried to get three of our best evangelistic ministers; and in fact they could not get anyone else at the time they wanted the meeting. I was rather elated over the fact that I was called to one of the largest churches thus far; however, when I heard the pastor make this statement, as the old expression says, "My feathers fell." I had to get in touch with God on the spot. God gave us a great revival and more than thirty people were baptized at the close of the meeting. I had an invitation to pastor the church the next year, but I refused, as I never would take a church the next year after conducting a revival at the church for fear that the pastor might think I politicized to get his church. However, I did become the pastor after about eighteen months, thus the fourth choice received the blessing.

Another instance when I was let down was once when a moderator of a union meeting called me upon learning that the man who was designated to preach the introductory sermon could not attend, and said, "I want you to preach the introductory sermon at the union meeting." Since I have always been glad to preach when I had opportunity, I gladly said, "Yes, I will be happy to do so." Well, I made all the preparation that I possibly could. The union began, the devotions and some business were conducted, and finally came the time, 11:00 o'clock, for my sermon. There I was all ready to start preaching as soon as the word was given, when the moderator went down from the rostrum where we were sitting to meet a visiting minister who was coming in. Soon the moderator came back with a few words of fine talk about the new comer and said, "This is the brother who will preach our introductory sermon today." There I was sitting with my Bible open and my finger almost on the Scripture I had planned to use, but again my feathers fell. I raised no fuss about the incident, and afterward I was elected moderator.

I have had some hard knocks by those whom I call brothers, but I have kept on keeping on by the grace of God, praise the Lord!

When I sold my home in Nash County and went off to school, one of the leading preachers who had seemingly stood close to me, slapped me on the shoulder and said, "I'm done with you. Any man that has to go to school to preach, I will not support." Well, that cut me pretty hard, but I knew in whom I believed and took my hard knock to Him. Soon two other preachers who were much older than I, said, "Go on to school. We will pray for you and stand back of you. Whenever we can help you, let us know." This did me a lot of good. They were preachers who did believe that an education would help the God-called preacher. They did not believe and neither do I in educating men to make them ministers. If God calls a person to preach and that person will not try to improve his talent, he is disobedient to the commandment as given by the apostle, Paul, when he said, "Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth" (2 Timothy 2:15). So if God calls us to preach, we are obligated to prepare ourselves as far as possible, and rely on God's grace for the success and preparation beyond our ability. I believed then, as I do now, that a man has to know the meaning of the Word in order to impart the truth. No man can tell that which he does not know. However, education cannot take the place of spirituality. But education will help the God-called preacher.

I have noticed that there are people today who oppose an educated ministry, but not to the degree that people did fifty years ago. I do not know whether I could pass the examination of some of the examining boards or not today, but there was not much demanded when I was licensed and ordained forty-six years ago. I was licensed on Saturday, June 11, 1910, and ordained on Sunday, June 12, or the very next day after I was licensed. They really needed preachers in that day. I felt so little and so unworthy at that time, and I never have felt that I was worthy. It is a mystery. It has been a mystery from the beginning. But it has been my sincere desire to preach as my Lord would have me preach. I thank God for the Holy Ghost that has enabled me to keep on keeping on until this good moment.

I have not pleased everybody, in fact I have not tried to please anybody. I have tried to preach the Word. I can say, "I was determined to know nothing but Jesus Christ among people." I thank God for His comforting power. "Woe unto you, when all men shall speak well of you! . . ." said the Master (Luke 6:26). If you preach the Word without compromising, some people will not like you—this is the class that wants soft peddling.

It is said of George Herbert that he used, when he made mention of the Name of Jesus, to add in an undertone, "My Master." It was a simple habit of his heart; yet the tone of his voice when he uttered the words, softly and shyly, betrayed the secret of his life, and the hidden spring of his joy.—J. F. Newton.

How fast we learn in a day of sorrow! Scripture shines out in a new effulgence; every verse seems to contain a sunbeam, every promise stands out in illuminated splendor; things hard to be understood become in a moment plain.—H. Bonar.

STORIES

—FOR OUR—

BOYS and GIRLS

TWO FISHERS

H. C. Gaerthe

SAY, Jim, how does that verse of poetry go, that God read to us at the breakfast table? It has, in part, been on my mind the greater part of the morning. It fell right in line with the portion of Scripture. At least I thought it did. Dad read about the creation and that is in the first chapter of Genesis."

"I think," said Jim, "it went something like this, but I will not be able to say it all, for it was too long. Hearing it a few times before this morning I can say this much of it.

Just the sort of weather,
And just the sort of skies
That seem to suit my fancies
As the white clouds go drifting by."

"Why, Jim, that is exactly to the likeness of this very day. Weather is warm. The skies are true blue. And the white fleecy clouds move slowly along. We could not have had a better day, could we? I am glad we were able to get our barn work done this morning so we could go fishing this afternoon. That is what I like in working together, we both get done the same time.

"Dad is so very good to us. We cannot do the big jobs but Dad seems to appreciate what we do and can do to help him. We can see that, by his many kindnesses to us." "Yes," answered Bud in his happy way, looking straight ahead. "It just seems God must of made this day for us."

So on they talked together as they leave the barnyard behind and enter into the winding lane to their favorite fishing spot down by the Old Mill stream.

They had such a perfect day. God seemed to be very near to them. Even though young in years Jim had given his heart to the Lord Jesus. Bud was not far from the sweet knowledge of Jesus' love for him. Jim being the older one of the two, was a big help to little Bud. When the two were together their conversations often were of the Bible stories which their father, or mother, or Sunday school teacher had read to them, and since they had flannelgraph pictures it made the Bible characters and stories more real to them. They had talked and walked long, so it seemed. But it really wasn't so long a distance to the mill stream.

They could talk while they were walking, but not so much while they were fishing. For they had to be very quiet. The quieter they were the better the fish would bite. Fish are very easily frightened. They did want to have a successful day. Taking some home so mother could fry the fish for their supper. Somehow mother's willingness to do her part toward their day was to them a warming delight.

The midafternoon sun was slowly wending its way toward the western slopes. The hills yonder seemed to cast their shadows. So the two happy brothers pulled in their lines, picked up their catch and walked in silence for a brief spell, both in their own deep thoughts. Bud broke the silence, by saying, "Jim

The Knock

Knocking today at your heart's door
The blessed Redeemer stands,
Patiently, pleadingly, knocking
Knocking with nail-pierced hands.

He wants to come in and bless you
And abide with you evermore.
Will you open and let Him enter
Or fasten tighter the door?

Night's coming on, He'll be going,
The shadows are gathering fast,
Will you open while still He stands knocking,
Or keep the door closed to the last.

How sad it will be my child,
Should He leave you to your fate,
When you call to receive no answer,
Too late, too late, too late.

—Selected.

whenever we go out fishing I always think of the two brothers in the Bible, Peter and Andrew. Do you remember how Jesus walked along the shores of the Sea of Galilee and saw these two brothers casting their nets, and how He called to them, 'Follow Me, and I will make you fishers of men'? Remember how they dropped their nets and quickly followed Him? That must have been wonderful to follow Jesus, when He was on earth." "Bud," said Jim, "you can follow Jesus now, by faith. The only thing you have to do, is believe in Jesus as your Saviour from sin. That is, open your heart's door and say 'Jesus come into my heart' and He will." "When shall I say it, Jim?" "Now, Bud, right here in the open lane and fields." They stopped a moment, for thoughts, and then bending his head Bud said, "Jesus, I open my heart's door for You to come in." Right then and there Jesus entered Bud's heart and saved him.

Starting off again, quite happy at heart, they both looked toward the sun, for it was the only way Jim could tell the time. The lengthening shadows told him that it was nearing suppertime. They quickened their steps and soon two boys were at the kitchen door, holding up their catch so that mother could see and take them. While she was preparing the fish for supper, and Dad was washing, Bud could not keep his newly found joy to himself any longer, so he said, "Dad and Mother I opened my heart's door to Jesus this afternoon. Jim told me how and I did." "Well," said their mother "I am so happy." Dad stopped washing and smiled approvingly.

That was a very happy home that night, all of the family saved. Little did Jim know that God would use his few words to bring his brother to Jesus. "Andrew brought Peter to Jesus," Bud said to them all at bedtime. Dad then read the account in John's Gospel where Andrew brought Peter to Jesus (John 1). —My Pleasure.

My Mother

(Editor's Note: This short poem was written by Rubenia Coley for her mother, Mrs. Ben Coley, of Route 1, Farmville, North Carolina.)

To some God gave large Mothers,
To some He gave small;
And to some of us He gave
The best Mothers of all.

There is no way of saying,
Only God can know and see
How much I love and appreciate
The Mother He gave to me.

My prayer for now and ever
Is that God will greatly bless
The Mother that He gave to me,
The one I love the best!

there from the human angle solely.)

6. I found that our mission enjoys the respect and confidence of the Cuban people of all classes and, despite the unrest and seething revolution against the government, our mission has the respect of all factions of the Government. This observation would not be complete without saying in all fairness to Tom—that he stands ace high in every circle within Cuba. Go where you will in the province and mention Mr. Willey and immediately the native responds: "Mr. Weekly!"

Mr. Melvin further states that the province still presents a mighty challenge to us, and he thinks one of the finest ways to meet that challenge would be a Christian day school located outside Pinar del Rio. Some of the national workers are preparing themselves for such a project, so please pray for the Lord's guidance.

We appreciate Brother Melvin's observation and we are glad he could go.

The Herseys in Japan

Tokyo, Japan

Dear Brother Riggs:

Greetings from the land of Japan. I guess it's a little past time for us to be writing you. It seems hard to realize the fact that we have been in Japan three weeks now. We are very thankful for the good voyage we had on the Wilson. The first night out from California was very rough, but after Tuesday, April 10, we had good sailing all the way. When we were about three days from Honolulu, the weather cleared up and was warm the rest of the trip. We enjoyed the one day off the boat in Honolulu. We had some good fellowship with another missionary couple returning for a second term.

When we arrived at Yokohama, we were glad to see Wesley and Aileen come aboard ship with three Japanese young people. One of the girls was carrying a beautiful bouquet of flowers, and when they all came into our room, she handed them to Evelyn and the Japanese said, "Welcome to Japan." One of the girls got a little mixed up and said, "Welcome to Japanese." They had learned to say that that morning driving over to the dock. We appreciated someone to welcome us as we felt like strangers in a foreign land.

Driving from Yokohama to Tokyo we saw many new sights. I kept wanting Wesley to drive on the right side of the road but he insisted that he had to stay on the left side all the time. The traffic consists of bicycles, motorcycles, many three-wheeled motorcycle trucks, many taxi cabs, trucks, buses and cars. The taxi cabs far outnumber private cars. The majority of buildings and houses look like they could stand a good coat of paint. Most of the streets have no sidewalks and are very narrow. One cannot help but notice how close their houses and buildings are built to one another. In most cases the only place the children have to play is the streets. When we turned off the narrow street to Wesley's house he had to drive very slowly and sound his horn often as there were many children and older folks. We are anxious to get out from Tokyo and see how it is in the country area.

They had found a place where they thought we might like to live. It has three rooms, a bathroom and a room for the washing machine. The only unhandy thing is that the bedroom and living room are upstairs. Downstairs is another room which is used by the Southern Baptists during the week as a kindergarten. It is on Southern Baptist property so the rent is fairly reasonable for what we have. Our house is what you might call half American and half Japanese. The kitchen and bathroom are Americanized, but the upstairs is Japanese style. The floors upstairs are made out of rice-straw mats which are about 4 inches thick. The bedroom had 6 mats and the living room 8 mats. There is a little hall-way next to the two rooms and it has sliding windows which give us plenty of sun. We have sliding doors upstairs. The doors are only about 5½ feet high between the hallway and rooms. Between the bedroom and living room there are more sliding doors.

Since I have been here I have learned to duck many times. At the Calvery's house where we stayed the first few days, I got some bad bruises on my head going into their bathroom. We moved here and going from the bedroom into the living room I received a few more bruises. I had a sore head for a day or so but have learned now to duck. We think that the Japanese houses were built for people a little shorter than I.

We like it in our house very much now and have just about got everything straightened out. All of our things got here in good condition for which we are thankful. They had found a young married woman to help around the house and watch Philip while we're at school. She had worked for missionaries before—friends of the Calvery's—and then quit to get married. Pray for us as we study the language and get acquainted with the Japanese people.

Phillip is fine and happy. He's learning to stand and walk in his bed. Wesley and Aileen have been gone now for about a week and should be back in a day or so. They went North to Hokkaido. I believe they were looking over possible places where they might settle after leaving Tokyo. As far as I can find out the two most needy fields of Japan are to the extreme north and to the extreme south. I guess there are fewer missionaries in these areas than in other parts of the country.

Since we were too late to be in the regular class at language school we thought it best to sort of try to get settled a little bit before trying to start language school since Monday, May 7, as we should. We have been going to language school since Monday, May 7. Today was our 6th day in school. We go every afternoon from 1:30 to 3:30. So far we have been getting along O. K. We will be able to go to school this summer and get caught up with what we missed by coming late. So by next September we should be able to enroll in a regular class. It seems kind of strange to be in the same class with Evelyn by ourselves."

Yours in Christ,

Fred, Evelyn and Philip

penmen of the Word, there was but one Author.

4. There were two reasons why this epistle was written. The first was to strengthen the Jewish Christians who were in danger of returning to Judaism (Hebrews 10:32-34).

The second reason was to show the relation of Christ and His sacrifice on the Cross to the Old Testament dispensation. The Old Testament dispensation was founded upon sacrifices and services that were material, typical and transitory; the New Testament dispensation is founded on the redemptive ministry of our Lord Jesus Christ, and is spiritual, efficacious and eternal. It was difficult for the Jew to give up the Mosaic economy with its temple and elaborate services.—Selected.

5. "How shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation; which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us by them that heard him" (Hebrews 2:3).

One wintry afternoon, an eagle was seen feasting on the body of a dead sheep. The body of the sheep was floating down the river toward the mighty Niagara Falls! As the eagle feasted on the dead sheep, it seemed to be unaware of the roar of the falls which grew louder and louder! Just before the sheep went over the falls, the eagle was seen making a mighty effort to release his hold on the sheep. He could not do this, however. His talons had frozen fast to the sheep's wool. Both eagle and sheep went over the falls. With a shrill cry, the eagle went to its death. He had neglected too long!—Selected.

6. Some years ago the Titanic ship sank. Later a young Scotsman rose in a meeting in Hamilton, Canada, and said, "I was on the Titanic when she sank. Drifting alone on a wooden spar in the icy water on that awful night, a wave brought John Harper of Glasgow near me. He was holding on to a piece of the wrecked ship. 'Man are you saved?' he shouted. 'No, I am not,' was my reply. He said, 'Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved.' The waves bore him away. Strange to say, little later he was washed back alongside me. 'Are you saved now?' 'No,' I replied, 'I cannot honestly say that I am.' Then losing his hold, he sank! Alone in the night, with two miles of water under me, I believed on the Lord Jesus Christ, and was saved! I am John Harper's last convert!"

We are told that now is the accepted time, now is the day of salvation. Death is often nearer than the sinner may think.

Jesus Is the Son of God

(Lesson for July 8)

Lesson: Hebrews 1:1-3; 2:1-4; 6:1-3.

Golden Text: Hebrews 1:2.

I. INTRODUCTION

Through the ages God had been speaking through His servants the prophets, revealing Himself as the infinite and eternal One—a God of power, justice, holiness, truth and mercy.

In different ways and at various times He spoke through them, but they were always pointing forward to the One who should come. Abraham was called to found the nation in which He should come (Genesis 12). He was to be a prophet like Moses (Deuteronomy 18) and of the kingly house of David (2 Samuel 7). The offerings of Leviticus spoke of His priestly service. Isaiah saw Him as the suffering and reigning Messiah (Isaiah 53).

All this, wonderful as it was, remained incomplete until He came. Christ revealed all the glory of God. He was His express image, revealing His character and grace. He was the Creator and Upholder of all things. He made the final and perfect offering for sin—a finished work which enabled Him to sit down at God's right hand, the place of honor and power.

Words are almost too limited to really tell about this Son of God our Saviour, but they do bring us to a place of adoration and praise. It was for you and for me that He wrought God's perfect salvation.—Moody Monthly.

II. HELPFUL HINTS

1. God always knows the right time and the right manner in which to speak to the children of men (Hebrews 1:1).

2. Christ, the Word of God in human flesh, is the only message God has for men in the present age (Vs. 2).

3. It took Christ's equality with God to enable Him to purge our sins, and He did not sit down until this work had been accomplished (Vs. 3).

4. To hear the Word of God preached in its purity and simplicity puts a serious responsibility upon every hearer (2:1).

5. In the Person of the Lord Jesus Christ we have a better revelation of God than that given under the law and by mediation of angels (Vs. 2).

6. The greatest salvation ever offered to sinful man may be lost through sheer neglect (Vs. 3).

7. The Word of God had been made as sure as possible, being confirmed with signs and wonders (Vs. 4).

8. Every Christian should be versed in the elementary principles of the faith, but he should go far beyond them in his appreciation of God's Truth (6:1).

9. To be thoroughly acquainted with the principles of the Christian faith will enable us to withstand all manner of false teaching (Vv. 1, 2).

10. It is absurd to think of a house without a foundation, but it is equally absurd to have a foundation without a house (Vv. 1-3).—The Bible Expositor.

III. ADDITIONAL HINTS

1. The book of Hebrews, by its repeated use of the words "better than" presents Christ as superior to the angels, to the prophets, to Moses and to Abraham. He provides a better way of salvation and a better covenant with God, giving Himself for us to provide a new and living way to God. Jesus is the final, complete and perfect Word of God to mankind, because He is very God Himself.

2. Our next three lessons are taken from the Epistle to the Hebrews. The first emphasizes the deity of our Lord; the second the Saviourhood of Christ; the third the primary place that faith has in the lives of all those who are the true children of God. The book of Hebrews belongs to the group of Jewish Christian epistles of which there are four: James, 1 and 2 Peter being the others (James 1:1; 1 Peter 1:1).

3. The writer of this epistle is unknown, and likely to remain so. From earliest times its authorship has been ascribed to Paul; and from earliest time his authorship has been denied. After all it is of little importance who wrote the epistle, since "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God," and "holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost." While there were many

Why We Should Love to Abide in Christ

Elder A. L. Sellers, Quitman, Ga.

THE Bible tells us that "In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth. And the earth was without form and void; and darkness was upon the face of the waters" (Genesis 1:1, 2).

Notice the expression of unity in every act that was taken until man was brought into existence. Just before the act God said the word let and whatever He said happened. The light, firmament, the dry land and the seas appeared. God said let, and the grass, herbs and trees came forth. God said let and the greater light, the lesser light and stars shone. God said let, and the moving creatures in the waters and the fowls of the air were created. God said let, and the earth brought forth cattle, beast and creeping things. Last of all God said, "... Let us make man in our image, after our likeness ..." and man came into existence. God was so well pleased with the result of His creation until He called it not only good, but very good.

Notice that the constant use of that little word, let, expresses the idea of there being willing help, and at the suggestion of the Leader there was a willingness to act together. The Leader didn't want to use force and because of that attitude, there was abiding unity; and because of that abiding unity there was success. Because of success, there was joy so great with God until He called His work very good, and blessed and sanctified the seventh day.

We can't imagine the joy that God and His help experienced when They had finished this great universe, and placed man in Their image here to dress it and to enjoy the blessings They had fixed him. We don't know how long it lasted nor how great the joy, but it lasted until Satan intervened in the Garden of Eden.

Satan, by his deceptiveness, caused man to believe that he would not die if he did eat of the forbidden fruit. He believed, ate and lost his place in the garden and died to the peace and unity that he had been having with God. Ever since there has been trouble with man beyond expression except when he gets back into that peace and unity with God. That is the reason there are so many homes torn up and lives wrecked today. Many have failed to get back in peace and unity with God by listening to Satan, and trouble has followed as it always will when Christ is left out of men's lives.

Notice how plain Christ illustrates that in John 15:1-7. He tells us that He is the vine, the Father is the husbandman, and we are the branches. Every branch in Him that doesn't bear fruit, the Father taketh away; but every branch that beareth fruit, He purgeth it that it may bring forth more fruit. The branch cannot bear fruit of itself except it abide in the vine; no more can we except we abide in Christ. This is telling us that we must bear fruit if we abide in Him, and that we must abide in Him if we bear fruit. From this statement it is plain why we have so many fruitless church members. They are not in the vine, therefore they can't bear fruit.

These are some of the reasons we should love to abide in Christ; we will not only bear fruit that will bring joy beyond expectation, but He will purge us that we may bring forth more fruit by making us able to overcome the opposition that confronts us and removing the branches that are not bearing fruit but are taking the substance from the vine that fruit-bearing branches need.

Dear reader, do you want to be a fruit-bearing branch? Prove that you do by being sure that you are abiding in the vine which is Christ. There is no better evidence than for you to love Christ so great that it is a pleasure for you to do as He said do, for He said, "... If a man love me, he will keep my words: and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him" (John 14:23). That does not only assure that you are abiding in Him, but that He and the Father both are abiding with you. No greater evidence than that can we have or give to the world. Their abiding presence with you wherever you go will make you shine as nothing else will, and how great is that light!

In the seventeenth chapter of John, Christ prayed that we might have this experience of abiding unity with each other and with Him and the Father that the world might believe that He was sent by the Father. When I see how badly divided we are as a denomination I wonder how much we are proving to the world that the Father sent the Son, or that He loved the world as He loved the Son. Now beloved, this ought not be, for God is not the Author of confusion, but of peace; as He is in all churches of the saints. He taught the apostles to pray that the Father's will be done on earth as in heaven (Matthew 6:10; John 17:21-23). He has taught us that His will is for us to be

Mrs. Ida L. Keech

On November 6, 1955, God saw fit to take from our midst Mrs. Ida L. Keech. She had been in ill health for a long time, living the last nine years of her life as an invalid. She bore all her suffering with patience.

Mrs. Keech was born in Beaufort County, North Carolina, August 9, 1876. At the age of 16 she united with the Free Union Free Will Baptist Church where she worshiped as long as her health permitted.

In 1894 she married William M. Keech who preceded her in death in 1940. To this union were born 13 children.

She leaves to mourn her passing 12 children, 43 grandchildren, 45 great-grandchildren, 4 sisters and a host of nieces and nephews.

Funeral services were conducted in the home by a former pastor, Rev. D. A. Windham, assisted by Revs. Sam Kennedy, Clifton Lupton and Ralph Epps. Her body was laid to rest in the family cemetery beneath a mound of beautiful flowers to await the resurrection.

Mrs. Cecil J. Waters

as one abiding in Him and the Father so the world might know the Father sent the Son and that the Father loved the world as He loved the Son.

As Christ lived in the Father's will that He might abide in the Father, so must we live in Christ's will to abide in Him. He has but one will, and what we as witnesses need to do is to study to know His will and how to live in it; and then put that knowledge into our lives by letting Him use us as instruments in His hands to manifest Himself to the world. It would be wonderful to behold how our differences would disappear!

Dear reader, let me admonish you to study your Bible that you may know God—not that you may just know about Him, for the Pharisees knew about Christ; and you know what they did with Him. You can make a similar mistake by just knowing about Him. To be a real witness we must know the person for whom we are witnessing.

EDITORIAL

FUNCTIONING CHRISTIANITY

The front cover of this issue carries a concrete example of Christianity at work in deed, and not just in word only. This is an example of what Jesus meant when he said, "Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, To visit the fatherless and the widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world" (James 1: 27). From the observations of the editor on several visits to Malachi's Chapel, Columbia, North Carolina, he has concluded that these good people form a church which is making Christianity practical and functional.

The picture shows a group of tractors (can you count eight) which are being put to work on the farm of a widow who lost her husband through death. The men of the church, seeing the distressful circumstances of the widow who was about to have to sell her farm at a great loss, advised her not to sell it at that time but let them come together and cultivate the crop for her and thereby save her this financial loss.

We are informed that such a procedure is customary on the part of this church. One member told us that, several years ago, he had a severe illness right during the time when his crop had to be cultivated or lost. In his helpless condition he could do nothing about it, but the men of the church saved it for him by keeping it cultivated. Then he recited a number of other instances in which he himself participated with others in similar projects.

On our last visit to this church we heard this Sunday school vote to continue its practice of giving yearly one hundred bags of potatoes to the Free Will Baptist Orphanage, Middlesex, North Carolina. Therefore, they are caring for the orphans as well as the widows. Furthermore, we are informed that the church is regularly supporting other state and denominational causes.

It would be unusual to find a people who were so much alive in doing such fine things as these are doing, and to find that they were not equally alive spiritually. We have found that these people are also outstanding in the degree to which they meet the last clause of James' injunction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world. We can truly say that we believe these to be a spiritual people, loyal to Bible truth and appreciative of spiritual messages.

We have cited the activities of this church because it has made us glad to know them, and because what they are doing may serve as an example to other churches throughout the nation. Of course, we know that there are many, many other churches which are also faithful in the administration of the affairs of Christ, but perhaps some others are not so zealous.

Will you ask yourself if your church is doing what it might to make the principles of Christ active in your community? If it is not, perhaps Christ is waiting upon you to take the initiative in arousing a renewed interest. The Lord may use you to lead your church into an era of prosperity hitherto unknown; for the church that gives most and serves most diligently is the one that receives the greatest blessings of Christ.

NATIONAL HOME MISSIONS

Have you received a letter lately which made you feel extremely good? A few days ago, among the bills that made us frown, the advertising circulars and other items, there was a letter which bore the return address of the Board of Home Missions, 3801 Richland Avenue, Nashville 5, Tennessee. It was the second letter bearing that return address which we have received in recent weeks. For the benefit of you who may not have received one like it we quote the text of it as signed by the Reverend Damon C. Dodd:

"We of the National Home Mission Department want to take this means to express our deep and heartfelt appreciation to you for the gift which you recently made on our drive to pay off our indebtedness.

"The response to this request from the Home Mission Board has been the best ever experienced and we are greatly encouraged by such interest and concern on the part of so many Free Will Baptists. Believe me, it really does something to me when my fellow Free Will Baptists cooperate in any movement as they have in this one.

"With this $2,000 debt out of the way we will be able to send additional workers to Mexico where they are needed so very much. Our missionaries, Brother Timmons and Miss Yeley, tell us that the prospects are good and the need is great; so, indirectly, your gift has helped to further the gospel cause in Mexico.

"Please continue faithfully in prayer for us as we press Christ's claims on the home front and over the continent of North America."

It was not the amount of our gifts to home missions which made us so happy, because the gift was small. In fact, after receiving the nice letter we were sorry that we did not make a greater sacrifice and send more. The things which made us rejoice were the gratefulness of the department for the gift, the indication that our people were responding to liquidate the debt, the open door for mission work in Mexico and the determination of the mission board to enlarge its work as money is provided.

Quite some time ago we stated editorially that the National Home Mission Board was in dire need of funds. We are informed that this board was forced to negotiate a loan to pay bills and salaries which were due. It is this indebtedness which the department has asked that we pay off. We do not know how much has been paid toward this end but we are sure that we, as a denomination, are well able to pay it off without the least strain upon anyone.

If you have not made your contribution to this special project, send it in immediately. Perhaps this is the Lord's way of arousing us not only to take care of this matter but to build up a sufficient surplus that will enable the department to place additional missionaries on the field. When you send in your contribution, you will most likely get a nice letter which will make you feel as good as mine made me feel.

Are We Willing to # Pay the Price?

ALBERT M. EZELL

Searcy, Arkansas

FROM the dawning of time, even to the present day, it has been proven, repeatedly, that to own something of value, something of value must be given in exchange.

Nowhere in the history of our time is this more clearly illustrated than in the writing and signing of the Declaration of Independence. Here we have the founding fathers of this country of ours, now proclaimed one of the world's greatest powers, risking, not only their possessions, but also their liberty; yes, even their very lives, counting even death preferable to the continuation of the bonds of slavery.

When we, the citizens of this great republic today, look back and consider the price that was paid by these gallant men for our liberty, our hearts, in unison I am sure, each breathes a prayer of thankful gratitude to those who offered and gave their all that prosperity might have an inheritance worthy of praise and gratitude from the heart of its very citizen.

Not only in our day is something for nothing an empty axiom, but it has been thus since the beginning of time. We find that from life we can expect to reap about the same extent in which we have sown. Hezekiah's prayer, because of his Godly and righteous reign, and because he had risked all to follow the Lord, was heard and answered.

Hannah, because of her unselfish devotion to God, though she had long been barren, was given a son who was to be great among the prophets of Israel. Hannah exercised a great and unselfish spirit in that she said, "If you will but give me a son, him shall I lend to you all the days of his life." No doubt Hannah had that same motherly love in her heart for that little one that God had seen fit to give her as the best mothers of our day have for their little ones. Still, faithful to her promise to God, we are told that as soon as the child was weaned she left him in the care of Eli, the priest, who taught him in the way of the Lord. Looking from the physical viewpoint we know it must have cost Hannah a great price to leave this child so miraculously given her who was yet in his infancy.

Abram was doubtless blessed with enormous wealth, but when God called he gladly and unselfishly left his kindred and the land of his birth, trusting only in faith to the promise of God, and went out from his homeland not knowing whither he went but trusting God for results. Through the trust and obedience of this great man came salvation to the whole earth; for through him and his seed came the greatest Liberator of those who were enslaved in sin and condemned to death. Yes, through the obedient price that Abraham paid, was born Jesus our Lord.

Looking from a materialistic viewpoint men would say that Moses, the one whom God called the greatest of His prophets, willfully threw away his chance to be elevated among the great when he gladly exchanged the riches of his adopted land to Egypt for the trials, persecutions and poverty that were to be his lot as the leader and champion of the cause of his people, Israel. Not only did he suffer hazards at the hand of the enemy, but even his own people ridiculed and doubted him as their leader. But in spite of all this, Moses counted the riches of Egypt which would doubtless soon mean his ascendancy to the throne and leadership of this great and powerful nation. Still he counted the promises of God of far more esteem than the frivolous and fleeting riches that Egypt could offer, for they were but temporal, but God's promises were eternal.

Much as we would like to leave the picture here and speak only of the blessings of God upon the ones that are willing to pay the complete price for what they receive, we feel that we would be unfaithful in our admonitions if we were to fail to say a few words concerning those that thought the price was too great to pay and the sacrifice too great to make.

Saul, because of his desire to please the people rather than God, and also to appease his own jealousy and to elevate his own egotism, forfeited the priceless gift of approval that God had invested in him.

This was a great price to pay for such fleeting glory that was to cost him his contact with God and was later to take him back to the very source that he had once condemned, the source of witchcraft, to seek the information that he was now unable to obtain from God because of his arrogance and disobedience, but only to find that he was to die an inglorious death on the losing field of battle. This was all due to the fact that he refused to mind God and to pay the price that was exacted of him. Saul had shut his heart and mind to the admonitions of God for so long that the hinges had become rusty and the bolt had become frozen to the extent that to open it again was now too great a task for his spiritual strength.

Not all, but some of us must pay the price for our folly while here in this present world. Samson, though a Nazarite and chosen of God, was doubtless saved in the end (Hebrews 11:32). Yet, because of his disobedience, he lost the liberty of his eyes and was left in darkness and shame the remainder of his earthly existence.

Being slowly devoured by malignant cancer is far less serious than having our concept of right and wrong destroyed by immoral living.

In closing I would like to leave this thought, especially in the minds of our young people: Today we have so many things (pleasures) on the bargain counter of Satan, seemingly at a bargain price, but still in the end we will find that the price was hopelessly high when we discover that we have bargained our souls for the baubles of pleasure and we behold how drab and colorless they are after all. Strive to live in such a way that when you have reached the sunset of life and pause beside the last milestone that you can look back, not with regret for a misspent life or a miserly existence, but that you will be able to say, "I was willing to trust You, God, and pay the price; by Your grace I have done my best."

Six Surprises

The Christian who begins to give a tenth of his income to the Lord will have at least six surprises: He will be surprised:

1. At the amount of money he has for the Lord's work.
2. At the deepening of his spiritual life.
3. At the ease in meeting his own obligations with the nine tenths.
4. At the ease in going from one tenth to larger giving.
5. At the prudent disposal afforded to a faithful and wise steward over the nine tenths, that remain.
6. At himself for not adopting the plan sooner.

The Need for Foreign Missionaries

RAYMOND RIGGS

(At recent Nationwide League Convention)

CHRIST has given His people one task to perform. What is that? The evangelization of the world. Hear His words: "... Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature" (Mark 16:15). After reviewing the five separate statements of the Great Commission found in the Gospels and the Acts, Dr. Robert H. Glover states:

"Could anything be more significant than this five-fold record of the Great Commission given by the risen Christ to His followers, especially when it is coupled with the complete silence of Scripture as to any other task or responsibility enjoined by Him upon those to whom He entrusted the launching of the Christian movement? Can any thoughtful Christian fail to see that the one thing uppermost in the mind of our blessed Lord, the one great burden upon His heart during His last days and even His very latest moments upon earth, was that the message of redemption wrought out by His death and resurrection should be carried to the whole world? The very last recorded words of the ascending Christ to His disciples ere an enveloping cloud hid Him from their view were: 'Ye shall be my witnesses . . . unto the uttermost part of the earth.'" Bible Basis of Missions, Page 31.

Dr. A. T. Pierson once remarked: "For the present generation of the saved to reach the present generation of the unsaved, is the one question of the hour that leaves all others far in the distance. To the solution of that problem in God's own way, the church, and every member of it, should bring all the brains, heart, conscience, will, money, intelligence and enterprise at command." 1900 China's Millions, Page 20.

But the Word of God does not tell us that generation after generation shall seek to give themselves to this task and wage an endless struggle against heavy odds century after century, with no eventual goal ever being reached. Our text does not say: "Until the end of the world" (KJV), but "Until the consummation of the age" (ARV). This age will not abruptly end; it will be consummated. And there is a vast difference between ending something and consummating it. The one implies a weary round suddenly terminated with nothing necessarily accomplished, whereas the other implies the completion of a program, the accomplishment of a purpose.

Will the task of world missions ever be completed? Some feel that God will never be able to obtain from His people anything other than a half-hearted devotion that will express itself by continuous failure in their efforts to serve Him, and that in the end He will suddenly terminate their feeble efforts of "fiddling and fuddling around" trying to evangelize the world, and call them home to glory. But others feel that Mark 13:10 should be taken seriously, even literally: "... the gospel must first be published among all nations" or as it is recorded in Matthew 24:14: "And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come."

I firmly believe that God means to consummate this age. He is working today, throughout the earth, that He might consummate on the morrow His program of world-wide witness. Hence there is something strategic, even awe-inspiring about our Nationwide League Convention being convened this year. I am especially grateful for the opportunity to address you on the subject, "The Need for Foreign Missionaries."

Recently a conference of over forty leading scholars of the prophetic Scriptures gathered together at considerable expense in New York City to consider the truth of our Lord's return. They pondered this age and its dark overtones in the light of the prophetic Word and felt that the great day of God's final triumph was at hand. They called God's people to look with renewed anticipation for the coming of the Lord. But in their conference they almost forgot that the Word of God tells us not only to look but to hasten Christ's coming. (2 Peter 3:12, "Looking for and hastening unto the coming of the day of God, . . .")

To look for means to wait for with expectation. The force of the Word translated hastening implies the aspect of hastening on, i.e. "Causing the day of the Lord to come more quickly by helping to fulfill those conditions without which it cannot come." In other words, the day is not so inexorably fixed that the church is not free to hasten it on by her world-wide witness.

GREAT POTENTIALS

One of the most unrecognized facts before us these days in our missionary thinking is the enormous population increase that faces us and the staggering opportunities and obligations which we have. A November 1955 issue of News Week indicates, for instance, that within 32 years the present world population will have reached the point where hundreds of millions will be starving for lack of food, and that the world simply will not be able to produce enough food for all the people who are in it. We are told that right here in the United States a baby is born every eight seconds; which gives an increase in population of 7,062 every day or 2½ million per year. This represents a population equivalent to the state of Oklahoma or Tennessee.

On the world scale, the population is increasing by 100,000 persons every 24 hours or 37 million each year. This is a population larger than the Dominion of Canada.

Of great significance is the fact that the United States is growing at the rate of 1.1% a year, while Asia, Africa and Latin America, already greatly outnumbering the rest of the world, are increasing now at the rate of 3.3%, just three times as fast as the United States. Needless to say that all of these are potential heirs of the Kingdom of God.

COMPLICATIONS

As populations continue to rise we may be sure of enormous political, economic and social repercussions, to say nothing of the religions which face us within these next 32 years if the Lord tarries.

The problem is further complicated by the fact that we are told that the latest hydrogen bombs have 750 times the power of the one that destroyed Hiroshima and 60,000 inhabitants in a moment of time. If the United States and Russia were utterly destroyed, we might feel that perhaps in truth the end of the world had arrived. Nevertheless, within ten years the population would have been completely replaced and the world would go merrily on without us.

This present unrest, upheaval and threat of our day is characterized by wars and revolutions, and the end is not in sight; the ferment still continues. To what is all this tension and strife leading? At least one dominant result is becoming increasingly apparent; the nations of the west are no longer able nor do they have the moral stature to continue to lead the world. As a result, the center of political power and influence is shifting from the western world toward the eastern (non-Christian) world. The day of the white man's political and cultural dominance is ending and the day of the other races is dawning. The western world is in political decline. This means that the Communist whispering campaign throughout the Asiatic and Colonial world that "Christianity is a white man's religion" is having the damaging effect of identifying the message of God's eternal truth with politically has been people. In the nineteenth and first half of the twentieth centuries it was the politically dominant who was evangelizing the politically subservient. But not so now. As a result, the whole tone of missionary work is changing. The white missionary work is changing. The white missionary is regarded with suspicion, scorn and impatience. He is becoming increasingly unwelcome. He must therefore lose his identity, submerge himself in the Word of Truth and reflect the character of the cosmopolitan Saviour.

Is Any Man Common?

GRADY LINEBAUGH
Walnut Ridge, Arkansas

ONE of the most difficult problems among men is to be without prejudice, especially racial prejudice (as is Christ). The people in the first century had the problem and it has faced men in every century since. When Christ sent Peter, a Jew, to the gentiles with the gospel, it took a miracle to convince him that he must go; and may I say that God, in that miracle, showed not only Peter but all men since that He is opposed to racial prejudice, hatred and discrimination. All races need to learn this lesson, for all races have indulged in the feeling of race superiority.

The Bible says in Acts 10:28, "And he said unto them, Ye know how that it is an unlawful thing for a man that is a Jew to keep company, or come unto one of another nation; but God hath shewed me that I should not call any man common or unclean." According to an editorial in Life Magazine on October 25, 1954, "Generations of Poles are often called Ukrainians 'reptiles.' Germans called the Poles 'polish cattle' and the Poles called the Germans 'prussian swine.' In South Africa the English, it is said, are against the Afrikaner, both are against the Jews; all three are opposed to the Indians, while all four conspire against the native black."

The Bible says that the Egyptians refused to eat with the Hebrews, "... for that is an abomination unto the Egyptians" (Genesis 43:32). Later the Hebrews, when Paul explained that God had commanded him to preach the gospel to the gentiles, cried out, "... Away with such a fellow from the earth: for it is not fit that he should live" (Acts 22:22). To weigh the heartaches, to measure the tears, or to even imagine the sufferings caused by this problem would be impossible. He who wrote "Man's inhumanity to man makes countless millions mourn," was writing of stern realities.

Most of us can remember the feeling of racial hatred intensified by Hitler and his Nazi followers. They preached the absurd and false doctrine that the German people constituted a separate race from other Europeans, describing themselves as supermen. The hatred which Hitler poured out upon the Jews, in his own country, whom he considered a separate inferior race, resulted in the death of six million men, women and children — a number equal to the population of New York, Chicago or San Francisco! Perhaps some people have wondered why one race is prejudiced and hates another. The school teachers tell us that "Small children have no prejudices that are not taught to them by their enlightened elders" (Life, October 25, 1954). If parents would quit passing hatred, prejudice, discrimination and malice to their children it would soon disappear. After we get to know a person it is almost universally true that we like him. This parable describes far too many people: "See that man over there? Yes. Well, I hate him! But you don't know him. That's why I hate him."

The Bible declared in Acts 10:34, 35, "Then Peter opened his mouth, and said, Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons: But in every nation he that feareth him, and worketh righteousness, is accepted with him." God says in His Word, Romans 10:13, "For whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved." Does that sound like one race or color of people? Christ lived for all men, died for all men, was resurrected

A Plea to Youth

MISS JOAN AVERETTE

Take stock, young soul,
While life is still unspent;
Don't wait—behold,
Turn now to Him—repent!

So like the grass,
The soul when young and gay
Soon dies—alas,
Don't throw your life away!

Start now, young heart,
Defend the Word with right;
Do not depart
And lose your Christian fight.

For once you cast
Your lot with Him and turn,
Give up your task;
All love gives way to spurn.

'Tis harder then
To come back to the fold,
And serve again;
You find your heart grown cold.

So keep the flame
Within your breast aglow;
Revere His name
Because He loves you so.

Lay all your life
Within His wounded hands;
You'll have no strife
If you obey commands.

Hold fast, dear soul,
And flaunt Christ's banner high!
Give Him control;
Just pass old Satan by!

Be proud that you
Are numbered with His host;
Just say it's true,
You love your Lord the most.

Let all the world
In laughter ridicule;
Tho' scorn is hurled,
Don't break the Golden Rule.

You'll find, no doubt,
That you can stand the test;
But not without,
Our God who knoweth best.

So grasp your sword
And don't forget your shield;
Fight for the Lord;
To Him forever yield.

for all men, and is coming again to take all who are ready, to live with him. All the Christians I know love all men, too.

All that is necessary for registration is your name, address and age, together with a registration fee of $2 and a deposit of $5 to be credited on the fare on the special Cragmont bus. The bus will follow the following schedule: Leaving New Bern at 6:00 a. m., round trip fare $12.50; Kinston, 7:00 a. m., fare $12; Goldsboro, 8:00 a. m., fare $11.50; Smithfield, 9:00 a. m., fare $11; Raleigh, 9:45 a. m., fare $10.50. Again Mrs. L. E. Ballard will ride the bus as chaperon and be house mother at Cragmont. Other members of the staff, tentatively arranged to date, include Rev. Michael Pelt, Bible teacher, and Mrs. Sue Thompson, instructor of the junior group. Others are yet to be chosen. Rev. L. E. Ballard will again teach his course of "Youth and the Church," including instruction in Sunday school and Free Will Baptist league opportunities for our young people.

Mr. Ballard states: "In June we had two conferences with an average attendance of above 70 for each of them. Young people receive great blessings at Cragmont and have a good vacation too. We hope many will be sent in August by Sunday school classes, leagues, woman's auxiliaries and other church groups."

Ryland Resigns Superintendent Alabama Children's Home

In a regular meeting of the board of trustees, the Rev. W. H. Ryland turned in his resignation as superintendent of the Free Will Baptist Children's Home, Eldridge, Alabama, to become effective October 31, 1956. Mr. Ryland has served as superintendent of the home during its entire nine years of operation and good progress has steadily been made.

The Alabama Children's Home has served 200 children during its operation and at present has on roll 53 children.

Mr. Ryland will probably go back to the field of pastoral and evangelistic work.

The board of trustees will name the new superintendent at an early date and he will work in cooperation with Mr. Ryland before his final leave.

The greatest blessing of all during the school was the reaching of 12 young souls with the gospel.

Mrs. J. B. Chism was general director for the school, Rev. J. B. Chism, pastor of the church, was musical director, and Miss Juanita Deuell served as pianist. Depart-

Rev. James F. Miller Resigns Pastorate

The Rev. James F. Miller, pastor of the Kinston, North Carolina, First Free Will Baptist Church, who came to the local pastorate September 27, 1952, has submitted his resignation which will be effective September 30.

The following statement has been made concerning the growth of the church during Rev. Miller's pastorate:

"The church has shown a steady growth during the pastorate of Rev. Miller. The Sunday school has grown from a record attendance of 147 to a new peak of 336. The average attendance for 1951 was 118 persons per Sunday; the average for 1955 was 25. Eighty-six persons have been received to the church by profession of faith and baptism, and at least that many more by transfer from other churches.

"All departments have shown a marked increase during the past four years. The church had just occupied its new educational building when Rev. and Mrs. Miller came to serve. There was an indebtedness of about $7,000 which has been liquidated. The growth of the church continued at such a pace that it was necessary to look for a location for a new and larger church. An attractive lot on North Heritage Street was procured at a cost of some $10,000, and all but about $2,000 of this indebtedness has been paid off. Rev. Miller hopes the balance will be liquidated before his current pastorate ends."

Mr. and Mrs. Miller are former residents of Missouri, but they made no announcement about where they would be after they leave the Kinston Church on October 1, 1956. No announcement has been made concerning the successor to Mr. Miller.

Questions and Answers ON THE BIBLE

Conducted by J. F. BARROW

3824 Richland Avenue, Nashville 5, Tennessee

Question: I have been asked the question, "Where is God now?" What is your answer to such a question?—F. Edwards, Nashville, Tennessee.

Answer: God the Father is in heaven sitting on His throne. "... for God is in heaven, and thou upon earth: therefore let thy words be few" (Ecclesiastes 5:2). "Thus saith the LORD, The heaven is my throne, and the earth is my footstool: ..." (Isaiah 66:1). "But there is a God in heaven that revealeth secrets, ..." (Daniel 2:28). "Heaven is my throne, and earth is my footstool: ..." (Acts 7:49).

Jesus Christ, God's Son, who is God, is now at God's (the Father's) right hand, "... Behold, I see the heavens opened, and the Son of man standing on the right hand of God" (Acts 7:56). "So then after the Lord had spoken unto them, he was received up into heaven, and sat on the right hand of God" (Mark 16:19); "Hereafter shall the Son of man sit on the right hand of the power of God" (Luke 22:69); "Which he wrought in Christ, when he raised him from the dead, and set him at his own right hand in the heavenly places" (Ephesians 1:20); "Wherefore God also hath highly exalted him, and given him a name which is above every name" (Philippians 2:9).

The Holy Spirit who is God is now here on the earth. "And I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you for ever; Even the Spirit of truth; whom the world cannot receive, because it seeth him not, neither knoweth him; but ye know him: for he dwelleth with you, and shall be in you" (John 14:16, 17). He will always be with the Christians; when they are here, also when they go to heaven. "But ye are not in the flesh, but in the Spirit, if so be that the Spirit of God dwell in you. Now if any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his" (Romans 8:9); "Know ye not that ye are the temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you?" (1 Corinthians 3:16).

Paul has discussed the coming of antichrist and his wicked reign as part of the events in conjunction with Christ's second coming and clenches this argument with, "For the mystery of iniquity doth already work: only he who now letteth will let, until he be taken out of the way" (2 Thessalonians 2:7). (Let is old English meaning hinder.) So the Holy Spirit is here hindering the coming of antichrist. The Holy Spirit will be taken away at the end of this age, taken back to heaven when Christ's bride is caught up.

God is omnipresent, that is, present everywhere at the same time. This is true of each person or member of the Godhead. "Whither shall I go from thy spirit? or whither shall I flee from thy presence? If I ascend up into heaven, thou art there: if I make my bed in hell, behold, thou art there. If I take the wings of the morning, and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea; Even there shall thy hand lead me, and thy right hand shall hold me. If I say, Surely the darkness shall cover me; even the night shall be light about me. Yea, the darkness hideth not from thee; but the night shineth as the day: the darkness and the light are both alike to these" (Psalm 139:7-12). Both God the Father and God the Holy Spirit are here referred to. "God that made the world and all things there, seeing that he is Lord of heaven and earth, dwelleth not in temples made with hands; Neither is worshipped with men's hands, as though he needed any thing, seeing he giveth to all life, and breath, and all things; And hath made of one blood all nations of men for to dwell on all the face of the earth, and hath determined the times

Addresses Wanted

Due to inability to locate the following persons and because they have not submitted forwarding addresses when they evidently moved, we have been unable to deliver "The Free Will Baptist" to them:

Rev. N. F. Byrd, whose former address was Route 1, Waynesville, North Carolina; and Charles Tucker, whose former address was Newport, Arkansas.

We would like very much to have the addresses of these persons as they are subscribers to "The Free Will Baptist." Anyone knowing these addresses is asked to contact The Editor, The Free Will Baptist Press, Ayden, North Carolina.

before appointed, and the bounds of their habitation; That they should seek the Lord, if haply they might feel after him, and find him, though he be not far from every one of us: For in him we live, and move, and have our being; ..." (Acts 17:24-28).

Jesus assures all His followers to be with them always— "... and, lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world" (Matthew 28:20).

The Lighted Pathway

Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path
(PSALM 119:105).

REV. WILLET L. MORETZ
SWANNANOVA, N. C.

"And how shall they preach, except they be sent? as it is written, How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace, and bring glad tidings of good things" (Romans 10:15).

Since preparing my last message on the text "Preach the Word," I read a question asked Billy Graham by a young man who is considering entering the ministry. The question and answer are so interesting I am passing them on to those of you who did not have the opportunity of reading them in Billy Graham's column My Answer.

"Question: I am a young man contemplating entering the ministry, but I hear others speaking of being called. I have had no audible voice saying to me, 'Preach the gospel.' What do men mean when they say they are called to preach?—C. P. A.

"Answer: My advice to any young man thinking of entering the ministry would be: don't do it if your conscience will allow you to do anything else. Preaching in the strict sense of the word, is not a profession, but a calling. It is a God-given inner urge, inner passion to seek out the lost and win them to Christ. Paul expressed it in this way, 'Woe is me if I preach not the gospel.'

"Different than other professions, money must not be one of the considerations, nor fame, nor comfort, nor ease. To preach fervently, to counsel with people spiritually, and to bear the burden of prayer that is the preacher's, is the most exacting of all tasks. But in the same breath, I will say that it is the most gloriously rewarding.

"Edgar Jones said: 'The preacher must have the heart of a lion, the skin of a hippopotamus, the endurance of a greyhound, the patience of a donkey, the wisdom of an elephant, the industry of a horse and as many lives as a cat.' And we might add that quite often he must live on the food of a canary. But to be a partner of Christ in saving the world is the greatest of all vocations."—Selected.

Further considering the sentiments expressed in the question asked by the young man, is not here to be found the cause of so much modernism in our churches today? His are not the thoughts of an isolated case. Many are those who have the same ideas. Nor is it only to be found among the young ministers. We have only to listen to the average sermon delivered from the pulpit, over the radio and television, to learn that much of the so-called preaching of this age has very little of the gospel of Christ in it.

The first duty of the Christian minister is to proclaim the gospel of salvation, in all its freeness and fulness, to a lost world. Paul said, "How shall they call on him in whom they have not believed? and how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard? and how shall they hear without a preacher?" (Romans 10:14). Preaching is the foundation of the sinner's hope, and unless this foundation is firmly laid of the right materials it will be vain to attempt any structure for Christian living.

Let us consider before we pass to another subject what is gospel preaching and why it is necessary. Some one has said:

"Preaching is God's ordained method of communicating divine knowledge. Without divine knowledge men cannot believe. Without faith men cannot call upon God. Without calling upon God they cannot be saved." The preacher's work, when done according to the plan and will of God and by His direction, is the greatest work on earth; but he who would take upon himself the task and preach that which will lead men away from God is in the most dangerous of all professions.

"... yea, woe is unto me, if I preach not the gospel" (1 Corinthians 9:16).

"It is a good thing to give all we can, and then go on and give some more."—Sel.

Slocomb Church Holds Dedication Service

The Free Will Baptist Church of Slocomb, Alabama, which was organized less than a year ago with a charter membership of 10 persons, dedicated its new building on Sunday, June 17, 1956, with more than 150 persons attending. The dedicatory message was delivered by the Rev. W. B. Hughes of Chipley, Florida, whose topic was "Some Things the Church Needs."

The Rev. Rufus Hyman is pastor of the Slocomb Church. Others participating in the dedication service were the Reverends Donald Elnore, A. B. Cook and D. J. Paglia.

The new building consists of an auditorium, educational annex and baptistry. It is the first unit in a $10,000 building program. The deacons of the Slocomb Church are E. L. Hidle and Drew Bolin.

This dedication service also marked the opening of a revival at the Slocomb Church with the Rev. Paul Kettelman of Columbus, Mississippi, as the evangelist. The revival continued throughout the week of June 17-23.

Holly Springs Church Completes Revival

The Holly Springs Free Will Baptist Church, Kenly, North Carolina, held its revival June 10-17, 1956, with the Rev. B. L. Shook as the evangelist.

Mrs. R. H. Weaver reports the following:

"The Lord was real in our church in a wonderful way. Souls were blessed and prayers were answered. Seven persons were added to the church during our revival, and two others rededicated their lives to Christ. We had good attendance throughout the revival. We thank God for sending Brother Shook our way, and we feel sure that the Lord is using him to help win souls for His glory and that His Kingdom might be advanced here on earth."

Kill the Spider!

An old deacon who used to pray every Wednesday night at prayer meeting, always concluded his prayer thus: "And, Lord, clean all the cobwebs out of my life." We all know what he meant—the cobwebs—those things in his life which ought not to have been there but had gathered during the week. Well, it got too much for one fellow in the prayer meeting. He heard the old deacon one time too many! So, when the old man made that prayer, the fellow jumped to his feet and shouted, "Lord, don't do it! Don't do it! Kill the spider!"—Goshen Church Bulletin, North Belmont, N. C.

OUR REVIVAL MEETING

On June 18, 1956, we had a series of evangelistic services to begin at Ruth's Chapel Free Will Baptist Church, Route 5, New Bern, North Carolina, with the Rev. T. O. Terry as the guest speaker and the Rev. Melvin Everington as song director. Both of these men did wonderful work in the series of services, which was enjoyed by the congregation. People came from as far as twenty-five miles and some farther to be in the meeting, while there were many who could have attended and did not. But in all, for the size of the community and the conditions surrounding, together with the frivolous excuses which are so prevalent today, we have no right to be discouraged or disappointed. We know well that we have reached the great falling away, as expressed by the apostle, Paul. So, if I did not know the Scriptures in relation to these days, I would be blue from without and from within.

There were two converts who confessed and testified to the saving grace of the Lord. These were baptized by the writer on Sunday afternoon, July 1. The writer, pastor of the church, also delivered both the morning and evening messages on July 1.

On Sunday evening we read the Covenant of the church and talked thereon, preaching for a few minutes. We also received the newly baptized persons and one sister who brought her letter from a neighboring church into full fellowship. I gave an invitation and three junior boys came to the altar, accepting and confessing Christ Jesus as Saviour and Lord. It was a time of rejoicing. The seed had been planted by the preaching and the prayers of God's people, and now the ripened grain was being harvested. We praise the Lord because when the seed is sown in righteousness, there will be fruit. I never worry about this because God says, "... my word ... shall not return unto me void, ..." (Isaiah 55:11).

The Sunday school at Ruth's Chapel which has 228 on roll jumped from around 180 in attendance to an all-time high of 204 on the first Sunday in July. We can attribute this in a large measure to the series of services which the Brothers Terry and Melvin conducted. They left us Saturday night, the last day of June, after two weeks of singing, preaching and praying. We also noticed that our Free Will Baptist leagues were increased at the close of the meeting. So even though we did not have a large number of additions to the church, we did have a revival right where it will count in the future. Praise the Lord!

WORK ON HISTORY

About five years ago the Board of Publications and Literature of the National Association began the work of gathering historical facts about the Free Will Baptists. This work in the field of research was delegated to the Rev. George W. Million in cooperation with some of the members of the board, who secured minutes of various bodies and meetings and placed in the hands of Rev. Million. It has been a slow process, as the board has never had any means of drawing finances except through its printed matter. The National Association of Free Will Baptists had never given us any financial help to carry on the work. We have had to dig it up ourselves. If we had had the financial support that other boards have had, we would have had the proposed history, together with all needed literature, books, tracts and what have you in abundance, ere this. The only gifts that we have had were a gift from the Free Will Baptist Press in Ayden, North Carolina, in the amount of $250 and a gift of $10 from a church in Alabama for which we are thankful. We have been unjustly criticized by some of those who ought to have cooperated with us because of our slow moving in the matter of preparing the history, but let me repeat, we have not had the money to do the research and prepare the manuscript.

THE ACT OF FINISHING THE MANUSCRIPT

On July 2-6, the Rev. George W. Million was with us in the work of finishing the manuscript in the preparation for the printing of the history. The Rev. Joe Fort, editor at the Free Will Baptist Press, has been secured and is at work with Rev. Million and your servant, this scribe, in putting the final touches to the manuscript. Just as soon as we can arrange for the finance, we want to publish this book, which is destined to be an authentic and complete history when completed. It is to be in two parts, namely, the collective history and the history in the states which composes the collective history. Using the words of Brother Million, the history will be composed of "The main stream line and the history of the states that form the stream." We hoped to have had this manuscript completed by the sitting of the National Association of Free Will Baptists in Huntington, West Virginia, but sickness and other causes prevented the completion. But we had rather be longer and give to our people the best history possible, than to rush through and fail to give the best.

THANKS FOR INTEREST

We want to thank those who have shown an interest in any way toward this work by prayers, or giving of minutes or any document of an instructive and constructive nature. We have not had too much encouragement from many of our leaders, but we do appreciate what we have had. Among those who have shown a real interest in the work have been the Reverends Ralph Staten and Refert Wilson. Brother Staten, at one time, was pastor of the Free Will Baptist Church in Pocahontas, Arkansas, the home church of the Rev. George W. Million, and Brother Wilson is the present pastor. Some time ago, I saw an article in writing from the pen of Brother Wilson saying, "Pray for the Board of Publications and Literature." This was a rare thing, and it made us very happy.

REV. GEORGE W. MILLION

Brother George W. Million is a very conscientious servant of the Lord and has fought valiantly for the faith once delivered unto the saints. Thus, he wants every assertion that he makes in the history to be absolutely authentic. Brother Million was a public school teacher for years and he is now 78 years of age, a man with experience. We are happy to say that he is a man to be trusted as to accuracy in stating facts. We count it a happy privilege to be associated with such a brother in the ministry of our Lord in the preparation of a history for the Free Will Baptist people. Again we assert that if we had had the cooperation and support of the denomination as a whole, or in a sufficient measure, we would have had an abundance of books and necessary literature, tracts, etc. Pray for us and give your support and in time we will cease to be the orphans of the National Association of Free Will Baptists.

Prayer is an acknowledgement of faith; worry is a denial of faith. Prayer is putting one's hand in God's, trusting to His loving guidance; worry is withdrawing our hand, and denying His power to lead. Prayer leads through the door of faith into the presence of God; worry leads through the door of anxiety into the darkness of loneliness and discouragement. If prayer does not cancel worry, worry will cancel prayer.

Fruit Farm Adventure

ESTHER M. PAYLER

THE Martin family moved to the country, when school vacation started. On the first day as Jim and his sister, Ida, pulled weeds along the front fence, Jim said, "I know there'll be plenty to do around our yard, but way out here, how can I earn money to be a doctor?"

Ida's smile faded. "Yes, it takes lots of money to be a missionary doctor, that is, to go to school to learn to be one." Ida's snub nose wrinkled. "If you do your part and work, the Lord will open the way. I'm praying for Him to do it for me, so I can be your nurse."

"Some doctor and nurse!" a strange voice giggled. Jim and Ida jumped in surprise, to see a tall boy leaning on their fence. His tennis shoes had not made any noise on the dirt road. He exclaimed: "I'll show you where to make money, but you're kinda small!" Jim noticed one of the boy's eyes was brown, the other was lighter with yellow streaks.

"Where can we earn money?" asked Jim.

"At Bailey's Fruit Farm. I'm going there now. You and your sister can come with me," invited the boy. "I'm Bob, from up the road!"

"Thank you. We're Jim and Ida, just moved from the city."

"I've made lots of money picking fruit," explained Bob, as they walked. "I spend it fast as I earn it. No saving for school, 'cause I hate it, and am not going a minute after I have to by law." His laugh sounded like a crow.

"What are they picking now and how much do you get?" asked Jim.

"Cherries, and they pay a cent and a half a quart."

"Wonder if they'll take us?" Jim ran his fingers through his straw-colored hair.

Bob winked his brown eye. "I'll show you how! There's tricks!"

"You mean something that isn't honest?" Ida frowned.

Bob shrugged, but did not answer. "I'll take you into the packing and shipping shed to see Mr. Bailey."

Jim and Ida exchanged uneasy glances following Bob through the long shed piled with crates and empty boxes and full ones at the lane end. The air was fragrant with the smell of fresh cherries.

Bob introduced them to Mr. Bailey, a man who seemed to be in a hurry, for he scurried around like an ant. "We need pickers. Fruit's going to waste. You're young, but you'll have to do."

"Thanks," replied Ida. "We'll try."

"Bob, you show 'em how, and then take the checking job for cherries," said Mr. Bailey.

"O. K.," answered Bob, "This tree, Jim. Ida, the one next to it."

As Jim picked, Bob whispered. "Bailey wants only ripe ones picked, but work as fast as you can. Take soft or partly green ones, just so you earn money." He winked his brown eye.

"I want to work right," answered Jim.

Bob cackled. He said to Ida: "Don't fill 'em too full. Who'll know the difference?"

"God and I will, and the people who buy them," answered Ida, her blue eyes big and dark.

"I just want to make money," Bob snorted.

Soon Jim and Ida's fingers were stained red, their arms scratched from twigs. But as they looked at the crates filled with boxes, they had picked, they had strength to go on.

"Time to check in," called Bob. He counted Ida's crates: "Five," he whispered.

"Four is all I count," Ida stared at him.

"Silly!" Bob winked his brown eye.

Ida tossed her curls. "I want only what I earned!"

Bob whispered to Jim. "How do I count for you?"

"What's coming to me. No more and no less," Jim answered.

Bob shrugged: "All right, be honest, but not me!"

Every day, even one day when it rained a little, Jim and Ida picked cherries, and although their arms ached from reaching, the pile of coins in their bank helped them to keep on working. When Bob picked he always had more than anyone else. "I put all the nice cherries on top, but otherwise anything goes just to fill the box," he boasted.

"That isn't honest," protested Jim.

"Well, I earn more'n you." He rattled the money in his pocket.

"See you tomorrow."

"Not tomorrow. That's Sunday. We'll be at Sunday school and church."

"Come with us," invited Ida.

"Not me. I'll work as usual and earn more 'cause no one's watching!"

Monday afternoon Ida and Jim picked later than usual. There was a big order for Dayton Market. Bob said he was tired and went home early, even when Mr. Bailey asked him to stay. "Shed's so full, I'll have to pile some up next to it and cover them with convass," said Mr. Bailey. "Thanks for staying, children. Here's an extra quarter for each."

"Thank you," said Ida. "Can we have some shells from that pile of sand and shells, next to the shed? We want some to make a picture frame for our mother's birthday tomorrow."

Ida and Jim picked some shells and went home. They stuffed them into their pockets, so their mother would not see them and carried them to their room. "We don't want to spoil the surprise," said Jim.

That evening, after supper, they were working in their room. "We need two more handfuls," said Jim. This one corner needs more."

"Let's go down and get them now. The moon's bright and we can take a flashlight," said Ida.

"We'll go out the back and Mother won't hear us and ask questions, 'cause she and Dad are on the front porch."

Jim and Ida hurried down the lane. As they brushed against the honeysuckle the sweet odor tickled their noses. Birds chirped sleepily as they passed under the trees.

"Let's hurry. It's getting darker," said Ida.

As they came to the shell and sand pile, Jim stopped, "I see lights!"

"Fireflies, under the trees," shivered Ida, scared but trying to sound brave.

"There's a truck in the lane, with lights out," whispered Jim.

"I smell crushed cherries!" sniffed Ida, reaching for Jim's hand.

"Let's look," said Jim.

"I'm scared!" Ida drew back.

"What time I am afraid, I will trust in Thee," said Jim.

Ida did not answer but crept along with Jim. They saw Bob and a man loading the cherries into a truck. Bob disappeared into the truck, they thought, but someone was holding them, putting hands over their mouths. "Shut up," hissed Bob. "If you tell on me, I'll beat you and say you did it!"

"Promise you won't tell," he kept repeat-

Anna Phillips Loan Fund

Attention Woman's Auxiliary Members: At our North Carolina State Convention this year there was elected a committee to be in charge of the Anna Phillips Loan Fund. This committee is composed of Mrs. James A. Evans, chairman; Mrs. Lillie Mae Sasser and Mrs. D. L. Whaley. Those desiring information concerning this fund or those desiring to make future applications for loans should contact Mrs. Evans at P. O. Box 203, Wilson, North Carolina, instead of your state youth chairman as heretofore.

Please urge your people to support this worthy cause in order that our young people might further their educations. Anyone having notes coming due, please respond immediately in order for others to enter school this fall.

Mrs. Carl Dudley
President, N. C. State Auxiliary Convention

Tulsa, Okla.—The Woman's Auxiliary of the Trinity Temple Church report varied activities for the months of May and June.

The ladies attended a cottage prayer meeting and presented a Mother's Day program. The auxiliary also sponsored a yearbook study and held a business meeting. The average for the month of May was 15.

The vacation Bible school sponsored by the auxiliary had an enrollment of 103, and ten of this number accepted Christ. Another yearbook study was held during June, and the average attendance for the month was 22. The auxiliary feels that it has been bountifully blessed, and trusts and prays that God will bless other auxiliaries in like manner.

Morrisville, N. C.—The Woman's Auxiliary of the Shady Grove Free Will Baptist Church, Durham County, met Thursday evening, July 5, at the Fellowship House. Mrs. Linwood Clemments, president, presided over the meeting. The devotions were led by Mrs. J. R. Hildebran, program chairman.

Those taking part on the program were Mrs. James Overman, Mrs. C. E. Parrish, Mrs. E. P. Hildebran and Mrs. Buck George. Following the business session, Mrs. George dismissed the meeting with prayer. Mrs. George and Mrs. Claude Phipps then served refreshments to the fourteen members and one visitor present.

Richton, Miss.—The Woman's Auxiliary of the New Love Well Free Will Baptist Church met July 6, 1956. The Scripture reading for the evening was Luke 19:1-10. Those taking part on the program were Mrs. W. M. Brewer, Mrs. Van Walley, Mrs. Tillis Walley and Mrs. Erastus McLain.

Following the business session, the group was dismissed with prayer.

Kenansville, N. C.—The Sarecta Woman's Auxiliary met at the church on July 2, 1956. The meeting was called to order and the group sang "Saviour Like a Shepherd Lead Us." Mrs. Walter Futrelle led the group in prayer. Following, the business session was held.

The several topics in the program were discussed by various members of the group. The auxiliary came to the conclusion that although our nation is considered a Godly nation, there are many who don't know Christ. The auxiliary also determined that our leaders and teachers need our prayers and help that they may lead us in the right way.

Remembering the Youth At Cragmont

REV. D. L. WHALEY, Pastor

Jacksonville, North Carolina, Free Will Baptist Church

IT was my happy privilege to serve on the staff at both of the youth conferences at Cragmont Assembly, Black Mountain, North Carolina, in June of this year. It was amazing and a blessing to see what God did in transforming the lives of our young people. During the two weeks forty-five young people found Christ as their personal Saviour, one hundred and eleven gave their lives to full time Christian work and fifteen found God's will in their lives. These boys and girls came back singing and praising God for the new found joy in Christ.

Cragmont is a holy place. It is a place God is using in the lives of adults as well as the youth. In order for God to reach more people through Cragmont, Cragmont must expand. There is such a great need for landscaping, and more buildings are needed in order to care for the people. We can have at least five hundred at the youth camp next year if housing is provided. Did you know there is only enough dishes to set the table one time? In order to have a second set-up, as was the case at the youth conferences, the girls in the kitchen had to rush, rush, rush in washing the dishes while hungry boys and girls waited to be served. Pray for Cragmont! If the board should come with an expansion program, please stand behind it and push Cragmont in your church.

A Cragmont rally day will be held in the Jacksonville, North Carolina, Free Will Baptist Church on Sunday, July 22. We are hoping that each boy and girl who attended the two youth conferences at Cragmont will attend, plus their parents and friends. Services will begin with Sunday school at 9:45 a. m., followed with morning worship at eleven. This service will be broadcasted over radio station W L A S. Lunch will be served from twelve to one o'clock. In the afternoon the rally will be held, closing with a baptismal service in the church baptistry. Also services will be held at the hospital and jail in the afternoon. The pastor will have charge of the morning service and Mrs. L. E. Ballard, house mother at Cragmont, the afternoon service. Rev. Willie Justice, a student of the Free Will Baptist Bible College, Nashville, Tennessee, will bring the afternoon message.

We are expecting a great time in the Lord and we want you to share in these spiritual blessings by attending. Come in time for Sunday school and, if possible, bring lunch.

The Garage Church Grows

Recently Rev. Wesley Calvery of Tokyo, Japan, sent in the following report regarding our work there in his garage:

"Recently our hearts have been made to rejoice because of the apparent working of the Spirit among our little group which meets in the garage. Two of the girls have begun helping us to teach the Sunday school. One of them gets up at 4:30 in the morning for Bible study and prayer. She has also said that she would like to dedicate her life to full-time Christian work. Two of our girls wish to enter Bible school here in Tokyo. Recently we began a baptismal class. Five people are attending the class and are making preparation to be baptized. At least ten per cent of the people who attend our meeting lead in public prayer. These people are all seemingly growing in grace and becoming separated from the world. Please rejoice with us concerning these things."

Dear Brother Riggs:

The enclosed money order in the amount of $51.00 is from our first vacation Bible school in the history of Rock of Zion Free Will Baptist Church. The children want this money used to carry the gospel to some one who has never heard it over seas (to use their words).

Everyone enjoyed their work, especially the children. They said they would like for it to go the whole summer.

I, as director, thank our Lord for a successful week.

Jim and Ida said nothing.

"Promise," Bob kept twisting their arms.

"All right," sobbed Ida. "Say yes,, before he breaks your arm, Jim."

"All right," Jim gritted his teeth.

Without their shells, the children ran up the lane, and up the back yard path and into their bedrooms. Jim held back tears until he got into his room.

Next morning, Bob did not whistle for them. Ida thought of telling her mother, but did not want to worry her on her birthday. Jim whispered to her: "We must go to pick, as usual."

When the children arrived, Mr. Bailey was scurrying into the sheds and out again. "I was robbed last night. Hurry and pick so we have enough for our order."

"We ought to tell," Ida said to Jim.

"I know," he nodded miserably, but just then Bob came past their trees. "Say one word and I'll knock you down." He strolled back to the shed for another crate.

The children had only picked a few boxes of cherries, when Mr. Bailey called them. "You were the last ones here last night. You knew we had cherries outside the shed. Bob just directed my attention to that, and that you have some extra money with you this morning."

"That's a birthday surprise for our mother. Ice cream for supper," said Jim. "We wouldn't steal."

"You're new around here. Say, where were you last night?"

Jim stuttered: "We came down to your sand shell pile to get some shells for a frame we were making for our mother."

"You gave us permission," said Ida.

"Yes, but not to hand around my place after dark. You two had better go home and not come back."

As the children walked past the shed, Bob winked his brown eye at them and laughed: "Who is talking about honesty now!" he crowed.

The rest of the week, the children worked around home.

On the next Wednesday morning Mr. Bailey came to their door, as the children were doing the breakfast dishes. "Jim and Ida, forgive me and please come to work. Bob was the thief. Last night he came again to get cherries and I caught him, and got the truth out of him about you. I should have known better, but I was so worked up I didn't think straight that morning."

"We had made up our minds to come to you and tell you," said Jim.

"I'm glad you found we were honest, but I'm sorry about Bob," said Ida.

"We'll be glad to work for you again," grinned Jim.

"Good! Here's last week's pay to make up for what you lost. I'll keep you busy all summer, Doctor Jim and Nurse Ida."

"Our prayers are answered," whispered Ida.

Her brother grinned happily and nodded.

Witnessing Through Suffering

(Lesson for July 29)

Lesson: 1 Peter 1:3-9; 5:6-11.

I. INTRODUCTION

The apostle, Peter, wrote this letter from which the Printed Text is taken to give consolation and encouragement to the Christians as they were suffering extreme persecution at the hands of the pagan Roman Empire.

During approximately 30 years from Pentecost to the burning of Rome under Nero, 64 A. D., the Christian Church has grown to enormous proportions. Historians tell us that the Christians, particularly those in governmental positions were beginning to sway the government toward righteousness in Christ.

One historian describes the burning of Rome and the results which followed to the Christians as follows:

"For six days Rome burned and half of the city was consumed. To Nero, the Roman Emperor, some attribute this fiendish act. He laid the blame on the Christians and instituted a persecution that was unspeakably horrible, but quiet in keeping with his character. Clothed with the skins of animals they were hunted to death with dogs. Others were cast into the arena to be torn to pieces by wild animals for the entertainment of thousands of spectators. Some were crucified. Some were covered with inflammable materials, and at night were set on fire to illuminate the gardens of Nero where this diabolical monster exhibited the agonies of his victims to the public, and gloated over them."

The persecution of Christians did not stop with the death of Nero. Subsequent Roman rulers carried on organized persecution of them until the time of Constantine the Great who himself became a Christian.

In every age and generation since people began to accept Christ, Christians in some parts of the world have been persecuted. Persecution exists today in some countries of the world. Some of it is initiated and carried out by people who call themselves Christians.—The Bible Student (F. W. B.).

II. HELPFUL HINTS

1. It is not by man's merit, but by the grace of God, that believers are begotten and born of the Spirit (Vs. 3).

2. Only those who by faith become heirs with Christ have reserved in heaven an inheritance for them (Vs. 4).

3. It is both through faith and the power of God that believers are kept in the will of Christ unto the end (Vs. 5).

4. Even in the midst of trouble and sorrow, there's unspeakable joy for the witnesses of Christ (Vv. 6-8).

5. The Lord Jesus Christ and salvation complete are the end of faith for Christians everywhere (Vs. 9).

6. Humble submission to the will of God will bring His exaltation and His providential care (5:6, 7).

7. The presence of the devil puts imminent danger in the way of every servant of Christ (Vs. 8).

8. Steadfast faith in the power of Christ is the most effective shield against the forces of Satan (Vs. 9).—The Bible Teacher (F. W. B.).

III. ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

1. The devil has a fairly extensive wardrobe. When it best suits his purposes, he assumes the guise of a "roaring lion." The lion roars only when he has his prey beneath his feet. He is silent when in quest for his prey. At times, the devil assumes the guise of "an angel of light!" The devil is never so pleased as when we jokingly speak of him as, "His Satanic majesty," as if he were non-existent! He will fly at us, and not flee from us unless we yield ourselves utterly to his Conqueror, the Lord Jesus!

2. The Lord Jesus Himself gave an example of humility in service when He girded Himself with a towel to perform the service of washing the feet of the disciples (comp. John 13). Pride has no chance of meeting with success: "For God resisteth the proud, and giveth grace to the humble." A proud and self-exalted Christian cannot get along very well, since God sets Himself in battle array against him; but those who are humble, obtain favor from God, and they will succeed in the Christian life. The Christian who is too great and important to serve, is too great and important for the Lord to use to any considerable degree.—The Bible Illustrator.

3. A sober, vigilant person is one who is capable of instant vivid attention. Peter says that such a state of mind should be constantly maintained, because Satan, like a hungry, roaring beast of prey, is stalking about seeking whom he may consume. See Job 1:7; 2:2. He cannot destroy those who are kept by the power of God through constant faith, but he goes about looking, seeking for those who wander away under clouds of doubt, which relaxed sobriety and vigilance. Peter offers a petition for the perfection of his readers, which is based upon the God of all grace.—The Advanced Quarterly (F. W. B.).

4. Casting all your care upon Him; for He careth for you.

It was a strange thing when, on Wednesday evening, March 1, 1950, all the members of the choir of the Baptist church in the village of Beatrice, Nebraska, were late for choir practice. Though they were usually very punctual, not one of them was on hand at the appointed time. Little things of no great consequence had interfered and had made every one of them late. Then ten minutes after practice should have begun, but before anyone had arrived, the church blew up with a tremendous explosion due to leaking gas. The walls fell outward, and the heavy roof fell down upon the floor. It would have been a miracle if anyone in the church had come through alive. But no one was there! This reveals how God can so control even the small details of life as to work out His plans.

5. Whom having not seen, ye love; in whom, though now ye see him not, yet believing, ye rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory.

Shortly before this is being written, announcement was made to a great audience in Winona Lake, Indiana, that two weeks previously Louis Zamparini had been offered a contract for fifty thousand dollars a year for five years for the telling of his amazing story centering in his forty-seven days spent upon a raft on the Pacific during the war. There was but one condition imposed: he must not say anything about Jesus Christ. He could talk about God all he desired, and the remarkable providences through which God spared his life. But Christ must not be mentioned. This was a situation in which it might have been easy to compromise. But Zamparini did not hesitate for a moment. He had been transformed through the power of Christ in October, 1949, and he could not consider any contract that interfered with his witnessing concerning Him. Instead, he is effectively bearing testimony before great crowds to what God and Christ have done.—Arnold's Commentary (1951).

A piano manufacturer sent his agent to buy wood for sounding boards. He instructed, "Buy only timber that has stood on the hilltops, for the trees that have battled with the wind and the storms have more music in them."—Sel.

A Midsummer Look at Mount Olive Junior College

W. BURKETTE RAPER, President

During the summer months work at Mount Olive Junior College, Mount Olive, North Carolina, goes on. We use these months to close out the year that has passed and make innumerable plans for the opening of school in September. At the present, four of us are working regularly here at the college and the other four members of our faculty are in summer school.

These days have given us an opportunity to seriously evaluate our college program, and we would like to share our thoughts with you. Let us look at the college from three viewpoints, its aims, accomplishments and aspirations.

Aims

"The objective of the college is to train and educate young men and women for Christian life and service, thus preparing them for useful vocations and successful living in the home, the church, the community, the nation and the world." In more specific terms, our aims are:

1. To provide a Christian college for our sons and daughters.
2. To provide an educational institution that is accredited so that the college and its students will be recognized by other institutions of higher learning.
3. To provide education and training in as many useful vocations as possible.
4. To help meet the educational needs of both laymen and ministers.
5. To provide the kind of college to which Christian parents would be glad to send their children or any young man or woman would be proud to attend.

Accomplishments

In September Mount Olive Junior College will begin its third year of operation as a junior college. At the end of two years, we can list the following accomplishments:

1. Free Will Baptists have demonstrated their confidence in and approval of Mount Olive Junior College by liberally supporting it with their gifts and prayers.
2. Enrollment at the college the second year was almost double the first year, and in September an even larger enrollment is expected.

3. Endowment funds totaling $30,000 have been appropriated for the college.
4. Modern classroom furniture, a well equipped library, science laboratory and cafeteria have been installed and paid for.
5. Our students can transfer without loss of credit to seniors colleges in our area.
6. Scholarships and loan funds have been established and no students have been refused admission for lack of funds.
7. The college has received full support of the Mount Olive community as evidenced by a recent campaign in which they pledged more than $125,000 to the college during the next five years.
8. The most vital accomplishments cannot be written on paper, but are inscribed in the lives of the students who have studied in the college.

Aspirations

Mount Olive Junior College is not content with present achievements, but firmly believes that the future belongs to the thing that can grow. We are now in the process of:

1. Adding additional faculty members to our teaching staff. (Each of our teachers has made a personal commitment of his life to Jesus Christ.)
2. Purchasing fifty acres of additional land for growth and expansion.
3. Making a master plan for our new campus that will accommodate five hundred boarding students when complete.
4. Establishing additional endowment, scholarship and loan funds.

The month of July is "Education" month. This great ministry of Christian education needs the continued prayers and liberal support of all of our people. What we have in Mount Olive Junior College is but a miniature of what we need.

Free to Church Libraries

Mount Olive Junior College, Mount Olive, North Carolina, has some extra copies of its 1955-56 annual, Olive Leaves, which it would like to distribute to Free Will Baptist churches. Any church in any state may have a copy of this attractive volume by writing the college and requesting it. There is no charge for this book to churches. Individuals who want a personal copy should enclose a check in the amount of $2.50.

When writing for a free copy for your church library, please give the name of your church. The copies on hand will be given away in the order in which requests are received. Write Mount Olive Junior College, Mount Olive, North Carolina.

MISSIONS

There may be many miles between us, but each month as we receive the Contact and mission report, also we feel very near to the college and its work.

We are doing our best to help with the Lord's work at the army chapel, and in a way we feel it's a sample of foreign mission work. Soon we'll be in charge of the Sunday school and morning worship service, plus the weekly fellowship hour. When we left the United States, we prayed for a place in God's services and He surely has answered it. We have 30 children in Sunday school now and we are so thrilled. Please pray that we may do our best in leading the children in the way of the Lord.

We trust the enclosed offering will help our state meet its quota (Missouri) and that God's work may go forward.

Truly yours,

SP. 3 & MRS. HOWARD E. FILKINS

MISSION TO BE OPENED

"Greetings in the precious name of Jesus: Will you please give me a little space in The Free Will Baptist for this notice. I opened a Free Will Baptist mission in Nashville, Tennessee, on Saturday night, June 30, 1956, preaching each night at 7:30. Thank you and God bless you.—Elder Colonel Pendleton, 170 Wharf Avenue, Nashville, Tennessee.

WANTS PASTORATE

"I have been serving churches in North Carolina for more than twenty years. I have preached the gospel to the best of my ability. During this time I have sought to move to the churches which called me to preach and have served them faithfully. I have resigned the Rocky Mount, North Carolina, Church, but my wife and I desire to continue living here. I would appreciate hearing from any church desiring a pastor within 100 miles of Rocky Mount and not requiring me to move to the community of the church. I will serve the church faithfully as I have done at other times while serving churches this way. Write R. P. Harris, 1200 Tarboro, Rocky Mount, North Carolina."—Rev. R. P. Harris.

AYDEN, NORTH CAROLINA, WEDNESDAY, JULY 25, 1956

Jacksonville, North Carolina, Free Will Baptist Church

The Jacksonville, North Carolina, Free Will Baptist Church was organized on September 15, 1943, with four charter members. This organization resulted from a revival campaign which began on July 4, 1943, by the Rev. Rashie Kennedy. The church called as its first pastor the Rev. D. W. Hansley who served the church for a number of years, and to whom a great deal of credit is due for the progress of the church.

The church membership has grown from four members to approximately 225 members. The present pastor is the Rev. Lee Whaley who came to the church in October, 1949.

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION

It was delightful to find that in the Huntington session of the National Association there was no serious disagreement which carried the seed of disruption among us. A greater spirit of unity seemed to prevail than that which has existed during recent years. In speculation upon the reason for this blessed spirit, one can find a number of reasons. We cannot say that no important issues were at stake, because the same problems faced us at this session that we had before us in other years. Perhaps some problems were more acute than they have been at other times.

Let us hope that we are growing up and becoming able to solve our problems without fighting one another. We praise the Lord that this session did not give our visitors, and even our own constituency, the idea that we were not a spiritual people. Perhaps a great deal of the credit for the harmonious session is due to the many prayers which were uttered for God to honor the session—those which were prayed before the session began and those which went up to God during the meeting, including the all-night prayer meeting at a Huntington church. And let us not forget that much praise is due the officers of the association for their splendid conduct of each session.

We should not get the idea, however, that disagreements should never be voiced in our national meetings, as well as in our meetings which are smaller in scope. If this should occur, we would become alarmed, for we would then be drifting toward a complacency which would destroy us equally as soon. If this should happen, it would indicate that the bulk of our people were not interested and had ceased to think about our progress. General enthusiasm and zeal for the cause would wane, and we would begin to lose ground in our service to our Master. So long as we can disagree on issues, be objective in pursuing our convictions and accept the outcome in each instance as the will of God for us, we are maintaining a most healthy status for continued growth in the administration of the work of our Lord.

Each one of us should be constantly reminded of the rich heritage that is his, and of the tremendous responsibilities which rest upon his shoulders. What we are as a denomination today is the gift of God which has come in honor of the sacrificial services of those who have gone before us, together with that which God has given as a result of our own labors. We are on the eve of the greatest era of progress that the denomination has ever known if we are humble enough, unselfish enough, and big enough to let God work through us to the accomplishment of His purpose for us. Furthermore, the extent of this progress will depend upon the combined contributions of all of us, as each one strives earnestly and zealously to do what he honestly feels to be best.

As we follow this procedure, we may certainly expect to encounter differences of opinion and differences in proposed plans for our guidance. These are good signs of denominational health and vigor. We sincerely commend every person or group who offered resolutions to the assembly only to find them lost by majority vote. This is true democracy at work in the denomination. The lost motions are a tribute to the interest and initiative of those sponsoring them.

Let us turn now to some significant statements from the reports from the boards and departments to the National Association.

The Executive Department reports: "... Having mentioned the Cooperative Plan earlier, let us look at it for the six-month period of July 1—December 31, 1955, which is the period covered by the financial part of this report. Our receipts for that period were nearly $14,000, which is 64% above the previous six months.

This $14,000 represented 16½% of the total denominational giving for that period.

"When these figures are considered with the fact that our Cooperative receipts for the first six months of this year are approximately 30% above the last six months of 1955, we can see the growing and enthusiastic response of our people to this program

"While we are greatly encouraged, it would be well to point out (as may be seen from the financial report) that a few states are carrying the load of this program which helps sustain the work of every department. If so few can do so much, it is hard to even imagine what a great victory could be ours if a majority of the churches would join with the few in supporting the world-wide ministry of our denomination with just 10% of their church offerings. . . ."

The Board of Home Missions reports: "... Financially, we have been 'pressed out of measure.' Perhaps we over-extended ourselves when we sent out additional mission teams last July, but we did so on the strength of a proposed budget that had been raised the year before. However, this year the story is different. Our income is off approximately 17% over last year in spite of the fact that we have spent 50% more time on the field of itineraries. In December, 1955, we were forced to negotiate a loan from our bank for $2,500, which was secured by note, signed by each member of the Home Mission Board and the promotional secretary. This loan has been repaid in full, however. . . ."

"The Home Mission Board has conducted itineraries in the following states: Missouri, Illinois, Ohio, Alabama, western North Carolina and Arkansas. In each place we met with a warm welcome and hearty response. Many of the states will not allow itineraries on a church-to-church basis since they have adopted the Cooperative Plan of Support and this has hindered us to a certain extent in raising our budget this year. . . ."

"I Know Nothing about Speculations!"

When the great scientist, Michael Faraday, lay dying, some journalists questioned him as to his speculations concerning the soul and death. "Speculations?" exclaimed the dying man in astonishment. "I know nothing about speculations! I am resting on certainties!" Faraday then quoted from Paul's letter to Timothy: "I know whom I have believed, and am persuaded that he is able to keep that which I have committed unto him against the day!"—Sel.

Jacksonville Church History

IN the early part of June, 1942, Mr. and Mrs. J. K. Rhodes discussed the spiritual need in the Jacksonville, North Carolina, area with the Rev. Rashie Kennedy, which later resulted in the organization of the Jacksonville Free Will Baptist Church. The need had resulted from the crowded conditions of this small town which only had three churches. Seeing Marines and their wives seeking spiritual help daily and such a few Christian workers to offer comfort or point them to Christ made the situation acute. Rev. Kennedy promised to come and hold an evangelistic meeting if a place could be secured.

After much praying and searching for about eleven months, an old garage was located in which the meeting could be held. The much needed repairs were made, and on July 4, 1943, the doors were thrown open and music began to pour out. This service marked the first Free Will Baptist service held in Jacksonville. At the end of the five-weeks' meeting, the Rev. D. W. Hansley was persuaded to take over the work and serve as pastor. He began in August, holding services each Sunday night, assisted by his brother, the Rev. C. B. Hansley.

On September 15, 1943, a church was organized with four charter members, most of the new converts having moved out, since they were service men and their wives.

In October it was necessary for the group to vacate the building, and after much praying God provided an old store which could be rented for $40 per month. About three months later a lot was purchased for $1,350 on which to build a church. Mr. Rhodes bought the lot and gave the church as much time as was needed to pay him back. In August, 1944, the group borrowed a tent from the North Carolina State Association and held a tent revival with the Rev. F. A. Rivenbark as the evangelist. A number of souls were saved but no one was added to the church.

As cold weather came on, Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Smith opened the doors of their home to the group as a place of worship.

Finally plans were drawn for a building, and in January, 1945, Mrs. E. D. Batten contributed $500 to begin a building fund. This and smaller contributions were spent to purchase materials, and on January 15, 1945, Mr. Hansley and Mr. Rhodes began the building. A loan was made from the Church Finance Association in the amount of $3,000 which was used to pay off the debt for the lot and the balance applied on the building.

A woman's auxiliary was organized on

REV. LEE WHALEY

February 19, 1945, with nine members. These ladies went to work immediately to try to help in the erection of the church and ministering to the needy.

The church was accepted into the Eastern Conference of North Carolina on October 25, 1945.

The building moved very slowly under the direction of Mr. Hansley who many times labored from early morning until late evening alone and without any salary. Financially it was very hard, as the membership was so small and materials hard to find on account of the shortage of materials. But God blessed in a wonderful way, and on the fifth Saturday in September, 1946, the Union Meeting held its session in the new building, using borrowed seats which were used until the pews were delivered in October.

Mr. Hansley held a revival the first week in October with souls being blessed but no new members added to the church. During this week a Sunday school was organized with eleven members.

During the first winter in the new building, services were held without heat except for a few portable heaters. This heat was not ample as there were no ceiling, petitions, plastering and only a subfloor. On November 8, 1947, a heating plant was purchased and installed.

The work grew slowly with an active league being organized October 10, 1948. The church membership had grown to approximately 30, with preaching services each fourth Sunday and each Sunday night. Mr. Hansley served the church until 1949 when he resigned to take up a work at the Ayden, North Carolina, Church.

The church called the Rev. Lee Whaley as pastor and he began his official work on the fourth Sunday in October, 1949. At that time the church went to full-time services. Mr. Whaley served the church on a salary of $15.00 per week, which was later raised to $20.00. Unable to live on such a salary, Mr. Whaley had to seek work elsewhere, working with the Wilmington News for several months. During this time Mr. and Mrs. Whaley bought the hardwood flooring for the church which was put down by volunteer labor.

During 1953 the church built three temporary Sunday school rooms in the rear of the building, and purchased a gas heating system that can be used to heat the entire church.

In January, 1954, the indebtedness of approximately $2,000 was brought to the attention on the church, with the church voting to try to pay off the indebtedness and to dedicate the church in August. This amount was raised and other contributions made which included the baptistry, the baptistry picture, the pulpit furniture, the young people's classroom furniture, the finishing of the floors and a new front door.

A men's brotherhood was organized in July, 1954, with eleven members.

The membership of the church in 1954 was 167, the league approximately 65 and the woman's auxiliary 35.

On August 29, 1954, the dedication service was held for the Jacksonville Church. A very interesting and inspiring service was rendered, the mortgage and deed of trust being presented to the board of trustees. This marked another advancement of the church.

During the year, 1955, much progress was made in the Jacksonville Church. Two young men were licensed to preach the gospel while several others answered the call to preach but have not been licensed as yet. During a successful missionary conference one couple answered the call to Korea. Also the Rev. Louis Jefferson was ordained to preach the gospel.

The church saw the need of a building program, so it voted to build a parsonage first. The property adjoining the church was purchased from Mrs. J. W. Burton at a cost of $10,000, less $2,500 she gave as a donation to the building program. On this property is a large house used as the parsonage and a small apartment house which is being rented. The house was completely renovated by the members of the church.

The present membership of the church is approximately 225. Six members are attending the Free Will Baptist Bible College in Nashville, Tennessee, studying for full-time Christian work, and six others plan to enter this fall.

FOREIGN MISSIONS

(Editor's Note: This speech, written by Miss Gayle Letchworth of Snow Hill, North Carolina, won the North Carolina Young People's Auxiliary Declamation Contest. She also delivered it at the Woman's National Auxiliary Convention at Huntington, West Virginia, winning second place in the National Declamation Contest.)

THE last words in Matthew's Gospel are Jesus' command to "... teach all nations, ..." These words read: "And Jesus came and spake unto them, saying, All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth. Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world. ..." (Matthew 28:18-20).

In the field of foreign missions much is being done, but there is so much more to do. Perhaps you have asked yourself, "Would it really be a good thing for the people of India and other far-away places to become Christians? Would they be happy after having lived in their world of weakness and sin?" The answer to both of these questions is yes. One can find very little happiness in sin; but when one is saved, the heart, spirit and soul are free from the bondage of sin. We know that these people will be happy with God, for we have His promise that if we witness to these people, they will be happy in God if they only believe when He says, "If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them" (John 13:17). Since this is true, what explanation is there for the inadequate number of missionaries? In India there are millions of unsaved souls, and yet the missionaries live from one hundred to one hundred and fifty and more miles apart. There should be at least twice as many, for in Romans 10:13-15 Paul says, "For whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved. How then shall they call on him in whom they have not believed? and how shall they believe in Him of whom they have not heard? and how shall they hear without a preacher? And how shall they preach, except they be sent? as it is written, How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace, and bring glad tidings of good things." It is tragic that so many have not heard.

A good example of this took place in Northern India. Rev. Raymond Riggs, our promotional secretary-treasurer of Foreign Missions, Dan Cronk, our missionary, and an Indian evangelist were traveling by jeep from our mission station in North India. They had already passed village after village of people who were without a gospel witness. The day was extremely hot, and it was very dusty; for there had been no rain for six months and the dust was so bad that kerchiefs were used to permit breathing. As the men rode along, they noticed an Indian man and his little boy driving eight head of cattle around in a circle. After stopping the jeep and waiting for the dust to settle, the men discovered that the two Indians were threshing rice. The heads of rice were piled on the ground, which served as the threshing floor, and the cattle were driven over the spot. Their pointed hoofs performed the threshing process. Of course the process was slow, requiring hours and hours; but eventually the straw would be raked to one side and the grain sifted from one vessel to another while the wind (or sometimes the women) fanned the chaff away.

As Mr. Riggs and his friends visited the two Indians, they talked of the crops, the weather and other common matters. Finally they asked the older Indian, "Do you know Jesus Christ as your Saviour?"

The Indian looked at the men with a blank countenance and asked, "Who is Jesus?" He had never heard the name! He was chief of his village, a village which after nineteen centuries had never heard of Christ. The people of his village are heathen because they can't help it, and because we haven't sent missionaries to his village and others like his.

You may be wondering how we can possibly undertake such a tremendous job. Well, remember God has never asked us to do anything without enabling us to do what He asks, for He has all power and is with us always. When a bulldozer with its power can level a forest, dynamite can blast a tunnel through rocks, and an atomic bomb can destroy a nation, why have we been so slow to tell about Jesus and His love when we have God's power to undergird us?

Why haven't we witnessed to these poor, wretched, sinful people? Jesus says, "But ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you: and ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judaea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth" (Acts 1:8).

We must not expect God to do everything. It is His plan for us to witness to these unsaved people and we must do our best. Christ set a good example for us when He was here on earth witnessing to all people. He gave His life that they might have a chance for life everlasting. If we fail to witness to these people, what will happen to us? What will happen to them? While we do nothing, must they suffer hopelessly in darkness, superstition and disease? As to what will happen to us, remember Christ's various cautions: Ye are my friends if ye do whatsoever I have commanded you; their blood will I require at your hands; everyone shall give an account of himself.

You cannot be Jesus' friend if you do not try to help people. When you are called to give an account of yourself, what will your excuse be when there is no excuse? Their blood will be required at our hands. Now let us ask ourselves. "Do we want this to happen?"

Jesus gave His life for the world. What are you doing for Him? The words of that beautiful hymn, "I Gave My Life for Thee," should inspire us if we let the question which it asks sink into our hearts. Listen to the words:

I gave My life for thee
My precious blood I shed;
That thou might ransom'd be
And quicken'd from the dead.
I gave, I gave My life for thee
What hast thou given for Me?
I gave, I gave My life for thee
What hast thou given for Me?

CAMP MOUNT BETHEL NEWS

T. B. Mellette, Blakely, Georgia

AS director of Camp Mount Bethel, Ashburn, Georgia, may I announce the camp is again serving the youth of the Free Will Baptist and other denominations in the state of Georgia; also we frequently have visitors from our neighboring states. As stated often before, the camp is strictly Christian with the Bible and its contents being taught with a view to give the best light possible and present the spiritual side of life.

By the time you read this, the first three sessions at Camp Mount Bethel will be history, but we especially call your attention to the two remaining sessions for the summer of 1956.

Beginning July 29, these two sessions will get underway for two weeks in succession. These sessions will be highlighted with courses being taught by the Rev. J. Blackwelder of Ayden, North Carolina, in music, both vocal and sight reading. Brother Blackwelder is a friend to the camp and takes much interest in his pupils. It is my personal opinion that we do not have a single schoolteacher to whom he is not equal. Too, the Bible will be emphasized and taught these two weeks with evangelistic services being held each day and night. During the last week, August 5-10, we will combine the singing school and the old-fashioned camp meeting. Those who are interested in this combination be sure to make your plans now to attend. We are always blessed with good fellowship and a spiritual atmosphere among those who attend camp. Yes, it is always happy days at Camp Mount Bethel.

Young people of Georgia and neighboring states, plan now to attend these two remaining sessions at Camp Mount Bethel. Your only cost will be $6.25 for board, tuition and insurance from the time you leave home until you safely return. Turner County, Georgia, operates the Turner County Hospital which is well equipped, and Ashburn has creditable doctors to take care of anyone who might become ill while at camp.

Don't miss these sessions. May we look for you?

TRUTH IS STRANGER THAN FICTION. It is strange that many Christians will go and do for the sake of a friend or relative what they will not for Christ's sake, but it is true.

It is strange how interested some Christians are in a Sunday school class if they have a boy or girl in that class, otherwise they don't seem to know that class even exists, but it is true.

It is strange how some church members stay out of Sunday school most all winter on account of colds and flu, then just as soon as summer comes and the sensationalists spread their large tents these same church members stay out of their own church and attend something they know to be wrong, but it is true.

It is strange how many people will say,

Discouragement

It was announced that the devil was going out of business and would offer all tools for sale to whoever would pay his price. On the night of the sale they were all attractively displayed, and a bad looking lot they were: malice, hatred, envy, jealousy, sensuality, deceit and all the other implements of evil were spread out each marked with its price. Apart from the rest lay a harmless looking wedge-shaped tool, much worn and priced higher than any of the others. Someone asked the devil what it was.

"That's Discouragement," was the reply. "Why do you have it priced so high?"

"Because," replied Satan, "it is more useful to me than any of the others. I can pry open and get inside a man's consciousness with that when I could not get near him with any of the other tools. When once inside I can use him in whatever way suits me best. It is so much worn because I use it with nearly everybody, as very few people yet know it belongs to me."

It hardly need be added that the devil's price for discouragement was so high it was never sold. He is still using it.

Who Wants a Bigger Rat?

Once a professor announced that he had discovered a boom food. If fed to a rat, he said, the food would cause it to grow as big as a lion. But who wants a rat the size of a lion? A rat is bad enough the size it is. It carries disease; it destroys food, and it is vicious.

We have been trying to grow bigger men. We have educated them, improved their environment, given them leisure, added to their comforts, and done many things for their benefit. But their nature needs to be changed. To educate a rat-natured man only makes a more dangerous and undesirable citizen. Men must be changed into the likeness of Christ. Then they will change the world into a Christian order.

Christ is the light for our darkness. When He gets into the life of a man, that man becomes a new creature. When the changed man gets into the life of the world, the world becomes a changed place, one governed by the spirit and teachings of Jesus Christ.—C. H. Stauffacher

"I like a church where the true gospel is preached and taught, but when, and if, they go to church they will invariably attend one where false doctrine and fables are in order, but it is true. Ah, truth is stranger than fiction.

Questions and Answers ON THE BIBLE

Conducted by J. F. BARROW

3824 Richland Avenue, Nashville 5, Tennessee

Question: Are the people who never heard of Christ responsible for their sins? Will they be lost?—Intermediate League, Salem Free Will Baptist Church, Scranton, South Carolina.

Answer: Yes, they are responsible for their sins. They are now lost and will remain lost throughout eternity unless they hear the gospel and are saved thereby. "... There is none righteous, no, not one" (Romans 3:10); "For all have sinned, and come short of the glory of God" (Romans 3:23); "... the soul that sinneth, it shall die" (Ezekiel 18:4). The above Scriptures indicate that all without exception come into this world lost and in the way of death. Jesus Christ's own words clearly indicate that he Himself is the only way to God. "... I am the way, the truth, and the life: no man cometh unto the Father, but by me" (John 14:6).

The heathen substitute idols for God and are thereby lost. The cults violate the very last warning God gives in the Bible by adding to and taking away from the precious Word. "... If any man shall add unto these things, God shall add unto him the plagues that are written in this book: And if any man shall take away from the words of the book of this prophecy, God inshall take away his part out of the book of life, and out of the holy city, and from the things which are written in this book" (Revelation 22:18, 19). Jesus alone can save. "All that ever came before me are thieves and robbers: but the sheep did not hear them. I am the door: by me if any man enter in, he shall be saved, and shall go in and out, and find pasture. The thief cometh not, but for to steal, and to kill, and to destroy: I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly. I am the good shepherd: the good shepherd giveth his life for the sheep" (John 10:8-11).

The lost can come to Jesus by no other way except through the gospel we preach. They receive the word or the gospel that is lived and preached by us who are saved. "He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life: and he that believeth not the Son shall not see life; but the wrath of God abideth on him" (John 3:36); "Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that heareth my word, and believeth on him that sent me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation; but is passed from death unto life" (John 5:24).

As the case now rests the first responsibility is upon us. We are definitely commanded to see to it that they get the gospel. Then they are responsible to believe. When we have preached and they have believed God takes the sole responsibility of forgiving their sins and of giving them eternal life. "For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Greek" (Romans 1:16); "For whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved. How then shall they call on him in whom they have not believed? and how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard? and how shall they hear without a preacher? And how shall they preach, except they be sent? as it is written, How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace, and bring glad tidings of good things!" (Romans 10:13-15). One can hardly read the great commission and other such Scriptures throughout the Bible without seeing our responsibility to God in making known His message to all who have not heard it. Each time a Christian reads God's Word prayerfully he will be impressed with the severity of God's judgment upon him if he fails in carrying out His orders. "But ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you: and ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judaea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth" (Acts 1:8); "And he said unto them, Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned" (Mark 16:15, 16), and "When I say unto the wicked, O wicked man, thou shalt surely die; if thou dost not speak to warn the wicked from his way, that wicked man shall die in his iniquity; but his blood will I require at thine hand. Nevertheless, if thou warn the wicked of his way to turn from it; if he do not turn from his way, he shall die in his iniquity; but thou hast delivered thy soul" (Ezekiel 33:8, 9).

In addition to this teaching that we are responsible to get the gospel to the heathen, it is also made clear in God's Word that all men are descendants from ancestors that once knew God's will but wilfully rejected God's way to establish their own. Read the tenth and eleventh chapters of Genesis and note how Nimrod influenced the whole world to rebel. The Bible also teaches that no heathen lives up to the light of all he knows, but that he sets up his own way against what he knows to be right. Read all of Romans 1:17-32. "Because that which may be known of God is manifest in them; for God hath shewed it unto them. For the invisible things of him from the creation of the world are clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made, even his eternal power and Godhead; so that they are without excuse" (Romans 1:19, 20).

The Bible also seems to point out a distinction between those who continue in sin in the face of much light, those that have had access to the Bible message with those who have little light, such as that which comes to the heathen through tradition, conscience and nature. "And that servant, which knew his lord's will, and prepared not himself, neither did according to his will, shall be beaten with many stripes. But he that knew not, and did commit things worthy of stripes, shall be beaten with few stripes. For unto whomsoever much is given, of him shall much be required: and to whom men have committed much, of him they will ask the more" (Luke 12:47, 48).

Both Nicodemus and the rich young ruler thought themselves to be good moral men and therefore to merit a better place than the down and out sinners, but Jesus brushed all man's goodness aside as He said, "... Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God. ... Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God" (John 3:3, 5).

There is only one reason why some are going to be saved throughout eternity and that is because they accept Christ as Saviour and sin bearer, whether they live in this country, the Holy Land or any other country in the world. The only reason why many are going to be lost eternally is that they have not accepted Jesus as Lord.

The heathen who is good morally, but is an idolater has the same kind of punishment as all other idol worshipers ever though there seems to be a difference in the degree of this punishment. All the lost spend eternity in hell, or a lake of fire and brimstone. "But the fearful, and unbelieving, and the abominable, and murderers, and whoremongers, and sorcerers, and idolaters, and all liars, shall have their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone: which is the second death" (Revelation 21:8).

The Lighted Pathway

(PSALM 119:105).

REV. WILLET L. MORETZ
SWANNANOVA, N. C.

"Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom; teaching and admonishing one another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing with grace in your hearts to the Lord" (Colossians 3:16).

This verse together with the nineteenth verse of the fifth chapter of Ephesians, "Speaking to yourselves in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing and making melody in your heart to the Lord," give the direction for the entire musical program of the church. These verses were written to two churches which were, or had been, under the care of the apostle, Paul.

In this age of modernism I can think of no other factor that is contributing to the modernistic trends as are the modern songs many of our churches are insisting on using instead of the old hymns which stirred our hearts years ago. This is not a new movement. It has been growing over the years. It possibly had its beginning with the so-called holiness groups, while modernistic preaching and formal modes of worship are supposed to have had their beginning in the larger city churches where were supposed to be found the prouder, more worldly and more carnal folk. To satisfy ourselves of the truthfulness of the afore-stated facts, we only have to remember that the modern songs are written and published for only a season—generally it takes at least two a year—then they are gone, and another one has to be bought. The writers and publishers are making their living off those they can suck into their scheme. I used to have a very good friend who thus made his living. His argument was, "We have to keep up with the times." That is the exact argument of every modernist, the preacher, the carnal layman, the chorister or the choir. The modernistic trend goes far beyond the pulpit and the sermon.

My wife and I were talking the other night about one of our pastors and his services. My wife made a statement that is all too true of so many of our modern church services today. She said of the pastor under discussion, "He is a good entertainer." I do not believe that God ever called a preacher to entertain, but to preach the Word. Entertainment does not save the soul. Is it not true that the modern songs are for entertainment? I can never, never think of the Church of Christ as being a place for entertainment.

Almost forty years ago, soon after I finished Mars Hill College, I was teaching in a country school in Madison County. At that time, and in that part of the state, it was the custom to have an entertainment at the beginning of the Christmas holidays. As the principal speaker for the occasion, I asked the late Dr. R. L. Moore, president of Mars Hill College, to do the honors. Sensing the modern trend in church music, he chose to speak on that subject. I shall not soon forget some of the things he said to us—the faculty, students and citizens of the community. He said, "All songs can be listed under one of three heads. All songs appeal to some part of the human being. The types of songs can be remembered by three H's. There are those songs that sound good. You like to hear them. They are head songs. They sound good but are gone with the sound. There are songs that call for movement of the feet. You pat the time as you hear the song. They are the heel songs. These have the same effect as the dance music. But this type is rapidly creeping into our churches. Then there are the songs that lift you up to God and place you in the very presence of the heavenly choir. These are the heart songs." Then Dr. Moore spent some time cautioning those young people, who would be the leaders of the churches in a very few years, to insist on the heart songs in their worship.

Giving and Living

W. BURKETTE RAPER

"I am giving a large part of the property with which God has blessed me to the advancement of His cause, because I realize fully that all I possess is due to His never-failing goodness to me. And as a last word to my friends and relatives, I desire to commend to them the Christian religion as the only safe chart to guide them through life and the only safe refuge in time of death."

The above is from the codicil of the will of the late A. T. McCallum, of Red Springs, VI. The Mission Is to Edify and Build Up the Church (Acts 20: 28).

1. Individual members are likened unto babes (1 Peter 2:2; Ephesians 4:12; Colossians 2:6, 7).

2. Why so many "weak" and "feeble" Christians? (Acts 8: 31).

VII. The Mission Is to Proclaim the Lord's Return (Titus 2:13, 15).

1. If you "love" His appearing—you will talk of it (Hebrews 9:28; 2 Timothy 4:8; 1 Thessalonians 2:19).

2. It was preached by the early Church. (James 5:8).

CAN A CHRISTIAN SUCCESSFULLY HAVE ILL WILL TOWARD ANOTHER?

A young minister felt that he had been mistreated by another minister. Whether he had or not was no Christian reason for him to allow a "root of bitterness" to rankle in his heart. With the passing of time, he became most unChristlike in his attitude toward the other minister. How miserable and joyless the young minister became! It is always the case when a Christian has a wrong attitude toward anyone. The Holy Spirit was grieved. Although God is "slow to anger," and does not "afflict willingly," He will not "keep His anger for ever!" Finally His chastening rod fell. One Lord's Day morning, the hate-harboring young minister was told to go immediately to the emergency room of a hospital. There he saw rigid in death a little boy, dear to his heart, who had been tragically killed! His soul was whelmed in sorrow. God's voice seemed to say to him, "Are you now willing to go to that brother minister and confess your wrong attitude toward him and ask his forgiveness?" His soul was so chastened that he weepingly sobbed out, "Yes, Lord! I'll do anything to get right with You and my brother minister!" When the wrong was righted, his soul was flooded with joy, and with the peace of God, that passes all understanding, and misunderstanding, too!

North Carolina, who left his entire estate valued at $250,000 to his denomination for various benevolent causes. It can truly be said of this fine Christian gentleman, that "though dead, yet he liveth."

Life is short for most of us, whether we live to be forty, fifty, eighty or a hundred. But one way for our lives to continue on earth, even after we are gone, is to give our time and wealth to those things that are eternal. The lives of all of us have been enriched by the contributions of those who have lived before us.

As I came to the end of my high school days, I began to think about going to college. As an orphanage student, I did not have any money to assure me of a college education. But I wrote to the university I wanted to attend and inquired about financial assistance. I was advised that the college had a scholarship fund to which I could make application, and because of the scholarship I was granted I was able to obtain a college education. The scholarship was given to the college by a man who died before I was born, and yet because he gave, I received a college education. Thousands of other students who have studied at this university have likewise benefited from the gift of this gentleman. Although this benefactor is dead, because he gave he is still living.

I am sure that every serious-minded person must ask himself what influence his life will have after he is gone. One way to make our influence live on after death is to invest it in the lives of young men and women. As a denomination, Free Will Baptists have not been noted for large contributions to our denominational work. For many years we did not have very much in which to invest. As a young boy I remember hearing a fairly wealthy member of our church say that he had more than fifty thousand dollars left after he had amply provided for his children and that he did not know what to do with this money. But a new day has dawned.

During the past three years a miracle has taken place in our denomination. Mount Olive Junior College has been born, and its growth and progress are greater than we dared expect. This college offers us an opportunity to live through giving. A gift to this institution is an eternal gift, for the students who study here will someday become ministers, doctors, teachers, businessmen and women, and will enter many other noble professions.

Probably no one who reads this article will be able to give $250,000, but we can give our best. As we give to Mount Olive Junior College, we make a gift that will enable us to live in the lives of generations yet unborn.

Here are some of the ways you can make your influence and gifts eternal:

NOTES — AND — QUOTES

By J. C. Griffin

NOT THE SAYING, BUT THE DOING

"Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven. Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name? and in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works? And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you: depart from me, ye that work iniquity" (Matthew 7:21-23).

The words of Jesus certainly are true. It is a dangerous thing to substitute our will for the will of God. There are many who are doing that very thing; we see them and we talk to them. And they will tell you right along, "Well, it makes no difference; we are all headed for the same place." That no difference argument is based on man's belief.

I will admit that we are all headed for death and the grave, but some of us are headed for heaven and others are headed for hell fire. The Bible declares that "The wicked shall be turned into hell, and all the nations that forget God" (Psalm 9:17). The wicked and the righteous do not run together here on earth. The wicked do not like to assemble with the saints of God; it is not to their liking. The Word of God condemns, and we are so constituted that we do not like to be told of our condemnation.

A man said to me, "Your message burned me so that I could not sit still." It was not my message that burned, it was the Word of God that burned. "Is not my word like as a fire? saith the LORD; and like a hammer that breaketh the rock in pieces? Therefore, behold, I am against the prophets, saith the LORD, that use their tongues, and say, He saith" (Jeremiah 23:29-31). So these prophets that preach false doctrines cannot be headed for the same place as those that preach the whole truth. There must be a difference. So the doctrine, it makes no difference just so you are sincere, is not the will of God. God declares that there is a difference. "Then shall the King say unto them on his right hand, Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world" (Matthew 25:34).

It is the same Jesus who said Not every one that saith unto me Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven, who said Come ye blessed of my Father. The blessed will be those who have done the will of the Father. They have done more than just hang around and look at that which was going on and say, "I'm a well wisher to the work," or "I hope it will be all right in the end." These that are to enter into the Kingdom will have been doing things for the Lord by serving humanity in the spirit of holiness.

There is nothing that hinders more than the one who stands off and says, "Well, I am neutral; therefore, I will just look on." Christ said, "Ye are my friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you" (John 15:14). If we are His friends, Jesus says we will do what He commands. If we are not His friends, what are we? It is plainly written in the Word of God that we are then the enemies of Christ. We are counted on the side of the enemies. We stand off with the angry mob who cried, "Crucify him! We want Barabbas!"

No Neutral Ground

When there is to be an election and an office is to be filled by popular vote, each office seeker or candidate holds up his good intentions and plans and tells of the faults of the other. Sometimes the issues get so hot there are hard sayings spoken against the other fellow. Politically, I think sometimes if each one is as unfit as the other says he is, neither one is fit for the office. Mr. Jones maybe says, "I hope that he will get elected, but I will not go and vote due to the fact that I am busy with my own affairs." This attitude places Mr. Jones against the one that perhaps he would like to see elected. It is the same way when we say, "I want the church to grow; certainly I would not want to live in a community where there is no church," and then do nothing to help that church to grow. Our influence is then against the growth and welfare of the church, and we stand with those who would destroy the church. We cannot be for a thing without doing something to help the thing desired. If we do nothing for good, our work is for the bad.

"No man can serve two masters: for either he will hate the one, and love the other; or else he will hold to the one, and despise the other. Ye cannot serve God and mammon" (Matthew 6:24). Then Christ said, "For he that is not against us is on our part" (Mark 9:40).

From the words of Jesus we learn that we cannot be for Jesus and serve the devil. We are for the Lord Jesus or we are hard against the Lord. If we are for the Lord Jesus, we are for His church. If we do not accept the Lord Jesus as the Son of God and the Saviour of men, we are on the side of the enemies of Christ. We cannot be for and against. Christ is our Master, or Satan is our master. We are either saved or we are lost. We are not halfway saved. We are headed for heaven, or we are on our way to a devil's hell.

Do not kid yourself by believing that God is too good to let you be lost forever, or the doctrine, if I'm sincere I'll get to heaven. These doctrines are created by Satan, that old deceiver, and handed out to those who want to live in sin. People are swallowing a lot of that bait, hook, sinker and even the cork. Yes, the devil is a great fisherman, and he is baiting his hook now on false doctrines as never before. It does make a difference what you believe. He that believes on the Lord Jesus has life now and life in the world to come. He that rejects the plan as God has arranged rejects the way, not a way. God's way is different. Satan's way leads to damnation.

"Now we beseech you, brethren, by the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, and by our gathering together unto him, That ye be not soon shaken in mind, or be troubled, neither by spirit, nor by word, nor by letter as from us, as that the day of Christ is at hand. Let no man deceive you by any means: for that day shall not come, except there come a falling away first, and that man of sin be revealed, the son of perdition; . . . And with all deceivableness of unrighteousness in them that perish; because they received not the love of the truth, that they might be saved. And for this cause God shall send them strong delusion, that they should believe a lie: That they all might be damned who believed not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness" (2 Thessalonians 2:1-12).

Jacksonville, N. C., Church History

has recently purchased a Hammond organ as a gift to the church.

A mission was organized by the church in October, 1955, at the old Oak Grove school building located on Piney Green and Pumpkin Center roads. This mission is progressing nicely with hopes of being organized into a church in the near future.

Rev. Lee Whaley, pastor, makes the following statement: "We give all the praise and glory for our progress to our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ, who died that we might live through Him. Our prayer is that this church may continue to be a spiritual lighthouse that will shine as a beacon to the lost, tired and weary so they may come in and lift their hearts in prayer and worship unto God who said, 'Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest'" (Matthew 11:28).

STORIES

—FOR OUR—

BOYS and GIRLS

The Red Billfold

FRANCES SHIELDER

AUNT CLARA gave Sue the red billfold for her birthday and she liked it best of all her presents. It was red, Sue's favorite color, and Aunt Clara had tucked a crisp new dollar bill inside it.

Sue took her billfold to school and showed it to all her friends.

"Look what Aunt Clara gave me for my birthday!" she said proudly.

A girl named Linda Holt had the desk in front of Sue, in school. Sue wished she didn't. Linda dressed so poorly. She was clean enough, Sue had to admit, but all her dresses were old and faded, and looked made over from clothes someone else had nearly worn out. Linda's shoes were old and scuffed, too, and the leather had cracked all over.

Sue was so acutely aware of all these things about Linda that she could see nothing else. She didn't notice the shy appeal in Linda's brown eyes or the bright ribbon she always wore in her dark curly hair.

Sue went to Sunday school every Sunday and she considered herself a good Christian. But her heart had never been awakened to feeling for those less fortunate than herself. Sue failed to see Linda Holt as a person. She thought of Linda as something to be put out of the way, almost as she would shove aside a lifeless bundle of old clothing.

One day, this prompted her to ask the teacher, Miss MacIntire, to move Linda to another desk, preferably across the room. Sue couldn't understand why Miss MacIntire looked at her so severely over her spectacles.

"Linda stays where she is, Sue, and please remember she has as much right here as anyone else!"

"Well!" thought Sue. "Well! Doesn't she think I get tired of looking at Linda, of seeing those faded rags she wears, all day?"

Linda continued to sit in front of Sue, while Sue's resentment smoldered at her and at Miss MacIntire.

When Sue missed her billfold, she knew at once that Linda had taken it. What else could have happened? Sue searched her desk again, to be sure it was gone, as the last bell rang that afternoon. Then she ran to overtake Linda in the hall. Sue grasped the other girl by the arm, her fingers gripping so cruelly that Linda cried out.

"Give me my billfold, Linda!" Sue spoke through clenched teeth.

"I don't have your billfold!" Linda answered in amazement.

"I'll give you until tomorrow to give it back!" said Sue. "If you don't. I'm going to the principal and you'll be expelled from school. You are a thief! Thief! Thief!"

A group of boys and girls crowded around Sue.

"What's the matter, Sue?"

"That Linda stole my billfold!"

"Thief! Thief!" The others took up the taunting refrain and it followed Linda's small retreating form from the school-ground.

Sue wasn't too surprised when Linda didn't come to school next morning.

"She's not only a thief," she told her friends. "She's a coward too. Remember how she ran away yesterday? She just didn't have the nerve to come to school this morning and face what she did."

But Sue was surprised when Miss MacIntire called her to her desk, after school had taken up. The teacher took the red billfold from a drawer of her desk and handed it to Sue.

"Here's your billfold, Sue. Tommy Watkins found it on the playground this morning."

"On the playground!" Sue said in astonishment. "Why, I must have lost it from my pocket when I played volley ball yesterday."

Linda's empty seat haunted Sue all day. For the first time, she saw her behavior toward Linda in a clear light. She wished with all her heart for Linda to be in her accustomed place.

Why did I do it? Sue asked herself over and over, as she tried in vain to keep her mind on her lessons. She had had no reason to accuse Linda.

If my daddy and mother were poor, I would wear dresses like Linda's, too, Sue thought. If they couldn't buy me nice clothes, I wouldn't be able to help it, any more than Linda can. Oh, I've been so cruel.

Sue thought the day would never end, but it was over at last. When she reached home, she could hold back the tears no longer and she ran sobbing into her mother's arms.

Between sobs, Sue told her mother everything. When she stopped crying at last, Mrs. Callan asked gently, "What are you going to do about it, Sue?"

"Oh, Mother, do you think we could go to see Linda, right now?" Sue asked.

She caught her breath as her mother parked the car in front of Linda's house. Dreary, unpainted, it was little more than a shack. The gate swung crazily on one hinge and newspapers were stuffed in the pane of the front window, where the glass had been broken.

Linda answered their knock. When she saw Sue, she looked like a picture Sue had once seen of a frightened deer.

"I didn't take your billfold! I didn't!" she cried.

"I know you didn't, Linda," Sue said. "It was found and I've come to tell you how sorry I am."

Linda's mother was ill. She looked very pale and thin as she lay in bed in the cold bare room. That was why Linda had been absent from school.

Mrs. Holt was a widow and she and Linda had no one to help them. The mother did housework, ironing, anything she could find to do, when she was well.

Mrs. Callan promised that the ladies of her church would help with groceries and a doctor and medicine for Mrs. Holt.

"You just try to get well and don't worry about anything," she told Mrs. Holt.

"Mother, I want to do something special for Linda," Sue said, when they were in the car.

"What do you want to do?" Mrs. Callan asked.

"I want to give her one of my new dresses that I've never worn. May I, Mother? I do so want her to have something new and pretty."

"Yes, Sue. You may give her any dress you choose," said Mrs. Callan.

"And I'm going to ask her to join my Sunday school class. Do you suppose she will, Mother? Do you think she'll let me be her friend?"

"I think she will," her mother assured her.

"I'll be so good to her, if she only will. I'll try to make her forget I was ever unkind and I'll never be unkind again, to anyone."—My Pleasure.

"If the natural bread is to be received with thanksgiving, the same should also be done with the spiritual and the symbolic."—Sel.

Mrs. Bettie Reynolds

(Editor's Note: The following poem was written in remembrance of Mrs. Bettie Reynolds, by her sister, Daisy Cahoon.)

It was on the twenty-fourth of November
The day, I remember again,
When my sister was called to heaven
To ease her troubled pain.

Her headaches and her sorrows,
Were more than she could bear;
So Jesus took her from us,
To ease her worries there.

It was five o'clock that morning;
Her son with sorrow on his face,
Came to tell of his mother's death
Which only time can erase.

His face was white and lonely,
His eyes were filled with pain,
His heart was filled with sadness,
No mother now to claim.

I cried, "My God, give power;
Now must we die at last?"
To think of my dear sister,
Her fleeting life had passed.

I know that she's in heaven,
Her light is shining there
With all the angels 'round her,
No sorrow, no tears, no care.

She was so kind and gentle,
And oh, so good to me;
I know that no other,
Could be as good as she.

Her chair is still and vacant,
Her bed is empty too;
Her possessions all around us,
Bring memories anew.

The way is dark before me,
I don't know what to do;
I pray that dear Jesus
Will carry me through.

She left a husband lonely,
Two sons so dear and sweet,
Two brothers and a sister,
Again we hope to meet.

We all pray to Jesus,
That we may find the way,
And meet her again in heaven
Some bright and shining day.

The time goes on before us,
We don't know what to do;
We pray to our Saviour,
To lead us gently through.

Mr. J. Sam Harris Sr.

Funeral services for Mr. J. Sam Harris Sr. were held at Parker's Chapel Free Will Baptist Church, Pitt County, North Carolina, on Thursday, February 23, 1956. The pastor, the Rev. W. H. Willis, was assisted by the Rev. D. W. Alexander of Bethel. The burial took place in the Greenwood Cemetery, Greenville, North Carolina.

Mr. Harris spent most of his life in the community in which he died and was a retired farmer. He was married to Ida Proctor, who preceded him in death in 1946. Mr. Harris was a faithful member of Parker's Chapel Church and served as a deacon as long as his health permitted.

Surviving are a daughter, Mrs. W. H. Shinner Jr. of Belvoir; four sons, the Rev. H. L. Harris of Rockingham, J. S. Jr., J. Lyman and Ben B. Harris, all of near Greenville.

"Granddaddy" (as Mr. Harris was known by all) was a loveable man and had a great influence in the community. His advice was always accepted because he was not only well read in current events, but was deeply rooted spiritually in the Lord.

It is true that we all miss him, but we are looking forward to meeting him again in that wonderful receiving line in heaven.

W. H. WILLIS, Pastor

Mrs. Sular B. Waddell

On March 3, 1956, the death angel came and took our mother, Mrs. Sular B. Waddell, home to live with Jesus. She was 72 years old and had been in bad health for about five years. She was a faithful member of Piney Grove Free Will Baptist Church, Johnston County, North Carolina, for over 42 years.

She leaves to mourn two daughters, eight sons, twenty grandchildren, ten great grandchildren, one sister and two brothers. The funeral was conducted at the home by the Rev. James A. Evans and the Rev. Dewey Bolling, her pastor.

The family states the following:

Gone but not forgotten,
Our loss, but heaven's gain.
With the Lord to help
We shall meet again.

Daughters,
Mrs. Forest Pope and Mrs. Lee Stone

Lucy Creech Johnson

On Wednesday morning, September 14, 1955, Sister Lucy C. Johnson was visited by the death angel and taken away from her family to go to her heavenly home above. It was hard to give her up, but God knows best and saw fit to take her out of this world. She was 38 years old—so young it seems to us.

She leaves to mourn her loss her husband, Ransom V. Johnson; a daughter, Marie; a son, Ransom Jr.; her mother, Mrs. Mollie Creech; five sisters; two brothers and a host of relatives and friends.

Lucy was a member of Mt. Zion Free Will Baptist Church, Wilson County, North Carolina, and a Sunday school teacher. She was a faithful member as long as her health permitted her to be so. Her Christian testimony was a great influence and challenge to her church and community.

Her last days down here were full of pain, May her life with Jesus be heaven's gain.
We miss her very dearly here,
And if we live and God revere,
We will join hands together one day
This be His will, we pray.

Approved for Africa

Rev. Raymond Riggs

REV. AND MRS. LONNIE SPARKS

Rev. and Mrs. Lonnie Sparks, missionary candidates, have been approved for Africa. Mr. Sparks is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Sparks of Sulphur, Oklahoma. He is a graduate of Sulphur High School and the Free Will Baptist Bible College. Also he attended one year at the Murray State School of Agriculture, one semester at Oklahoma Baptist University, one semester at Oklahoma University, some work at Winona Lake School of Theology and received his M. A. degree this year from Columbia Bible College.

Mrs. Sparks is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. I. Kaminsky of Edwardsburg, Michigan. In addition to her high school education she attended South Bend College of Commerce, one year at the Free Will Baptist Bible College and one year at Columbia Bible College.

Brother Sparks served as pastor in the following churches: Wolf Free Will Baptist Church, Snomas, Oklahoma; Norman Free Will Baptist Church, Norman, Oklahoma; Marietta Free Will Baptist Church, Lyons, Georgia; and Oak Grove Free Will Baptist Church, Baxley, Georgia.

It will be necessary for this couple to study the French language enroute to our field in Africa. This perhaps will be done in Paris, France. They hope to leave in the late fall or early winter. In the meantime they are open for engagements and itinerate work in the interest of their support.

We highly recommend them to our people for your prayer and financial support. Already we are receiving funds for their account. What will you do to help these reach the unreached?

If you feel discouraged and forsaken, do something for someone else. This will help you to think of others instead of yourself.—Gospel Herald.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

1. Take out a life insurance policy and make Mount Olive Junior College the beneficiary. You can take out the policy in any amount you wish with any reputable insurance company you choose. The price of your premiums are deductible on your income tax returns. Most of us could afford a $1,000 policy.
2. Assign a life insurance policy now in effect to the college.
3. Donate some bonds or stock which you now own to the college. These would constitute an excellent endowment.
4. Give a cash donation that can be invested as a scholarship. This scholarship can be in your own name or it can be set up as a tribute to your parents or any beloved member of your family or a friend.
5. Begin a loan fund for the college. The amount to begin with can be small and can be added to from time to time as you are able. This money would be used over and over again by needy and worthy students.
6. Include the college in your will. If you have children, give the college a child's part; if you do not have children, there is no better way to invest in young lives than to help train and educate them for useful vocations and Christian living.
7. If your will is already made, add a codicil to it and provide for the college to share in the estate.

During the past year, Mount Olive Junior College has been made the recipient of the following permanent endowment funds:

1. $5,000 in stock in the Mount Olive Pickle Company, donated by Dr. C. C. Henderson, of Mount Olive, North Carolina;
2. $12,500 trust fund for the college library given by the Reverend J. C. Moye Sr., Snow Hill, North Carolina;
3. $10,000 by the Mount Olive Pickle Company to be paid at the rate of $2,000 per year;
4. $600 by the First Union Meeting of the North Carolina Western Conference with plans for $100 to be added each quarter;
5. $1,000 life insurance policy by W. Burkette Raper, (policy will be paid up in 15 years);
6. $1,000 life insurance policy by S. A. Smith (policy will be paid up in 10 years).

These endowment funds total more than $30,000; the capital of these funds is invested and only the interest is spent. But while we have made tremendous progress during the past year, we have hardly begun to reach our goal. We need, during the next year, to increase our permanent endowment funds to at least $100,000. I hope to live to see Mount Olive Junior College with an endowment fund of one million dollars. Let us remember the words of the Lord to the children of Israel: "Thou shalt remember the LORD thy God, for it is He that giveth thee power to get wealth . . ." (Deuteronomy 8:18).

I am sure that if you have read this article thus far you are interested in doing what you can to help Mount Olive Junior College in its ministry of Christian education. Write and let us know of your interest, and we will assist you in working out a plan whereby you can make a gift that will be eternal.

We have a lawyer who has volunteered to render legal service without charge to people who wish to set up endowment, scholarship or loan funds for Mount Olive Junior College. We have an insurance agent who will give his services to anyone who wishes to make the college the beneficiary of any insurance policy.

You can bless unborn generations by helping Mount Olive Junior College, and you do not have to be wealthy to help. If you are willing to help build a Christian college, write and tell us of your interest. We will call on you and help you work out a plan that will suit your circumstances.

Only that which we give is eternal. Let us leave our church stronger than we found it, and our world a better place in which to live. God used those who lived before us to bless us; may we let Him use us to bless those who will follow after us.

A Call to Christian Living

(Lesson for August 5)

Lesson: 1 Peter 4:1-11.

Golden Text: 1 Peter 1:13.

I. INTRODUCTION

This lesson follows, in logical sequence, that of last Sunday. Christian suffering, which was discussed in the last lesson and which will be continued in this, is certainly an integral part of Christian living. One cannot escape the responsibility of witnessing for the Christ who has saved him, nor the persecution and sacrifice which are the natural results of his Christian service. He who would wear the crown in eternity must bear the cross in this life.

Christian suffering is purposeful. Just as Jesus suffered and died for a purpose, even so has God ordained that Christian suffering should have a real meaning. The apostle cites a twofold reason for Christian suffering: (1) that the sufferer might cease from sin; (2) that the sufferer might be dedicated to the will of God. Through suffering for his disobedience the Christian should see the folly of living at cross purposes with God's will; his chastisement should lead him to conformity with the will of God.—The Bible Student (F. W. B.).

II. HELPFUL HINTS

1. It is only in proportion as the flesh is crucified that Christians will be able to cease from sin (Vv. 1, 2).

2. Those who profess to be saved from sin should have enough of the carnal ways of life (Vs. 3).

3. The behavior of those who are born again is strange to the people who know not the Lord (Vv. 4, 5).

4. The purpose of those of the gospel preached to those who are dead was the same as that now preached to living men (Vs. 6).

5. Since the Lord does not measure time by years, the end of all things is always at hand (Vs. 7).

6. Though love may cover sin from the gaze of men, it can never hide guilt from the eyes of the Lord (Vs. 8).

7. Hospitality that is offered with a grudging heart can profit only those for whom it is done (Vs. 9).

8. All Christians are stewards of the grace of God, though some are not faithful to their sacred charge (Vv. 10, 11). —The Bible Teacher (F. W. B.).

III. ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

1. The lesson for today has been designated as a temperance lesson, and we should take a good honest look at the condition which faces our people both young and old because of the widespread acceptance of alcoholic liquors. If we do we shall be shocked beyond measure.

And what about the standards of morality? We still profess to have them but in practice they have been practically abandoned, except in the groups who stand true to God in this matter.

2. The believer cannot and will not be satisfied with the standards set up by the lust and selfishness of fleshly men, but will want to know what is the will of God for his life. He can know that by faith and walk in it day by day.

We never tire of pointing out that God's will for us is not something narrow and galling. It is good and acceptable and perfect (Romans 12:1, 2), an altogether delightful way of life in which all the potentialities and powers of mankind are set free.—Moody Monthly.

3. The gospel preached . . . to them that are dead. Before we accept Christ, we are dead in trespasses and sins (Ephesians 2:1). Christ-rejecters, living in sinful pleasures, are dead while they live, or, rather, exist. In our spiritual deadness, we were without God and without hope in the world. We were “. . . foolish, disobedient, deceived, serving divers lusts and pleasures, living in malice and envy, hateful, and hating one another” (Titus 3:3). Then Jesus came, and quickened us into newness of life. To us, the gospel was preached. We believed it, and we became new creatures in Christ Jesus!

4. To a Scotchman, who had been a prize fighter and gambler, the gospel was preached. By the power of the gospel, he was quickened from spiritual deadness into newness of life in Christ. He became a mighty preacher and winner of souls. One night, just before he arose to speak in a certain city, someone sent an envelope up to the platform. When he opened it, he found on a piece of paper a long list of the sins and crimes he had committed in that very city. At first, he felt that he must run away. Then he changed his mind. He stood boldly and said, “Friends, I am accused of crimes and sins which I committed in this very city. I will read them to you!” One after another he read the charges. After each one he said, “I am guilty!” When he had finished the whole list, he paused for a moment, and then said, “You perhaps wonder how I dare to come and speak to you about righteousness and truth with a list of crimes like that against my name. I will tell you: ‘This is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptance, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners; of whom I am chief.’”—Bible Illustrator.

5. Judge Sam Davis Tatum of the Juvenile Domestic Relations Court of Nashville, Tennessee, writes: “The Juvenile Court over which I preside has jurisdiction over children under seventeen years of age, who have violated the law. Since June 1, 1939, I have tried approximately 4,800 cases. Of this number only twenty-nine have a regular Sunday school or church record. So far, I have not had a child in Juvenile Court whose father or mother attended either Sunday school, or church regularly!”

A boy brought up in Sunday school is seldom brought up in court!—Selected.

6. An interesting story is told in connection with the search for gold in the Klondyke: A prospecting party came upon a miner's hut. All without was as quiet as the grave. Entering the cabin they found skeletons of two men, and a large quantity of gold. In their eagerness to get it, the men forgot the early coming of winter in that northern land. One morning they awoke to find a great snowstorm upon them. Soon their little store of food was exhausted. They laid down and died midst abounding gold! Their folly was not in finding and gathering the gold, but in neglecting to provide against the coming winter. Men are not to be classed as fools who are diligent in business, and amass wealth. Their folly is in permitting these things to so occupy their time that no provision is made for the winter of death, so soon to come!

This illustration can be used effectively with Verse 7 of the lesson. People may be called out of this world at any time, so it is a sign of true wisdom to be ready for death at any moment. “. . . for if ye believe not that I am he, ye shall die in your sins” (John 8:24).

EDITORIAL

BOARD REPORTS

The last editorial began a discussion of the reports of the national boards and departments to the July session of the National Association. In that article we carried short quotes from the Executive Department and the Board of Home Missions; in this, we shall discuss other reports.

The Board of Foreign Missions reported on each of its fields of activity separately. We shall give what appears to be the significant items concerning each of these fields.

Under authorization of the board the Rev. and Mrs. Harold Stevens are surveying a territory on the Ivory Coast in Africa which has been assigned to Free Will Baptists for mission work. The Rev. and Mrs. Lonnie Sparks are the first approved missionaries for this area.

We now have seven American missionaries in Cuba plus approximately fifty native Cuban workers. These include Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Willey Jr. who have recently joined this group. Concerning this work the board says, "... We wish to express our thanks to the National League Board, to every leaguer and to all others who have helped in the Chapels for Cuba project. We believe that within a few months our goal of $10,000 will be reached."

Concerning India the board states that Miss Volena Wilson will be home on furlough in July; Miss Laura Belle Barnard will remain in India an extra year; Rev. and Mrs. Dan Cronk will continue there, together with the Hannas who have been there for several years. The board says, "... India is one of the world's largest mission fields; we must continue to pray for her millions and strive to get others in with the message of salvation."

In Japan the Rev. and Mrs. Wesley Calvery have finished their language studies and are selecting a location for work. The Rev. and Mrs. Fred Hersey are still in language school, having recently arrived on the field. In the concluding statements the board says, "... If the Lord tarries the time is at hand when we shall have missionaries on furlough every year. We certainly hope and pray that all our churches will have an open door to receive them in itinerant work and share the blessings of their ministry as well as their financial support."

The Sunday School Department is in its second year of operation with a full-time promotional secretary. The report of this board listed a comprehensive analysis of its needs and reported excellent work done by its secretary, the Rev. William Mishler. The report says:

"... With the present limited finance received, no really large-scale denominational Sunday school program can be launched. However, there has been an increase in the sale of Sunday school literature, and also the amount received from the Cooperative Program has helped to alleviate to a degree this financial pressure.

"The six-point record system has been completed and is now advertised for sale. ... Sunday school literature for the lower classes has been published and can be obtained from the Free Will Baptist Press. ..."

The National Superannuation Board has operated throughout most of the year with a full-time promotional secretary. However, in session at the recent National Association the board voted to retain the promotional secretary on a part-time basis. He is to work for the board to the extent of filling all itineraries that he may arrange with the churches. All correspondence should be sent to 3801 Richland Avenue, Nashville, Tennessee, as heretofore. The board report states, "... Each state should have a superannuation board in operation. Of the funds that come in to the state boards 75% should be kept in the state treasury to take care of the aged ministers, and 25% should be sent to the national treasurer to help pay the premiums on those who are eligible for insurance and to maintain the office."

This report shows that the secretary, Rev. K. V. Shutes, has done an excellent job, but has encountered difficulty in arranging itineraries.

The Commission on chaplains reported that Free Will Baptists do not have a single active chaplain in our armed forces, and but one on reserve status. However, the statement was made that several applications are being processed at the present time. The commission urges our ministers who can qualify as chaplains to give prayer and consideration to this field of service to Christ.

The National League Board reported that the Seventh National Wide League Conference in Greenville, North Carolina, was a great blessing. The report also called attention to the value of The Free Will Baptist League Monthly which may be secured by subscription, $1 per year, from the National League Board. It also urged all leagues to send 10% of all offerings to the board.

The Radio-Television Board reported on what other church groups were doing in this field. In citing the importance of this ministry the board gave this quotation: "When a local preacher appears on television, he will preach to more people than the aggregate of all the people who attend the church he serves for the entire year."

The Board of Publication and Literature reported that it was authorizing a reprint of the Manual for Ministers and the Treatise of Faith and Practices of Free Will Baptists. This board is also considering publishing a Free Will Baptist history.

Free Will Baptist Bible College reported successful operation during the last school year. Progress was reported in many areas. However, two paragraphs stand out in this report as significant:

"We wish to point out that our gift income was $15,000 less than our proposed budget; also that total expenditures were $40,000 less than proposed. This means that we had to operate on $15,000 less than proposed for the year, and that our over-all operation had to be curtailed $40,000.

"A close analysis of gifts from the states reveals the states that held their own in giving to the Bible College were states in which itineraries were made by representatives from the Bible College. This suggests the fact that it is still necessary for the Bible College to carry on its field work and have the privilege of making financial appeals. The board of trustees of the Bible College appeals to the National Association and to our people everywhere to keep the doors open to the Bible College so that it may be free to present its needs. ..."

Quick and Powerful

Naaman Borders, Waverly, Ohio

THE Bible does not read like any other book. When you read any other book once or twice you are ready to lay it aside, but this is not so with the Bible. The more you read it, the more you want to read it. There is something about it that brings conviction to the sinner and something that brings peace to the Christian. There is a subtlety about it that somehow gets hold upon us and we become anxious to know what it is all about. Almost every time we read it we find something new in it.

It's no wonder the Psalmist said, "Thy Word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path" (Psalm 119:105). David said that he would meditate upon it day and night, and by doing so he would be like a tree planted by the rivers of water. In Hebrews 4:12 the writer says, "For the word of God is quick, and powerful, and sharper than any twoedged sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit, and of the joints and marrow, and is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart." When there is trouble in the neighborhood and men are ready to cut each other's throats, just let someone quote a few verses of Scripture and see what a different attitude these men will have toward each other. You can settle trouble almost every time by shooting Bible at them.

There was an old minister who got a pretty good collection at his church and some bad boys waylaid him on a mountain. When the boys stopped him and demanded the money, the minister told the boys that he would first pray for them. They were so startled that when he raised from prayer the boys were gone. There is always a great power about the Word of God, and men and devils tremble when it is quoted. I usually pick up men along the road if they don't look too tough; but I once picked up a man who was very wicked. He cursed and used very bad language. I began to quote Scripture and he seemed to relent. He cursed even worse, but I kept on shooting Scripture at him until he finally wilted and told me that he was once a Christian but had fallen by the way. I kept on talking and giving him Bible until he promised he would come back to the Lord. When I put him out to go on his journey, you could see that he was ashamed of himself and that the Bible had cut him down.

There was a very wicked infidel in a certain town, and he seemed to have a lot of fun trying to torment the preachers and trying to outwit them. So when the new evangelist came to town, he told the boys that he would go to his church and corner the preacher. The preacher, as usual, came through the congregation inviting sinners to the altar. When he came to the infidel, the argument started. The infidel quoted Ingersol, Voltaire and Darwin; but the minister quoted God's Word, and in a few minutes the infidel began to wilt. On the next day after it was all over, the boys asked him how he had made out with the preacher. The infidel turned and said, "The preacher wouldn't argue with me. All he would say is what the Bible says, and you know none of us can argue against God."

God's Word is so powerful that it will cast out fear and anxiety. It will even cast out bashfulness. I have seen bashful folk come to the altar and become converted; then they would look you in the face and smile while preaching you a sermon. All their timidity was gone. They were bold as lions and harmless as doves. In fact, the Word of God is a cure-all for everything the devil can throw at us.

One time, recently, I went with a doctor in the back country to see a sick man. I sat in the car while the doctor was in the house. An old man came up to the car who was bashful and timid. I invited him to sit with me in the car and he accepted. He was so nervous I felt sorry for him. I looked around and saw a church. That gave me a chance to begin talking about churches and God's Word. I thought I'd try and see if the Bible would dissolve his timidity. In a minute's time he talked as freely as any other man. This same doctor told me that when some timid man or woman came into his office and couldn't talk for their voices quivering, he would try that same technique on them and it always worked. So, dear reader, if you are timid or if there is anything else disturbing you, just read a portion of God's Word and obey what you read as best you can; I assure you it will give you a more peaceful mind.

The greatest Man who ever lived, two thousand years ago, told us, "Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest" (Matthew 11:28). Just keep coming to Him and believing in Him with childlike faith and He will answer.

"But without faith it is impossible to please him: for he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him" (Hebrews 11:6). If you have faith as a grain of mustard seed you can remove mountains—mountains of trouble and difficulties (Matthew 17:25). I would not want to remove the mountains of dirt and rock for I would have no place to put them, but with faith any Christian can remove mountains of trouble and difficulties through Jesus Christ. "... faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen" (Hebrews 11:1).

An Infidel's Death

Altamont, that learned and defiant French infidel, made the members of his infidel club promise to come to his deathbed when they should hear he was dying. How he boasted to them that they should see him meet death boldly, without the least reliance upon the blood of Christ.

When he was about to change worlds, his club came. They said, "We have come to hear how it is with you in the dying hour." As he fixed on them a look of fear and horror, shivering and shrieking with terror, he exclaimed, "Oh, if you had one-half the mountain upon your souls that is upon mine, you would struggle with the martyr for his stake, and would bless God for a flame that is not unquenchable, for a fire that is not an everlasting fire." After uttering such language, stretching his hands above his head, and gazing upward in awful agony, he cried, "O Thou merciful but blasphemed and insulted God, hell, Hell! Hell! is a refuge from Thy frown." He then fell back on his pillow, dead.—Publisher Unknown.

Hold On to Winning Grit

Don't give up trying because the ship goes down;

Grab a spar or something—but refuse to drown.

Don't think you are dying, just because you are hit;

Smile in the face of danger and hang on to winning grit.

Some folks die too easy; they sort of fade away;

If they make a little error, they give up in dismay.

The kind of people that are needed are the ones of ready wit,

They can laugh at pain and trouble, and keep up winning grit.

Practice this for six months and be seventy-five per cent better off.—Ambrose J. Jenkins, D. D., Lit. D.

Without My Eyes

I See!

AGNES LUCAS PHILLIPS
Lucama, North Carolina

GEORGE STANHOPE felt as if he had everything; money, family prestige, social standing, good looks. He had finished college with high honors, then entered his father's well-established law firm as a junior partner. He soon married a longtime sweetheart of equal prominence, settled down in a lovely suburban home and took his place as a leader in the town's activities. He did not walk into the courtroom expecting to lose a case—he seldom did lose.

He played an above average game of golf, loved music and could appreciate the arts. He contributed generously to various charitable causes and gave without complaint.

In due time, Ellen, his wife, bore him a son, brown eyes, clack curly hair—a chip off the old block. Surely, George had the world in the palm of his hand. Everyone said so.

George did not pray. Prayer, he thought, was for the needy, the disconsolate and oppressed. George was not to be classed in this category. Yet he had no objection to those who chose a daily contact with God. He did not believe in voicing his theories of life here or in the eternal on his fellow man. He followed the philosophy of "Live and Let Live," and stopped at that.

George was busy during the April term of court. Case after case appeared, was argued, settled, and finally the court calendar was cleared. He and Ellen were packed and ready for a week's vacation. Ellen, too, felt the need of getting away from legal terms and lawyers' briefs for awhile.

Ellen finished her odds and ends of packing; then waited for the familiar sound of steps coming in the doorway.

George cleared his desk, sorted his mail and left the essential letters in the file for his stenographer's attention. He sat for a time watching the afternoon sun casting blue-gray shadows across the room through the venetian blinds. He closed his briefcase, got his hat and took the elevator downstairs. When he reached the street he paused and inhaled deeply the fresh spring air.

A spindly young boy, pale and undernourished looking, appeared as if from nowhere. He paused and spoke inquiringly, "Are you Mr. Stanhope, the lawyer man?"

George smiled down at the lad. "Yes, I am."

The boy hesitated for a moment, then said, "You sent my sister to jail. She didn't want to take those clothes. She just wanted to dress like other girls. She's a good girl and all the Mom I have now. She's got a boy friend and she wanted to look pretty for him. That's why she stole."

George felt an urge of impatience. He shrugged his shoulders. "You can't impress a boy friend—as you call your sister's beau—in stolen clothes. Doris knew she was doing wrong. She must be taught a lesson."

The boy winced. George turned and started to the car lot. Presently he heard his name called. He turned and saw the boy. Before he could speak, the contents from a glass had hit him full-face. His eyes and flesh tingled, then began to burn. He put his handkerchief to his face. His eyes smarted so terribly he held the cloth firmly against them for pressure. In his agony he heard the boy say, "Mister, this will teach you a lesson."

George stood momentarily wiping his eyes and face. When he discovered he could not see, he groped his way along the row of cars, calling for help. When someone arrived he said, "Get me to the hospital. I've had an accident."

He was in surgery for more than two hours. When he was wheeled to his room his face and head were a mask of bandage. Only the tip of his nose and mouth were visible. He was quiet, too quiet.

Ellen sat quietly by his bed, pale, shaken, puzzled. The police arrived and tried to question George. He maintained his wall of silence. Ellen pleaded with him to talk. Her pleas were of no avail. George just lay there, calm, unmoved, as if asleep.

Dr. Price came, opened the door and motioned for Ellen to go outside to see him.

"He refuses to talk, Ellen. I don't think he realizes the seriousness of this thing. George was burned with a corrosive acid. It had to be done deliberately. George must have seen the person who threw it.

He will probably be blind—or at least partially. And his face will be scarred."

Ellen dropped her head and sobbed audibly. Dr. Price put his arm about her shoulder and said, "You must get George to talk to the police."

Ellen muffled the words, "I'll try, doctor."

Day after day Ellen kept her place by her husband's bed. Nurses and doctors were in and out. George cooperated in every respect, except speech. Two weeks went by. Finally the day arrived for the bandages to be removed. Everyone was tense, anxious. Dr. Price worked slowly and cautiously. When the face was uncovered, scar tissue appeared, red and angry looking, but in the healing process. No more the eye pads were removed and the eyes cleansed. Then George was asked to open his eyes. He did so hesitantly, unseeingly.

"Do you recognize anyone, George," Dr. Price asked.

"Yes. Ellen standing by the dresser. She looks hazy, but I can see it's Ellen."

Ellen crept closer and knelt by the bed. "Thank you, God," she prayed sincerely.

That night Ellen went home and had a good night's sleep.

The next day when she went to the hospital she was baffled to find a strange young boy just leaving her husband's room. He was wearing sneakers, blue jeans and a "T" shirt. "Probably the paper boy," she thought. The boy smiled and spoke as if he had just come out.

George greeted Ellen with a grin. "Hello there. I'm glad to see you." He paused then added, "You don't know how glad I am to see you."

Ellen sat down on the bed, leaned forward and kissed her husband. "I'm happy to see you in such good spirits. I'm glad for you and myself too. Frankly, I've felt wretched these past two weeks. As our future were blotted out."

George turned serious. "Strange enough, Ellen, I haven't felt lost or uncertain. All the time I've been lying here I kept hearing Jerry's words over and over in my head."

Ellen looked puzzled. "Jerry who? What words?"

George said, "The boy you saw leaving my room. He was the one who threw the acid in my face. To teach me a lesson he said. I had just sent his sister to jail. I was a fool, Ellen. I didn't once think of the human side of her case. I was concerned with law. Because of that Jerry was hurt, cornered. He reacted as any animal who has been cornered will do. I struck back. He has been hiding in his room until today when he heard over the radio that I am not blind. He came to see me and beg my forgiveness. He insisted on going from here to the police."

Cuban Mission Team

THOMAS H. WILLEY

WE wish it could have been possible for each of you who read this article to have been along with us, Benito, Melitino, and Esteno, as we traveled from Florida to Texas, passing through seven states and making a traveling distance of six thousand miles. We have only completed half of the proposed tour to date.

Our people from north to south, from east to west, have been deeply moved as our Cuban pastors have given their testimonies and told of the great need that still is an immense challenge to prayer, to giving, and consecration of our people. Our people's prayers shall rise in great volume for us as never before, I am sure. Our first interesting experience was coming over on the ferry. We were in the midst of a storm and everyone was seasick except Melitino, Esteno and the writer. We met a group of our Christians and sympathizers from Puerto Rico one night. We are strongly convinced that we must start a Cuban Free Will Baptist Church in Miami, Florida. A great number of Cubans are in that city and numbers from our churches. Our Free Will Baptists are deeply interested in finding a church home for them in Miami.

In the first stage of the missionary tour we stopped in North Florida at Chipley, visiting two churches and moving on to

Special News Release!

RAYMOND RIGGS

The date for the Annual Missionary Conference at the Bible College in Nashville, Tennessee, has been changed to Tuesday, October 9, and Wednesday, October 10.

We had originally planned the conference for one week later, October 16 and 17. The reason for the change is due to the convening of the Cumberland Association of Free Will Baptists which includes all of the churches in and around Nashville. We are sorry for the "slip-up" and hope you will make your plans to attend the missionary conference on October 9 and 10, in the Bible College auditorium.

Texas. In Texas we attended our daughter, Barbara's, wedding. While in Texas we visited many churches.

Our return trip back to North Carolina was a two-day trip of hard driving. There we attended the Nation-Wide League Conference. This was the first reason for our visit to the States, as it is the Free Will Baptist Leagues which are sponsoring the "Chapels for Cuba" fund. At that great education center, East Carolina College, the youth of our nation gathered with representatives and delegates from many states. We were honored in having ample time given to Cuba. In this great state we visited some of the very best churches where all facilities were placed at our disposal. Every kindness has been lavished upon us. The homes of our Free Will Baptist people have been opened to us: every day has been a banquet and every meal a feast. This fellowship in these homes shall be an eternal and fragrant memory.

We were able to get into a number of our churches. St. Mary's Church at New Bern is one of the most beautiful churches in our denomination. Morehead City Church and its gracious pastor, Brother Noah Brown, gave us a great service. Then on we went to Durham and my home church, Edgemont, and Calvary, Shady Grove and Sherron Acres. How great and blessed was the fellowship with the pastors and people! Then we moved on to Ahsoskie and Scotland Neck to meet the dear Harris family. Everywhere we went there was a liberal response to the "Chapels for Cuba" fund.

Across the border in Virginia we had a wonderful week. Brother Charley Tellman's home was opened to us, and he devoted his time to making our trip a long-remembered one. We visited some great churches—Fairmount Park and Hyde Park. These churches are great progressive centers and are led by dear pastors who are loved by their people. To every church and pastor we are eternally grateful. Most of the Tidewater area faces the greatest challenge in all the United States of America. This area is amazing to me in the growth and movement of the masses of people. It was my privilege to be in the home area of my grandfather, Thomas Willey. We went on to Richmond where we were received and entertained by Brother

One Dollar Club of Alabama Seeks New Members

The Rev. Rufus Hyman submits the following information concerning the One Dollar Club of Alabama: "The Lord is blessing our cause in the state of Alabama. There are several prospective churches which are in the making and for this we are deeply grateful to our Lord.

"Among the new churches, there are some which are now in their building programs and these churches deserve our help. We hope it will be possible to give them assistance as soon as they qualify. This will actually become possible as you and other club members are faithful in responding to the need. Also, we need many times more members in the One Dollar Club than we have at the present. . . .

"The High Point Church near Leeds, Alabama, has qualified for assistance from the One Dollar Club and inasmuch as they are now in a building program, all members are requested to forward their contributions to the secretary-treasurer, Rev. Rufus Hyman, Slocumb, Alabama. Let us join our hearts together in prayer for the continued success of our beloved denomination and for the success of the gospel everywhere."

North Carolina Home Mission News

Rev. Rashie Kennedy held a week's revival recently at the Free Will Baptist Mission in Greensboro. At the close of the meeting seventeen people asked for charter membership when a church is organized. Rev. H. E. Willis, director of the work, thought it best to wait until there are more charter members before organizing a church.

Rev. Garland Teasley has been employed by the mission board to assist Mr. Willis in the state mission work. Mr. Teasley is now working in the city of Burlington with the idea of starting a church there.

Work has been done recently in Winston-Salem, and Mr. Willis was there for a service Wednesday, July 25. Contacts made in that city seem to be encouraging.

Rev. Conrad Williford has been doing some preaching at the Wilmington Mission. Reports of the work there are encouraging.

Free Will Baptist members living in any community in the state where we do not have a church should contact Rev. H. E. Willis, Box 994, Greensboro, North Carolina. Assistance will gladly be given. Offerings for the state missionary program should be sent to Rev. N. B. Barrow, Lenoir, North Carolina.

Your state mission board and state missionaries are ready to help you. Please call on them.

Mass Distribution of Bibles in Africa

Immobility is cited as one of the chief pitfalls and most serious deterrents to effective missionary work, in a recent article by Dr. Clyde Taylor of the National Association of Evangelicals. Dr. Taylor says: "We strongly suspect that in our effort to establish and stabilize evangelical missions in Africa we have, to a degree, immobilize our forces."

He goes on to say: "In Kenya, the presence of 63,000 Mau Mau in forty-five camps offers an enormous challenge with the government welcoming help to reach these almost totally illiterate Kikuyus. Yet a total of two evangelical missionaries and twelve native workers were all that could be made available for a work that may last for but two years at the most, according to the government. The end result is that the Pocket Testament League and others are going in with a literature distribution program to try and fill the gap until the misions can get there with workers, churches and Bible institutes. Thank God there are other agencies who can and will help fill the gap."

The effectiveness of Pocket Testament League's mobile campaign of mass distribution of Scriptures has already been seen in Kenya Colony. Thousands of former Mau Maus have renounced their oaths and turned to Christ. Now, careful follow-up programs are being established among converts in Kenya, and Pocket Testament League teams have extended their ministry to the Belgian Congo.

Mr. Glenn Wagner, heading up the Pocket Testament League teams in Africa, reports that the campaign is receiving invaluable support from members of the African indigenous churches. The Congo campaign is thus fulfilling a two-fold purpose: it is evangelizing enormous segments of the African population and it is providing important training in Christian work for many African Christians—the men and women who are increasingly being called upon to take up the burden of evangelizing Africa.

Alexander of Bethel, North Carolina, announces that a meeting of the Ordaining Council of the Central Conference of North Carolina Free Will Baptists will be held at the Ayden, North Carolina, Free Will Baptist Church on August 16, 1956, at 10:00 a. m. The total offering, $14.45, was sent to Mount Olive College, Mount Olive, North Carolina, to be placed in the kitchen fund.

vice and invites everyone to attend the revival.

Rev. L. E. Ballard Resigns Pastorate

The Rev. L. E. Ballard has resigned as pastor of White Oak Free Will Baptist Church, Bladenboro, North Carolina. Because of his work as state field secretary of the Sunday school convention and because of Mrs. Ballard's interests in working for Cragmont and the woman's auxiliary movement, Rev. Ballard would be glad to consider a half-time church or a church desiring to shift to full-time Sunday services, but not able to pay a full-time salary and is willing to grant certain week-time working privileges in lieu of full-time salary. The Ballards desire a church which is located in some part of the state better suited to state-wide contacts than Bladenboro. All mail should be addressed to Rev. L. E. Ballard, Box 381, Bladenboro, North Carolina.

Youth for Christ Rally Scheduled

GET READY

MISS COLLEEN MURRAY
Wilson, North Carolina

When the world has turned you down,
And there's not a friend around,
And you think there's nothing more for which to live;
If on Jesus you will call,
And surrender Him your all,
He is waiting and is ready to forgive.

Call on Him, call on Him, and remember there is not a truer friend.
He'll forgive the vilest sin, make you pure and white within;
If you'll open up your heart and let Him in.

Yes, the world is in distress,
Without peace and happiness,
And there are sins that grip our hearts with biting pain.
But the Bible teaches me,
That it will not always be;
Jesus Christ is coming back to earth again.

When He comes back again, will you meet
Him, or on earth will you remain?
If you have an unclean slate, talk with God and get it straight,
And be ready when He comes to earth again.

Dead End!

These are days when men and women are asking themselves: "What is the trouble with my life?" "Why do I feel so frustrated?" We believe that one reason why so many lives are unsettled, disturbed, unhappy, is because they have reached a "Dead End." And the reason they have reached a dead end is because their life does not have a definite purpose; for there is more to living than earning money for food and shelter and clothing. After we have received food and shelter and clothing, what then? If we would avoid becoming self-centered, our lives must reach into the lives of others. One of the greatest ways of receiving and sharing at the same time is thru attendance at church. Here we receive all the spiritual blessings which are a part of the church service and at the same time share in the fellowship of others worshipping with us. Here we receive inspiration to go out and make ourselves useful in the service of our Lord. Here we receive those benefits which literally revolutionize all of our living, brighten our whole week. Have you reached a dead end? Your church will help you remove the barrier!

Questions and Answers ON THE BIBLE

Conducted by J. F. BARROW
3824 Richland Avenue, Nashville 5, Tennessee

Question: I am a lost sinner, but I don't want to be one. I am a widow, who lives alone and am leading a sinner's life. I have tried to reform, but I let others influence me to go back in the same old way. These friends who thus influence me are not to blame; I am the one due the blame. I am weak, too weak, what can I do? Please help me. I read my Bible. It's the most prized book I have.—E.L., Missouri.

Answer: Since you acknowledge that you are a sinner you have discovered and accomplished the first step in your salvation. You see yourself as God depicts you and as He declares every other unsaved person to be, for He says, "For all have sinned, and come short of the glory of God" (Romans 3:23); "All we like sheep have gone astray; we have turned every one to his own way; and the LORD hath laid on him the iniquity of us all" (Isaiah 53:6). God has provided for you, if you are sincere in that you have said above. "I came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance" (Luke 5:32). Compare Matthew 9:13; Mark 2:17; Luke 18:10-14. After you have discovered and sincerely acknowledged your sins, you should heed God's warnings. "Behold, all souls are mine; as the soul of the father, so also the soul of the son is mine: the soul that sinneth, it shall die" (Ezekiel 18:4).

God tells us in His Word that He has provided for sinners' needs and He also tells us how to appropriate that which He has provided. "Look unto me, and be ye saved, all the ends of the earth: for I am God, and there is none else" (Isaiah 45:22); "... Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved, and thy house" (Acts 16:31); "He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life: and he that believeth not the Son shall not see life; but the wrath of God abideth on him" (John 3:36), also "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned" (Mark 16:16).

If a person is sincere in following the above instructions he will have sincerely confessed and forsaken his sins and have thereby become a Christian; he will be saved from his sins. This initial confession which brings him into the Christian life is not sufficient for proper growth, however, but he must continue to live for Christ by walking in the light of God's Word and daily or constantly confessing each sin. "He that covereth his sins shall not prosper: but whoso confesseth and forsaketh them shall have mercy" (Proverbs 28:13); "But if we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin. If we say that we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us. If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness" (1 John 1:7-9).

God promises to enable you to overcome if you only conform. "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me. . . . But my God shall supply all your need according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus" (Philippians 4:13, 19).

He enables one by the use of His word. You say you read the Bible. Just accept its teachings as you would accept a gift from a friend. Suppose some friend would write and in the letter he addressed to you enclose a beautiful expensive ring and you were to throw it aside and say, "Oh! It was not meant for me." You would not benefit by the generous gift of such a friend. On the other hand, knowledge of your behavior would insult or hurt your friend. However, if you were to accept, appreciate and use the ring as your own, you would both enjoy it and at the same time honor and please your friend. God has written you and me a wonderful letter in the form of our Bible. I have read it and believed it and accepted His most precious gift, the Lord Jesus Christ, and am enjoying Him. You have read the Bible, but at the time of your question flung the gift back in God's face. Now the thing for you to do is to reconsider, accept, appropriate and enjoy this wonderful gift through all eternity. "For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life" (John 3:16).

If you believe the Bible you will trust Christ. "Wherefore he is able also to save them to the uttermost that come unto God by him, seeing he ever liveth to make intercession for them" (Hebrews 7:25).

When we are saved the Bible keeps us informed or illuminated so that we may walk or continue in the Christian way with-

Cragmonters Reunite In Jacksonville

BETTY Y. CRAFT

ON Sunday, July 22, the boys and girls who attended the two recent youth conferences at Cragmont Assembly, Black Mountain, North Carolina, met at the Jacksonville, North Carolina, Free Will Baptist Church for a Cragmont Rally.

The Rev. D. L. Whaley, pastor of the church, held the morning service. His message, "Multitudes in the Valley of Decision," challenged us to be missionaries and to have love for the lost heathens. Three testimonies were given by Cragmonters, and a quartet sang "What a Friend We Have in Jesus." Our hearts were greatly blessed during this service which was broadcast over the radio station, WLAS.

After a picnic lunch we reassembled in the church where Mrs. L. E. Ballard led us in "pop corn" testimonies. Young and old alike, with the love of God beaming in their faces, stood up and testified what the Lord had done for them and what He meant to them. An offering of $43 was taken up for the expansion of Cragmont.

The Rev. Willie Justice, a student of the Free Will Baptist Bible College, Nashville, Tennessee, brought the afternoon message which stirred the hearts of all the young people present. Many of the young people went to the altar during the invitation to rededicate their lives, and saying in their hearts, "I'll go where you want me to go, dear Lord." The afternoon rally was closed with a baptismal service in the church baptistry.

Services were held in the hospital and jail later. I had the joy of seeing two people accept Christ as their Saviour at the jail service. I can truly say God blessed my heart during this Cragmont Rally, and I wish everyone could have attended. I would like to challenge all Free Will Baptists to give money to Cragmont for it is badly needed, to send the young people of our churches to Cragmont and, above all else, to pray for it. God will surely bless you.

out stumbling or faltering. "Thy word have I hid in mine heart, that I might not sin against thee. . . . Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path" (Psalm 119:11, 105).

Then instead of those friends being able to influence you in the wrong way you will attract them to the right way. "Ye are the light of the world. A city that is set on a hill cannot be hid. . . . Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven" (Matthew 5:14, 16).

The Lighted Pathway

Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path
(PSALM 119:105).

REV. WILLET L. MORETZ
SWANNANOVA, N. C.

"Sing unto the LORD; for he hath done excellent things: . . ." (Isaiah 12:5).

The musical program of the church is of such importance that the apostle, Paul, put it on the same level with preaching and praying in our church services. We find this to be true by a careful and prayerful study of the 14th chapter of 1 Corinthians. I will quote two verses to give some idea of what I mean. Verse 15 says, "What is it then? I will pray with the spirit, and I will pray with the understanding also: I will sing with the spirit, and I will sing with the understanding also." While in Verse 19 we read, "Yet in the church I had rather speak five words with my understanding, that by my voice I might teach others also, than ten thousand words in an unknown tongue." It is the teaching of the Bible that "And whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God and the Father by him" (Colossians 3:17). These words of Paul follow the verse used last week as our text which gives directions as to the kind of songs to be used and the purpose for using them. If our preaching or singing is for any other purpose than to glorify God, it is in vain. The text says, Sing unto the LORD. Would you take time to look up in your Bible the great number of times in which that or a similar expression is used? Many times they are given as commands.

I commend a careful study of the splendid editorial, "Church Music," by Rev. J. O. Fort, in the of June 20, 1956, issue of The Free Will Baptist. This is one of the best I have ever read, and I commend it to all who are concerned about the kind of music to be used in our church services. The teachings of this editorial when known and practiced will increase the spiritual life of any church. Try it.

In the July-August issue of the Idea-Kit of practical helps for ministers is given a proclamation for "National Hymnbook Restoration Day." After a number of whereases the proclamation contains the following curt paragraphs:

Now, therefore, I, one of the few hymnbooks remaining in the church, do proclaim the next Sunday of this calendar year as "National Hymnbook Restoration Day" in every town, and call upon the people to arm themselves with displaced hymnbooks and, like a mighty army, enter the portals of every church and take part in such appropriate ceremonies to honor and commemorate the restoration of hymnbooks to their rightful and dedicated destiny.

In testimony whereof, I have hereto set my hand and caused to be affixed in the conscience of every congregation . . .

A number of years ago it was complained that the publishers of the hymnbooks of the larger denominations were omitting the blood songs. For about the last almost twenty years we have used various hymnals exclusively in the churches I have had the privilege of pastoring, and I have not found that accusation to be true. On the contrary, if I want a song about the redemptive power of the blood of Christ I will go to the hymnbook instead of to the modernistic, fast, seasonal, money-making book.

Let's restore and keep the songs that will glorify God and stir the hearts of the people in our church services.

"And they sing the song of Moses the servant of God, and the song of the Lamb, saying, Great and marvellous are thy works, Lord God Almighty; just and true are thy ways, thou King of saints" (Revelation 15:3).

Complained one of Mr. Moody's students, "Mr. Moody, nothing turns up!" Replied practical Moody, "Go out, young man, and turn something up!"—Gospel Herald.

1. Then you must love God's Word (1 Corinthians 3:1-3; 1 Peter 2:1, 2).
2. You ought to go to your church (Hebrews 10:25).
3. You must have understanding (Galatians 1:6; Titus 1:14).
4. You need the spiritual life (1 Corinthians 2:13-15).
5. You must have a consecrated life (Colossians 3:5-10).
6. You will try to win others to Christ (Romans 10:9-11).
7. You will support the work gladly (1 Corinthians 16:2; 2 Corinthians 9:7; Proverbs 3:9).

"Where the will of God and the will of the flesh are in conflict there will be rough water, and if the flesh does not yield to the Spirit there must follow the painful breaking up of hopes and expectations." "Walk in the path of obedience, oblivious of consequences."—Sel.

"It is the believer's privilege and duty to move forward and upward day by day. 'But grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ' (2 Peter 3:18). It is a constant growing relation to Christ. To cease to grow in grace is to cease to live for God."—Sel.

TOO MUCH MIXED UP

"The church has become so worldly and the world has become so churchly that you can hardly tell which is which," said the Rev. Willard C. Day in a wonderful message delivered at the National Association of Free Will Baptists which convened at the City Auditorium in Huntington, West Virginia, the week of July 9.

We heartily agree with Brother Day as to the world and the church as man sees it; but when we get to the real church, the body of the Lord Jesus, as God the Father sees it, there is a vast difference.

There is a story of a man who went north to work in the lumber woods, who was asked on his return, "How did you get along with those lumberjacks with your religious belief?" The answer came back, "They did not find out I was a Christian." It is a fact that so many people live so much in the world that you cannot tell whether they are church members or not. But let me repeat, there is a difference. If one is a born again child of God, he belongs to the Kingdom of God. He is not a tare, nor a bad fish, but a member of the body of Christ.

I Go to Church Sunday Nights

Recently, I came across an article entitled, "I Go to Church Sunday Nights." I found this article on my desk and I do not know where it came from nor by whom it was sent. There was no date nor any clue to give evidence of its author or sender. There are five reasons why the writer says that he goes to church on Sunday nights; I am giving them since I think they are very much needed in these days:

"First—I go to church on Sunday nights because when I was saved I united with the church and I promised, according to the church covenant, to attend the services of my church. If I do not attend, unless provisionally hindered, I break that covenant.

"Second—I go to church on Sunday nights because I have an appointment with Jesus in His church that I must keep. If I am not there He is disappointed" (I disagree with the writer on the disappointment statement. I do not believe that Jesus can be disappointed in us. He knows what we are and what will be; therefore, He knows the filmy excuses man makes for not going to church. He knows who will be there and He knows who will stay at home, go to the movies, sit and look at television, or who will have too much beer or whiskey under his shirt to go. So as I see it, we do not disappoint Jesus.)

"Third—I go to church on Sunday nights because I love lost souls, and I want to be present on Sunday nights with my fellow Christians to help win the lost to Christ. When our churches are filled on Sunday nights with Spirit-filled Christians, the lost will be saved. We say the unsaved people will not come to church. How can we expect them to come when the church member's won't come?

"Fourth—I go to church on Sunday nights because I want to see the doors of the church kept open. Each time I am absent I am casting my vote to close the doors of the church. How many times have you voted to close the doors of the church? The doors of the church will remain open only as long as the members come on Sunday nights. You don't want to live in a city of no churches. But what are you doing to keep them open on Sunday nights?

"Fifth—I go to church on Sunday nights because the picture shows and other places of amusement are open and I don't want anyone to question my allegiance to Christ. I do not say that all people who do not go to church on Sunday nights are at one of these places. Many of them are, but I am saying that by your absence from church on Sunday nights you may cause someone to doubt your love, loyalty and allegiance to Christ. Keep your Sundays for great things of the soul."

We have quoted the above, hoping that it may help someone to show more love for Christ and His church. "Not everyone that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven" (Matthew 7:21). Do you think that it is the will of the Father for Christians to go to church, not only on Sunday nights, but on Sunday mornings whenever possible? "Search the scriptures; for in them ye think that ye have eternal life: and they are they which testify of me. And ye will not come to me, that ye might have life. I receive not honour from men. But I know you, that ye have not the love of God in you" (John 5:39-42). So as Jesus knows what is in our hearts, He is not disappointed when we fail to stand up for His cause.

Jesus knew that He would be rejected by men; He knew that He would die on the Cross. It was no disappointment when He was condemned to die on the Cross. It was not a disappointment when Peter denied Him. It is a disgrace for us to confess that we love Him and then live after the advice of Satan.

Don't Believe in Hell-Fire

A man said, "I don't believe that there is a hell where sinners will be punished forever." It makes no difference about your unbelief; it cannot change God's Word. God's Word stands out against Satan's lies. If you want to believe Satan's lies, it is up to you. The people in the days of Noah did not believe that a flood was coming, but their unbelief did not stop one drop of water from falling. The flood came, Noah and his family went into the ark and were saved, but the unbelievers perished in the flood.

May I say again, your unbelief concerning hell-fire will not ease your pain one bit when you are called to face God and the judgment. Paul says, "And with all deceivableness of unrighteousness in them that perish; because they receive not the love of the truth, that they might be saved. And for this cause God shall send them strong delusion, that they should believe a lie: That all might be damned who believed not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness" (2 Thessalonians 2:10-12).

Christ said, "... Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned" (Mark 16:15, 16). You better believe what God says and be on safe ground, my dear friend.

Can You Ask Forgiveness?

"It is much easier to persist in the position that we have taken than to confess that we were wrong or that we said the wrong thing. To ask forgiveness will sometimes take all the manhood or womanhood there is in us. Some people will never do it. They will backslide rather than to do it. But it is better to take the humiliating way if by so doing we are restored to divine favor and to peace."—Gospel Herald.

BOYS and GIRLS

Adventure in Friendship

Lillian Morrison

YUNG SING, in black skull cap, blouse and trousers, stood on the deck of a large ocean liner as it docked in San Francisco. How peaceful this America seemed! Yung Sing had been born in Shanghai. Now he was an orphan going to live with an uncle in California. He was afraid he never could feel at home in this strange land.

How glad he was to see his uncle! Ming Sing was a truck farmer. He owned a tiny farm out in the country, but it seemed a palace to Yung Sing. He went to bed on a cot which he thought very luxurious, for at home he had slept on the floor. He decided that everyone in this land must be rich.

Next morning after breakfast he went outside. At the boundary line of Ming's farm stood a boy of his own age. Yung Sing was glad he had learned English in the mission school at Shanghai, so now he could talk to this boy.

"My name is Yung Sing," he said. "What is yours?"

The boy looked startled. "My name is James," he answered. "I knew you were coming, but I didn't suppose you could speak English."

"I attended an English mission," replied Yung Sing. "There I learned much about Jesus. Where do you go to Sunday school?"

"I sleep late Sundays," answered James. "I only go sometimes."

"Only sometimes?" asked Yung Sing puzzled. "In China I went every Sunday and we were very poor. You have so much more than we and yet you do not thank God?"

James looked at Yung Sing in surprise. James had never thought his family was particularly rich.

"I'll take you to my Sunday school tomorrow," promised James.

On Sunday the two boys walked to the tiny country church. James felt conspicuous with a Chinese boy even though Yung Sing had a new suit of American clothes. James was afraid his friends would laugh. He walked slowly so they would arrive late.

Mrs. King, the Sunday school superintendent, was tacking some Chinese pictures to a screen as the boys took their places.

The service began immediately.

"Some time ago," said Mrs. King, "you children sent some portfolios to Shanghai. The Chinese children have sent us some things in return. We were to have a missionary speak today, but we have just heard that he is ill and cannot be with us. He could tell us what all these things mean as they are in Chinese. I wish I could tell you."

Yung Sing was silent. He wanted to tell them that he came from the class that made up the portfolio, but he was shy. James raised a hand and said,

"Yung Sing just came from Shanghai this week. Perhaps he would know."

All eyes turned to Yung Sing who rose and bowed. "Yes, Teacher, our class in the mission school made them."

"How nice!" exclaimed the superintendent. "Perhaps you will step up here and tell us."

Yung Sing was the center of all eyes as he walked up to the front.

"This says, 'To the children of America from the children of Greater Shanghai, in world friendship.'"

There were postcard views of Chinese cities, drawings, funny papers. Yung Sing picked up a shuttlecock made of a piece of rounded cork with a crown of feathers. He told how the game is played in China by boys kicking the shuttlecock with the backs of their heels.

When Yung Sing finished, the superintendent said, "We are your friends in world friendship. Vacation school starts tomorrow. I hope you can come and show us how to play shuttlecock."

Yung Sing did attend the vacation school. He learned to play baseball and other games. He taught the children how to play shuttlecock.

James by now had become very friendly. "What do you know about that?" he demanded. "Here we Americans thought we knew all the best games in the world."

Yung Sing doubled over with laughter. "Ho, ho," he laughed. "Do you know, Chinese boys think they know all the good games."

James joined in Yung Sing's laughter and Yung Sing knew he would like this new country of friendly people.—Story World.

"Daddy, When Will I Know?"

HENRY L. CHISOLM

DADDY, how will I know when Jesus wants me to join the church?" my seven-year-old daughter, Patricia Anne, asked me one night after prayer meeting.

This was shortly after a two week revival meeting in our church, and she had seen a number of her friends make a public profession of their faith in Jesus and become members of our church. Patricia Anne had known about Jesus for some several years. During this time she had asked many questions about accepting Him as her personal Saviour. Through the story hour, Sunday school and family devotions she had learned the plan of salvation and what it meant to join a church. Now she felt she was ready to be a Christian and do what Jesus wanted her to do.

In answering her question I told her to be ready for God to speak to her heart. I explained that it might not be like the call to Samuel, but that God would speak and she would know.

I suppose that we were both disappointed when several months passed and Patricia Anne had made no decision.

About six months later in the Sunday morning service I saw that Patricia Anne was unusually attentive. Even though the sermon seemed to me to be about average I felt an unusual warmth in the church service.

At the beginning of the invitation hymn Patricia Anne reached up and whispered to me, "Daddy, God wants me to do it now. He told me to do it now." Then she stepped out and went to the front of the church to meet her pastor and tell him that she wanted to make a public confession of her faith in Jesus Christ.

As she reached the front I heard a sob in the back of the church. Then the sound moved out into the aisle. It was a fifty-year-old man that we had been working and praying with, for a number of years, to accept Christ as his personal Saviour. His statement to the church was that the final decision to accept Christ as his personal Saviour came when Patricia Anne marched down the aisle. That morning a total of seven people came to make a public profession of their faith in Christ. One young couple came to dedicate their lives to full-time Christian service. A father and mother came to rededicate their lives to Christ.

As we drove home from church, Patricia Anne said to me, "Daddy, I am so glad that I waited for God to tell me when to come. Maybe He used me to help tell the others it was time for them to come. Now I am going to start praying that He will use me as a missionary when I grow up."

1956 W. N. A. C. Declamation Contest

The response to the Y. P. A. and G. T. A. declamation contests this year was overwhelming, and it is with joy and humility that I write this article. I wish to congratulate every youth chairman on the field—local, district and state—who helped to make the contest at the Woman's National Auxiliary Convention the success that it was. Thank you very much for your cooperation.

There were eight Y. P. A. contestants and eight G. T. A. contestants in the two contests. The Y. P. A. contestants were as follows: Annette Cox, Missouri, first place winner; Gayle Faye Letchworth, North Carolina, second place winner; Peggy Seay, Alabama; Betty Jean Robinson, South Carolina; Peggy Eubanks, Georgia; Juanita Deuell, Virginia; Bonnie Pierce, Mississippi;

Iva Jean Reed, Tennessee. The G. T. A. contestants were as follows: Robert Bryon, Virginia, first place winner; Barbara Allen, South Carolina, second place winner; Ruth Hutton, Alabama; Kenneth Ray Smith, North Carolina; Brenda Houston, Georgia; Joyce Mounce, Oklahoma; Jaqueline Dalton, Michigan. The winner of the Y. P. A. essay contest this year was Carolyn Lee of North Carolina; the winner of the G. T. A. essay contest was Larry Denham of South Carolina.

The interest among the youth of our churches is growing and certainly presents a challenge to the woman's auxiliaries. I pray that God will help us to rise to meet this challenge. If your state was not represented in the contests this year begin now to make plans and preparations for your state to be represented in the 1957 session of the Woman's National Auxiliary Convention at Birmingham, Alabama.

Final Call for Woman's Conference

Attention North Carolina Auxiliary Members: This is a final call to our women of North Carolina to rush their registrations in for the Women's Conference at Cragmont Assembly, August 13-20. At this time we are short of the number needed to make a special bus possible, but of course we hope to have a bus load. Women, let's not let the young people get too far ahead of us! They have already filled Cragmont twice, and almost enough have registered to fill the place again. Surely there are fifty or more women who can go to Cragmont for a great week of blessing.

Registration is simple. Just send your name, full mailing address, information regarding where you will contact the bus (New Bern, Kinston, Wilson or Raleigh), $2 for registration fee and $5 as a deposit on bus fare. Then you'll be all lined up for a week of wonderful blessing.

Auxiliaries, send one or more faithful members to Cragmont with expenses paid, not just as a reward for services rendered, but an investment in training for better service in the future. The ones you send will bring back rich blessings to you—blessings worth far more than the thirty-five or forty dollars it will cost. Address all letters to Mrs. L. E. Ballard, Box 381, Bladenboro, North Carolina.

Mrs. L. E. Ballard

Norfolk, Va.—The Woman's Auxiliary of the Hyde Park Free Will Baptist Church met June 13, at 8:00 p. m., in the home of Mrs. T. G. Wallace. Mrs. Everton, president, presided over the meeting. The program chairman, Mrs. Melton, introduced the various speakers on the program for the evening. The program was concluded by an interesting and inspiring talk by the pastor, the Rev. E. H. Overman.

The business session followed with various reports being given. With the help of the pastor, the auxiliary selected pulpit furniture for the church which is being donated to the church by the ladies. The group also voted to organize a Go-Tell Auxiliary for the young girls of the church with Mrs. Talton as the director. The meeting was dismissed with prayer by Mrs. Pierce.

asked Jerry to let me be his lawyer."

Ellen sounded angry. "George, you're insane. But for the Grace of God you would be blind. And that boy is responsible."

George spoke seriously, "Sightless, maybe, Ellen. But not blind. For two weeks I lay here in total darkness. Yet for the first time in my life I have seen. I have explored with my mind—looked and seen. What I saw was far from pretty. I've had all the luxuries of life; none of the essentials. I looked at myself. But I couldn't see a heart. Nor a soul." Turning he took Ellen's hand and said, "Ellen, I've never talked to God in my life before this happened. Now I know the meaning of prayer. The peace and happiness prayer can bring to a person." He smiled somewhat wistfully. "I prayed for Jerry, Ellen. Everyday, all day. I prayed constantly for that boy. He came today in answer to my prayers. I feel as if this is the first case I ever won. Jerry taught me that, even though I were sightless, I could still see."

Billy Melvin. The day will come when this young pastor, Billy Melvin, will be deeply appreciated among our people. His congregation responded with a very liberal offering to the "Chapels for Cuba" fund.

Brother Melvin very graciously made it possible for our Cuban pastors to visit the heart of our nation, Washington, D. C. That evening we were on the road headed for Big Stone Gap and made contact with Brother Galloway amidst the most beautiful scenery in America. We were showered with the warm affection of our people. This is a great center for our work and offers a great future.

The Fourth of July was a day of travel. It was not as I had expected, for as we traveled we had the road and towns to ourselves. Going through Pikeville and Paintsville, Kentucky, I stopped to see a dear convert of thirty years ago. We prayed together, while heaven came down to greet us as we mingled our tears alongside the Old Commisary in Justell across the river from Betsy Layne where, as a young man, I preached. God gave me a great revival there. We traveled on through Kentucky to Ohio. And what a time we had there with all those wonderful people and great pastors! And how our hearts were warmed! What a joy to see that dear old soldier, Brother Kemper, now in his eighties, but going strong, bubbling with joy, and having a big helper at his side, a young pastor. We shall eternally love you and hope to see you again. Our offering for these fine days amounted to over $400. Then we traveled on to the high point of our trip where we could look into loved faces from all over the United States and feel the warm handclasp of friends of many years.

The National Association to me was the greatest I have ever attended. There was the sweetest spirit and little expressed disagreement. We enjoyed the most courteous treatment, the deepest spiritual tone, the most missionary spirit. The procedure followed by our moderator was the most dignified and altogether most masterly in manner. I think it is agreed that the all-night prayer meeting had much to do with the spirit of the association. When we can keep our conference in prayer, we have the order of God. It was my privilege to share in worship with my dear brethren at the last service. I think we are safe to say heaven bent low and sprinkled us with a little foretaste of the joy we shall someday share in that happy land.

The missionary service of our Woman's Convention, though brief, was stirring. Our people are a missionary people. A greater group of capable, spiritual and accomplishing women cannot be found in this world.

Their conference was purely a foreign mission rally. Thank God for these wonderful women, who stand always, for the greater part, to serve. Your hearts would certainly have thrilled to see them as a body in action.

The amazing thing to me was the wonderful missionary messages by the young women in the contests sponsored by the women. They were classic in composition and delivery, and every one of them could have taken a prize. Each of these papers should be prepared in booklet form to be preserved for our people.

Certainly no group of men could have laid the groundwork for more gracious provisions for our entertainment than the men of the Tri-State Area. No one man could have carried so great a task better than our Brother Vallance of West Virginia.

Publicity was excellent. I like to make friends with policemen. The few I met were fine men and a credit to the force. They protect us in the night while we sleep; they walk cold streets. All hail to these silent sentinels of the night—they have every reason to be good Christian men.

I hope our editor will not find this report from the Cuban team too lengthy, but it only can express a very small part of our sentiment as Cuban missionaries and sponsors of world-wide missions.

Prayer and Praise Letter

July 3, 1956

Dear Christian Friend,

It hardly seems possible, but one half of the current calendar year is past and here we are starting out on the home stretch of 1956. As we do so we find only six states that have reached the halfway mark of their foreign mission quota. They are as follows: Michigan, North Carolina, Ohio, South Carolina, Tennessee and Virginia. Actually, these states are among those with the largest quotas, yet they are well out front. Congratulations to all of you who have made it possible for your state to be up to par.

Of course there are six months left to finish out our quotas, but some states will have to double their efforts and increase their giving or else come up short at the end of the year. Remember, our present missionaries must have your support, and our future expansion depends upon your giving to foreign missions.

MISSION DIRECTOR AND CUBAN PASTOR'S ITINERATE

Rev. Thomas H. Willey and three of our very fine Cuban pastors, Melitino, Benito and Estenio, are closing out an itinerary in the states in the interest of Chapels for Cuba and missions in general.

THE COOPERATIVE PROGRAM AS IT RELATES TO FOREIGN MISSIONS

Shortly after the cooperative plan of support went into effect, foreign mission funds began to take a nose dive. This was especially true in the states where the program was adopted, and apparently held up as the way to support all phases of our denominational work. Actually, the plan of support as adopted by the National Association suggests that each church give 10% (the tithe) to the cooperative fund as a minimum of their support to every department, and that each respective department be encouraged to promote its particular phase of work, and to receive designated funds as individuals, groups, or churches may feel so disposed to give. Furthermore, all ear-marked money will be sent, in full, to the department as designated by the donor.

If there is any conflict in the present plan of support it would be in those states which have adopted a cooperative plan but will not permit representatives from the various departments to promote and collect for their particular interests.

The foreign mission department, at the present, receives 22% of the cooperative funds which is a very small fraction of our expense, and of course, need. Therefore, we feel it necessary that we be given an opportunity to place the cause of foreign missions before our people and on their hearts, and that they be encouraged to support it as the Lord may lead them.

The Way of Christian Fellowship

Lesson: 1 John 1:1-10.

Golden Text: 1 John 1:7.

I. INTRODUCTION

The apostle, John, from whose writing the Printed Text for this lesson is taken, is believed to be the only one of the original Twelve Disciples who died a natural death. All the others are reported to have suffered martyrdom for the cause of Christ except Judas who fell from grace and committed suicide. Although John lived to a ripe old age, he was forced to endure around fourteen years of exile on the rocky island of Patmos. The Roman authorities who exiled him thought surely that he would die of starvation on this barren, rocky place, but God miraculously preserved his life and saw to it that he was brought back to civilization to spend his last years.—The Bible Student (F. W. B.).

II. HELPFUL HINTS

1. There can be no doubt about the manhood of Christ with those who have heard and seen and handled Him (Vs. 1).
2. Only those who have heard and seen the Lord by faith in Christ have the power to reveal His salvation to others (Vs. 2).
3. The one great desire of those who know the Lord is to help bring others into fellowship with Him (Vv. 3, 4).
4. The Word of the Lord is a message of light to those who struggle in the darkness of sin (Vs. 5).
5. There is no other way to fellowship with Christ but to walk in the light of God's Holy Word (Vs. 6).
6. As Christians walk in the gospel's light, they have fellowship with Christ and are cleansed by His blood (Vs. 7).
7. Those who know the truth of God's Word will admit their many acts of sin and their constant need of cleansing by the blood of Christ (Vv. 8, 10).—The Bible Teacher (F. W. B.).
8. But John foresaw the fact that Christians would sin in spite of all warnings against it, so he describes the process to be followed in case we do sin. It is a very simple process. We are nowhere taught in the Scriptures that we must go about in agony for a long time praying and pleading with God to forgive us, and wondering whether or not He will be gracious to us. God asks us to do something that is simple, but not very easy. "If we confess our sins." That is easy to say, but not so easy to do—J. T.

III. ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

1. The truth of God is always the target of attack by false teaching, error or unbelief. It was so in the early church. The first epistle of John was written to combat the error of the Gnostics, who professed a high level of spirituality but separated it from actual life in a way which led to sinful indulgence, even in the midst of pious profession of sanctity.

Similar philosophies today are seeking to undercut the Christian way of life and present some plausible but untrue substitute. We need clear thinking on this matter of Christian fellowship and it may be found in the lesson before us.—Moody Monthly.

Some churches today are filled with members who are guilty of the worst kind of sins. Church membership, without the new birth, will not save a poor, lost sinner.

2. Our fellowship then is eternal, made possible because the Eternal One came down to reach sinful and hopeless man with God's promised redemption. So we have fellowship with the Father and with His Son in the power and grace of the Holy Spirit, and thus are made ready for fellowship with one another.

Sadly enough, there are always those who wish to be known as God's people, but who are not willing to pay the price of real fellowship. So they present a false fellowship.

3. "God is light and in Him is no darkness at all." He is holy and as His children we are also to be holy. He makes that possible for us in Christ. Hence, it is obviously and immediately clear that those who live and walk in darkness—that is, in sin, disobedience and unbelief—are the world's most flagrant liars when they talk about fellowship with God.

This is the point at which hypocrites should look squarely at the Word which declares that they "lie and do not the truth." For them it is time for repentance and a calling out to God for His mercy.

4. "If we say that we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us." (1 John 1:8).

In these words we have the peril of Chris-tion self-deception. The child of God may deceive himself, he may lead himself astray. This is the case when the profession is made that we are free from sin. We note that John uses the words have no sin and not the words have had no sin. He is not speaking about the past life in sin, but about the present state of those who are saved and are the children of God.

Observe the word sin is in the singular, while the word sins in 1 John 1:9 is in the plural. The word sin refers to the old nature, the flesh with its evil propensities and dispositions. The word sins refers to the acts of sin, to committed sins. Sin is the root while sins are the fruit. John here reminds his readers that even though they do not walk in darkness, yet they have sinful tendencies in themselves. It is as the Apostle Paul confessed for himself, that there is no good thing in his flesh (comp. Romans 7:18).

The apostle, we observe, adds another very searching word, saying and the truth is not in us. This may be taken to mean that the truth concerning the true faith in respect to the holiness of God and the sinfulness of human nature is not in the one who denies the fact of the presence of sin. The believer who has the true spiritual apprehension of the holiness of God, will have very little difficulty about owning his own failings. If there be in us the power and energy of light, it will search the very corners of the heart and reveal the utter sinfulness of the nature of the flesh.—W. S. Hottel, D. D.

5. The picture of sin here does not relate to the unbeliever who has never known the salvation of the Lord, but to the believer. He is in the world, though not of it. In the world it is very easy to come into contact with that which defiles. And when defilement has occurred there is need of cleansing. This is one of the lessons Jesus taught by washing the disciples' feet (John 13:8-10). John, who was present on that occasion, says it is "the blood of Jesus Christ his Son," which "cleanseth us from all sin."

6. One of the beautiful words which the early preachers used was "brethren." Ananias, the preacher at Damascus, called Saul, "Brother Saul." Peter referred to the six men who went with him on his mission to Caesarea to the house of Cornelius as "six brethren." Undoubtedly when Cornelius was baptized with the Holy Spirit, Peter called him "Brother Cornelius." It is the word which Paul, Peter and John used constantly in their writings. For instance in the third chapter of 1 John in which we are reading today, in the thirteenth verse, we read, "Marvel not, my brethren, if the world hate you." Biblical usage included "sisters" also: Paul called Phebe "our sister" (Romans 16:1).

College Plans Approved At National Association

The National Association of Free Will Baptists in Huntington, West Virginia, heartily approved the plans and proposals of Free Will Baptist Bible College, Nashville, Tennessee, in the construction of two new buildings in the near future.

The construction costs are estimated to run in the neighborhood of $200,000. One building will house a new dining hall, kitchen and students' lounge. The other building will house administrative offices, library, classrooms and teachers' offices.

Plans for raising the funds will be announced later. A building committee from the college board of trustees will meet in the near future and work out details of building plans as well as set the financial campaign in motion.

The building committee is composed of Rev. James Miller, chairman, Kinston; Rev. F. B. Cherry, Greenville; and Rev. L. R. Ennis, Goldsboro. All are North Carolina pastors.

Our present plan gives us this privilege, if we are permitted to carry it through. I, personally, feel that even if we had sufficient funds from the cooperative program to operate the department, we should still have the opportunity to promote and collect for our particular interests, and that each church be encouraged to support as they might desire. Any program to the contrary is an infringement on individual rights and not in keeping with Free Will Baptist principles.

SUMMER SLUMP

It seems that every summer there is a slowing down of giving to foreign missions. We are thankful for all of you who continue your gifts, even during the summer slump.

PRAY FOR MISS WILSON

Miss Volena Wilson will leave India this month enroute to America for furlough. She plans to travel by plane so pray definitely for her safety.

Miss Esther Ruchle, approved missionary candidate, undergoes surgery this month. Please pray for her speedy recovery.

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION

By the time you read this report our 1956 session of the National Association will be history. We are all praying for the will of the Lord to be done. It has been a great year! Actually, the greatest in our history! To all of you who have made it so, we say, "Thanks and God bless you, everyone."

Only this hour is mine, Lord;
May it be used for Thee
May every passing moment
Count for eternity.

When a Child Is Born into The World, the Parents Should:

1. Regard the child as having entered upon an immortal existence.
2. Heartily dedicate him to God, as Hannah did Samuel.
3. Pray for him, and teach him to pray.
4. Store his mind with the truth of God's Word.
5. Set him a Christian example.
6. Train him to habits of obedience, order, generosity, industry and economy.
7. Check the first buddings of evil, and cherish the first indications of right feeling.
8. Rest not until his heart is given to Christ.

FACTS AND FIGURES

In the last two issues this column has carried information and excerpts from the board and department reports to the last session of the National Association. This article will carry facts and figures as we have gathered them from the financial statements of these reports. Then we shall discuss proposed plans for this year as they were authorized by the body in session.

It might be of interest for us to note, first of all, the extent to which funds came in during the July 1—December 31, 1955, period in comparison with the various budgets for that period. One financial statement, that of Free Will Baptist Bible College, represents an entire year. However, this should not materially alter the picture because that budget was also given for the full year.

The figures show that only the Executive Department and the Sunday School Department received more money during the period than their budgets called for; all the other boards and departments failed to receive funds equal to the amount of their budgets, some falling so far short that their operations had to be seriously curtailed.

According to the reports, here are the figures:

The Executive Department received $19,893.73, which represents $5,593.73 or approximately 39% more than its proposed budget of $14,300.00.

The Board of Foreign Missions received the sum of $42,280.80, which represents $2,719.20, or approximately 6%, less than its proposed budget. This is the case despite the fact the board has sent additional missionaries to the field during the year; still others have gone since the period covered by this report, and some are scheduled to go in the near future.

During this period the Board of Home Missions received $11,637.19, which represents $5,462.81 less than the proposed budget of $17,100.00. This board has also placed additional missionary teams on the field during the period.

The Sunday School Department received $5,499.90 during the period, which represents $969.90, or a little over 21%, more than its budget of $4,530.00. The fact that this department received more than it anticipated is refreshing in view of the fact that its program is young and needs to expand its services.

The Superannuation Board suffered worse than any other during the period. It received $3,085.23 of its $14,020.00 budget. This made a shortage of $10,934.77, or 78%.

The League Board received $2,421.67 of its $2,750.00 budget, showing a shortage of $328.33, or around 12%.

Free Will Baptist Bible College received $115,458.69 during the year of its proposed $140,850.00 budget. This shows a shortage of $25,391.31, or almost 11%.

These figures indicate several facts which we believe ought to be observed. To us they tell a pretty plain story. Let us notice:

(1) The boards and departments evidently did a good job making adjustments in their operation in the light of these shortages. This is proved by the fact that no board or department reported any deficit which was not overcome by the time the National Association met. The boards and department heads should be highly commended for having exercised this splendid foresight and having made adjustments in time to avert placing the denomination miserably in debt.

(2) We ought not to want things for which we are either unable or unwilling to pay. The fact remains that every one of these budgets was adopted by the 1955 session of the National Association. They were all discussed so that every minister, delegate and visitor could understand what the departments and boards planned to do. What we did was to approve the budget at the National Association, and to go home not to work earnestly enough and give liberally enough to reach our goals. What we ought to do is to vote against those measures, programs and budgets of which we disapprove when the reports are made, rather than waiting to disapprove of them by failing to support them on the field.

If we want to place more foreign missionaries on the fields which we already have and open up new fields, we must increase our giving to foreign missions. If we want new churches organized in all the states, in Mexico and Alaska, we must increase our giving to home missions. If we want to enlarge the facilities of the Bible College so that more of our young people can get an education there, we must increase our gifts to the college. So it is with all other phases of our work. Let us either not want so much or give more with which to purchase it.

(3) The churches in all the states must keep the door open for the representatives of all the boards. Offerings through the Cooperative Plan of Support increased considerably during the period, but these offerings represented only 16½% of the total giving for the period. Perhaps the time may come when our whole denominational program may be financed through this channel, but we cannot see that time in the immediate future, not during the next year at least. Churches that refuse to have representatives from the various boards visit them lose the blessing of information and inspiration which they bring. Let us continue to permit these representatives to help raise the total denominational budget until the Cooperative Plan can supply the need.

You will be receiving publicity matter shortly about two special denominational drives for funds: a $5,000 drive to pay off the indebtedness on the Headquarters building, and a $200,000 drive to enlarge the Bible College. These two worthy causes should claim our attention and support. By the grace of our Lord we can raise the money for both these causes and also supply the funds to meet the needs of all the boards and departments during the year.

God puts aside the iron and takes up the worm to thresh the mountain. That is God's way. His thoughts are not our thoughts. His plans are not ours.—D. L. Moody.

We hope you have come to realize and believe that God means everything that He allows to come into your life for your highest good.

"I Was a Night Club Entertainer . . ."

BOB MANDERSON, Evangelist,
Director, Bethany Acres, Inc.,
Fallston, Maryland

I WAS a night club entertainer; a sinner of the worst kind. Not only was I living a wretched life of sin myself, but I was leading others into the same life.

My Dad was a minister. There were three boys in our family, and although we heard the Word of God continually, I had no use for it. My mind was made up at an early age that I was going on the stage. Dad and Mom spent many hours reasoning with me and praying for me, but still I was determined that I would go to any extreme to realize my ambition. Undoubtedly I planned my own future, ran away from home to join a show, and continued in the theatrical profession.

It wasn't long before I began to drink—just a little at first, but then I found that I craved more and more to satisfy my frustrations. My conscience bothered me occasionally, but I tried to drown it out with increased imbibing, finally reaching the point where I couldn't work without a constant menu of liquor.

Dad, Mom and my brother continued praying for me, and God spoke to me at different times, but I turned a deaf ear to His voice. Continuing on my merry way, I traveled all over the country performing my act, but going deeper and deeper into sin all the time. Even though it seemed hopeless (my parents had both passed on), my brother continued to pray that God would save me.

Then things began to happen. I had a nervous breakdown, and suffered convulsions which frequently lasted all day. Not willing to give in, I planned to continue my work in night clubs, but each time I tried to fill an engagement, an accident occurred. First I broke my shoulder, then I wrenched my hip, and finally I was fired from every job.

But God was beginning to speak to me. I realized that I was on the road to Hell, and as long as I pursued the life I was living, I would have to suffer the consequences. But I was stubborn, still refusing the Lord, continually drinking to drown my thoughts.

I started back but this time I was hit by a car. After recovery and again on my way to the same job I was struck by a streetcar. This hospitalized me for some time, giving me leisure to ponder over my condition. I knew there was only one end for me if I continued to turn a deaf ear to the Lord. Doctors had pronounced me an incurable alcoholic. They had said there was nothing for me to do but suffer the consequences because I was beyond repair. I asked the Lord to help me find relief from the drinking habit, but it was a selfish prayer for I didn't want Him in a personal way.

For a period of about three years my troubles ceased. Jobs increased and I went along with my bookings without incident. Although I still had my conscience to deal with, I drank to keep ahead of it.

Finally I came to Baltimore to play in the night clubs and arrangements were being made for me to open within a week of the time I arrived. That Sunday morning I was stricken with a terrible fear—I didn't know what it was, but thought it was because I needed more liquor. While sitting in the hotel a bit of Scripture came to me: "For what is a man profited, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul? or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?" (Matthew 16:26). This repeated itself in my mind as though someone was hammering it into my brain. I couldn't forget it. Leaving the hotel for a walk I passed a church which was preparing for its evening service. Almost as if by a magnet, I was drawn into that church, and sat in the last row. When the minister read his text, the same one which came to my mind in the hotel room, I knew that God was dealing with me again. As the invitation was given to accept Christ as one's personal Saviour, I went forward and asked the Lord to forgive me. As I left the church another pastor asked if he could walk with me. He explained the way of salvation and the necessity of full surrender to God. Although I didn't understand how I was going to give up alcohol or what I would do for work, he urged me to rely fully on the Lord, and He would do the rest. That night my life was changed. I went to my room and sincerely prayed to God from my heart. God answered my prayer, for that night the Lord saved me and completely removed my desire for liquor. "Therefore if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature: old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new" (2 Corinthians 5:17). Immediately God began to reveal Himself to me through His Word. In answer to prayer I was led into full-time service at the Helping Up mission in Baltimore, with a real opportunity to proclaim the Gospel of Christ, then on to other fields of service, and eventually into a field of evangelism, where I am today. Certainly the day of miracles is not passed. The Lord performed a miracle in my life, and I have found Him practical and sufficient in every sense of the word. God did answer the prayers of my father and mother, so Christian, don't be discouraged, no matter what your problem. God does hear and answer the petitions of a sincere heart.

WHAT IS YOUR RELATIONSHIP TO GOD?
ARE YOU SAVED?
WHERE WILL YOU SPEND ETERNITY?

By simply trusting Christ as your personal Saviour you will be saved from the penalty and power of sin. Your portion will be sins forgiven and life eternal.

What Christ did for me, He can and will do for you also, if you will let Him.

Will you not surrender yourself to Him? Let Him take over your life, and you will find you have entered into peace and joy such as you have never known.—American Tract Society.

Short or Tall

The new preacher who was sent to this particular church was a little bit like Zaccheus, he was very short, or "little of stature" (Luke 19:3).

The preacher who sent him there was later apologizing to one of the elders for having sent them such a short man to be their pastor.

"Oh, never mind that," replied the elder. "It does not matter how short he is, just so he is tall enough to reach Heaven when he gets on his knees!"—Gospel Herald.

The Church of Tomorrow

THE FIRST JUNE CONFERENCE GROUP

LOY EVERETTE BALLARD

THE pattern of the church of tomorrow is gradually shaping up in the lives of the boys and girls of today, and youth conferences, league camps, youth rallies and other means which bring young people together for Christian fellowship, study, wholesome recreation and mutual Christian endeavor are playing their part in the development of that church.

Here in the state of North Carolina, Cragmont Assembly, nestling among the hills near Black Mountain, is having an ever-increasing influence in the development of our young people spiritually.

This is the fourth year of youth conferences sponsored at Cragmont by the North Carolina Sunday School Convention. The first year we had two conferences, with just comfortable groups for June and August, which resulted through quite a bit of soliciting upon the part of the convention field worker for Cragmont had not yet been sold to our young people fully. Each year more and more young people have come forward, until now it is almost entirely upon the basis of unsolicited volunteers that we fill the building to overflowing.

These young people attended the youth conference the week of June 18-23. Seventy-four were registered and a number of others came in for classes from time to time.

This year two conferences were held in June, each with a full house. As this is being written registrations for August are dangerously near that line of sorrow and regret for the director—when we will have to begin to say, "Sorry, we do not have room for any more." During the June conferences around fifty young people found Christ as their Saviour, and many found His will for their lives. We had two great youth revivals along with the teaching and recreational part of the program which did not stop with the return home of the young people.

From all parts of the state comes word of the forming of prayer and evangelistic groups, and of people being saved as a result of the outflowing of the spirit of Cragmont. At the Cragmont youth conferences there is no fanaticism—there is just a genuine, warm, spiritual atmosphere that warms up the hearts of our young people and creates within them a zeal for winning lost souls. They return home not to try and create the sensational, but to calmly go about the natural activities of Christian young people, taking their places in the church in accordance with the vision of God's will received through prayer, counseling and mutual help at Cragmont.

GOING IN FOR BLESSING

These young people are entering the chapel in the main building for a class in "Youth and the Church of Tomorrow," taught by Rev. L. E. Ballard. They are on the march toward richer Christian lives.

We started to label this article, "The Story of Cragmont Youth Conferences," then we were overcome with the conviction that the story of Cragmont youth conferences cannot possibly be written now, nor by anyone of this generation. That story as it affects the lives of the fortunate young people who go to Cragmont, merely has its beginning in the experiences crowded into a short but busy week at the assembly. The story will develop chapter by chapter, line upon line, much as a story comes over teletype, as these boys and girls live and grow in grace and in the knowledge of the Lord, and are molded by time into the fabric of the church of the sixties, the seventies and the eighties of the century. If the Lord tarries, some scribe of the nineties may be able to write the story. The task of the leaders of today is to try and shape aright the plot for the story, and to this task may we dedicate ourselves anew in the glorious light of youth's vision.

Make the Bible College, Mount Olive College, Cragmont and other youth camps and assemblies throughout the Free Will Baptist field, what they ought to be today, and you have the best possible insurance that the Free Will Baptist church will be what it ought to be tomorrow.

The August youth conference is now in session, having begun August 6 and continuing through August 11. During this week another group of our vibrant, growing youth are once again assembled at Cragmont. These youth come from varied directions seeking a happy Christian vacation which is exactly what lies in store for them at Cragmont. Facilities and accommodations are not elaborate, but the youth who come to Cragmont do not give thought to such things because the spiritual emphasis which is given to all their activities overshadows the cares of everyday life. But someone has to think of the need of better equipment at Cragmont, and this someone should be you!

Hats off to the North Carolina woman's auxiliaries for the splendid way in which they have thus far supported the Cragmont movement! They have set a pattern in which our other Free Will Baptist groups would do well to follow.

Cragmont Assembly is under the direction of the Rev. and Mrs. J. E. Wooten, who make their home within the institution. We owe much to this splendid couple for the time and effort which they have given in making the youth's stay during the conferences well worth their coming.

In order for the youth of today to compose the church of tomorrow, one which we would be proud of and which would be pleasing to God, we must not lose sight of the innumerable needs of Cragmont Assembly which is doing so much for our youth—needs which could be met by you!

COMING OUT BLESSED

This group has just attended Bible study in the tabernacle, directed the first week by Rev. Lee Whaley and the second week by Rev. LaRue Davis. Both brought messages of blessings to the young people.

Is This Consecration?

I'll go where you want me to go, dear Lord,
Real service is what I desire.

I'll say what you want me to say, dear Lord,
But don't ask me to sing in the choir.

I'll be what you want me to be, dear Lord,
I like to see things come to pass.

But don't ask me to teach girls and boys,
I'd rather just stay in my class.

I'll do what you want me to do, dear Lord,
I yearn for the Kingdom to thrive.

I'll give you my nickels and dimes, dear Lord,
But please don't ask me to tithe.

I'll speak when you want me to speak, dear Lord,

I'll say what you want me to say;
I'm busy now with myself, dear Lord;
I'll help some other day.

How to Have a Happy Home

ELDER A. L. SELLERS
Quitman, Georgia

A HAPPY home is the greatest asset to any community, church or state. There is no one that would not enjoy a happy home. The question is why are there so few happy homes?

To have a happy home the persons that make the home must be happy, and for a person to be happy he must love God with all of self, and his neighbor as himself. That calls for a strong complex feeling which causes one to appreciate, desire the presence or possession of the person, or to carry on for their satisfaction. That is a difficult proposition; therefore, we have but few happy people, and fewer happy churches and homes.

Yes, it takes striving to get that feeling, but it is the sure road to happiness. It takes that kind of feeling for the Father and His Kingdom to enable one to get into it, but when one acquires that attitude he will not only seek to enter in but will strive to enter in. Christ said, "Strive to enter in at the strait gate: . . ." (Luke 13:24). Notice, dear reader, that he said strait, not straight. There is a great difference in the meaning of the two words.

To get into God's Kingdom and stay there, one must put on His righteousness and keep it on; and to put on His righteousness and keep it on, one must get in with Christ and stay there. One must bear fruit, and that fruit is the will of God manifest in the person. (Read John 15:1-7.) One must put God first in his life, and leave Satan out because the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eye and the pride of life will have no more power over one that has reached that place in life. Then his extreme desire is to do the things that please God. That is why John said, "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him. For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life, is not of the Father, but is of the world. And the world passeth away, and the lust thereof: but he that doeth the will of God abideth for ever" (1 John 2:15-17).

To lust is to have a strong desire to possess. But one can't have a strong desire to possess both the things of the world and the righteousness of God for one will overshadow the other. Christ said, "No servant can serve two masters: for either he will hate the one, and love the other; or else he will hold to the one, and despise the other. Ye cannot serve God and mammon" (Luke 16:13). Both will not have the same attraction, and surely you will

A Letter From Father To Son

My Dear Son:

As we were out driving that day, yes, that fatal day, I said, "Son, slow down to fifty on this busy highway. The traffic is so heavy." But to this admonition you said, "Who is driving, you or I? If you do not want to ride, you can walk!"

I'm in a wheel chair now, and will be the remainder of my days. There is no one to brush back the falling locks from my forehead for Mother left us the day of the accident as well as Suzie, your only sister.

We are all alone, Son, you and I; so we will have to make the best of it. You are lucky, Son, to only have gotten a broken leg. So very lucky, since I lost both of mine that day.

You were only a teen-ager then, but now you are a man. Yes, a fine young man with a sad heart, for you realize in your heart that you are a murderer, not by choice, but through carelessness and disobedience.

Very soon, Son, you and Martha will become parents of a child, possibly a son. Do your best by him; don't make the same mistake as your father. Tell your son from a small babe that "no" means the best for him and for all concerned.

Someday your son will be driving your car, and your Martha will be in the car with him. Will he be a son who will make himself on orphan and you, his father, a widower, as well as a cripple? Think it over, my son, and pray much before you let your son get under the wheel of your automobile—before you do, teach him obedience. "A wise son heareth his father's instruction: but a scorner heareth not rebuke" (Proverbs 13:1).

Your Father

follow the most attractive one.

To be happy follow the one that will give you peace forever, joy everlasting and nothing to fear. That is what getting into God's Kingdom will do, and when you have had that experience you will be a happy person. A home that is built with persons having had that experience will be a happy home. Such persons can also compose a happy church and community.

Dear reader, if you want a happy home, study your Bible until you know that Father's will and how to live in it; then let that knowledge have place in your life and you will have a happy life. A happy life will make you a happy person. Get every person in your home to do this and you will have a happy home, the greatest possession of life—one which money cannot buy. Just get into God's Kingdom and put on His righteousness and it will be yours.

TOLERANCE

ALBERT M. EZELL
Searcy, Arkansas

BE BELIEVE there is hardly anything that we could practice in our everyday walk of life that would incur more disapproval of our Lord more readily or more surely than intolerance. By intolerance I do not mean that we are to tolerate sin and ungodliness; these things are to be fought with all the determination, courage and Godly wisdom we are able to muster. But he who closes his heart, his mind, his eyes and ears to other ideas, creeds or opinions without first carefully weighing and considering their virtue and potential value, has, himself, become the most flagrant example of bigotry and egotism.

I believe that to cite one instance, there is too much intolerance among our churches. Instead of the churches working in harmony there is more a spirit of competition, proselyting and uncomplimentary remarks about other churches just because they may not happen to have the same name we do. (I am not speaking exclusively of Free Will Baptists either.)

I was in a certain church recently, where we attend quite regularly, and a vote was taken as whether to continue, as last summer, the services in our city park in coordination with a number of the other churches of our little city. The pastor, before the vote was taken, made a talk about the dangers of a lot of the other doctrines and their beliefs and the effect they might have on the members of their church. In spite of this the vote went in the affirmative by a very narrow margin. Now I want to ask, would anyone, if they take the proper thought and consideration about a matter of this kind, consider their own experience of salvation so vulnerable and weak as to be destroyed by a doctrine or creed that is foreign to their own? Are we to advocate a hot-house religion, that will not weather the floods of criticism, as still grow and flourish even in the midst of spiritual drought and famine?

Jesus, when He was here, certainly did not approve of the attitude of the scribes and Pharisees; still at the same time He took every opportunity to try to reason with and admonish them. And if we remember correctly they were more often rebuked because of their holier than thou characteristics and lack of tolerance of those in a more humble position.

Saul, because of his intolerance, impatience and egotism, lost the glory of God out of his life and died a vainglorious death at the hands of the Philistines at Gilboa.

Friends, I beg of you, please stop to con-

Questions and Answers ON THE BIBLE

Conducted by J. F. BARROW

3824 Richland Avenue, Nashville 5, Tennessee

Question: In the translation and rapture of Enoch and Elijah which took place first? Just when were they translated or changed from mortal to immortal bodies since the Bible teaches that flesh and blood cannot enter into heaven? At what time in the event of the rapture of the church will we be changed from mortal to immortal beings?—M. H.

Answer: Webster's unabridged dictionary says to translate means, "to bear, remove or change, from one place, condition, etc., to another; to carry over, to transfer. As to translate the kingdom from the house of Saul and to set up the throne of David, 2 Samuel 3:10. To remove to heaven . . . without death."

To rapture is an "act of seizing and carrying off with force; specif. abdication, rape—act of transporting, or fact of being transported . . . a hurrying along.

"In mystical language, a psychophysical phenomenon in which the soul is born out of itself and exalted to a knowledge of divine things."

The definitions indicate that the two words are closely associated in meaning. They both carry the meanings of being changed from one form, state of being, or condition, into another, and of being transferred or transported from one locality, form, or condition into another.

"And it came to pass, as they still went on, and talked, that, behold, there appeared a chariot of fire, and horses of fire, and parted them both asunder; and Elijah went up by a whirlwind into heaven" (2 Kings 2:11). In this account of Elijah's translation it would appear that he was changed there in the presence of Elisha in order for him to be conditioned to the experience of riding in a chariot of fire and to go by a whirlwind. Except one were made able by a miraculous change, the natural body would not likely be able to survive an experience of this kind.

We have far less said in the Bible about Enoch than of Elijah, but what is said is just as commendable. He walked with God. This being said is sufficient to set him apart as a very unusual person of his day. Adam and God walked together in the garden in the cool of the day before Adam sinned. The Bible has nothing like this to say about him after he once sinned. It is quite likely that Enoch was as meticulous as Job about being sure that every required offering was made which in his day kept him in fellowship with God. "And Enoch walked with God: and he was not; for God took him" (Genesis 5:24); "By faith Enoch was translated that he should not see death; and was not found, because God had translated him: for before his translation he had this testimony, that he pleased God" (Hebrews 11:5); "And Enoch also, the seventh from Adam, prophesied of these, saying, Behold, the Lord cometh with ten thousands of his saints" (Jude 14). Even though there is nothing said about at what altitude in the air he was changed from a mortal to an immortal being I would think that this change was effected as the Spirit of God came upon him to transport him into heaven.

"For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first: Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord" (1 Thessalonians 4:16, 17). It seems quite clear from these verses that the order as will be follows: first the dead saints are to be raised, that is, the saints whose spirits have gone on to be with the Lord will be united with their bodies as they are raised from the earth, then at the same time that these rise from their graves with glorified bodies the living saints will be changed and all will be caught up into the presence of Christ together with bodies like unto His glorified body at the same time. "For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive. But every man in his own order: Christ the firstfruits; afterward they that are Christ's at his coming. . . . And that which thou sowest, thou sowest not that body that shall be, but bare grain, it may chance of wheat, or of some other grain: . . . There are also celestial bodies, and bodies terrestrial: but the glory of the celestial is one, and the glory of the terrestrial is another. . . . So also is the resurrection of the dead. It is sown in corruption; it is raised in incorruption: It is sown in dishonour; it is raised in glory: it is sown in weakness; it is raised in power: It is sown a natural body; it is raised a spiritual body.

There is a natural body, and there is a spiritual body. . . . Now this I say, brethren, that flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God; neither doth corruption inherit incorruption. Behold, I shew you a mystery; We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, In a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump: for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed. For this corruption must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality. So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory" (1 Corinthians 15:22, 23, 37, 40, 42-44, 50-54).

The fact that what the Old Testament tells us about Enoch and Elijah was given to prophetically symbolize to the Old Testament saints this which is prophesied about the church, how and when it shall come into its glory, makes us to understand quite clearly that Enoch and Elijah were taken up in quiet a similar fashion to what the church members that are alive and remain when Christ shall come are to be changed and caught up. That the dead saints whose bodies shall be occupying the grave or retained in the dust will be raised incorruptible or immortal, is in the light of the above Scriptures unquestionable. It is also just as certain that the Holy Spirit through Paul means to impress us that as the dead saints are raised with a quickened or immortal body so shall we who are alive at Christ's coming be caught up with one, therefore I conclude that the first thing to happen to the living saints is that they will have their natural bodies changed into a glorified body like unto Christ's, and that that is just the order in which God miraculously changed and caught up Enoch and Elijah.

• Lovest Thou Me?

What has been our response to that amazing love of Christ? Do we love Him as we love our own souls? Is Jesus Christ absolutely first in our affections? Is Jesus Christ occupying the throne-chamber of heart and soul? Are our lives knit, bound up with His life? Do we really love Him? Now love is the most practical as well as the most potent force in the world, for love is that which is not forever seeking to get but which always delights to give.—J. Stuart Holden.

• Faith is not a guesswork, nor a taking of a chance, but a simple resting on God's faithful character and His words.—Christ Life.

The Lighted Pathway

Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path
(PSALM 119:105).

REV. WILLET L. MORETZ
SWANNANOVA, N. C.

"Jesus saith unto him, If I will that he tarry till I come, what is that to thee? follow thou me" (John 21:22).

This verse, taken out of the conversation between Jesus and Peter just before His ascension, and incidentally the last words spoken by Jesus as recorded by John, is possibly the greatest in all the Bible teaching the great truth that Christianity is an individual matter.

Two of the greatest hindrances to the progress of the Kingdom of God are to be found in two very common practices of this age. The first is that group, and it is a large one, who think they can do things better than anyone else, and that everyone must do just as they do. The Pharisee, in the story of the Pharisee and the Publican, is a shining example of this group. The second group, much larger than the first, are those who think they must do just as others do. They want to follow the crowd. Others do it this or that way. I used to pastor a church in which some of the members told me how much better the adjoining church did things than we. Let's do this, or let's don't do that, because they do it or don't do it at such and such church. Jesus said to Peter concerning his question as to what He would have John do "... what is that to thee? follow thou me."

A very good friend of mine gave me a little tract distributed by the Victory Tract League, Asheville, North Carolina, which I want to pass on to those of you who have not seen it with the prayer that the thoughts contained in it will help us to be humbler and better servants of God.

OTHERS MAY—YOU CANNOT

"If God has called you to be really like Jesus in all your spirit, He will draw you into a life of crucifixion and humility, and put on you such demands of obedience, that He will not allow you to follow other Christians, and in many ways He will seem to let other people do things which He will not let you do.

"Others can brag on themselves and their work, on their success, on their writings, but the Holy Spirit will not allow you to do such things, and if you begin it, He will lead you into some deep mortification that will make you despise yourself and all your good works.

"Others will be allowed to succeed in making money, but it is likely God will keep you poor because He wants you to have something far better than gold, and that is a helpless dependence on Him, that He may have the privilege of supplying your needs day by day out of an unseen treasury.

"The Lord will let others be honored and put forward, and keep you hid away in obscurity, because He wants to produce some choice fragrant fruit for His glory which can be produced in the shade.

"God will let others be great but keep you small. He will let others do a work for Him and get the credit for it, but He will make you work and toil on without knowing how much you are doing; and then to make your work still more precious, He will let others get the credit for the work which you have done and this will make your reward ten times greater when He comes. The Holy Spirit will put a strict watch over you with a jealous love, and will rebuke you for little words and feelings, or for wasting your time, which other Christians never seem distressed over. So make up your mind that God is an infinite Sovereign and has a right to do as He pleases with His own, and He will not explain to you a thousand things which may puzzle your reason in His dealings with you. He will wrap you up in a jealous love and let other people say or do many things that you cannot do or say. Settle it forever, that you are to deal directly with the Holy Spirit, and that He is to have the privilege of tying your tongue, or chaining your hand, or sider before you condemn someone or something whose ethics might vary just a little from your own, and remember that the fundamentals of all great and true religions are, after all, very much the same. So let us very closely examine our ourselves, and remember the words of Paul in Galatians 6:1-4.

We can receive wonderful counsel by reading Romans, Chapters 13, 14 and 15, and I am sure that as we read these words, if we will let our heart lead us, that we will see a real message on love and tolerance. Next to our love for God must come love and service for our fellow man.

Is This Revival?

Evangelism, fine as it is, is not revival. Asked, "Is this revival?" after a particularly striking response to a series of meetings, Billy Graham replied, "No! When revival comes I expect to see two things which we have not seen yet: A new sense of the holiness of God, and a new sense of the sinfulness of sin on the part of Christians!

Well might we add a third, closely related, indication of revival: A new working of the Holy Spirit in the local church. Why? Because the Word of God calls for it; and because our upside-down, morally and spiritually confused world demands it!—Gospel Herald.

"Howbeit when he, the Spirit of truth, is come, he will guide you into all truth: . . ." (John 16:13).

True Nobility

At a slave market in one of the Southern States, many years ago, a smart, active colored boy was put up for sale. A kind master who pitied his condition, not wishing him to have a cruel owner, went up to him and said:

"If I buy you, will you be honest?"

The boy, with a look that baffled description, replied:

"I will be honest whether you buy me or not."—Exchange.

5. To wait for the Lord (1 Corinthians 1:7; 2 Thessalonians 3:5).
6. To possess our own souls (Luke 21:19; James 1:4).
7. To carry our cross (Lamentations 3:26, 27; Mark 8:34).

A devout Scotchman, being asked if he ever expected to go to heaven, gave the quaint reply: "Why, mom, I live there!" All the way to heaven is heaven begun to the Christian who walks near enough to God to hear the secrets He has to impart. There is such a thing as having an inner heaven in the heart. By J. C. Griffin

THREE "CHEERS" OF JESUS CHRIST

The First Cheer

"And, behold, they brought to him a man sick of the palsy, lying on a bed: and Jesus seeing their faith said unto the sick of the palsy; Son, be of good cheer; thy sins be forgiven thee" (Matthew 9:2).

The friends of this sick man were interested in the healing of the suffering man from a physical standpoint. No doubt, the physical blessing was all that they were seeking. We say this because it is so like human beings today. There are people who claim to be Christians, who will take a sick person hundreds of miles to a faith doctor, a divine healer or to some specialist in diseases that prey on the human body. But they never have, nor never will, perhaps, seek to lead the sick man to Christ. They are blind to the fact that the soul is more important than the body. So we think that these men who were taking the sick man to Jesus were looking after the physical healing. But Christ knew what the man needed, so Christ said, Be of good cheer; thy sins be forgiven thee.

As I see it, we should not ask the Lord to heal a sick, sinful, Christ-rejecting person to go on living in sin and defying God and making his family and neighbors wretched and miserable. If the sick man is willing and ready to surrender all to Christ, accepting Him as a personal Saviour, then we can say with Christ, Thy sins be forgiven thee. But I believe that we should be confident that faith in the Lord Jesus is sufficient to establish a true relationship with the Lord, and not just a desire to get physical healing. The reason that I say this is because I have found people who would cry for God's blessing, and promise the Lord to live for Him if He would heal them; but when they were back on their feet, they were just as sinful as they were before they were downed under the mighty hand of disease. It is a dangerous thing to lie to God. Yet, both men and women do it and have to suffer the judgment of almighty God for their sin.

But may we notice, Jesus seeing their faith, and certainly the Lord Jesus could see deeper than the eye of man; so Jesus knew that this man needed more than physical healing. Jesus also knew that this man was in dead earnest and that he had a heart that would be obedient. So, the Lord Jesus went deeper than the flesh. He touched the heart and forgave the sin in that heart, by saying, Son, be of good cheer. There is nothing in the universe that can cheer a man more than to have the evidence that his sins are forgiven. My unconverted friend, will you go to Jesus right now and hear him say to you, Thy sins be forgiven thee?

The Second Cheer

"And when the disciples saw him walking on the sea, they were troubled, saying, It is a spirit; and they cried out for fear. But straightway Jesus spake unto them, saying, Be of good cheer; it is I; be not afraid" (Matthew 14:26, 27).

We want to notice that these disciples were on a mission, going to the place designated by the Lord, but they encountered a severe storm. They were not running from duty, they were going as obedient disciples of the Lord. So often we, while in the path of duty run into storms of confusion, disappointment and boisterous winds of Satan when least expected, but may we notice that these disciples were never out of sight of the Master, for He knew just what they were up against. So when they had gone as far as they could, Jesus went to their rescue. "And in the fourth watch of the night, Jesus went unto them, walking on the sea" (Matthew 14:25). His mission was to cheer them up and set them going to the other side of the sea. May we remember that when Jesus says go, that He means to keep us in sight, and when the sailing becomes so difficult that we cannot make a go, Jesus is right there to say, Be of good cheer. All power in heaven and earth is given unto me, go ye therefore. Often we get so chicken-hearted, and faint by the wayside, when we only need to look out there on the troubled sea of life and see Jesus coming to our rescue.

It takes a living faith to keep pushing on and fighting for the mastery. The devil often comes around and says, "Why don't you quit?" I have no idea that those disciples pulled in their riggings and dumped their oars overboard, but they were pulling with all their might to go where the Master said go. I believe that if they had quit and said, "It's no use," Jesus would have let them drift. But they were not quitters; a quitter never reaches his goal.

The Third Cheer

"These things I have spoken unto you, that in me ye might have peace. In the world ye shall have tribulation: but be of good cheer; I have overcome the world" (John 16:33).

The first cheer was spoken to a sick man. The second was to a group of frightened, discouraged disciples. The third is a message direct to us as believers in the Lord Jesus. Christ never promised us easy going. The poet said, "Must I be carried to the skies on flowery beds of ease? While others fought to win the prize and sailed through bloody seas?" No, Christ has not promised us an easy road. He knew that we would meet with temptations, trials, persecutions and that those who, at one time, we counted on for friendship would even turn against us and fight against us. Paul said, I have fought a good fight. He said to Timothy, Be a good soldier of Jesus Christ. This means that we must fight if we would win. But may we notice that Jesus said, Be of good cheer, I have overcome the world. What is Jesus saying? It is this: "What I have done I have made possible for you to do through Me. I will go with you to the end of the world. When the way gets unbearable for you, just remember that I overcame. I conquered the Cross; My death on the Cross was not defeat. It was the greatest victory ever won. I won salvation for a lost world. I have made it possible for all men to call on the Father in My name and get victory over sin, death and hell." So therefore a Christian never needs to surrender. The hotter the battle, the rougher the sea, the darker the road, the greater the temptation, the closer He'll be standing and walking with you.

"For whatsoever is born of God overcometh the world: and this is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith. Who is he that overcometh the world, but he that believeth that Jesus is the Son of God?" (1 John 5:4, 5). Are we overcomers or are we shortcomers? Christ has the answer.

"Having therefore these promises, dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God" (2 Corinthians 7:1).

"Stand fast therefore in the liberty where-with Christ hath made us free, and be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage" (Galatians 5:1).

"I therefore, the prisoner of the Lord, beseech you that ye walk worthy of the vocation wherewith ye are called" (Ephesians 4:1).

"Men, Stop Praying!"

Moody had a wealth of uncommon sense. You will agree to this after you read the following incident: A group of businessmen, all of average and above average means, was praying that God would send in fifteen hundred dollars needed to meet a pressing church obligation. Moody, listening at the door of the room where the men were praying, went in and said, "Men, stop asking God to give you the needed fifteen hundred dollars. Any one of you could write a check for this amount right now! Write the check and begin praising God!"—Gospel Herald.

HOW KULU LIVED FOR JESUS

STELLA M. RUDY

MISS MASON, speaking to a black girl in Africa, said, "I'm very sorry, but you've been in school nearly two years, and are not any farther than some who have just recently started to learn books. We feel that perhaps it might be better for you to try to do something else. You will never make a teacher, and there is no use wasting more time and money."

Kulu began to cry. Big bitter tears flowed down her black cheeks. She was stupid; she had acknowledged that just a few nights before in the date palm. And she was awkward too. But wasn't there something that a stupid, awkward person could do, especially if she loved Jesus? She'd tried hard to learn to read books, but she could not understand those strange things called words. How could she ever be a teach-books person.

"If I go home," she sobbed, "what will the people in the village say? They will point their finger at me and say I am too stupid to read books. And my mother will eat bitterness all the rest of her days because I am not a teach-books person. Isn't there something that even a stupid person can do?"

Miss Mason looked in pity at the tear-stained face of the poor girl. "Of course, there is," she said comfortingly. "You can be a 'live-the-Book person' if you can't be a 'teach-the-Book person.'"

Kulu looked puzzled. She did not quite understand what Miss Mason meant.

"Listen to this," Miss Mason said, getting to her Bible. "Ye are our epistle . . . known and read of all men." People will read you instead of books. Your actions will show that you are a person of the tribe of God. They will see so much good in you that they will ask about the tribe of God and become God's followers too."

"Oh, Miss Mason," cried the African girl, clapping her hands, "can I really be a live-the-Book person?"

"Of course, you can if you try," said Miss Mason, "and Jesus will help you if you ask Him to. We should always try to please God in everything we do. Even when you scrub floors, you can show to others that you are a person of the tribe of God. If you leave some place unswept, or unpolished, people will think you are not much like Jesus whom you try to tell others about. But if you pray God will help you every day to live for Him so that others may read of Him in your life."

Not many days later, word came from a missionary who had just moved to a new station. "We are urgently in need of native help," she wrote. "Could you spare one of the girls at once—one who is willing to live in a hard place where there are no other Christians?"

"Why not send Kulu?" Miss Mason thought. "We might at least give her a chance."

"How would you like to go, Kulu?" Miss Mason asked after she had explained the urgent need.

"I'd like to go," said Kulu quietly, then added, "and live the Book."

"That will be fine," Miss Mason answered, "and I'm sure you will be surprised how wonderfully God will help you if you try."

"I'll try ever so hard," Kulu promised, "because if there are no Christians there and no one can read books, I'll have to show them what is in the Book. I'll ask God to make me a good person of His tribe—a live-the-Book person."

When the missionaries moved into the village, the natives hardly knew whether to welcome them or not. Some thought they were white witches and refused to let them have any vegetables out of their gardens. They did everything they could to protect themselves from being bewitched. Charms were hung about their necks, on their wrists and ankles, as well as in their huts and through the village. When they saw Mr. Missionary with "four eyes instead of two" they were more frightened than ever. But when they saw Mrs. Missionary with queer clothes wrapped about her feet like leaves of a big palm tree and wearing a "bowl upside down" on her head, they fled in terror into their huts to hide from the much-to-be-feared creature.

Then Kulu came to live with the missionaries. Kulu was black like themselves, but she was bewitched, or she would not live with strange white folks. Kulu saw the children peeping at her from behind trees or in the doorway of their huts and smiled at them.

As Kulu smiled at the children each day, they became less afraid of her. Finally a few of the braver ones ventured near and asked her many questions.

"How long are those white folks going to sit in our village?" they asked.

"They have come to tell us about God," Kulu explained.

"But God has forgotten us," they said.

"God has not forgotten us," said Kulu, and then she began to tell them the stories of Jesus. It was wonderful how well she remembered the things she had been taught in the mission school.

One day, not long after Kulu came, one of the village children was suddenly taken sick. The whole village wanted to try all the remedies that they had ever heard of but Cho, the boy who was sick, continued in pain. At last he cried, "Maybe the God that Kulu prays to will help."

Kulu was sent for and as she knelt on the mat beside Cho, she prayed earnestly to God, who answered her prayer almost at once. Cho began to get better and soon was well.

"It was Kulu's God who helped me get well," he told every one, "and I'm going to be a person of the tribe of God."

It was the opening wedge into the village, and soon the missionaries were busy telling the people more about Jesus. Kulu was truly a live-the-Book person and helped to bring many to God.—Selected.

When the Waves Rise

A little boy made himself a boat and went off in high glee to sail it on the water, but presently it got beyond his reach, and in his distress, he appealed to a big boy for help, asking could he get it back for him. Saying nothing the big boy picked up stones and seemed to be throwing them at the boat. The little chap thought he would never get his boat back again, and that instead of helping, the big boy was annoying him. But presently he noticed that instead of hitting the boat, each stone went beyond it and made a little wave, which moved the boat a little nearer to the shore. Every throw of the stones was planned, and at last the toy was brought within reach, and the little boy was happy again in the possession of his treasure. Sometimes things in our life seem disagreeable and without sense of plan. But wait a while, and we shall see that each trial, each striking of a stone upon the quiet water of our life, has brought us nearer to God.—Christian Action.

Tarboro, N. C.—The Woman's Auxiliary of the First Free Will Baptist Church met Tuesday night, July 16, at the church, with Mrs. Homer Webb and Mrs. Raymond Webb serving as hostesses. Mrs. Matthew Peel led the group in the opening prayer.

The Scripture was taken from Proverbs 3:1-6. Those taking part on the evening program, "We Need Loyal Citizens for Such a Time as This," were Mrs. Peel, Mrs. Dilda, Mrs. Tyndall and Mrs. Pollard. The twelve members and one visitor present were dismissed with prayer by Mrs. Dot Webb.

Clay Nickols. He was born on April 20, 1891. Mr. Nickols had been in ill health for a long time. He leaves to mourn his loss his wife, Fannie Hollmon and several children.

Funeral services were conducted in the Marlboro Free Will Baptist Church, Farmville, North Carolina, by the pastor, the Rev. L. B. Manning. Mr. Nickols was a member of the church for many years. The church is assured that death is only a passage to the great beyond where the hope of eternal life is realized and where the soul may delight itself in the fullness of God's love.

Mr. Nickols was loved by all who knew him. May God bless and comfort the family with the assurance that there is a morning after a night, a sunrise after a sunset. We all miss Mr. Nickols although we know that he is at rest in that beautiful home in glory with the blest.

Mr. Wiley C. Sasser

Mr. Wiley C. Sasser of Selma, North Carolina, died August 11, 1955, leaving behind his wife and four children: Raymond of Tarboro, North Carolina; Marion of Danville, Virginia; Mrs. Forest Ludwicke of Wyandotte, Michigan; and Mrs. J. L. Jayson of Bakersfield, California. The funeral was held in the Selma Church, conducted by the pastor, the Rev. Albert Coates, assisted by the Revs. J. A. Evans and R. P. Harris.

Mr. Sasser was a charter member of the Selma Church, a deacon, treasurer and had served in several other capacities in the church, as well as being treasurer of the successful county-wide campaign to keep A. B. C. stores out of Johnston County.

On July 27, 1955, the writer was ordained into the ministry in the Selma Church. In preaching the funeral service, Rev. Evans testified that he was approached by my father at the ordination service and was told, "We might be needing you before long." Thus in 15 days, Brother Evans was needed to conduct his funeral. "Having made known unto us the mystery of his will . . ." (Ephesians 1:9), my father felt the beckoning hand of Jesus. He had fought a good fight and his life and example will ever be remembered and cherished by his family, neighbors, friends and the church he loved so well.

Mrs. Willie Moore

Among my early childhood recollections is a lovely and Christlike lady whom we called "Miss Millie." All through my childhood and through that of many more people she seemed to be always ready to say, "I'll help you across if you wish to go." So safely she led many across life's journey to a clearer knowledge of Jesus and his love.

Mrs. Moore was a member of the Bethel Free Will Baptist Church, Johnston County, North Carolina. We, as a church, shall always remember her as a guiding light. Even during her hours of suffering she always lifted Christ up. We bow our heads in humble submission to God's will that He saw fit to call her home on April 18. We thank Him for her life and what she meant

Opportunity and Responsibility

W. BURKETTE RAPER

In the field of higher education, our denomination is now confronted with almost unlimited opportunity and staggering responsibility in the next few years. The following article explains in detail what I mean. It is reprinted from the July 21 issue of the Biblical Recorder:

COLLEGES URGED TO DOUBLE CAPACITY

Buies Creek, July 7.—In a special report to the New York Times, educational writer Benjamin Fine urges colleges to double their capacity in the next ten to fifteen years. Basing his forecast on a four-year study reported to the National Educational Association in their Portland, Oregon, meeting he points out that 375,000 new college teachers will be needed by 1970. At the present rate of training, only 75,000 will be available.

According to the 225-page report, colleges must increase their facilities at a much faster pace than they are now doing. College enrollments now total 3,000,000.

Another proposal advanced in the report is to increase the facilities of the smaller colleges. Many colleges with 500 students or less could double their enrollment without losing their effectiveness, says the report.

Dr. Howard E. Wilson, secretary of the policies commission and director of the study, urges the private colleges to respond to the challenge of growing enrollment so as not to lose favor. In the past public and private institutions have had about equal numbers of students, but that is rapidly changing. Today the public colleges are getting close to 55% of all the students. Dr. Wilson predicts that within 15 years the ratio may go down to as low as 65-35. At that stage, he says, the private colleges would have lost the influence they now have.

Commenting on this report, Dr. Leslie H. Campbell, president of Campbell College, said, "Private colleges have through the years made a distinct contribution to the welfare of North Carolina and the nation. There is a great need for both the public and private colleges to do everything possible to expand their facilities to meet the overwhelming tide of students which will be, and is, knocking at the doors of our colleges. Trained people are the backbone of progress. Never before have we had such an opportunity of service. Never before have we had such responsibility thrust upon us."

SHARES OF STOCK PRESENTED TO MOUNT OLIVE COLLEGE

On Monday morning, July 23, Dr. C. C. Henderson, president of the Mount Olive Pickle Company, presented 20 shares of stock in the company to Mount Olive Junior College, Mount Olive, North Carolina. This stock, valued at approximately $2,500, is part of 100 shares to be given to the college over a five-year period. They are being given in memory of the late I. F. Witherington, who was general manager of the pickle company for nearly 30 years prior to his death last year.

This stock donation was approved by the board of directors of the pickle company earlier this year when a fund-raising campaign was conducted by the Mount Olive Chamber of Commerce for the college. The president of the college, the Rev. W. Burkette Raper, accepted these first shares of stock from Dr. Henderson during a brief ceremony in the pickle company's office.

The Grounds of Christian Assurance

(Lesson for August 19)

Lesson: 1 John 3:19—4:6.

Golden Text: 1 John 5:4.

I. INTRODUCTION

The faith of a Christian is closely akin to his love. It is named alongside love by Paul in 1 Corinthians 13:13 as one of the three outstanding Christian graces. "And whatsoever we ask, we receive of him, because we keep his commandments, and do those things which are pleasing in his sight. And this is his commandment, That we should believe on the name of his Son Jesus Christ, and love one another, as he gave us commandment" (Vv. 22, 23). Just as the individual may examine his life and find assurance that his love is fruitful in the things of Christ, so can he also look at the faith that he manifests in Christ.

A living faith asks and receives. If a person really believes that Jesus is the Son of God—that He is all-powerful, all-wise; that He loves divinely and exercises special care over those whom He has redeemed—he is made bold to make known to Jesus the desires of his heart. When an individual asks God for something in the name of Christ, he receives the answer to his prayer upon a twofold basis: according to his faith and within the realm of God's will. The faithful Christian will always pray that his prayers be answered according to God's will. To pray otherwise is to question the wisdom, mercy and love of God. Thus the petitioner would be showing his lack of faith in God.—The Bible Student (F. W. B.).

II. HELPFUL HINTS

1. The love that proves itself in deeds will also bring assurance to the doubting heart (Vv. 18, 19).

2. Those who are condemned by their consciences stand without assurance before the Word of God (Vv. 20, 21).

3. Those who do what the Lord asks of them has a right to expect the Lord to hear them (Vs. 22).

4. Those who believe on Christ and love one another have the witness of the Spirit in their hearts and souls (Vv. 23, 24).

5. Among the spirits, some false and some true, there's a mark of distinction that tells us who is who (Vv. 1-3).

6. It is not by their power that God's children overcome, but by a power greater than the power of the world (Vs. 4).

7. Though the children of God must live in the world, they are citizens of heaven, and not of the world (Vv. 5, 6).—The Bible Teacher (F. W. B.).

III. ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

1. There is a test whereby we may know whether a spirit has been given by God. A man may assume to have the Spirit of God; a man may have the Spirit; we may know by applying the test indicated what spirit moves the man to say what he does say and teach. The apostle suggests the one test specially applicable to the delusions of his own time.

The test, we note, is the Person of the Lord Jesus Christ. The one test suggested is "that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh." This is the strongest way of asserting the veritable humanity of Jesus Christ. "Every spirit that confesseth that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is of God." This confession, however, must be made more than a mere confession with the lips, it means to own the Person, the Saviourhood, the Lordship of Christ in heart reality. The demons, in Christ's day and time knew how to confess Christ with the lips and yet there were demons (comp. Matthew 8:29).—W. S. Hottel, D. D.

2. A Christian must believe the words of Jesus in John 8:24.

The world is filled with antichrists, and they constantly molest the saints, seeking to win them away from the faith of evangelical Christianity, and on their Christ denying side. Literally thousands of their followers go from door to door selling and distributing their pernicious literature, while numbers stand on street corners selling and distributing the same evil literature. Beware, beloved, beware of any man or woman who goes about selling literature that defames the Person of Jesus Christ! Such a person should not even be invited into the house (comp. 2 John 1:9, 10). We cannot make common cause with those who do not confess that Jesus Christ has come in the flesh.

3. There is a verse in the first letter written by John, the apostle, which ought not to be forgotten. I am not guessing: I know that I have never heard a sermon on this text and I have never heard it quoted: "These things have I written unto you that believe on the name of the Son of God; that ye may know that ye have eternal life, . . ." (1 John 5:13). Evidently it is not a letter to unbelievers, but to those who have been saved from a godless life by our Lord Jesus.

Centurion Cornelius was not a saved man until he believed on the Son of God.—Bible Illustrator.

4. A gentleman in the midst of Billy Sunday's work in the East, who had his head trouble and did not know how to get rid of it, confessed the superiority of the old gospel when he saw the power of Mr. Sunday's ministry and listened to the stentorian notes of orthodoxy from that John the Baptist of America. Here are his words, written for the Boston Transcript. "His (Mr. Sunday's) unmistakable passion for righteousness and the all embracing democracy of his religion which recognized that the lowest drunkard in the gutter and the most sin-seared woman of the town are just as much worth saving, just as precious in the sight of God, as the most respectable member of society made me wish that I could believe his theology." A person who cannot believe John 3:16 can never understand a salvation that is big enough to include everyone.

5. At the Passover Supper which Jesus observed just before going to His Cross, John leaned "on Jesus' bosom." John lived in close fellowship with Jesus. He was most joyous when closest to the Lord. To walk in close fellowship with Him, there must be nothing between ourselves and Him. We cannot draw nigh to Him if we are living in unconfessed and unjudged sins.

"Nothing between my soul and the Saviour,
Naught of this world's delusive dream;
I have renounced all sinful pleasure,
Jesus is mine, there's nothing between.

"Nothing between, like worldly pleasure,
Habits of life though harmless they seem,
Must not my heart from Him e'er sever,
He is my all; there's nothing between."

Thoughtless people sometimes say that it was not right for Jesus to love John more than the other apostles, but didn't he deserve it? He was the only one of the apostles who stood near the Cross when Jesus was dying on it. How much of Jesus' love do we deserve as Christians?

When the outlook is dark, try the up-look!—Gospel Herald.

Central Conference Report and Appeal

Since the meeting of the Central Conference of North Carolina last fall, the mission board, working through our missionary, the Rev. Frank Davenport, has been able to open up three missions.

The mission point near Kinston has been organized into a church, namely, Faith Free Will Baptist Church with 46 members and a good Sunday school.

The Pinetops mission with 26 members was organized into a church June 26. The church is called Peace Free Will Baptist Church, and they have a good Sunday school.

The Scotland Neck mission has just organized a Sunday school which is making good progress. A revival began August 6 with hopes of organizing into a church. Your prayers, gifts and cooperation has made all this work possible.

In order to take care of all the needs of our mission program we need $8 per month, or $2 per week, from each church in the Central Conference. Your mission board is hereby appealing to your church to share in the conference mission program by giving this amount. We need your help now!

Please send all donations to the Rev. I. J. Blackwelder, Ayden, North Carolina.

In the near future we want to open up some new mission points. This can be done as we pray, give and work together. (Read 1 Corinthians 3:9.)

The promotional secretary for the Home Mission Board, Rev. Damon Dodd, offered his resignation to be effective October 1, 1956. His resignation was accepted. Prayer is requested as the board seeks to employ another promotional secretary.

The Home Mission Board went on record as being dissatisfied with the allocation from the cooperative program and asked for at least 15% for the next year.

The board set for a goal new churches in the following states within the next three years: Iowa, Utah, Wyoming, North Dakota, South Dakota, Minnesota, Wisconsin and the District of Columbia. This would make Free Will Baptist churches in all the 48 states.

The board is grateful to the National Woman's Auxiliary Convention for the project they have of providing a tent for the national missionaries and the board.

Rev. J. B. Bloss, retiring board member, was made an honorary member of the board for life. Brother Bloss has been chairman of the board for several years and has done much to help the work. Rev. Harvey Hill from Missouri, is the new board member.

By vote of the board the present system of helping churches was discontinued and from this time on all requests from new churches must come from either a board member, a missionary or the promotional secretary. Each request for assistance will be properly handled on the merits of the work.

The new church in Springfield, Missouri, was given $500 after a report by two of the board members.

The board will meet again August 27 and 28, 1956, in St. Louis, Missouri.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

purchasing fifty acres of land and we are working with an architect in drawing a master plan for a college campus that will ultimately accommodate five hundred boarding students. We have the youth, and we do not want to lose them by failing to give them proper educational opportunities. We firmly believe that the future of the Free Will Baptist denomination is at stake on the problem of higher Christian education. We urge you to support Mount Olive Junior College faithfully and liberally in order that we may help produce the kind of trained leadership that is essential for the growth of our church.

The Rev. and Mrs. Jack Paramore conducted a vacation Bible school at the Otway Mission on June 24-30 with a total attendance of 283 and an average attendance of 56. Pictured above is the group of children and teachers who attended the school.

EDITORIAL

WHERE ARE WE GOING?

(Editor's Note: This editorial is adapted from The Promoter, the official monthly organ of Oklahoma Free Will Baptists. It was written by the editor of that publication, the Reverend E. M. Kennedy.)

There has never been an age, or a people, that has failed to give out dreadful warnings as to the destiny of the future. Many times these warnings have been warranted, and most times they are signs of a healthy condition; sometimes they come from a selfish purpose which becomes unheeded by those who most need the warning. We have come a long way in these past forty years of existence in Oklahoma; even in the past ten years there has been such a prodigious growth that many have taken up the cry of the danger of our failing in Spiritual things. Perhaps there is always that danger. Often I say we need not fear fanaticism, for we are not headed in that direction. Many times, I fear, we fail to comprehend what should be termed Spirituality, for often we place the measuring stick of shouting or emotionalism as the gage of our depths of love and devotion. I was born in a storm and I hope you will not misunderstand me when I say that we can applaud without following Christ. We can be near enough to touch His sacred garment and never lay a brick in God's city, or strike a blow for God's victory. We can admire without helping His cause and Kingdom. The measuring stick that Christ uses is whether or not we have done our best to obey. "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world" (Matthew 28:19, 20).

We are headed in the right direction when we are endeavoring to send the gospel message around the world. If we can shout while we are being asked for support for the gospel and give liberally and without complaining, I'm sure God can look down and say, "There is a child of Mine that is serving instead of hitch-hiking." If we are found faithful every time the church doors are open for service, notwithstanding the special television program that we love, or kinsfolk, or business, again I'm sure He can say, "Well done thou faithful one, thou hast been faithful over a few things. Enter thou into the joys of thy Lord." There is no limit as to our accomplishments as long as we serve out of a heart of love. James said Faith without works is dead. There is a time to weep, a time to rejoice, a time to pray, a time to work; but it takes all these traits to make a well-balanced Christian.

The world field provides an outlet for the life currents of the church, and the union between Pentecost and world evangelization is indissoluble. The outpouring of the Holy Spirit and world-wide missions are contemporary: they love together; they work together; they perish together. Restrict and suppress the missionary spirit and the church stagnates and suffers organic disfigurement. If the devil can succeed in diverting the efforts of the church into other channels, he has succeeded in paralyzing the church.

The motive for our salvation was to help win a lost world to Christ. When we fail to this great task, regardless of how loud we shout, or high we jump, God has no interest in our problems. It is only when we do the will of Him that He is pleased. It is only when we have finished the task in hand for that day, or have the assurance that we are doing His will that we can really rejoice in His blessings. How can we shout, "Victory" while there is a war to fight. We can rejoice when a battle has been won; then we can go forward to win another.

CHURCH EXTENSION

What's in a name? You will notice that the title of this article is Church Extension; but the article deals with what our people choose to call home missions. We are sure that a rose would be just as sweet even if it were called by some other name. The matter of greatest importance is not what we call an activity in which we engage; it is what that activity contributes toward the glory of God and the salvation of men.

On the other hand, lest some people become offended or mistake the doctrinal beliefs of Free Will Baptists, we should either give consideration to revising the name of our activity or give a clear definition to what we mean by the word, missions. If we are incorrect in our understanding of the term, Christian missions means going to people who either have never heard the truth in Christ or who are not at the time receiving the ministry of that truth.

If we believe that all the people in our country who are not Free Will Baptists are heathen, we are correct in calling our activities home missions. But we do not believe that. In extending our work by organizing churches in communities where we have no churches, we are merely ministering to our own people who have moved into those communities, and joining hand with other church groups there to reach the lost for Christ.

Of course there is a definite need for home missions. Wherever there are groups of people in our country, and other areas within the confines outlined as the domain of the board, who have never heard of Christ, our activities there would be truly home missions. We are informed that such areas do exist, and missionaries should be assigned to minister there. We are concerned about the need of transient laborers who come to this country to work at seasonal jobs, moving from place to place and never being reached by the gospel through the churches. Among the other needy places are the communities of foreign speaking people in our cities, the Indians on reservations, the millions of Mexico, Alaska and other North American countries.

In the light of the activities which we are engaged in, would it not be better to revise the name of our boards which are so charged, and call them Church Extension and Home Missions Boards?

The explanation of Paul is Stephen! Had there not been a Stephen, would there have been a Paul? At Stephen's martyrdom, Paul saw how a Christian could react when under fire! He saw how a Christian could die!—Selected.

This and That

Naaman Borders, Waverly, Ohio

I READ in a recent issue of our paper where Brother Shutes had been canvassing through our ranks in behalf of superannuation. He reports that not too many of our people are taking our church papers. If all our people were as perfect as they should be, we ministers would be out of jobs. I find the same trouble everywhere I go. That is the reason we should labor all the harder. I suppose that an editor also has the same kind of trouble, assorting out poor articles and printing the things that are worthwhile. Some folk are offended if their articles are not printed, and if they are printed, others are offended. So this is where the editor has to scratch his head, and do a lot of thinking. It's just like a sack that is loose at both ends—you'll lose some grain whichever way you turn it.

Human nature is weak, and too often the devil seizes upon our weak points to spoil everything. That's the reason Jesus told us again and again to be as little children and also to forgive seventy times seven. I find it rather discouraging that so few are interested in taking our papers. But after all, we have the fun of beating the bushes and getting their eyes open. Rev. Bud Robison of Texas said that a man who wouldn't take his own church paper was a heathen. Well, if he is not a heathen, he is on the road to heathendom, it seems to me. Every unit of the United States Army keeps in touch with every other unit in order to work together successfully. How in the name of common sense can we keep in touch with each other without a church paper, and what good are our church papers if our folk won't take them? These are sixty-four dollar questions. One can pay for a year's subscription to either of the papers for what he gets for one or two hours' work, and one paper is worth that much. I have read so many good articles by so many good brethren that I feel I know them personally. Therefore, I love them dearly, and would be glad to invite any of them into my home if they were to venture to my vicinity.

I would like to tell you why I am a Free Will Baptist. It is not because my relatives or friends are, but because of the doctrine which I believe so firmly. I have been offered a neat little salary to go to another church, but I could not accept their doctrine and be honest with myself. I expect to preach the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth as I see it. A horse can't pull much if his harness does not fit him. David could not fight the giant by putting on Saul's armor. Though the king's armor was as perfect as could be, David refused it because it didn't fit him. He might have gotten bungled up and killed himself. So, he threw the armor down and took his slingshot—something that he was used to. When I see someone who tries to mimic some great preacher, it makes me think of King Saul's episode. When one tries to preach like someone else, he is sure to make a fool of himself. No one can preach like someone else and get by with it. I'm like our beloved and late Rev. Conley, I'll preach the truth if I die in the poor house. He said his principle was not for sale. He stood for the doctrine of the Free Will Baptists.

We can't afford to be wishy-washy and to soft-pedal. When we see an evil in our church or out of it, let's hit it as hard as we can. You can't afford to hunt for a nice smooth stick to hit a rattlesnake with. The rougher the cudgel, the better. But let's be sure it's a snake and not a shadow. Sometimes we make a big stir over nothing. I have heard of some folk who got into a big argument over what kind of pole Moses put the brazen serpent upon. Some said it was a poplar pole, while others said it was a locust or sassafras pole. Some folk are just that contentious; I pity them.

We also find some churches so narrow-minded that they say, "If you don't belong to us, you can't be saved." Free Will Baptists say you can be saved in any church. If I understand it correctly, there are those in other churches who will be saved, but who may have to suffer loss in the judgment day because of not putting on the whole armor of God. Some are building upon wood, hay, stubble; while others build upon gold and precious stones. We should take heed as to what we build our foundations upon. In 1 Corinthians 3:10-15 we find these words: "According to the grace of God which is given unto me, as a wise masterbuilder, I have laid the foundation, and another buildeth thereon. But let every man take heed how he buildeth thereupon. For other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ. Now if any man build upon this foundation gold, silver, precious stones, wood, hay, stubble; Every man's work shall be made manifest: for the day shall declare it, because it shall be revealed by fire; and the fire shall try every man's work of what sort it is. If any man's work abide which he hath built thereupon, he shall receive a reward. If any man's work shall be burned, he shall suffer loss: but he himself shall be saved; yet so as by fire."

If I read my Bible correctly, some people will have more to rejoice about than others who have just barely gotten in. Doesn't the Bible plainly say that we are rewarded according to our works? I know some will come back at me with the parable about the workers' being paid a penny a day, some having worked full time while others only an hour. But that is on a different subject, if I understand it. Will you be one of those who just barely get past the pearly gates?

A Boy's Religion

If a boy is a lover of the Lord Jesus Christ, though he cannot lead a prayer meeting or be a church officer or preacher, he can be a Godly boy in a boy's way and in a boy's place. He need not cease to be a boy because he is a Christian. He ought to run, jump, climb and yell just like a real boy. But in all, he ought to be free from bad words and bad actions. He ought not to use tobacco in any form, and should have a horror of intoxicating drinks. He ought to be peaceable, gentle, merciful and generous. He ought to take the part of small boys against large ones. He ought to refuse to be a party to mischief, to persecution, to deceit. And, above all things, he ought now and then to show his colors. He should not always be interrupting a game to say that he is a Christian, but he ought not to be ashamed to say that he refuses to do something because he fears God, or is a Christian. He ought to take no part in the ridicule of sacred things, but meet the ridicule of others with a bold statement that for things of God he feels the deepest reverence.—Playmate.

MEN OF THEIR WORD

"How did you like the bishop's sermon?" Mrs. Smith asked her husband on the way home from church. "Well, frankly," he confessed, "I like our own minister better." "Why is that?" his wife wanted to know. "It's the words they use," explained Mr. Smith. "Our minister says 'In conclusion' and then he concludes. The bishop says 'Lastly' and then he lasts."—From Action.

Dear Bill

D. C. Crawford

(Editor's Note: This article was adapted from an open letter to Bill the Bartender, Columbia Broadcasting System, New York City.)

THE other night you came into my living room, stood behind a bar on my new television receiver, and asked a question. Your question is a personal one. It made me think. I feel that I should take the time to answer you.

Let me assure you that I have given the matter some careful thought. The conclusions which I express are not the product of haphazard guess work, but rather the result of thoughtful consideration.

"What'll you have?" you asked.

Well, Bill, I'll tell you; I'd rather have lower taxes and more efficient government than your beer or any other beer. Out of every pay check I get, a substantial amount goes to remedy the tragic consequences of alcoholism and the evil it produces.

I don't drink, but my money has to take care of that thief who drank one bottle of beer too many and thought he could get away with robbing a filling station. He was a pretty nice guy otherwise, but after he had one too many he just couldn't say no to the temptation of easy money.

Law enforcement agents tell me that alcohol lies behind at least 50 per cent of the crime in our country. Crime costs me money even though I'm a law-abiding citizen. My taxes must maintain courts and officers, jails, correctional institutions and hospitals.

So logically, Bill, I'll have to choose between your favorite beer or lower taxes. I'll have the latter.

Of course you'll insist that higher taxes levied on your product relieve me of a good portion of the burden. But I don't think you carry your fair share of the load. Back in 1943 the legislators of Massachusetts checked up on this matter. They found that the receipts from beverage alcohol totaled a little better than thirteen million dollars. But for that same year the bill presented to the taxpayers of that state for caring for mental patients whose condition was wholly or partly caused by alcoholism, and for apprehending and prosecuting drunken criminals, was sixty-one million dollars—almost five times as much as the revenue.

So, you see, Bill, as a father of three children who is trying to make ends meet in this day of high prices, I'd be foolish to choose something which is draining away my savings and keeping me from better providing for my kids.

And speaking of kids, this world we have made for them is a mighty sorry mess. The unsettled conditions and the continual threat of war make it pretty tough on our youngsters. We are enjoying a few brief moments of respite from war right now, and I'd like to keep it that way so my son won't have to pay the price on the beach at Salerno or the rocky slopes of an Iwo Jima.

It seems to me that those who are guiding our destiny and making decisions which will mean my kid's freedom or enslavement ought to have the clearest heads possible. If they spend much of their time guzzling beer, they won't be capable of choosing the right course. So, Bill, on that score it looks like I'll have to pass up the beer you say is so fine.

You're a good announcer and a persuasive speaker, Bill. I listened to your commercial attentively, and if I didn't know better, you might have convinced me. For instance, you spoke of inviting friends over for an evening and serving your beer with a snack. The idea, of course, was that such action would prove I was a gracious host with the welfare of my guests my main concern.

Well, frankly, Bill, I couldn't do that to any of my friends. There's a lot more to it than just pouring them a glass of beer. Look at it this way. I've talked to many people over the past ten or twelve years who had pretty well become slaves to drink. Most of them admitted that if they just hadn't taken that first glass they wouldn't be addicts today.

Sure, I know not everyone who takes just one drink becomes an alcoholic. But how am I going to tell which of my friends will and which won't? In a couple of years from now one of them should lose his job and his self-respect and his home because he was a sot, it would be on my conscience for the rest of my life. Now, Bill, maybe you don't have a conscience, but I do—and mine would never give me peace again if something like that happened.

Building A Human Junk Pile

Chronic alcoholism has increased alarmingly since prohibition. Every city and town has its junk pile of human wrecks battered and ruined by liquor. My town has more than enough already, Bill, and I certainly don't want to have any part in making any more of them.

"What'll you have?" Why, Bill, I'll try to add to the happiness and success of my friends, not contribute to their ruin.

Bill, I noticed that the pictures you showed to appeal to the viewers always caught the actors with smiles on their faces. You'd like to make me believe that beer and a good time go together. In other words, to be popular and carefree, drink beer. That's a pretty good line. Everyone wants to be popular and get along well with others. A lot of our young people and high school kids fall for it.

They haven't been around as much as I have, Bill. I know better. I've seen a drunk wallowing in his own vomit too stupefied even to realize what was going on. He was all by himself, Bill. People went out of their way to avoid him. He wasn't the least bit popular.

I've watched a wife cry because a drunken husband had squandered his pay check on drink and there wasn't anything left to buy groceries for the week. That's the other side of the picture, Bill.

I've sat on a bunk in a jail cell and heard the pathetic story of a fellow who "just had a few beers" before he ran down a child he didn't see in front of his car. He wasn't carefree then, Bill.

One memorable scene sticks in my mind. I sat in a judge's chambers one afternoon and heard him issue a decree which would take three children from a mother who had become morally delinquent through drink. She wasn't very happy about it.

I wish you could have been there, Bill, and seen the look on her face. Maybe you would understand why I can't choose your beer, or anyone else's.

It Began With One Drink

Juvenile judges all over the country can tell you story after story about attractive, wholesome, happy, high school girls who have wrecked their lives because their inhibitions and better judgment were clouded by a few drinks. That's another reason why I can't go along with you, my friend. I can't contribute to the delinquency of a minor, directly or indirectly. I'd never sleep well again.

You see, Bill, I wouldn't want my little girl to wind up like some of the people I've seen who believed your line and decided that popularity was more important than virtue. My kids are sound and healthy. Their mother and I have given them a good heritage. One drink by either of us could have produced a laxity of morals for a few hours which might have resulted in a physical or mental handicap in our children from which they never could recover.

As you probably have guessed, my wife and I love our kids a lot. You suggested that we should bring home a carton of your favorite beer from the grocery store, Bill. But we couldn't do that. Our children might get the idea that beer drinking was all right for them. I'm a little older than they are and have a little better sense and judgment. My kids could be seriously harmed by following my example if my example was unwholesome since they are a lot less experienced. No soap, Bill. Instead of your beer, I'll try to set a pattern for my little ones that will help them go straight.

Try The Emergency Ward

Have you ever been to a hospital, Bill? You ought to go sometime. Sit down at the bedside of that widow with a broken pelvis and a blind right eye who was injured at the same time her husband was killed—when a drunken driver going eighty smashed into their car. Talk to her, Bill. Ask her, "What'll you have?" See what she tells you.

Hope you don't think I'm being old-fashioned or bluenosed about this thing, Bill. You know, that's often the impression you folks get when those of us who hate alcohol express our opinions. You notice I haven't said a word about the spiritual or religious angles involved, although there is plenty that could be said. I'm trying to be practical. I'm examining the problem from a logical viewpoint.

When I went to school two plus two made four. You always get that answer. When I add up the heartache and misery that beer, wine, and whiskey bring to the home and the community and the nation, I get just one answer to your question, Bill.

"What'll you have?" Give me happy homes, cheaper government, stronger children, the pleasure that lets me waken bright and cheerful the next morning instead of with a headache and a heart full of regrets.

The things I want and beer—and beer—just don't go together, Bill.

BURNING BONES

TRUST in the LORD with all thine heart; and lean not unto thine own understanding. In all thy ways acknowledge him, and he shall direct thy paths" (Proverbs 3:5, 6).

"Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might; for there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave, whither thou goest" (Ecclesiastes 9:10).

"Not slothful in business; fervent in spirit; serving the Lord" (Romans 12:11).

"I must work the works of him that sent me, while it is day: the night cometh when no man can work" (John 9:4).

"For we cannot but speak the things which we have seen and heard" (Acts 4:20).

Stop! Before continuing to read this article read these verses again. Now, let me tell you a story about one of the prophets.

Pashur, the son of Immer the priest, who was also the chief governor of the house of the Lord, heard that Jeremiah, the prophet of God, was pronouncing evil against Jerusalem because of its wickedness. Pashur had Jeremiah smitten and put in stocks. The next day when Jeremiah was called before Pashur, Jeremiah gave this testimony, found in Jeremiah 20: 9. "Then I said, I will not make mention of him, nor speak any more in his name. But his word was in mine heart as a burning fire shut up in my bones, and I was weary with forbearing, and I could not stay."

Listen to these words of the prophet of God as he said, "I tried not to tell the story, or the message, but it was so strong upon me that my bones were being consumed because of the urgency of the message." Now, read again the verses in the beginning of this article.

The Lord has promised to those that trust Him and acknowledge Him, a directed path. He further gives directions in which we are to go. The directions are simple—trust and acknowledge Him (Proverbs 3: 5, 6). Whatever our hands find to do (Ecclesiastes 9:10) that are His works (John 9:4) we are to do with all diligence (Romans 12:11) for our time to work is growing short. Then with a holy zeal we must tell forth all the wondrous works of the Lord (Acts 4:20).

This applies to each of us, wherever we may be. There is no excuse for anyone to say, "I have no opportunity to work for the Lord." Never has there been a time in the history of the Church of the Lord Jesus Christ when there has been more to do. Look about you. Everywhere men and women are plunging headlong into eternity lost, doomed to spend the never-ending ages in the pits of the damned.

We have, placed before us by the Lord, many channels and opportunities for work. All that's needed is consecrated men and women who have the zeal and urgency of the work burning in their bones. God has promised to direct the work, we are commanded to do the work.

May the Lord raise up in our midst men and women who have completely surrendered to the Lord, who are trusting completely in Him, and who are willing to work, and work diligently at whatever the Lord puts before them.

"I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service. And be not conformed to this world: but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect, will of God" (Romans 12:1, 2).—Edgemont Free Will Baptist Challenger, Edgemont Free Will Baptist Church, Durham, North Carolina.

Stacy Church Completes Revival

The Rev. Fred A. Rivenbark, pastor of the Fairmount Park Free Will Baptist Church, Norfolk, Virginia, recently completed a series of revival services at the Stacy, North Carolina, Free Will Baptist Church. The pastor of the Stacy Church, the Rev. Roger Reeds, directed the singing during the services which were held July 18-27.

Romain Gaskill, secretary of the Stacy Church, makes the following statements concerning the revival: "For some time we had prayed for a revival and the Lord has answered our prayers. From the very beginning wonderful crowds were in attendance. A number of precious souls went forward in rededication, and a number of lost souls came to the mercy seat and received the Lord Jesus Christ as their own personal Saviour. There was old-fashioned rejoicing when sinners went forward to be saved from a life of sin. God certainly used Mr. Rivenbark in declaring the unsearchable riches of God's grace, the only remedy and cure for the sins of the human family."

In the near future the Stacy Church will go on full time with the Rev. Paul Lee as pastor. The men of the community are expecting to have the new parsonage, which they have been building on for some time, completed for the new pastor. The church asks for prayers as it ventures into a full-time program.

David W. Hansley Changes Pastorate

On July 18, 1956, the Rev. David W. Hansley moved from Pine Level, North Carolina, to Columbia, North Carolina. He has accepted a charge of pastoral work consisting of Malachi's Chapel, Sound Side and Gum Neck Churches, all in Tyrrell County near Columbia.

Mr. Hansley's former pastorate was with the Pine Level Church, Pine Level, North Carolina, and the Rains Cross Roads Church, Princeton, North Carolina. His charge consisted of half-time service at each of these churches.

It is reported that he leaves a fine record of achievements at his last field of labor as follows: During the four years of his stay there, more than 200 members were added to these churches, and each church moved from quarter-time to half-time services. At Pine Level ten Sunday school rooms were added, increasing the value of the church property by approximately $30,000. The original Sunday school rooms were completely renovated, and the outside of the entire building was covered with "Bond Stone" at a cost of $6,000. At Rains Cross Roads the church made initial plans for building a parsonage. During this time both churches raised three times as much money for denominational enterprises and local purposes as at any similar period during their history.

White River Conference Holds Meeting

The White River Conference of Free Will Baptists of Arkansas met with the New Home Free Will Baptist Church July 27, 28, 1956. Twelve of the fourteen churches belonging to the conference were represented by letter and delegates. The following report was derived from figures and facts from thirteen of the churches:

There are 777 resident members at the present, showing a gain of 31 during last quarter. Two Sunday schools have been discontinued, contributing to a loss of 69 regular attendants. One new auxiliary has been organized, making a total of three in the conference. One league has been recently organized and two discontinued, leaving twelve in all. Figures show a gain of seven leaguers in the last three months. Six members of the conference have died since last April: W. B. Hardin and Cal Woosley of Mt. Harmony Church, John Hayne of Allan Chapel Church, Ruby Moss and Lillie Keller of New Home Church.

Brother Gaylord Huckaba of Oil Trough was licensed to preach on request of Blackland Chapel Church. The next meeting of the conference will be held at the First Free Will Baptist Church of Newport, Arkansas, with Brother Huckaba in charge of the introductory service on Friday night, September 28.

Renovation Program Completed At Blakely, Georgia, Church

A complete renovation program has been completed in the Blakely, Georgia, Free Will Baptist Church, under the direction of the pastor, the Rev. L. R. Curtis, with the assistance of the church members. The interior of the church has been painted and new carpets have been laid. Money for this project was donated by the woman's auxiliary of the church. All of the work was done by the pastor and members.

It is also reported that since the pastor and his family moved from Missouri to the community, the Sunday school attendance has increased considerably as well as the attendance at worship services. The church had its vacation Bible school, beginning June 17 with 106 attending. The church also reports two revivals, one held by the pastor and a mission revival with the Rev. E. C. Morris as the speaker. A week of stewardship study has also been held at the church. A special candlelight service was held June 3 in honor of four members of the church who were graduating from high school. The Blakely Church has plans for the future which include the addition of an educational building and a kitchen.

Questions and Answers ON THE BIBLE

Conducted by J. F. BARROW

3824 Richland Avenue, Nashville 5, Tennessee

Question: Some friends of mine and I have been puzzled as we discuss: "Whosoever believeth that Jesus is the Christ is born of God: and every one that loveth him that begat loveth him also that is begotten of him" (1 John 5:1); "Whosoever is born of God doth not commit sin; for his seed remaineth in him: and he cannot sin, because he is born of God" (1 John 3:9); and "If we say that we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us" (1 John 1:8). Will you please harmonize these Scripture verses for us?—Elder Colonel Pendelton, Madison, Tennessee.

Answer: Believing in Christ as He is set forth in the Bible is all that is necessary for one to do in order for him to be saved. Being saved as is mentioned in Acts 16:31. Born again as is declared by Jesus to be essential to one's salvation in John 3:3, 5, and coming to Jesus as we are invited by Him to do in Matthew 11:28-30, and being saved by grace through faith as seen in Ephesians 2:8; being justified by faith as we who are Christians are declared to be in Romans 5:1 is all one and the same. When we believe from our hearts what God says in His Word we are changed from a dead to a living spiritual man; our citizenship is changed from earth to heaven. We become pilgrims the rest of the time we live here on earth and in these bodies. We are at once on our way to heaven into the presence of Christ who is now on God, the Father's right hand. This believing is not just a belief that such a man as Christ Jesus was born a Babe in Bethlehem, lived and abode in Nazareth, was a good Man and visited Jerusalem as is said of Him in the Bible, but such a belief or faith as is set forth in the Bible involves much more.

"That if thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved. For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness; and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation. For the scripture saith, Whosoever believeth on him shall not be ashamed" (Romans 10:9-11). To conform to this Scripture one must believe that God raised Christ from the dead. This kind of belief involves more than an act by which one acknowledges that Christ is God and passes again into a state of doubt and fear. It involves a life of faith or belief in which a new life from heaven is implanted in the believer. It also calls for a death of self, a state of death in which the old man with all his desires, love and ambitions are being kept dead or in a state of dying. See Galatians 2:20; compare with Romans 6:3-14.

God calls on us inviting us to come to Jesus, accept Him as Saviour of our souls and Lord of our lives and promises that when we have placed ourselves at the disposal of His mercy, trusting our all to Him, He will do the rest. "But my God shall supply all your need according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus" and "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me" (Philippians 4:19, 13). He tells us how to keep ourselves at His disposal by just reckoning ourselves to be dead to self or the self life and alive in Christ. As we find ourselves unable to do this because of unreasonable circumstances that we meet with in this world we are to follow the admonition given in God's Word. "If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not; and it shall be given him" (James 1:5); "There hath no temptation taken you but such as is common to man: but God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able; but will with the temptation also make a way to escape, that ye may be able to bear it" (1 Corinthians 10:13).

In 1 John 3:9, quoted above, we meet with a verse whose final solution is more difficult and which has bred a greater variety of opinions than the other two involved in your question. I think, and so do some of the scholars who have pondered its depths, that the correct rendering of the expression "doth not commit sin" is better expressed in the words "doth not enter into a realm of living which calls for constant acts of sin." The thought to be kept in the forefront here is that even though a born again Christian may, while expressing the imperfection of the old nature in a single act of sin, cannot enter into a life of licentiousness or one given over to habitual sinning.

A. T. Robertson in "Word Pictures in the New Testament," Vol. VI, Page 223, says, "Doeth no sin (hamartian ou poiei). Linear present active indicative as in Verse 4 like hamartanei in Verse 8. The child of God does not have the habit of sin. His seed (sperma autou). God's seed, 'the divine principle of of life' (Vincent). Cf. John I. And he cannot sin (kai ou dunatai hamartanein). This is a wrong translation, for this English naturally means 'and he cannot commit sin' as if it were kai ou dunatai hamartan or hamartesai (second aorist or first aorist active infinitive). The present active infinitive hamartanein can only mean 'and he cannot go on sinning,' as is true of hamartanei in Verse 8 and hamartanon in Verse 6. For the aorist subjunctive to commit a sin see hamartete and hamartei in 2:1. A great deal of false theology has grown out of a misunderstanding of the tense of hamartanein here. Paul has precisely John's idea in Romans 6:1 epimenomen tei hamartiai (shall we continue in sin, present active linear subjunctive) in contrast with hamarteson in Romans 6:15 (shall we commit a sin, first aorist active subjunctive)."

James M. Ghysels, in "The Highest Fellowship," Pages 149, 150, says of this verse, "It certainly should be obvious that whatever he may have meant, he did not mean that a believer never commits sin.

"The first thing to note is that he says, 'Whosoever is begotten of God. . . ' To be begotten of God, what does that mean? Of course it means to be born of God, or in other words, to be regenerated. The apostle is not speaking merely of a professing Christian, but of a reborn soul. It is well to remember that regeneration from one point of view is a completed act; from another point of view a process which is never completed in this life. The apostle speaks of regeneration in this verse in both senses. He says, 'Whosoever is begotten, . . . ' using a past tense, and he alludes to the beginning of the spiritual change in the believer. Then he says in the latter part of the verse, 'and he cannot sin because he is begotten of God,' using here a tense which conceives of regeneration as a process which continues throughout the whole of a Christian's life. We might translate the words this way, 'and he cannot sin because he is being begotten of God,' conceiving of this change in the believer's life as one that never ceases but abides till the end. It is not a change completed once for all, but one which is never quite complete as long as we are in this life."

A Negro preacher was asked about the membership of his little church. "I've got 100 members," he declared proudly, "and they're all working." "One hundred active members! that certainly speaks well for you." "Don't know about that," mused the preacher. "Half of 'em is working for de Lord an' half for de devil."—Hickory Chapel Church Bulletin, Ahsokie, N. C.

The Lighted Pathway

Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path (PSALM 119:105).

REV. WILLET L. MORETZ
SWANNANOA, N. C.

"For in him we live, and move, and have our being; . . ." (Acts 17:28).

I believe my readers will be interested in the two short articles which are quoted below. I believe also these articles will awaken within us a sense of the greatest need existing among us today: namely, Christ living within our hearts in order that He may guide our lives.

In the current issue of the United Evangelical Action appears the following:

"Christendom's greatest need in these crucial days is a new sense of Christ indwelling the life of the believer through the Holy Spirit. 'Christ is here now!' is the miraculous talisman by which Christians may meet every challenge of evil and come through victorious.

"Too many so-called Christians believe that Christ is dead. At least, they act like it. They seem defeated, helpless, hopeless and undone in the awful maelstrom that swirls about them. They have no clear, courageous testimony for the times.

"Christ Jesus lives today! If Christians can realize this to the full, they may enter upon the most glorious spiritual experience known to man. They will be stirred as they have never been stirred before. They will possess power they never imagined possible. They will have poise in the midst of chaos. They will have the peace that passes understanding. They will stand for Bible truth without compromise. They will translate their faith into Christian action in every area of life.

"Realize Christ through the Holy Spirit! Know God—abiding, illuminating, empowering, guiding and comforting. Make your profession a living, vital thing. Help give new impetus to the ongoing work of Christ in the world today."

The foregoing brought to my heart a challenge in an unusual way to open my heart for a fuller entrance of Christ into my life and ministry. I pray that, as you read it, you may have the same experience, and open your hearts and invite Him in to the full. The Bible tells us, "Behold, I stand at the door, and knock: if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me" (Revelation 3:20). In this verse is contained one of the most precious assurances of the indwelling Christ in the heart of the willing believer.

In the following short article which came to my attention recently the sad fact of the absence of God in many hearts and homes is brought to us forcefully. Ponder it!

"Five-year-old Margaret and her brother were frequent visitors in the home of a neighbor. One of the never-ending wonders over which little Margaret pondered as she visited in Hortense's home was the prayer time. Hortense's daddy read out of the big black book and afterward talked to God as if He were very near and dear to them all. Sometimes the family would join in singing a song of praise.

"One morning when Margaret had been present at the prayer time, Hortense's mother suggested, 'Margaret, don't you pray at your house?' Margaret shook her head sadly and said, 'No, you see, God doesn't live at our house like He does at yours.'

"Margaret's home was by no means a so-called underprivileged one. It was an average, middle-class American home. But if the little girl wanted to meet God, the heavenly Father, she had to go next door. He just wasn't included in her family circle."—Sunday School Digest.

" . . . and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him" (John 14:23).

Why is it we believe so much and experience so little? Why is it that our heads are so full and our hearts so empty? —Selected.

Gypsy Smith was once asked how to start a revival. # NOTES — AND — QUOTES

By J. C. Griffin

FAST GROWING

We are so inclined that we like to brag about success or great achievements which we have been instrumental in bringing about. There is a certain religious group who claim they are not a sect but that they are the fastest growing religious body in the world. They do not say theirs is the best denomination. To my knowledge, they deny many of the fundamental doctrines of the Bible. Why? Because fast growing does not spell righteousness. We have seen sap weeds outgrow stalks of corn, but we have never heard of sap weeds being made food for the physical body. There are many people who are trying to feed their souls on that which God never recommended for the soul of man.

Jesus Christ Would Not Be Welcome

In spite of modernism, that doctrine which denies many of the fundamental facts set forth in the Bible, there are yet men who have the doctrine of real salvation fixed to the degree that they can defy the enemies of fundamental, honest-to-goodness, heart-felt, all-on-the-altar Christian religion. Such a man recently spoke at one of the great meeting places of one of the larger denominations; however, I am sure that he is getting his share of criticism for being so out-spoken against the modern trend of so-called Christianity.

The man whom we are talking about is the Dr. Walter Gumm of Norfolk, Virginia, who spoke recently at Lake Junaluska in a missionary conference. Dr. Gumm said, "Jesus Christ would not be an acceptable preacher in most Methodist churches today." According to an Associated Press report, Dr. Gumm said, "Jesus was too outspoken and too critical of the political and religious hierarchy of His day." Continuing he said, "If He were to preach the same type of sermons in most Methodist churches, the pastoral relations committee would immediately request the presiding bishop that He be transferred."

Do We Agree?

As I think of the condemnation lodged against his church by Dr. Gumm, I wonder if such an accusation could not be justly alleged against most of the religious bodies. This liberal doctrine started in the large denominations some years ago, but gradually is getting down to the smaller ones. When I speak of denominations, I do not mean the religious cults of today, many of which deny the very fundamental doctrines of the Lord Jesus and have substituted the word of man for the Word of God. But I am talking about those who at one time demonstrated a salvation with an experience, a religion with a testimony as to the definite knowledge of salvation through faith in the atonement of the Lord Jesus Christ which redeems man from the curse of sin and hell fire. In many pulpits modernism has sprung up and a bloodless, compromising, man-made religion has been substituted. By this I mean a religion that works more to get church members than to get souls saved from a demon's hell.

Thus, in many places, proselyting is a means of obtaining members instead of working to get men saved. They are merely enlisted in church membership. Thus you ask a man if he is saved, and most times he will say, "I'm a member of the church," or "I'm a Baptist." I asked a young man once if he was a Christian, and he answered, "No, I'm a Baptist." As I talked with him, I found out that that was about all he was. He said he was a Baptist. What kind of Baptist? He belonged to a Free Will Baptist church, but one of those who had left off the Free Will and just said Baptist.

It is deplorable to think of the unsaved church members. My, what a day it will be when we all stand before the Lord Jesus Christ to be judged! My unsaved church member, you will want to be more than a Baptist when you meet Jesus Christ. You will want to be more than just a member of some organization which calls itself Christian. You will want to have your vessel filled with oil. You will want your lamp trimmed and burning. Yes, you will want to know that your name is written in the Lamb's Book of Life. You will want to have the love of God shed abroad in your heart. Get your Bible right now and read Romans 5:5.

So many people are getting church-ed by signing a card, or church-ed by some denominational clique. I was told once by a man that a certain preacher tried to get him to join his church with this argument: "We are trying to build a church, and we want you to join in with us and hold the office of treasurer." To this argument the unsaved gentleman said, "Why, I'm not a Christian; I have never been born again." Then the membership-seeking preacher said, "That makes no difference, you are a good man and it will be all right."

I have been informed that one man told another, "You can join our church, go to Sunday school and church in the morning, go fishing Sunday evening, and still be in good standing." One man told me himself, when I asked him what it took to be a good member of his church, "Keep your dues paid regularly." He was a member of a large church in a large denomination.

Some preachers are trying to get people in the church through the recreation method. They say, "You can dance; you can spend the Lord's Day fishing, hunting, drinking (just so you do not get drunk and harm someone)." In other words, just confess Christ and live like the devil wants you to; God is so good that it will be all right.

It is said that a young minister, who had fallen down on the job of pastoral work, wrote to an old former pastor, who had grand success in a particular church, and said, "I want some advice as how to succeed as a pastor." Going further, he said, "We have tried the recreation method; we have tried suppers; we have tried programs; we have tried various plans to get people to support the church, etc." Then the old servant of many years of successful pastoral work wrote back and said, "Since you have tried so many things, why not try Jesus? He never fails."

Brother, if the Word of God does not bring people to know the Lord in the pardon and forgiveness of all sin, it is useless to try man's plans. God has one plan and one only. This is the gospel of Christ. Paul said, "For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Greek" (Romans 1:16).

If the gospel of Christ does not bring people into the church, any other method will fail. Some people stay away from truth as far as possible. The truth hurts their business, hurts their conscience—so they had rather stay blind.

30 Saved Over Telephone!

If you have shopped in Oakland, California's downtown area, you may have found a ticket under the windshield wiper when you returned to your parked car. The ticket reads, "There is a message at Templebar 6-1555." These "tickets" are the key to a method of witnessing used by the American Soul Clinic Church in the Home workers, Al and Vera Krump. To date 30 individuals have been saved through using these tickets to get folks to call in. When the person calls asking for his or her message, the Krumps answer, "Yes, there is a message for you here—it is from God's Holy Word, the Bible."

Would you try this wonderful method to reach a lost and dying world without Christ?

The Doctor Did Not Come

Jean Burgess

OOOO-H the wind sounded. Yes, it was a bitter cold night. There would be no possibility of anyone starting on a trip on a night like this. The snow was drifting very badly, covering up the tracks in the road.

Oooo-h the wind howled again. No, the doctor could not come in a night like this. Perhaps the doctor did not even know that Jimmy lay sick on his bed. Tom, Jimmy's big brother had left hours ago before the storm came, but had not returned. Maybe he was out in the snow and cold.

Mother tenderly sat by Jimmy's bed, putting cold cloths on his forehead. The thought was going through her mind, "Would the doctor arrive in time?" No, it was impossible for him to come.

Daddy paced the floor, not saying a word. One of his sons was near his death-bed, the other son—he knew not where.

Soon there was a tramping noise heard outside. The dog barked. Was this the doctor? No, it couldn't be. In a few minutes in walked Tom. He had not arrived at his destination. When he realized the storm was coming, and he could not reach the home of the doctor, he had decided to go to the nearest shelter, which was back to his home.

Now the poor Mother's heart sank. There was no hope. The doctor did not even know that her young boy was ill. He would not come now. But at least, Tom was safe.

Far away, miles from this home where Jimmy was sick, there lived a small family, relatives of Jimmy's. One evening, they were all sitting around the table. Soon after the supper dishes were done, a large truck drove up near the house, and soon drove away again. It was the mailman. Daddy told Susie to go out to the mailbox and bring in the mail.

Susie scampered off, and in a few minutes returned with several letters and the newspaper. The first letter that Mrs. Sommers opened was from her sister away up north. After reading it to herself, she read it aloud to the family.

The letter was from Susie's aunt, whose mind seemed rather confused as she wrote the letter. She said that her little boy, Jimmy, was very sick. She longed for a close friend that could help in time of trouble or difficulty.

The letter was very short, just long enough to let Susie's mother know that Jimmy was sick. After reading the letter, Mrs. Sommers wished that she was close to her sister to tell her of Someone who could help them.

Now, the family away up north was not a Christian family. But the family that Susie belonged to did know Jesus and loved and served Him. That evening Susie climbed up on her Daddy's knee while her Mother read a story to her. Then before going to bed, they all knelt and asked God to watch over them throughout the night, and also prayed for poor sick Jimmy, his Daddy and Mommy, and prayed that they would ask Jesus to come into their hearts.

Mother kept thinking about her sister up north. It seemed too bad that they did not know Jesus, who could comfort them and help them in their need, and who could also heal little Jimmy.

Later, when Susie was in bed, she couldn't sleep, but kept tossing and turning thinking of her poor sick cousin, Jimmy. So she got out of her bed and knelt down again, and asked Jesus to heal her cousin, Jimmy.

She prayed for quite a long time, yes, and even cried. For Jimmy did not know about Jesus, and if he died, he would not be able to go to heaven. So Susie prayed. Then she crawled into bed, and soon was sleeping soundly.

Susie began to dream. And this is what she dreamt. She saw a little boy, lying on a couch by a stove. His Mother was sitting beside him, putting cold cloths on his forehead. His daddy was walking back and forth, back and forth in the kitchen.

Who was Susie dreaming of? Yes, she was dreaming of the family up north. This awoke her, and in the still of the night she began to pray again.

Susie didn't tell her dream to anyone, but just kept thinking about it herself. All that day she wondered how Jimmy was.

Her mother suggested that she write a letter to her cousin, and send him some of her Sunday school papers that she had read. Susie did this. She told him that she loved Jesus, and hoped that he did, too, "because," she said, "Jesus can make you so happy." She said that she had been praying for him and wished that he would get better soon.

But she waited for weeks and weeks before she got any answer. But one day a letter came, addressed to "Miss Susie Sommers." Jimmy had been too sick to write for himself, so his mother had written for him.

She thanked Susie for her letter and assured her that it made Jimmy feel better to know that someone was thinking of him. Then she told her of something that had happened which she could hardly understand.

One evening, Susie's aunt was watching over Jimmy. Jimmy's eyes were closed and he was very still and quiet—a very sick boy. Then suddenly his eyes opened, his fever began to go down, his face brightened up, and he said that he was hungry.

Susie's face brightened as she continued to read the letter.

Susie's aunt could hardly understand the great change that had come over Jimmy in such a short time. "After he had eaten, he asked for your story to be read once again," the letter said. "He particularly liked the part where you said that Jesus loved him and hoped that Jesus would make him well. After I had read the letter, he said, 'Mamma, I think that Jesus did make me better, because I'm all right now, and want to get out of bed.' Jimmy did not get up the next day and is doing fine now."

It was then that Susie's aunt believed that Jesus could answer prayer and could heal Jimmy.

A few minutes later, Susie's Mother came upstairs and found Susie on her knees, thanking and praising God for healing her cousin Jimmy.

Aren't you glad, boys and girls, that Jesus not only hears the prayers of big people, of daddies and mommies and of preachers, but He hears and answers the prayers of each boy and girl, too?—Gospel Banner.

N. C. State Mission Work

The North Carolina State missionary has arranged for work to be started in the near future in the following North Carolina cities: Statesville, Sanford and High Point. Work has already been started in Greensboro, Winston-Salem and Burlington. Anyone knowing of a person living in any of these cities who would be interested in this work please contact the state missionary at once.

A great need is for a building in the city of Greensboro. This is a promising work which started less than four months ago from "scratch." Any preachers who feel it to be the will of the Lord and is willing to move into some of these communities and help with the work please contact me. Of course it would be necessary to have some other means of livelihood for some time. Two young men who graduated from the Free Will Baptist Bible College are helping with the work now.

It is my plan to visit all the associations and conferences in the state possible. I would appreciate a letter from someone in each district giving me the date of your annual meeting.

We are grateful to the churches of the Third Union of the Western Conference for a recent offering of better than $400 for our mission projects. All offerings should be sent to Rev. N. B. Barrow, Lucoma, North Carolina.

Quilt for Missionaries

Recently the women of the Linneus Free Will Baptist Church of Houlton, Maine, quilted a very lovely quilt and sent to the foreign mission office to be used by our missionaries as needed.

This quilt will be sent to one of our missionary couples in Japan where it gets extremely cold during the winter months.

It has occurred to us that perhaps other groups would like to engage in a similar project. With the missionaries on the field, and new ones going out, it would be nice to have quilts on hand for their disposal.

If your group or auxiliary would like to help in this way, then just send your quilt to the Foreign Mission Department and we shall see to it that it goes where needed most.

Please attach identification note to the quilt so we may notify the missionary as to who made and sent the quilt.

A building program is being planned by the church which is at the present time holding services in a tent.

The Rev. Rufus Hyman makes the following plea to the churches of Alabama:

"Alabama churches, please send your dollars in promptly to aid this new church, and don't forget to enlist new members for the Alabama Dollar Club." All money should be mailed to Rev. Hyman at Slocumb, Alabama.

Christian Growth Through Testing

(Lesson for August 26)

Lesson: James 1:2-18.

Golden Text: James 1:12

I. INTRODUCTION

The human authorship of the book of James is ascribed to that James, the brother of our Lord, called the Just. He is to be distinguished from James, the son of Zebedee, and James called the Less. The latter two were disciples of Jesus, but the author of this book apparently did not become a believer until the death and resurrection of Jesus. This James became a leader of the believers in Jerusalem and was the one who sustained Paul's contention at the Council of Jerusalem that the gentile believers should not be forced to be circumcised.

James is reported to have been martyred for his faith in Christ just a few years after writing this book. It is said that he was taken upon a balcony or rooftop overlooking a great crowd of people. He was told to deny his faith in Christ before the people. Upon refusing, he was thrown to the street below to have his life crushed from his body.

His letter is addressed to the twelve tribes which are scattered abroad. His principal purpose in writing this letter appears to be that of correcting an error which was prevalent among some of the Christians. They were receiving a mere intellectual perception of truth and not the practical application of it to life and conduct. He contended that faith, to be living and powerful, must be expressed in good works as taught by our Lord.—The Bible Student (F. W. B.).

II. HELPFUL HINTS

1. Joy in tribulation can only come if we keep on believing and let our patience work (Vv. 2-4).

2. There is hardly any time when we need wisdom more than when we are beset with trouble and care (Vs. 5).

3. The man whose faith vacillates when he prays has no for an answer before he begins (Vv. 6-8).

4. The gospel of Christ is an equalizing force that exalts the humble and humbles the proud (Vv. 9-11).

5. The crown of life is promised to all who keep on believing and loving the Lord (Vs. 12).

6. The Lord is too high and holy and good to either be tempted Himself to sin, or to cause any person to be tempted with sin (Vv. 13-15).

7. The Lord is not only the source of all good, but is also the source of all light (Vv. 16, 17).

8. By the will of God, through the Word of truth, those who believe on Christ are born anew (Vs. 18).—The Bible Teacher (F. W. B.).

9. A double-minded man is one who wants to believe in God but at the same time also depend upon his own reasoning (Vs. 8).

10. Our fallen human nature is the most successful medium for the devil to use in tempting us, but it is not necessary for us to yield (Vv. 13-16).—Selected.

III. ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

1. In this lesson the word "temptation" is used in two different senses: In James 1:14 it means "solicitation to evil" and in the twelfth verse, it means "testing under trial." In either case, there is the trial of our faith; either we are found faith-full or faith-less. Either we are patient or impatient; either we are stronger in character or weaker; either we are happy or miserable. For those who come through the trials victoriously, there is an advantage: "Blessed is the man that endureth temptation." The children of God can expect trials, but they do not need to dread them. The heavenly Father has promised all of us that He will never forsake us. And there is a special word in connection with temptation: "... God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able; but will with the temptation also make a way to escape, that ye may be able to bear it" (1 Corinthians 10:13).

2. God never tempts any man, although He may permit him to be tempted. God tests us not in order to make us fall, but to prove that we can stand. Consider the story of Job as a classic example.

On the other hand Satan is not interested in that kind of testing; He tempts us to prove that God is not able to keep us. Let us not be ignorant of his crafty devices.—Moody Monthly.

Recall how God tested Abraham by commanding him to offer up his only son, Isaac, as a sacrifice. What was the divine purpose in this?

3. When testing comes to us a great deal depends on the spirit with which we meet it. The writer to the Hebrews advises them to "despise not . . . the chastening of the Lord, nor faint when thou art rebuked of Him: for whom the Lord loveth He chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom He receiveth." When testing comes it is a sign to us to take stock of ourselves. Perhaps we have grown slack in some of our obligations. Perhaps we cherish some secret sin. Perhaps we have not heard His voice in command to take a forward step. But do not despise the test; it is there for our good.

4. The writer was recently with a Jewish young woman who had gone through great persecution from her parents. They had put all kinds of pressure on her to put off her baptism. On the night of her baptism she felt she ought to phone her home to see if she still could find shelter under the roof of her loved ones, after she had confessed Christ openly. So she called her mother and informed her of her stand; she then asked if they wanted her to return that night. Consent was given very coldly. One can well imagine what a stab in the heart it gave to this one of tender years to ask such a question. The words of Jesus are just as true today as they were when they were spoken long ago. "I came not to (bring) peace, but a sword."—The Bible Illustrator.

5. What is a temptation to one person is not temptation to another, for the temptation originates in the heart of the person. "But every man is tempted, when he is drawn away of his own lust, and enticed" (Vs. 14). The appetites of the body and the evil dispositions are lusts. Appeals to these principles and affections are successful only with the consent of the individual's will. Because a man's sin takes rise in his own lusts, he is personally responsible.—Advanced Quarterly (F. W. B.).

We may note also that things that tempt a young person may not tempt an older person at all.

6. Father Graham was an old-fashioned gentleman, beloved by everyone. His influence in the little town was great, so good and helpful was he. A young man of the village had been badly insulted and came to Father Graham full of angry indignation. He declared that he was going at once to demand an apology from the one who had treated him so illy. "My dear boy," said Father Graham, "take a word of advice from an old man who loves peace. An insult is like mud. It will brush off much better when it is dry. Wait a little until he and you are both cool. The thing will then be easily mended. If you go now, it will only be a quarrel, or worse."—Selected.

OBITUARIES

1955, conducted by the Rev. J. W. Alford of Morehead City, assisted by the Rev. Elbert E. Edwards of Chocowinity. Burial was in Oakdale Cemetery.

After retirement from the active ministry due to his failing health, Mr. Toler continued to marry couples at his Chocowinity home, listing approximately 3,000 marriages, and is said to have married and buried more persons than any other single minister in Beaufort County during his ministry.

He was ordained to the ministry at Trent Free Will Baptist Church, Pamlico County, North Carolina, in 1910. His outstanding duties to his church included: moderator of the Eastern Conference; member of ordaining council for Eastern Conference; moderator for Union Meeting; member of financial staff of Free Will Baptist Seminary; officially connected with the Free Will Baptist Orphanage at Middlesex, North Carolina.

Charges during his ministry included approximately 30 churches in Beaufort, Pitt, Craven, Martin and Washington Counties. He held pastorates at Shiloh Church, Pine-town, for 13 years and was minister at Union Chapel, Chocowinity, for 18 years. He kept his membership at Smyrna Church, Blount's Creek, being a native of that community.

Religious affiliations were foremost in his life, but he also served as a rural mail carrier for the Blount's Creek route for 10 years. He was a well-known timberman, representing many large companies and individuals for years. He was also reputed to be an accurate surveyor.

SLOW OF HEART TO BELIEVE

"And, behold, two of them went that same day to a village called Emmaus, which was from Jerusalem about threescore furlongs. And they talked together of all these things which had happened. And it came to pass, that, while they communed together and reasoned, Jesus himself drew near, and went with them. But their eyes were holden that they should not know him. And he said unto them, What manner of communications are these that ye have one to another, as ye walk, and are sad? . . . Then he said unto them, O fools, and slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken: Ought not Christ to have suffered these things, and to enter into his glory? . . . And they said one to another, Did not our heart burn within us, while he talked with us by the way, and while he opened to us the scriptures?" (Luke 24:13-32).

MISSIONARIES ON FURLOUGH

The title of a short article in the August issue of the Promotional Bulletin of the Georgia State Association of Free Will Baptists claimed our attention the moment we glanced at the bulletin. What would be your reaction if you saw an article entitled, "No Church Wants Missionaries," in one of our publications?

The editor of the bulletin, the Rev. E. C. Morris, promotional secretary-treasurer for the Georgia State Association, used this unique method of placing before our people a problem which is increasing in proportion as the years pass. Under this title Mr. Morris says, "This does not seem right, does it? In the last issue of the bulletin it was stated that two of our missionaries would be home for furloughs, and any of our churches desiring to have either or both of them should please let us know. No church has responded so far. I know that several of our churches seem to always be glad to have missionaries or missionary candidates visit them, and many good services have been the results; but our people act slowly. Miss Lucy Wisehart from Cuba and Miss Volena Wilson from India are now in the states and ready for services."

Mr. Morris is setting an example in Georgia that should be followed in all the states. And we are certain that denominational leaders elsewhere are arranging itineraries for these missionaries.

On the other hand, the title of this article has set us thinking: What if it were true that in our ranks "No Church Wants Missionaries"? Is it not significant that our growth as a denomination has paralleled our increased zeal for missions? One of the elements in the dawning of a new day for Free Will Baptists was the sending of Miss Laura Belle Barnard to India by the General Conference in session at Black Jack Church, Pitt County, North Carolina, in 1935. In the same session the conference endorsed Miss Bessie Yeley who had already sailed for Venezuela. Since that time, our growth has been rapid, as has been the expansion of our program of missions.

We are persuaded that our growth has been intertwined with our zeal for missions. God always blesses individuals and groups who strive to be obedient to Him. He has kept His promise, "... and, lo, I am with you ..." (Matthew 28:29), up to this moment because we have tried to be obedient to His command, "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, ..." (Matthew 28:19). But we have not done all we could. By their failing to give at all, or by the comparative meagerness of the gifts they have made, many individuals and churches have said, "We do not want missionaries."

Some of our churches are proving, year after year, that they do want missionaries. Among those which stand out as examples is the Edgemont Church of Durham, North Carolina. This church, under the capable leadership of its pastor, the Rev. Joe Ange, gave almost 10% of the total denominational budget for foreign missions last year. Furthermore, reports coming to our desk indicate that God is blessing this church in a marvelous way. Souls are being saved in almost every service and a continuous spirit of revival seems to prevail. We do not have information as to the fact that any other church in the denomination is growing so fast.

Are there not some of our churches that do not want missionaries? Twenty-five or thirty years ago, we were not surprised to hear some of our people say that they did not believe in foreign missions; therefore, those churches where this belief prevailed would not have missionaries come for services. However, we hope and pray that all of our people have become sufficiently informed in the teaching of the Word of God to let this error be relegated to our past.

At the present time, there seems to be another reason for our not wanting missionaries to come to our churches. Since this has been a part of our personal experience in pastorates, we can write freely about it. We committed what we now believe to have been an error in our efforts to solve the problem of church financing. The reasoning was sound, but it did not allow for the youth and immaturity of our overall denominational program. Perhaps there are others who might well consider their programs of church financing in the light of these facts.

Here is the problem as we interpret it in many of our churches today:

The church, in seeking to care for its local needs and give a balanced support to all denominational causes, sets up its budget accordingly, arranging for regular, worshipful, systematic support of all causes. Then, along comes a representative of some national board, a worker from some state enterprise or a returned missionary to speak in the church and take a special offering. This upsets the regular routine and affects the overall plan. Consequently, in the next conference the church votes "no more special offerings." Therefore, this church, by its action, has said, "We do not want missionaries."

We are afraid that many of our churches in many of the states are applying this solution; however, we are persuaded that they are overlooking some vital facts. Let them consider carefully and prayerfully the following:

(1) Special workers can bring information and inspiration to a congregation which can be received in such measure from no other source. Knowledge is enriching.

(2) Our people generally are not sufficiently enlisted so that they will give sacrificially without added stimulus, and perhaps may never be.

(3) Those who are not led into the greater giving will miss the greater blessing.

(4) Our program is young and expanding; it cannot be financed at this time by gifts that come without special efforts of the part of special workers.

In the light of these facts, we recommend that each church prepare its budget for adoption by the congregation at the beginning of the year, allowing for regular, systematic giving to all causes; then stipulate, also, that special representatives will be invited with permission to take special offerings. Let the pastor be authorized to arrange these visits so that no two will come in the same month. This will permit those who wish to give in greater measure for any cause to do so.

Indian Worker

MY first meeting with John Raju seems somewhat hazy in memory. Perhaps it is because at the time I met him there were so many other new faces. He is a young man who is keen to know God's will and obey it. He loves God's Word and is zealous for His cause. It has ever been a source of joy to see the growth of grace apparent in his life. His eagerness to win his entire family to Christ has been another source of joy. And we rejoiced with John Raju when on April 29 he helped baptize his sister and her husband and son. The last members of his family are now safe in the fold.

John is now doing evangelistic work in Bogichettipalayam where God is blessing his efforts. I do not know how many he has won to the Lord there but he told me of a number of them. God has given him the enablement to feed hungry souls upon the bread of life and lead them into a saving knowledge of Christ as Saviour. We believe that he, like Wilson-Raj, shall be one of India's sons who will bring many to Christ. His hunger to know more of God and His ways, and to be wholly yielded unto Him, means that many testings come to him. Please uphold him in your prayers that God may do wonders in and through him.

The following is his testimony. I had to cut some of it out as it was quite long:

"He brought me up also out of an horrible pit, out of the miry clay, and set my feet upon a rock, and established my goings. And He put a new song in my mouth, even praise unto our God.

"I praise God for what He has done in my life and the life of my family. Through my Saviour's love I was saved in August, 1947. I was a Hindu and my father and mother come from a Hindu background. They were god-fearing people and very poor coolies. In my childhood my mother taught me to be a child of god (Hindu god). I wanted to be a good boy to my god and try to be good to my parents.

Then God brought Miss Barnard to our place and she taught a Sunday school which I attended. I was very interested in the Sunday school lessons and through them came to know about the Lord Jesus. At first I did not yield to Christ and there was no peace in my heart. I was involved in most all of the sins that an individual could be in. And there was no hope for my sin—what a terrible condition! Then in 1947, my heart became hungry to hear the Word of God and to accept Christ. Thank God for His mercy, and praise Him for forgiving me. He changed my sinful heart. Daily now I come to Him and ask Him to show me the sins in my heart that I am not aware of. I promised Him that I was willing to pay the price whatever it may be. I thank Him for showing me and I have the victory over them.

"I praise God for what He has done in my own life. There is such joy and peace in my heart which the world cannot give. After I was saved the Lord put a burden in my heart, 'Why don't you go out and tell these dying souls about Jesus?' I felt that I was not worthy to work for the Lord; however, I knew He had called me and I must obey. Therefore I have taken the step and today I am laboring in His vineyard. The Lord has done such a marvel in my life as well as in the life of the members of my family these last ten years. One after one my entire family has come to know about the Lord Jesus and accepted Him. Praise God!

"The Lord has helped me so much and I have found as I step forth at His voice, I am happy. There is no place where I can be happy and have peace except in the center of His will. Yes, at Jesus' feet there is happiness and peace. I praise God for dear friends whom He has given to help me spiritually—such as Miss Wilson, Miss Moran, Miss Barnard and the Merriweathers. These are the ones who have helped me a great deal to learn from Jesus.

"And I praise God for my wife also. He has given me such a good spiritual wife. Her prayers help me so much and I have learned a great deal from her.

"When I see all the things God is doing these days in various places in India, I pour out my heart before Him in prayer and ask, 'O Lord, help me to do thy will.' Thank God for his wonderful promises such as Jeremiah 33:3. His promises encourages us. The Lord is able to do mighty things whether we do our part or not. We all have to be very careful when the Lord has started to bless us or the devil will start his work. Whatever the Lord does through us the glory belongs to Him and to Him alone. So often we see people that try to show themselves. If this is true God cannot bless. If we try to go our own way, we easily make mistakes. If we put everything at Jesus' feet and wait for His will, there is joy and peace in our hearts.

"I do want to say how very proud I am of our little church. The Lord is wonderfully blessing us here. During my Bible school days this small church gave some support to me. The only desire in my life is to serve my Saviour who loves me. I want to be out and out for God, and the one thing I ask of God is to give me a clean heart. Please pray for me."

Heartfelt Religion

Rev. E. E. Morris

(Editor's Note: This article is an adaptation of Chapter 3 of the book entitled, Handbook of Free Will Baptist Doctrine, written by the Rev. E. E. Morris for preachers, teachers and laymen. This book may be purchased from The Free Will Baptist Press, Ayden, North Carolina, for $1.)

BLESSED are the pure in heart; for they shall see God" (Matthew 5:8). It is just as good as to say that if your heart is not pure you will not see God. "But the LORD said unto Samuel, Look not on his countenance, or on the height of his stature; because I have refused him: for the LORD seeth not as man seeth; for man looketh on the outward appearance, but the Lord looketh on the heart" (1 Samuel 16:7). We judge men by the way they look and the kind of clothes they wear or the kind of house in which they live, or their social standing. God is not concerned about how big you are or how good looking, or the kind of clothes you wear. He looks on the heart, for that is the part of man which God deals with. We want you to get what the Scripture teaches concerning this great Bible doctrine. Jesus preaches it; it should still be preached.

"O generation of vipers, how can ye, being evil, speak good things? for out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh" (Matthew 12:34). "But those things which proceed out of the mouth come forth from the heart; and they defile the man. For out of the heart proceed evil thoughts, murders, adulteries, fornications, thefts, false witness, blasphemies: These are the things which defile a man: . . ." (Matthew 15:18-20). Jesus sets forth here all the works of the flesh and plainly states that they come from the heart and that they are the things which defile a man. Therefore, a man's heart must be cleansed from these iniquities before he can become a child of God; for it is out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh. You will never have a clean conversation until your heart is clean.

"Ye hypocrites, well did Esaias prophesy of you, saying, This people draweth nigh unto me with their mouth, and honoureth me with their lips; but their heart is far from me" (Matthew 15:7, 8). "Behold we put bits in the horses' mouths, that they may obey us; and we turn about their whole body. Behold also the ships, which though they be so great, and are driven of fierce winds, yet are they turned about with a very small helm, whithersoever the governor listeth" (James 3:3, 4). "Doth a fountain send forth at the same place sweet water and bitter? Can the fig tree, my brethren, bear olive berries? either a vine, figs? so can no fountain both yield salt water and fresh" (James 3:11, 12). James here is setting forth the necessity of a pure heart for a pure conversation and a Christian life. It turns about the whole body, not just a part of it.

One time when I was crossing the Atlantic Ocean on a ship 900 feet long, we were driven by a fierce storm. The waves were washing the weather deck when I found who was in charge of the ship and controlling it. A man was setting it on its course. He was in the control room where he controlled the whole ship. So it is when God lives in the control room of our lives. He is able to guide us through the storms. Jesus is the Pilot. Does He live in your heart today? Does He control you? If so, you will certainly make the harbor and know when your Captain is on board. No one can sail this sea of life without the Captain in the control room, and that room is your heart. We know that you can't get sweet water and bitter water out of the same well. Neither can you get a good conversation and good Christian living out of a heart that is full of envy, strife and hatred. It must be cleansed for the water to be sweet. James sets forth in this chapter that the tongue is a little unruly member of the body that no man can tame; and how right he is! No man can tame the tongue. No vote of a church, or no ceremony will change it, but the love of God shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost can change it.

We moved to a place one time that had a cistern. It was the only water supply. I went out, drew a bucket of water, and let the bucket down too deep; it stirred things up. It kind of made me sick to think I had drunk any of it. That's the way it is a lot of times with our churches. If we don't let the bucket down too far, everything runs pretty smooth; but if we let the good old gospel bucket down to the bottom, it stirs things up. Brother, if your heart is right with God, the preacher can lay it right on the line and you will love it. But if there is something in your life that is wrong, it will stir it up. So if you get stirred up over a gospel message, get your heart cleansed and enjoy it. Jesus gave the remedy in Matthew 23:25-28 when He said, "Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye make clean the outside of the cup and of the platter, but within they are full of extortion and excess. Thou blind Pharisee, cleanse first that which is within the cup and platter, that the outside of them may be clean also. Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye are like unto whited sepulchres, which indeed appear beautiful outward, but are within full of dead men's bones, and of all uncleanness."

Mathew 13:15 says, "For this people's heart is waxed gross, and their ears are dull of hearing, and their eyes they have closed; lest at any time they should see with their eyes, hear with their ears, and should understand with their heart, and should be converted and I should heal them." Jesus is teaching here the necessity of the heart's being cleansed from iniquity. When it is cleansed, the outside will be clean also. You can't cover sin up. If it is in your heart, it will seep through after awhile. A child of God does not indulge in a foul conversation.

"That ye put off concerning the former conversation the old man, which is corrupt according to the deceitful lusts; And that ye put on the new man, which after God is created in righteousness and true holiness. Wherefore putting away lying, speak every man truth with his neighbour: for we are members one of another. Be ye angry, and sin not: let not the sun go down upon your wrath: Neither give place to the devil. Let him that stole steal no more: but rather let him labour, working with his hands the thing which is good, that he may have to give to him that needeth. Let no corrupt communication proceed out of your mouth, but that which is good to the use of edifying, that it may minister grace unto the hearers" (Ephesians 4:22-29).

Remember that your conversation comes from the heart. James gives the remedy in James 4:8, 9: "Draw nigh to God, and he will draw nigh to you. Cleanse your hands, ye sinners; and purify your hearts, ye double minded. Be afflicted and mourn, and weep: let your laughter be turned to mourning, and your joy to heaviness." Acts 8:20-24 says, "But Peter said unto him, Thy money perish with thee, because thou hast thought that the gift of God may be purchased with money. Thou hast neither part nor lot in this matter: for thy heart is not right in the sight of God. Repent therefore of this thy wickedness, and pray God, if perhaps the thought of thine heart may be forgiven thee. For I perceive that thou art in the gall of bitterness and in the bond of iniquity. Then answered Simon, and said, Pray ye to the Lord for me, that none of these things which ye have spoken come upon me." Here is a man, that was baptized and was following along with the disciples, whose heart was not right in the sight of God. To be a direct follower of the Lord, your heart must be right. Peter said to pray and repent; that is still the same doctrine that Free Will Baptists believe today. If your heart is not right in the sight of God, you need to pray and ask God to forgive you.

Paul gives the remedy again in Romans 10:9, 10: "That is thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved. For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness; and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation." Romans 5:5 says, "And hope maketh not ashamed; because the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost which is given unto us." So, my friend, you can see that a man must be saved. He must confess, not to me or the church, but his confession must be made to God. John says if we confess He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins and cleanse from all unrighteousness. "Not upon tables of stone, but upon the fleshly tables of the heart I will write My laws," saith the Lord. Now God is not going to write this with ink, but with His Spirit. He whose heart has the love of God has peace, satisfaction and an assurance that he is a child of the Kingdom.

the worship period there I received a deeper enrichment of my Christian faith than from any other school activity, and from the fellowship hour I gained many of my closest friends. The fellowship on Monday evening started every week off right, and I never regretted keeping it first on my schedule, no matter what else turned up."

Bruton Taylor, 1955-56 president, says, "As past president of the Free Will Baptist Fellowship for the year, 1955-56, I would like to encourage any Free Will Baptist student who is planning on attending East Carolina College this year to join the fellowship and take an active part in it. I know you will receive a blessing from it.

"You will have a chance to hear and meet many of the outstanding pastors in our denomination. Many of the programs are carried out by the students. The fellowship holds regular meetings, along with banquets and picnics during the year.

"I would like to urge all of you to go to the fellowship and I feel you will enjoy it as I did. I started attending it late in my freshman year; but after I started, it was so interesting and such a blessing to me that I missed very few meetings my last three years in college. Rev. and Mrs. R. B. Crawford are two wonderful people and they will do anything in their power to help you. And believe me, sometimes in your college career you will need help."

Trilby Smith, a 1956 graduate, says, "The Free Will Baptist Student Fellowship of East Carolina College has meant much to me during my college career. There, one can be sure of meeting and associating with Christian people who are willing to help you anytime in any way—whose lives will brighten your way and inspire you to make your life more useful.

"Monday is often thought to be blue. The week end free from classes has ended and there is much work ahead before another week-end break. But Monday can't be blue long when there is the fellowship meeting on Monday evening to which you may look forward. They always seem to start the week off right for me. The fellowship of the group and the inspiration received from the group worship seemed to ease my mind and give me the assurance that the week ahead would be well spent.

"These are some of the reasons why the Free Will Baptist Student Fellowship meant a lot to me. If you plan to attend East Carolina College this fall, it could have a deep and wonderful meaning for you also. It is certainly worth a try. Give it that try, won't you?"

God has no enemy, and Satan no tool, like the zealous professor of Christianity whose life is not directed by the indwelling Spirit of God.—Highland Park, Michigan, Church Bulletin.

East Carolina College Student Fellowship

Martha Ann Johnson

EAST Carolina College Free Will Baptist Student Fellowship, Greenville, North Carolina, is an organization of Free Will Baptist students which encourages Christian fellowship on the college campus. This fellowship meets each Monday at 5:00 p. m. in the "Y" Hut.

The fellowship meetings furnish the students an opportunity for worship, fun, fellowship and good home-cooked food prepared by the ladies in the Greenville Free Will Baptist Church. The fellowship has been an inspiration to me while I have been in college, and I find myself looking forward to each weekly meeting more and more. It has been at our fellowship that I have made my very closest and best friends. Graduation comes and goes, but we gain something there that time and distance can never erase. We will always be together in spirit and in heart.

The officers for the 1956-57 college year are as follows: Martha Ann Johnson, president; Elaine Smith, vice-president; Mary Oakley Dilda, secretary; Peggy Mangum, treasurer; Neel Dupree, publicity chairman; Tanya Anderson, program chairman. We look forward to seeing you in September. We urge all Free Will Baptist pastors and parents of college students to encourage their students to attend these helpful fellowship meetings.

The Greenville Free Will Baptist Church furnishes transportation from the college campus to the church for church services. The pastor of the church, the Rev. R. B. Crawford, is always happy and willing to assist the students. You who plan to enter East Carolina College this fall will find him anxious to help you.

All Free Will Baptist freshmen will meet together in the Austin Auditorium on Thursday, September 6, at 7:30 p. m. There, further interesting announcements will be made as to special plans for your Christian fellowship while at East Carolina College.

As president of the fellowship, I extend to you a hearty welcome to East Carolina. I hope that your college life will be as pleasant and as meaningful as mine, and that you will make the Free Will Baptist Student Fellowship a regular part of your college life.

We give the testimonials of some students of the college who have been members of the fellowship:

Betty Jo Carroll, 1954-55 president, says, "The Free Will Baptist Student Fellowship was a highlight of every week during my four years at East Carolina College. From

Questions and Answers ON THE BIBLE

Conducted by J. F. BARROW
3824 Richland Avenue, Nashville 5, Tennessee

Question: Some friends of mine and I have been puzzled as we discuss: "Whosoever believeth that Jesus is the Christ is born of God: and every one that loveth him that begat loveth him also that is begotten of him" (1 John 5:1); "Whosoever is born of God doth not commit sin; for his seed remaineth in him: and he cannot sin, because he is born of God" (1 John 3:9); and "If we say that we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us" (1 John 1:8). Will you please harmonize these Scripture verses for us?—Elder Colonel Pendelton, Madison, Tennessee.

Robert S. Candlish in "The First Epistle of John," Page 275, makes the following comment: "Never, at any moment, may I reckon on a past act of God towards me,—His calling me, justifying me, adopting me in His Son; or a past work of God in me,—His regenerating me by His Spirit;—as giving me any present confidence, if my present state is one of sin. Not only is this not right; I believe it to be impossible. I believe that no man ever yet felt himself secure in sinning now, on the ground of his having been brought to 'see and know' Christ long ago. His feeling of security, in so far as he has such a feeling, does not really spring from that belief as to the past, but from ignorance now of Christ and of God; from present unbelief. For the present, he is an unbeliever, not seeing or knowing Christ; no better than if he had never seen or known Him. The moment he comes again to believe, and has his eyes opened to see and know Christ; Christ looking on him when he is sinning as he looked on Peter;—security there is none; confidence there is none; only bitter weeping. He repents, and does the first works. He believes, as if he had never believed before. He realizes again, as at the first, his abiding in Christ and God's seed abiding in him. Our sinning, therefore; our feeling it to be possible for us to sin; is in fact, and as a practical matter, absolutely incompatible with our abiding in Christ and being born of God."

From these and many other scholarly comments we conclude that 1 John 3:9 teaches that a born again Christian who is walking in fellowship with Christ can by no means express himself in a life of habitual sin. One closely observing him will detect acts of imperfection in his behavior, but will be constantly impressed with his Christlikeness.

1 John 1:8, quoted above in the question, seems to fit in perfectly at this point of the discussion because there were those to be found in John's day that were Pharisaical enough to argue that they lived sinless lives and that Christ taught that one must be perfect in all Christian living, otherwise he was not a Christian or that he had not reached that place in sanctification required of Christians and obtained by themselves. Paul taught this same truth warning against any kind of perfection except that manifested in the life of Christ and expressed in the living of those who followed Him, but constantly acknowledging their personal inability to come up to their pattern or standard of perfection which indeed is Christ. "Brethren, I count not myself to have apprehended: but this one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus" (Philippians 3:13, 14). Read all of the third chapter of Philippians.

In a final summary then, we conclude that these verses teach us that belief or faith in Christ as one's Saviour and Lord is the point or place at which one becomes a Christian and, therefore, begins the new life as a Christian. God at this time imparts a new nature. This new born creature in his new nature has been made a citizen of heaven and thereby has become an alien and an immigrant the remainder of the time he spends here encumbered or limited by his old body and old nature, both of which are his handicaps as long as he remains in the earthly phase of his Christian life. Christ is his life, his goal, his pattern, and his example all the time he is here. While living this Christian life on earth he has the mind of Christ, is working hard trying to keep every phase of the old man, nature, or life crucified and yet, in all this he finds himself still lacking for, even though his attitude is perfect the Christian life which he exhibits each day, falls far short of Christ's. It will be only when he has a new body that he exhibits the finished product a life with flawless activities

Feed My Sheep

Mrs. J. W. Arnold
201 Buchanan Street
Whitesboro, Texas

THE (Jesus) saith to him (Peter) . . . lovest thou me? He saith unto him, Yea Lord; thou knowest that I love thee. He saith unto him, Feed my sheep" (John 21:16).

Jesus told Peter to feed His sheep, but occasionally we find that shepherds have a mixture of sheep and goats. Sheep are quiet and meek animals, going where the shepherd leads them; for they know their masters voice and obey him. But what about those unruly goats among the flock? I am afraid the good shepherd will have trouble, for those fellows will not listen and obey him. Furthermore, if the shepherd does not watch, they will butt him down and go over and shove the calmest old ram around just to show him that they can.

Now watch the unruly goats as they see the poor shepherd struggling to his feet; they will turn and "baa" at him as though to say, "If you do not like what we do, you know what can be done about it."

Now friends, does that not remind you of those carnal church members? The goats (unruly church members) will not heed and will not let others have any rest or peace of mind. When the good shepherd (the minister) tries to show them their wrongs, they will only turn on their heels and say, "If you do not like the way things are run here, there is the gate!" They will then run to those meek members who want to do right and do their best to poison their minds against the one who is trying to help them.

A shepherd can only lead the flock out to green pastures; he cannot make them eat. Neither can a preacher make his flock do right; he can give them the Word and they can take it or leave it.

The minister gives out the Word to the carnal church member, but unless he make that needful change and gets right with God, he will only kick and butt the other of the flock around, making life miserable for himself as well as for the good minister and the flock.

In the end the goats have a sentence pronounced upon them. Is it not time now to change to be one of God's sheep? "And before him shall be gathered all nations and he shall separate them one from another, as a shepherd divided his sheep from the goats; And he shall set the sheep on his right hand, but the goats on the left. . . And these shall go away into everlasting punishment: but the righteous into life eternal" (Matthew 25:32, 33, 46).

The Lighted Pathway

(PSALM 119:105).

REV. WILLET L. MORETZ
SWANNANOVA, N. C.

"And there I will meet with thee, and I will commune with thee from above the mercy seat, . . ." (Exodus 25:22).

There is no greater privilege afforded the Christian than that of being able to commune with God and having Him commune with us. Webster's New Collegiate Dictionary gives the following as definitions of commune: "To confer together; to converse intimately." In the Bible it is spoken of as, "fellowship with God." How blessed it is that we, as His children, can "converse intimately" with God at any time we so desire, with the knowledge that He will commune with us from above the mercy seat.

I have just finished reading a tract from the Union Gospel Press entitled, "Communion with God," in which an unknown author has given a beautiful imaginary conversation God had with one of His own. I hope you will enjoy it with me as you read:

"My child, it is not necessary to know much about Me; it is sufficient to love much. Speak to Me as thou wouldest to a mother, if she drew thee near her.

"Are there any for whom thou wouldest pray to Me? Repeat to Me the names of thy friends (or of thine enemies) by name; after each name add what thou wouldest have Me do for them. Ask much, ask much! I love generous souls who forget themselves for others.

"Tell Me of the poor whom thou wouldest relieve, the sick whom thou hast seen suffer, the sinners thou wouldest have converted, those who are alienated from thee, whose affections thou wouldest regain.

"Are there graces thou wouldest ask for thyself? Write if thou wilt, a long list of all thou desirest, of all the needs of thy soul and come and read it to Me.

"Tell Me simply how proud thou art, how sensitive, egotistical, mean and indolent. Poor child, do not blush; there are many saints who had thy faults; they prayed to Me and, little by little, their faults were corrected.

"Do not hesitate to ask Me for blessings for the body and mind; for health, memory, success. I can give all things, and I always give when blessings are needed to render souls more holy.

"Today what wilt thou have, My child? If thou knowest how I long to do thee good! Hast thou plans that occupy thee?

"And for Me, hast thou no zealous thought for Me? Dost thou not wish to do a little good to the soul of thy friends who perhaps have forgotten Me?

"Bring Me all thy failures, and I will show thee the cause of them. Hast thou not troubles? Who caused thee pain? Tell Me all, and thou wilt forget; and I will bless thee.

"Dost thou dread something fearful? Is there in thy heart a vain fear which is not reasonable, but which is tormenting? Trust thyself wholly to My care. I am here. I see everything. I will not leave thee.

"Hast thou not joys to make known to Me? Why dost thou not let Me share thy happiness? Tell Me what has happened since yesterday to cheer and console thee:

an expected visit which did thee good; a fear suddenly dissipated; a success thou thoughtest thou shouldest not reach; a mark of affection, a letter, a gift which thou hast received? I have prepared it all for thee. Thou canst show thy gratitude and give Me thanks.

". . . Wilt thou go at once to do a kindness to the companion who hast hurt thee?

"Well, My child, go now; take up thy work; be silent, humble, submissive, kind; and come back tomorrow and bring Me a heart still more devout and loving. Tomorrow I shall have more blessings for thee."

". . . and truly our fellowship is with the Father, and with his Son Jesus Christ" (John 1:3).

JOY AND REJOICE IN THE LORD

We may joy and rejoice—

The Word brings us light and faith (Psalm 119:130; Romans 10:17).

II. When We Hear the Gospel Preached (Acts 8:8).

The gospel reveals to us the way of salvation (Romans 1:16; Ephesians 1:13).

III. When We Are Delivered from the Bondage of Sin (Acts 16:34).

The new man is free from sin (Romans 6:17, 18; 8:1).

IV. When We Have Christ's Abiding Presence (Luke 19:6).

Where He abides there must be joy (Psalm 16:11; John 11:21).

V. When We Engage in Christian Service (Acts 13:52).

Easy yoke—light burden—soul rest (Luke 10:1, 17; Matthew 28:20).

VI. When We Become Fruit-bearing Disciples (Galatians 5:22).

You can't have the joy of service without service (1 Corinthians 15:58; John 15:8, 11).

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

men and women planning to enter the following vocations: teaching, the ministry, missions, business, secretaries and directors of Christian education.

Were it not for Mount Olive Junior College, many of our students would not be able to further their education. So far we have never refused admission to a qualified student for lack of funds. We offer worthy and needy students work scholarships and loans. We are still accepting students for the fall semester, and we will assist worthy students in working out their financial difficulties regarding their attending Mount Olive Junior College.

As we look forward to our third year, we are also following with deep interest the students who graduated last year. Mrs. Kathryn Pittman, now a student at East Carolina College, Greenville, North Carolina, was one of our 1956 graduates and in a letter received from her this week, she enclosed the following statement about our college.

What Mount Olive College Meant to Me

"In the fall of 1954, I faced the problem of choosing a college for furthering my education. Living in the Grantham community in Wayne County, North Carolina, and being married with one child, it was necessary that I commute.

"I was overjoyed upon learning of the completion of plans for the establishment of the college at Mount Olive, North Carolina. The college was of reasonable driving distance and I enrolled for the 1954 fall term and continue until I graduated in 1956.

"Recalling my experiences at Mount Olive Junior College, I realized how much it meant to me. With the guidance of President Raper, I was able to arrange my classes of required basic subjects. I will never forget the cooperation of our student body and the Christian atmosphere which prevailed throughout the two years that I was going to college there. The students and teachers were very congenial and the fellowship with my classmates was dear to me.

"With the instruction that I received from this college, I was better prepared to conduct a Christian home. Without this college my hopes and desires of continuing my education would have been destroyed. For those two years and forever Mount Olive Junior College will always have a special place in my life."

Mrs. Kathryn Pittman

VII. When We Discover the Fact of the Blessed Hope (1 Peter 1:7, 8).

New understanding, new outlook, new comfort (1 Thessalonians 2:19; Romans 12:12).

THE NEW MAN IN CHRIST

I. He Has Been Born Again (1 Peter 1:18).

A new creation (A. S. V.), not some Jewish reform (Acts 9:1-22; 2 Corinthians 5:17; Matthew 12:33).

II. He Has the Word of God Abiding in Him (1 John 2:14).

He will have a desire for the Word (Psalm 1:2; 1 Peter 2:2; 2 Timothy 2:15).

III. He Has Overcome the World (1 John 2:14).

He either overcomes, or is overcome (1 John 5:4; Romans 12:21; 1 John 4:4).

IV. He Has the Leading of the Spirit (Romans 8:14).

Much depends upon proper leadership (John 16:13; Psalm 23:3; Isaiah 55:4).

V. He Has a Love for the Brethren (1 John 3:14).

Much emphasized in the Bible, needed today (1 John 4:7; John 13:34, 35; Romans 12:9).

VI. He Has Come to Live Above Sin (1 John 3:6, 9).

He does not habitually commit sin (1 John 3:8; Colossians 3:1, 2; 1 John 1:6—2:2).

VII. He Has Become Pure and Christlike (1 John 3:3).

The blessed hope has led to purity (Ephesians 5:26, 27; Titus 2:11-14; Philipians 3:20, 21).

Mount Olive College Convocation, September 7

Dr. Leo W. Jenkins, vice-president and dean of East Carolina College, Greenville, North Carolina, will be the speaker at the convocation at Mount Olive Junior College, Mount Olive, North Carolina, on Friday, September 7, at 10:00 a. m. This convocation service will mark the formal opening of the 1956-57 school year. All former students, parents of students, ministers, and other friends of the college are cordially invited to attend this service in the college auditorium.

"Not the World's Sin, But Mine, Yours!"

A saintly African Christian told a congregation that, as he was climbing to the meeting, he heard steps behind him. He turned and saw a Man carrying a very heavy load up the hill on His back. He was full of sympathy for the Man and spoke to Him. Then he noticed that His hands were scarred, and he realized that it was Jesus! He said to Him, "Lord, are You carrying the world's sins up the hill?" "No," said the Lord Jesus, "not the world's sins, just yours!" As the African told simply the vision God had given him, the hearts of the listeners and the narrator were broken because they saw their sins on Jesus at the Cross!—Gospel Herald.

NOTES — AND — QUOTES

By J. C. Griffin

OUR RELATIONSHIP WITH CHRIST

"While he (Jesus) yet talked to the people, behold, his mother and his brethren stood without, desiring to speak with him. Then one said unto him, Behold, thy mother and thy brethren stand without, desiring to speak with thee. But he answered and said unto him that told him, Who is my mother? and who are my brethren? And he stretched forth his hand toward his disciples, and said, Behold my mother and my brethren! For whosoever shall do the will of my Father which is in heaven, the same is my brother, and sister, and mother" (Matthew 12:46-50).

We want to notice that Jesus stretched His hand toward His disciples, not toward His mother and His brethren, and said Whosoever shall do the will of my Father which is in heaven, the same is my brother, and my sister, and my mother. Certainly Jesus was talking from the spiritual side; He did not mean that from the family or physical side of life. But He meant that those who do the will of the Father in heaven are as near to Him religiously as His brother or His sister. From the standpoint of salvation, any consecrated Christ-receiving and Christ-adoring person is as near to the Lord Jesus as was His mother. Thus Mary has no more power in our salvation than any other mother who loves and serves the Lord Jesus Christ.

Let us notice the words of Jesus as follows: "And the third day there was a marriage in Cana of Galilee; and the mother of Jesus was there: And both Jesus was called, and his disciples, to the marriage. And when they wanted wine, the mother of Jesus saith unto him, They have no wine. Jesus saith unto her, Woman, what have I to do with thee? mine hour is not yet come. His mother saith unto the servants, Whatsoever he saith unto you, do it" (John 2:1-5).

Jesus was the authority, not Mary. Mary said, "Do what Jesus says." Jesus never said, "I'll do what Mary asked me to do," but Mary said to those servants, "You do what He tells you."

Who Redeemed Us From the Curse of Sin?

Was it an angel? Was it Mary? Was it Peter? Was it any other person than the Lord Jesus Christ? No, we are told that it was Jesus, who is All in All.

"But when the fulness of the time was come, God sent forth His Son, made of a woman, made under the law, To redeem them that were under the law, that we might receive the adoption of sons. And because ye are sons, God hath sent forth the Spirit of his Son into your hearts, crying, Abba Father. Wherefore thou art no more a servant, but a son; and if a son, then an heir of God through Christ" (Galatians 4:4-7). Notice that it is all through Christ. Yes, our eternal inheritance is solely in Christ.

More Wonderful Assurances

"For the grace of God that bringeth salvation hath appeared to all men, Teaching us that, denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously, and godly, in this present world; Looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ; Who gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works" (Titus 2:11-14).

Notice the words, Who gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from iniquity. Redemption Through Blood

"Forasmuch as ye know that ye were not redeemed with corruptible things, as silver and gold, from your vain conversation received by tradition from your fathers; But with the precious blood of Christ, as of a lamb without blemish and without spot" (1 Peter 1:18, 19).

May we notice that our redemption is by the blood of Christ and not by tradition. Here Peter says the blood redeems. Let us notice other Scriptures. "But if we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin" (1 John 1:7). But to receive that fellowship, we must walk in the light. As we walk the cleansing is perfected.

"This is the covenant that I will make with them after those days, saith the Lord, I will put my laws into their hearts, and in their minds will I write them; And their sins and iniquities will I remember no more. Now where remission of these is, there is no more offering for sin. Having therefore, brethren, boldness to enter into the holiest by the blood of Jesus, By a new and living way, which he hath consecrated for us, through the veil, that is to say, his flesh; And having an high priest over the house of God; Let us draw near with a true heart in full assurance of faith, having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, and our bodies washed with pure water" (Hebrews 10:16-22). May we notice these words, Now where remission of these is, there is no more offering for sin. We would not dare try to make an offering for sin. We do not want to crucify the Lord afresh.

"And they sung a new song, saying,

Thou art worthy to take the book, and to open the seals thereof: for thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation" (Revelation 5:9). So again we have it declared that we are redeemed by the blood of Jesus Christ. Neither tradition nor any man-made decree has anything at all to do with our salvation.

"Now the God of peace, that brought again from the dead our Lord Jesus, that great shepherd of the sheep, through the blood of the everlasting covenant, Make you perfect in every good work to do his will, working in you that which is well-pleasing in his sight, through Jesus Christ; to whom be glory for ever and ever. Amen" (Hebrews 13:20, 21).

From this benediction it is plainly set forth, as well as from other Scriptures, that the blood of Jesus Christ is sufficient to cover all our sins without the aid of any man or set of men, any angel, or any saint. Christ has made sufficient atonement for our sins, and all that is necessary is for us to confess our sins to Him; then we are immediately made acceptable to the Father of the Lord Jesus Christ. Nothing can be added. It is dangerous to add to God's Sacrifice. The blood of Christ is all-sufficient for time and eternity.

Completeness in Christ

"For in him dwelleth all the fullness of the Godhead bodily. And ye are complete in him, which is the head of all principalities and power: In whom also ye are circumcised with the circumcision made without hands, in putting off the body of the sins of the flesh by the circumcision of Christ: Buried with him in baptism, wherein also ye are risen with him through the faith of the operation of God, who hath raised him from the dead" (Colossians 2:9-12).

Keep Courage That Overcomes and Completes

Never think you have lost at the first sight of defeat,

For there is plenty of time to overcome with courage and beat.

So make yourself a David or a Daniel, and use tactics that sway;

There may be giants or lions, or both, that will overcome their way.

But strike hard and finish your way for this will gain the day;

You can count on winning with weapons of victory through courage if you try,

And make yourself a hero, a brave over-comer, that wins today.

Getting Rich

Eva E. Jackson

I WISH I had money, loads of it," declared Martha Lee one morning, gazing longingly from the open window near which she was sitting.

"Money!" responded Aunt Faith from the opposite side of the room. "Money?" she smilingly repeated, lifting her eyes from the bit of linen on which she was diligently working. "What would you do with it?" she asked.

"Do? I would do a dozen things, Aunt Faith. I cannot tell you all. I would have a big house with rooms and rooms and rooms. Oh, they would be beautiful! There would be plate glass windows all richly draped. I would have the very best of furniture and the choicest of rugs, rare china and silver and glass. Oh, yes, I would! I would have pretty, spacious grounds, too, with the handsomest of flowers and shrubs everywhere. I would have a car—a beautiful one," announced Martha, "and a chauffeur with a brass-buttoned uniform. Oh, I would have a perfectly wonderful time!

"Wouldn't it be jolly, Aunt Faith? Think of it! I would drive and drive, and would almost always, if not always, take you along."

"I thank you, Martha, for your kind thought, I am sure. So you would expect to be happy if you had all that?"

"Surely! There is not the least doubt about it. Why not? There is no reason for one to be any other way than happy with all that money can buy. Really and truly, Aunt Faith, wouldn't it be loads of fun?"

"Maybe it would," the dear woman replied. "I could not say for sure. Perhaps it would." She smiled.

"Certainly! Most certainly! Nothing could be better. I should be as happy as a queen."

"If only I had money!" the girl was signing a moment later. Then frowning darkly, "I don't have a bit of good time."

"Don't you?" queried Aunt Faith, pityingly. "Don't you have any good times?"

"Hardly any."

"I am sorry. Very sorry. I certainly should say that you should be about as happy as any girl could be."

"Violets! violets!" came the interruption. From around the corner of the house a man appeared with a basket of the pretty spring blossoms on his arm. "Violets! Violets!" he repeated. Then, in a sing-song style:

"Violets! Violets!
Not to be sold!
All for the children
Who are ten years old."

From outside the window: "Anyone here who is ten?" he smiled, making his good-natured face appear much like the big, round moon.

"I am," piped Martha. "I shall be next week," she promptly informed.

Suddenly the child seemed frightened—she was not used to talking so freely to one whom she did not know. A smile from Aunt Faith and the man's approving, "All right," soon put her quite at ease.

"Pretty, aren't they?" he asked, proceeding to place the basket safe on the window sill.

"Ten next week," he was smiling, while Martha buried her nose deeply among the sweet, delicately scented things.

"Ten next week," he repeated. "That's near enough," and the caller drew from the mass a lovely bunch of blue.

"Take 'em," he urged, as the little girl hesitated. "Take 'em. They are yours."

Convinced that the man meant what he said the child accepted. "I thank you. Oh, I thank you very much!" she cried.

"May I not pay for them?" asked Aunt Faith.

"No, no lady. No, no," came with a positive shake of the head. "No money! No money!" The man decidedly refused. "She'd be sorry, very sorry if I should take money, you see."

"She?" repeated Aunt Faith questioningly.

"She's my little girl," the visitor quickly explained. "She is not very little any more. She is ten—ten today. Celebrating, you see."

"O-h!" returned Aunt Faith wonderingly.

"Yes'm. Sure! It's her birthday, lady. I told you that. Every year she gathers these pretty things, ties them, and sends them to the children who are just her age."

"They grow thick, down in the meadow. She's sent millions of 'em—every year since she was six. She loves it. I bring them when I come to market. 'Tisn't any trouble to me and she thinks it's great fun. Pretty posies!" admired the man, drawing his fingers tenderly over a bunch of big blue heads.

"Lovely!" agreed Aunt Faith. "But won't you please—"

"No, no," he interrupted, guessing what the woman would say. "I couldn't think of it, ma'am. She'd be terribly sorry," he emphasized. "She loves to do it. It is just her way. She thinks it a lot of fun."

"Doesn't she have any birthday party?" asked Martha, with the blue bunch still in her hand.

"No, no, little girl. Never! She doesn't believe in 'em. She likes this way best. She says the other way isn't any sport. She wouldn't be satisfied. Nothing else would make her half so glad. True—she is one of the happiest little girls in the world."

"Please tell her I like them," blushed Martha. As the man took the basket again upon his arm, "Tell your little girl I thank her for them," she called after him.

The good-natured man smiled, bowed graciously, and soon his voice echoed far down the street.

"Violets! Violets!
Not to be sold!
All for the children
Who are ten years old."

"Great fun!" smiled Martha happily, as together they listened to the strange little tune.

"I believe it," affirmed Aunt Faith. "What joy she is giving! Suppose we forget, Martha, about wanting more money. Suppose we think more of making others glad."

"Then would I be happy?" asked the little girl. "Would I?"

"You would," was the emphasized answer, and they thought the great purple violets seemed to agree for at that very moment a soft breeze came through the window near which they were now standing, causing them to nod their pretty heads as if they, too, were chiming in, "You would."

Mrs. Ada Phillips

On July 23, 1956, the Lord called to her heavenly home, Sister Ada Phillips. She was born November 3, 1876. She was a faithful member of Hugo Free Will Baptist Church, Hugo, North Carolina, where she served as clerk for many years. She also served as treasurer in the woman's auxiliary for many years. Mrs. Phillips faithfully attended church services until her illness two years ago.

She leaves to mourn her loss one sister, Mrs. Eva Phillips; three grandsons, Rex of the home and Arthur and Wayne of Araba; and many relatives and friends.

Funeral services were conducted in the Hugo Church by the pastor, the Rev. Clifton Rice.

May the loved ones left behind be comforted with these words:

Prayer and Praise Letter

July, 1956

Dear Christian Friend.

During these summer months many of our young people have been engaged in youth camp work. It is indeed a thrill to have fellowship with young people in youth camp. Already we have heard of many decisions for Christ this summer. Even on the mission field, youth camps are becoming popular. Mrs. Stevens wrote from Africa last year as follows:

"December 14 we'll witness our first attempt to have a camp or a spiritual retreat for our Zulu young people. This will be on the shores of Lake Siboyi. Frankly, I am afraid. There are hippos in that lake that love to feed on the banks at night and crocodiles that like to sun by day. But they say it will be safe. A spot will be fenced off with mesh for swimming. Boys will have one camp and girls another a short distance away."

We praise the Lord for our youth camps and the much good that is being done.

Miss Wilson to Arrive August -

By the time you read this letter Miss Wilson will have arrived home from India. This will be her first furlough home after five years on the field. We praise the Lord that she was granted a "no objection to return." After a few weeks rest she will be available for speaking engagements among our churches. If you would like to have her in your church for a missionary service please contact the foreign mission office.

In a recent letter from Miss Wilson regarding her leaving India she states as follows: "In just a few hours I'll be entering the plane for my first lap of the journey home. I leave this land with many mingled feelings—only He who knows the heart can understand. How I love India and her dear people! My own burden as I come home is to so present (by His help) the vital need of prayer for this land that we will literally bathe our work here in prayer. It is the one great need of the hour."

Correst Date of Missionary Conference

Due to conflicting dates of local associations it has become necessary to change the date of the Annual Missionary Conference in Nashville, Tennessee, to begin Tuesday, October 9. The conference will be in session throughout the day of Wednesday, October 19, and will close with a special missionary rally on Wednesday night. The services will be held in the Bible College auditorium. For deep inspiration and challenge, don't miss the Missionary Conference October 9 and 10, 1956.

Pray for the Stevens

We cannot emphasize enough the importance of prayer during these days for Harold and Josephine Stevens. It will take them all of the month of August to complete the survey of our field in Africa. We can be sure that Satan will attack from every side. Will you become an intercessor on their behalf? Also please pray for Lonnie and Anita Sparks as they make preparations to go to Africa.

Wiley and Cuban Pastors Complete Tour

Brother Wiley and three of our very fine Cuban pastors have just completed a forty-eight (48) day tour of different churches in the interest of the "Chapels for Cuba" project. They report very fine response and many of the pastors are saying that their visit was equal to a revival meeting. Many lives were rededicated to the Lord and the interest in foreign missions has been increased. We are grateful for their work and also to each of you for your response. Over three thousand ($3,000) dollars has come in for the project as the result of their itinerate.

Miss Wischart in Missouri

Miss Luck Wischart, home on furlough, has made a very successful itinerate among several of the churches in her home state. She has a very fine set of colored slides on Cuba and her services are proving a great blessing. Continue to pray for her work.

Christian Education

Soon, many of our young people will trek back to school. Several will go to the Free Will Baptist Bible College; others will go elsewhere. Wherever you go may you seek a "Christian education." The college in Nashville needs to expand. The most of our missionaries received their call to the field while attending Bible College. The college is a "must" to our department. The evangelistic, missionary spirit of the school must be maintained and the institution supported. Our Bible colleges are the means to an end. They train our preachers, missionaries and Christian workers. When the expansion campaign starts

I hope each of you will give your full support.

Missionary Posters

We still have a large quantity of poster maps containing the pictures of our missionaries. They are free to churches, Sunday schools and auxiliaries. Why not send for one for each classroom?

A Free Ride

Would you like to travel for free? Well we have made it possible for you to do just that. Your money represents you. It represents your work, your sweat, your life and it will be given a free ride to the foreign mission office when placed in an envelope. Believe you me we can't get along without it as you will see by the financial report. About twice per year we send you this free ticket. Don't waste it—but use it—for the glory of God.

Sincerely yours,

Raymond Riggs

The Royal Law of Love

(Lesson for September 2)

Lesson: James 2:1-13.

Golden Text: James 2:1.

I. INTRODUCTION

The world looks upon men and judges them in terms of what they have. The writer alludes to this tradition when he describes the reception given to people who make a show of wealth as compared to that given those who are poor in this world's goods, "For if there come unto your assembly a man with a gold ring, in goodly apparel, and there come in also a poor man in vile raiment; and ye have respect to him that weareth the gay clothing, and say unto him, Sit thou here in a good place; and say to the poor, Stand thou there, or sit here under my footstool" (Vv. 2, 3).

This custom of the Jews perhaps originated from their belief that God gave prosperity to the good, and the poor were thus because of a judgment of God for some sins which either they or their ancestors had committed. The disciples gave expression to this belief when, upon seeing a man who had been blind from his birth, they asked, "... Master, who did sin, this man, or his parents, that he was born blind?" (John 9:2). Furthermore, it is certain that the people continued this practice because of expediency, just as people practice it today. Because wealth has meant material power and influence in all generations, men have given special recognition to those who have possessed wealth, hoping to purchase patronage thereby which would lead to material benefits for themselves. True Christianity frowns upon and condemns this practice.—The Bible Student (F. W. B.).

Have you time to read Matthew 19:16-23? The disciples could hardly believe their ears for this was absolutely contrary to what they had been taught. One purpose of Luke 16:19-31 was to teach that it is impossible for great riches alone to obtain God's salvation.

II. HELPFUL HINTS

1. Those who follow Christ, as Christians should, will not exhibit the partial attitude (Vs. 1).

2. There is no greater test of the Christian attitude than the presence of both, the rich and the poor (Vv. 2-4).

3. The richest of men, though very poor, are those whose faith is strong in the Lord (Vs. 5).

4. The praiseworthy things in the rich and the poor are always hidden to the advantage seekers' view (Vv. 6, 7).

5. Those who obey the royal law of love can forget about the evil of the partial attitudes (Vs. 9).

6. No matter which link of the chain of laws is broken, the guilt is for breaking the entire law (Vv. 10, 11).

7. To live according to the law of liberty is to believe the gospel and live for Christ (Vs. 12).

8. Those who go to judgment without mercy to their credit will face a Judge without mercy for them (Vs. 13).—The Bible Teacher (F. W. B.).

III. ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

1. We have been told that James never left Jerusalem to visit other churches and other fields as many of the prominent disciples did in his time. But that did not mean that he was not interested in the peoples in the regions beyond. From his writings we gather that he had a comprehensive knowledge of the spiritual state of the churches that had been founded by his associates among Jews and gentiles alike. It is significant that at the first church council in Jerusalem (Acts 15), it was James who summed their findings and who proposed a future course of action that was followed. And in this epistle he deals with some problems that were agitating the apostolic church.

2. We notice, too, that James does not deal with doctrinal matters, not that he was indifferent to them, but with matters of conduct of one brother to another. He knew that brethren could be hurt and the peace of the church disturbed by bad conduct as by doctrine. And in this Scripture (James 2:1-13) he deals with an obnoxious sin that disturbed and disfigured the church as it met in worship. This was the sin of partiality, for an undue respect for certain well-dressed persons.

3. This is not a tirade against wealth or social standing in themselves; the Scriptures teach us to give honor to whom honor is due; custom to whom custom is due; it is against an obsequious deference to rich for the riches' sake. This sin of partiality to classes is an old sin of the human race.

The Mosaic Law warned the people of unrighteous judgments.—The Bible Expositor.

4. God's interest in men is not determined by their wealth. So, one who is poor may find his poverty a bit inconvenient, but it will not hinder him from being rich in faith. God frequently has His best people hidden away among the poor and simple folk of this world.

Conversely, to be rich may constitute a real danger and temptation to a man. All too often it makes him hard and oppressive. To look at the outward appearance is always a mistake. (See 1 Samuel 16:7 for an excellent illustration.)—Moody Monthly.

5. "My brethren, have not the faith of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Lord of glory, with respect of persons" (James 2:1).

This is the basis for our appeal to unbelievers, (see Matthew 28:19; Luke 24:47; Acts 1:8; Romans 1:16), and is also the foundation of a good testimony. It is wholly inconsistent to profess faith in Jesus Christ, the Lord of glory, and at the same time regard the persons of men. J. B. Phillips renders it, "Don't ever attempt, my brothers, to combine snobbery with faith in our Lord Jesus Christ."—Selected.

6. A Mexican child was brought to a vacation school in San Joaquin. Evidently she felt some difference between her reception and that of the other children. She heard the story of Christ's blessing little children, and was greatly impressed. Someone took her to Sunday school and there was decided objection to a Mexican child. She marched up to the superintendent and demanded, "Is it true that Jesus loves only little white children?" She was assured that it was not true, and without a word of explanation she marched out. She returned with four other Mexican children, saying, "I wasn't going to bring them until I knew!"

Partiality is not an easy sin for many to overcome, but God's grace is sufficient. Read the comments in the Advanced Quarterly for real help.

Great men never feel great; small men never feel small.—Selected.

There is no neutral ground in the spiritual realm.—E. J. Richards.

"Not baptism but his faith in the Lord Jesus Christ caused a complete reversal in the life of the Philippian jailer."—Selected.

Saviour, with Thy power Divine,
Govern all this heart of mine;
In the busy world of school
Let Thy love my motives rule.

Should my comrades right disown,
Help me, Lord, to stand alone,
Serving Thee, O King of kings,
Make me true in little things.

While I work with all my might,
Keep my spirit brave and bright;
And at playtime let me be Still well-pleasing Lord to thee.

Keep me faithful all the days;
Then the endless victory won,
Let me hear Thee say, "Well done"!

RELIGIOUS PROSELYTISM

In a recent news release of the World Council of Churches it was stated, "... a commission under Bishop Angus Dun of Washington, D. C. Cathedral defined proselytism as occurring when 'the aim is not primarily to witness to truth and to God, but to advance the interests of a particular church or group,' and when the means used to induce the members of other churches to transfer their membership is not compatible with the 'purity of the gospel,' or expresses contempt for another church." This is a nice and tactful definition of a shameful and unethical act. The bare fact is that proselyting is stealing a member from another church or denomination in order to strengthen and bolster the membership of your own church.

The minister or layman who is guilty of this practice might well listen to the woe which Jesus pronounced upon the proselyting scribes and Pharisees, "Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye compass sea and land to make one proselyte, and when he is made, ye make him twofold more the child of hell than yourselves" (Matthew 23:15). One would infer from this statement of the Master that proselyting is sinful, and that the one practicing it is on the road to hell.

In order to make clear what proselyting is, let us give an actual experience which we had while pastor of a certain church:

"There was a fine Christian young man in our church who had exceptional talent which he was dedicating to the Lord. He was happy in his church relationship and was rendering a real service. At the time of the incident he was in the armed forces and came home for an occasional week end. Upon one of his visits home the pastor of a church of another faith rode one hundred miles with him on his way back to camp, trying to persuade him to change his church affiliation.

"Upon being informed as to what had happened, we confronted the minister with the evidence; whereupon, he admitted his guilt and asked our forgiveness."

This was a flagrant violation of Christian ethics such as does not occur often; but how about the many secretive and more subtle cases that occur? It has been our observation that members obtained in this manner are not a great loss to the church from which they come; nor are they any great help to the church receiving them. The very fact that they succumb to overpersuasion indicates the weakness of their character.

On the other hand, we would not leave the impression that no Christian should ever change his church affiliation. There are times when the only honorable and Christlike thing to do is to move one's membership from one denomination to another. If a person who is a member of one denomination becomes convicted that he does not believe the doctrine of his church, he should, by all means, move his membership to a denomination whose doctrine is compatible with his belief. Under this condition both churches and both pastors should welcome the change.

We should remember that the church exists for the benefit of the members, and not the members for the benefit of the church. Proselyting begins to take place when church members get this truth reversed. It should be the aim of every church to grow as large as possible in numbers, but not at the expense of some other church. Every church should strive to reach every unsaved person within the sphere of its influence, and lead them to Christ for salvation. It is also within the realm of its rights when it seeks to enlist all unenlisted church members within reach. Thence, the church will be bringing the ministry of Christ to people who otherwise would not receive it.

Why should people of one denomination seek to proselyte people of another? Since Jesus denounces the practice, every reason which can be given is therefore sinful and evil. Let us look at a few of them:

(1) Proselyters want to swell their church roll so that they may have a big name. We do not need to point out that this is altogether selfish and reveals the vanity of their hearts. Are they not aware that God will not permit such trifling with His sacred institution, the Church? They are merely heaping to themselves trouble which will break forth in the form of division, disturbance and shame at God's own time. We have seen this very thing happen in more than one instance. A church which is founded solidly and permanently is one made up of members who have been born of the Spirit of God and who are definitely convinced that the doctrine of their church gives assent to their interpretation of Bible truth.

(2) Proselyters believe that their church serves in competition with other Christian groups. These say by their actions that all people not of their particular faith are lost and doomed to hell. Therefore, they feel it their duty to rescue these souls from their state of ignorance and condemnation, and to lead them into the safety of their fold.

Let us beware of those who practice such narrowness and bigotry. May we profit by Jesus' discussion with John concerning this matter, "And John answered him, saying, Master, we saw one casting out devils in thy name, and he followeth not us: and we forbid him because he followeth not us. But Jesus said, Forbid him not: for there is no man which shall do a miracle in my name, that can lightly speak evil of me. For he that is not against us is on our part" (Mark 9:38-40).

We should cooperate with Christians of all denominations insofar as we are able. Then, when we find fellowship impossible, we should stand firm in our convictions and go on about our service to God in the light of our information from His Word. We should never be among those who strive to build up their congregations at the expense of other groups who are representing the same Christ whom we serve. We should practice Christian cooperation as far as we can go, and religious toleration the remainder of the way.

Broken homes come from lack of devotion between husband and wife and children. God is Love. Take Him into your home.

"In this was manifested the love of God toward us, because that God sent his only begotten Son into the world, that we might live through him . . . Beloved, if God so loved us, we ought also to love one another" (1 John 4:9, 11).—Selected.

Choosing and Receiving Protection

Elder A. J. Jenkins, D. D.
McArthur, Ohio

(What will be said in this article is based on Psalm 91).

THE first choice we need to make, to be safe and happy, is to take dwelling in God, the Author of salvation from sins, and the Giver of spiritual life. In this act of obedience, faith and courage go forward with evidence of safety. He (God) is my refuge and strength. Out of strength given by the Holy Spirit, there is the realization that He shall deliver me from the enemies and snares of the devil. The Holy Spirit brings deliverance, and security comes. Under His wing I am to abide and trust Him for victory.

With victory and the recognizing of God's presence, fear of night riders and day enemies shall not move me from my place of security in God. Feeling secure in God's power removes all doubt about having to go hungry.

If you choose to want protection all through life, and as Verse 7 teaches, enemies may be around you by the thousands, but they shall not come near enough to harm you. One should keep his spiritual eyes open so that he can see, as Verse 8 says, "Only with thine eyes shalt thou behold and see the reward of the wicked." In your great need, always keep the overcoming power. The Christian should make his life single for the glory of God, and then he can realize the great things recorded in Verse 9, "Because thou hast made the LORD, which is my refuge, even the most high, thy habitation." Now you have met the divine requirements and have the full right to believe and know you are safe. When one lives worthy of the presence of God, the Holy Spirit, he is shielded from all outer danger, as Verse 10 states, "There shall no evil befall thee, neither shall any plague come nigh thy dwelling." Think of the heavenly host that shall shield and protect thee if thou trust God, "For he shall give his angels charge over thee, to keep thee in all thy ways" (Vs. 11).

Choose the heavenly angels for safety, protection and victory over obstacles hard to manage, as stated in Verse 12, "They shall bear thee up in their hands, lest thou dash thy foot against a stone."

Choose to be an overcomer by the Holy Spirit's help: "Thou shalt tread upon the lion and adder: the young lion and the dragon shalt thou trample under feet" (Vs. 13).

Choose to be a wholehearted lover of God, "Because he hath set his love upon me, therefore will I deliver him: . . ." (Vs. 14). Trust God for deliverance. Choose to introduce and lift God up to all mankind, as He says, ". . . I will set him on high, because he hath known my name" (Vs. 14).

Choose to learn to pray to God only, "He shall call upon me, and I will answer him: . . ." (Vs. 15). Also choose to recognize the God of power who can make one feel safe in a den of lions, or in a furnace of fire, as God says, ". . . I will be with him in trouble; I will deliver him, and honour him" (Vs. 15). God did not only deliver Daniel from the den of lions, but He honored him many times afterwards; He not only delivered Joseph from the enemies, but He honored him many times afterwards; He not only delivered the three Hebrew young men, but He honored them afterwards; He not only delivered Esther from the enemies, but afterwards honored her with power to conquer the king and finally become queen.

What would you like to do or be for God? Why not get in touch with Him through the Holy Spirit and tell Him your needs, what you want to do for Him, where you want to go for Him, what you want to be for Him; He will listen.

Choose to have the long life God will give to all worthy seekers. This life begins with the resurrection and never ends. Just think of it and prepare to enjoy this life with no end with Jesus and all the saints of God. Here in heaven you will be above all troubles, trials, difficulties, heartaches and other things that mar the peace and happiness here on this earth.

The Drinker is a Sissy

Roy L. Smith

THE problem of alcoholics and alcoholism has been getting considerable attention in the newspapers and elsewhere in recent months, and a whole galaxy of scientists have been called upon to contribute their opinions. Stripped of all scientific terms, and phrased in the language of the street, the situation sums up to one simple statement—the drinker is a sissy!

It seems to be agreed among the learned ones that people drink for the sake of the effect of the alcohol on their nervous system. The chemical effect of the drug, carried in the bloodstreams, is to reduce the sensitivity of the individual.

The psychologist and the physiologist have explanations for it which sound very scholarly. They talk about the loss of the power of self-criticism, or the narcotic effect on nerve cells. But it all means just one thing, alcohol is taken for the purpose of making the drinker less aware of the jolts and strain of life.

One of the first decisions every individual has to make is this, what attitude am I going to take toward the inevitable and inescapable burdens of life?

The courageous person faces the facts. He knows he must meet opposition, disappointment, frustrations and delays. He fashions for himself a faith which enables him to look squarely into the eyes of pain, and grapple with it in manly fashion until he has overcome it. The weakling and the timid seek escapes.

Alcohol has never solved any problem for any man. It has only offered the drinker a temporary escape from his difficulties. The man who loses his job, or suffers some other defeat, does not get a new job, nor does he achieve any victory, by getting drunk. He only gets a brief vacation from his anxieties. When he sobers up all his problems stand waiting for him, at the very point where he left them. It often happens, indeed, that they have multiplied while he has been off on a binge.

The hostess who serves drinks to liven up the party is, in fact, confessing that she cannot depend upon her guests to be interesting until they have been drugged. She is saying, in effect, that unless they have alcohol in their bloodstream in suffi-

Swift and Slow

Colonel Pendleton
Madison, Tennessee

MY dear friends, please let us study together a lesson on hearing, speaking and getting angry. For a text we will read, "... let every man be swift to hear, slow to speak, slow to wrath: For the wrath of man worketh not the righteousness of God. Wherefore lay apart all filthiness and superfluity of naughtiness, and receive with meekness the engrafted word, which is able to save your souls" (James 1:19-21). Is it not a fact that this Scripture contains good admonition for every man, woman, boy and girl? Let us take Verse 19 of this passage and select from it the words for our text, Swift to Hear, Slow to Speak, Slow to Wrath.

In the book of Revelation we find these words, "Blessed is he that readeth, and they that hear the words of this prophecy, ..." (Revelation 1:3). This was relative to the prophecy of Revelation. Again, when the messages were written to the seven churches of Asia, we find to each of these this thought was enjoined, "He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches; ..." (Revelation 2:7). God wants His people to keep their ears open to hear His voice. There is no place for spiritual deafness in the church. The Lord never intended that His people be afflicted in that manner.

A great preacher was once holding a meeting which was attended every night by a tavern keeper from the vicinity in which he was preaching. This man did not care to hear the message but was drawn to the service by the singing of the congregation. Each evening he would come and listen with delight to the song service; then he would clasp his hands hard over his ears to shut out the words of the preacher. One evening a fly happened to light on the man's nose and annoyed him, so he removed one of his hands from his ear to brush away the fly. Just as this occurred the preacher gave his text for the evening, "He that Hath an Ear, Let Him Hear." From that moment on the man's attention was on the words of the speaker, and ere long the tavern owner relinquished his life of sin and became a faithful follower of our Lord Jesus Christ. Dear ones, it pays to remove all our earstops that we might hear the gentle small voice of our heavenly Father.

You will no doubt recall the story of Samuel. As a child he was dedicated to God by his mother, and when he was weaned she took him to the priest, Eli, that he might learn the duties about the house of God. One night he was aroused from his slumber by a call. Supposing it to be Eli who summoned him, he hurriedly sought out the priest. But Eli said it was not he who called. After Samuel was called three times, Eli perceived that the call came from the Lord and advised Samuel to answer the next call with these words, "Speak, for thy servant heareth." Did Samuel stop up his ears that he might not hear the voice of the Lord? No, he was quick to hear, and God selected him as a great prophet of Israel. Under his hand the first king of Israel, Saul, was anointed; King David likewise received his coronation from the same man.

We find that Abraham was swift to hear when God called. We read that he staggered not because of unbelief. And because of this great faith in hearing and believing the Word of the Lord and acting thereon, he was called, "Friend of God."

When Israel transgressed against the Lord, He said unto them through the prophet, Isaiah: "Hearken unto me, O Jacob of Israel, my called; I am he; I am the first, I also am the last. . . . All ye, assemble yourselves, and hear; . . . Come ye near unto me, hear ye this; I have not spoken in secret from the beginning; from the time that it was, there am I: and now the Lord GOD, and his Spirit, hath sent me. Thus saith the LORD, thy Redeemer, the Holy One of Israel; I am the LORD thy God which teacheth thee to profit, which leadeth thee by the way that thou shouldest go. O that thou hadst hearkened to (been swift to hear) my commandments! then had thy peace been as a river, and they righteousness as the waves of the sea: Thy seed also had been as the sand, and the offspring of thy bowels like the gravel thereof; his name should not have been cut off nor destroyed from before me" (Isaiah 48:12-19).

The psalmist, calling upon all people on earth to join him in his meditation, besought them thus, "Hear this, all ye people; give ear, all ye inhabitants of the world:

Both low and high, rich and poor, together" (Psalm 49:1, 2). Again in Psalm 66:16, his words read, "Come and hear, all ye that fear God, and I will declare what he hath done for my soul." David realized the need of possessing an attentive ear, and he prayed that he might be able to hear. "Cause me to hear thy lovingkindness in the morning; for in thee do I trust: ..." (Psalm 143:8). Wouldn't it be wise for each of us to pray as David did? Surely we are in need of instruction from the Lord and our ears should be open at all time to hear His voice.

Referring back to our text we find the words, slow to speak. Moses was a man of slow speech, and sometimes I think it was more of an asset than a liability. What do you think? Please let us notice that the servant of God, James, gives us an insight into the reason for the admonition, slow to speak. "My brethren, be not many masters, knowing that we shall receive the greater condemnation. For in many things we offend all. If any man offend not in word, the same is a perfect man, and able also to bridle the whole body. Behold, we put bits in the horses' mouths, that they may obey us; and we turn about their whole body. Behold also the ships, which though they be so great, and are driven of fierce winds, yet are they turned about with a very small helm, whithersoever the governor listeth. Even so the tongue is a little member, and boasteth great things. Behold, how great a matter a little fire kindleth! And the tongue is a fire, a world of iniquity: so is the tongue among our members, that it defileth the whole body, and setteth on fire the course of nature; and it is set on fire of hell. For every kind of beasts, and of birds, and of serpents, and of things in the sea, is tamed, and hath been tamed of mankind: But the tongue can no man tame; it is an unruly evil, full of deadly poison. Therewith bless we God, even the Father; and therewith curse we men which are made after the similitude of God. Out of the same mouth proceedeth blessing and curseth. My brethren, these things ought not so to be. Doth a fountain send forth at the same place sweet water and bitter? Can the fig tree, my brethren, bear olive berries? either a vine, figs? so can n fountain both yield salt water and fresh. Who is a wise man and endued with knowledge among you? let him shew out of good conversation his works with meekness of wisdom" (James 3:1-13).

Let us notice that Peter was a man of quick speech. Jesus had to reprove him "Thou savourest not the things which are of God." Many of us like Peter; we are anxious to speak right out in defense of our views, and our speech betrays us.

There is a poem that comes to mind that I think is quite applicable here:

"If wisdom's ways you'd wisely seek,
Five things observe with care:
Of whom you speak, to whom you speak,
And how, and when and where."
Please let us see what advice we can get on the subject from a man of great wisdom. In Ecclesiastes 5:1-3, 6, 7, we read: "Keep thy foot when thou goest to the house of God, and be ready to hear, than to give the sacrifice of fools: for they consider not that they do evil. Be not rash with thy mouth, and let not thine heart be hasty to utter any thing before God: for God is in heaven, and thou upon earth: therefore let thy words be few. For a dream cometh through the multitude of business; and a fool's voice is known by multitude of words. . . . Suffer not thy mouth to cause thy flesh to sin; neither say thou before the angel, that it was an error: wherefore should God be angry at thy voice, and destroy the work of thine hands? for in the multitude of dreams and many words there are also divers vanities: but fear thou God."

We find implication here that we are to be forever silent. In this life there is a place for each of us to fill. To fill our place well we should be able to say or write things which would edify others. Paul said, ". . . we use great plainness of speech" (2 Corinthians 3:12). He admonished the saints to "Let your speech be always with grace, seasoned with salt, that ye may know how ye ought to answer every man" (Colossians 4:6). "Sound speech, (he wrote to Titus) that cannot be condemned; that he that is of the contrary part may be ashamed, having no evil thing to say of you" (Titus 2:8).

We find the last admonition in our text is slow in growing angry. Our heavenly Father is a gracious God and is slow to wrath. Peter said, "The Lord is not slack concerning His promise, as some men count slackness; but it longsuffering to us-ward, . . ." (2 Peter 3:9). Now if God is slow to anger, which He is, then He wants His children to possess the same characteristic. In Proverbs 15:18, we read, "A wrathful man stirreth up strife: but he that is slow to anger appeaseth strife." Again we read, "He that is slow to anger is better than the mighty; and he that ruleth his spirit than he that taketh a city" (Proverbs 16:32). How evident it is that this is a Christian attribute. Did not Jesus, the Christ, say, "Blessed are the peacemakers: for they shall be called the children of God" (Matthew 5:9)?

We find that Saul was a man quick to anger. Jealousy appeared to be the cause of this. Let us call to mind that when David was praised more highly than he, his anger was aroused and David had to flee to save his life.

Was not Cain also swift in growing angry? For when Abel, in righteousness, offered a more excellent sacrifice, it displeased him to such an extent that he rose up and killed his brother. Thus we find that sin in the heart fostered an angry spirit, which in turn precipitated murder. No wonder Solomon wrote: "He that is soon angry dealeth foolishly: . . ." (Proverbs 14:17); "Be not hasty in thy spirit to be angry: for anger resteth in the bosom of fools" (Ecclesiastes 7:9); "Make no friendship with an angry man; and with a furious man thou shalt not go; Lest thou learn his ways, and get a snare to thy soul" (Proverbs 22:24, 25); "An angry man stirreth up strife, and a furious man aboundeth in transgression" (Proverbs 29:22).

So we are instructed to be not soon angry, and this does not apply only to men. A quick angry spirit is no more becoming to a woman than to a man. Therefore it is written: "It is better to dwell in the wilderness, than with a contentious and an angry woman" (Proverbs 21:19).

SUNLIGHT

Mrs. J. W. Arnold
201 Buchanan Street
Whitesboro, Texas

WE pray, "Oh, dear Lord, remove all the doubts and fears; increase our faith that we may just bask in the sunlight of God's love." But as we pray, we seem to hear, "There will be storms, but God is always near."

We know how that we have storms in the day; we cannot see the sun because of the black, threatening clouds that come between us and the beautiful rays of sunlight. We do not see its beautiful light that makes the earth radiate when it is shining in all its splendor. We know, however, it is there, for when the storm has spent itself and the clouds go over, there is the faithful servant of God at his post of duty, giving out his beautiful rays of light. We are made to rejoice because of its beauty and we are happy again that the storm is past.

How much more do we appreciate the beautiful sun after the storm! Possibly we enjoy the beautiful sunlight for many days, but then comes the storms. Shall we consider the benefits of a rain storm. It waters the earth—the grass that we may have fat cattle. It also waters our crops that they yield plentifully; our orchards get the cooling, refreshing rains that they may bear fruit in their season.

We see how the storms benefit the crops and the earth, but how do the storms of life, spiritually speaking, help the child of God? Jesus said, "Whom I love, I chasten." Many times we draw nearer to God during the storms of life. It gives God a chance to speak to our hearts. So much of the time while the sun is shining we act as the grasshopper, jumping from one place to another with never a vision nor a care. It would be well for us to read Proverbs 6:6, "Go to the ant, thou sluggard; consider her ways, and be wise." She works with a will, knowing her time to gather is short and the winters are long.

If we would work with a will and have a vision of greater things, certainly we would not have so many storms, spiritual, to go through. But when the storms or chastisements come, remember the sun (Son) is just beyond the dark clouds.

Feelings are no sure monitor to go by. They are liable to change with every passing wind.—Selected.

The Meaning of Camp Mount Bethel

The Rev. C. J. Harvey, camp solicitor for the Mount Bethel Free Will Baptist Youth Camp located four miles north of Ashburn, Georgia, submits the following statement written by Patricia Weaver, a 1956 attendant of the youth camp. Rev. Harvey hopes that this testimony will interest more youth in the camp as well as their parents and that it will create an interest on their part to submit similar writings to our church papers:

"To me the youth camp means more than words can express. In fact it means things that I don't know how to put in words. To me it means to learn more about the Lord, the church and even singing. You may wonder why I want to learn more about singing. Well, singing is closely associated with the church and the church leads to the Lord. We want to sing in the church for the Lord. We learn at camp how to be saved and how to be a true Christian. That is very important in a young person's life.

"I sincerely urge all young people who have the chance to attend Camp Mount Bethel. You will receive many wonderful blessings in return and also meet many young Christians."

Where Were You?

Mrs. C. S. May

I came to your church last Sunday;
I walked up and down the aisle.
I noticed your seat was vacant,
Said the Master with a kindly smile.

Yes, I was at home, I answered.
Some folk from up Salem way,
Drove down for a week-end visit,
So we stayed in the house all day.

Or, I had an awful headache;
I had a roast in the pan,
Or, we overslept that morning,
But, I go whenever I can.

I went to a morning service
Not over two months ago.
So much work must wait till Sunday
There's no time for church, you know.

The Master gazed at me sadly,
As He was about to speak;
My child, He replied, are there
Not six other days in the week?

I saw I had grieved my Master,
As slowly He turned away.
And I vowed He'd not find me again
Absent on His Holy Day.

Man By The River's Bank

A man stood by a river's brink,
With a coil of rope in his hand,
Yet saw his helpless neighbor sink,
Not fifty feet from land.

He heard his neighbor's frantic cry,
As he sank beneath the waves,
But did not life a hand to try,
The drowning man to save.

As the Lord looked on the scene that day,
Where the heartless neighbor stood,
Will not the God of justice say,
"You are guilty of his blood?"

A citizen stood by a voting booth,
With a ballot in his hand,
And cast it that the curse of youth,
Might in his city stand.

He closed his ears to the widow's pleas,
And orphaned children's cries,
He shut his eyes to sights one sees,
Where drink, all law defies.

For the sake of paltry revenue,
He cast his vote for drink,
While hopeless drunkards in his view,
Stood then on ruin's brink.

How can a just God in that day,
When all accounts are given,
Take one who cast his vote that way,
Up to Himself in heaven?

Will He condemn the man who stood,
And let his neighbor sink,
Yet judge the voter free from blood,
Of those who died from drink?

Oh, No! Oh, No! God must be just,
So the verdict all may tell,
There is no other way, He must Consign them both to Hell.

RECOMMENDATION

"We have in the Fellowship Free Will Baptist Church in Bryan, Texas, a very consecrated man of God, who is very anxious to be of service to the Lord, wherever He calls. Reverend C. E. Isom, Age 53, married, and very sound in doctrine is one whom I am very glad to recommend to any Free Will Baptist church in need of a pastor who will put his whole heart and soul into advancing the cause of Christ in the community where he lives. Reverend C. E. Isom might be reached by writing him at 607 North College Avenue, Bryan, Texas, or you may call him for an appointment."—H. Ray Berry, Bryan, Texas.

"To Your Knees"

A mountain climber and his guide were climbing a high peak. Coming to a particularly treacherous ridge where they were exposed to a high wind, the guide dropped to his knees for safety. Looking back, he saw his comrade trying doubtfully to walk along. Realizing his peril, he cried, "To your knees, man, to your knees."

As we face the dangerous winds today, we shall only walk securely if we drop to our knees when the peril is great. We do not have sufficient strength within ourselves to breast the fierce storms common to all Christians who strive to reach the higher heights of Christian experience. But we do have this promise, "They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run, and not be weary, and they shall walk, and not faint" (Isa. 40:31).—The Free Methodist.

How to Meet the Devil

A number of simple people were talking of temptation, and the part which Satan takes in the believer's temptations came into discussion. Many good things were uttered. A quaint old pilgrim was appealed to. The old man rose and said:

"Well, my friends, you ask me what I think be the best way to deal with Satan. I'll tell you. Now, if you'll take an old pilgrim's advice, you'll never parley with him. He ain't wise; for if he had bin, he'd have stopped in heaven. But he's artful, and he's had a pretty long spell these six thousand years in studying the weak points of human nature. And so sure as you begin to parley with him, he'll outwit you and throw you. I'll tell you what I have done with him these many years: I never speak to him at all, but just as soon as he comes to me, I allus introduce him to my betters."—A. B. Simpson.

Questions and Answers ON THE BIBLE

Conducted by J. F. BARROW

3824 Richland Avenue, Nashville 5, Tennessee

Question: A friend of mine who believes in eternal security says that the Bible teaches us that God judges Christians that persist in sin by bringing physical disaster upon them rather than spiritual disaster or eternal destruction. He gives these Scriptures to prove his point: "To deliver such an one unto Satan for the destruction of the flesh, that the spirit may be saved in the day of the Lord Jesus" (1 Corinthians 5:5); compare with "For it is impossible for those who were once enlightened, and have tasted of the heavenly gift, and were made partakers of the Holy Ghost, And have tasted the good word of God, and the powers of the world to come, If they shall fall away, to renew them again unto repentance; seeing they crucify to themselves the Son of God afresh, and put him to an open shame" (Hebrews 6:4-6) and "For if we sin wilfully after that we have received the knowledge of the truth, there remaineth no more sacrifice for sins, But a certain fearful looking for of judgment and fiery indignation, which shall devour the adversaries. He that despised Moses' law died without mercy under two or three witnesses: Of how much sorer punishment, suppose ye, shall he be thought worthy, who hath trodden under foot the Son of God, and hath counted the blood of the covenant, wherewith he was sanctified, an unholy thing, and hath done despite unto the Spirit of grace? . . . Now the just shall live by faith: but if any man draw back, my soul shall have no pleasure in him" (Hebrews 10:26-29, 38).—Gustus Thompson, Woodbine, Tennessee.

Answer: That God does bring physical suffering and punishment upon some Christians who persist in sin no one can deny. "For this cause many are weak and sickly among you, and many sleep. For if we would judge ourselves, we should not be judged. But when we are judged, we are chastened of the Lord, that we should not be condemned with the world" (1 Corinthians 11:30-32). Here some of the members of the Corinthian church are sick, some weak, and others God has caused to fall asleep (die), as a result of misconduct in the taking of the Lord's supper. It is also quite likely that something like this is in the mind of Paul, the penman, as the Holy Spirit directs him to write what is said in 1 Corinthians 5:5, but we have quite a different picture when we turn to the book of Hebrews. I should like for you to first read with care the above verses in 1 Corinthians. Read them in the light of the context, noting that the Holy Spirit through Paul is writing to correct a worldly situation in a church that probably consisted almost entirely of gentile believers who were incline to handle holy things carelessly as probably they had done in the pagan feasts. It is likely that some, perhaps many, were not saved; whereas in the book of Hebrews we have a group that are truly Christian because they "... were once (for all times) enlightened, and have tasted of the heavenly gift, and were made partakers of the Holy Ghost, . . . the good word of God, and the powers of the world to come." For my part, with the identifying features given here, I am unable to see that such people could be other than saved souls and especially when consideration is given to the language used here, viewed in the light of the use of the some words in other Biblical passages.

Albert Barnes in his "Notes on Hebrews," Page 142, says, "It may be remarked respecting the various expressions used here (Vv. 4, 5), (1) that they are such as properly denote a renewed state. They obviously describe the condition of a Christian; and though it may be not certain that any one of them if taken by itself would prove that the person to whom it was applied was truly converted, yet taken together it is clear that they are designed to describe such a state. If they are not, it would be difficult to find any language which would be properly descriptive of the character of a sincere Christian. I regard the description here, therefore, as that which is clearly designed to denote the state of those who were born again, and were the true children of God: and it seems plain to me that no other interpretation would have been thought of if this view had not seemed to conflict with the doctrine of the 'perseverance of the saints.' (2) There is a regular graduation here from the first elements of piety in the soul to its highest developments; and, whether the apostle so designed it or not, the language describes the successive steps by which a true Christian advances to the highest stage of Christian experience. The mind is (a) enlightened; then (b) tastes the gift of heaven, or has some experience of it; then (c) it is made to partake of the influences of the Holy Ghost; then (d) there is experience of the excellence and loveliness of the word of God; and (e) finally there is a participation of the full 'powers' of the new dispensation; of the extraordinary energy which puts forth in the gospel to sanctify and save the soul.

"If they shall fall away. Literally, 'and having fallen away.' 'There is no if in the Greek in this place—having fallen away.'"

Then in the light of the general teaching of the book of Hebrews, I can see no reason to assume that this group of Jews are unsaved, but quite to the contrary they are advanced into a level in Christian living that has found them standing for and taking the part of other Christians who were persecuted and going so far in this benevolence that they have forfeited both their social standing and property holdings. See 6:10, also 10:32-34. There is no doubt but that before these Hebrews became Christians they were living on a higher moral plane than the Corinthians upon whom this punishment was brought after the Corinthians professed Christ. Many Calvinists, with whom I have discussed the subject of the perseverance of the saints in the light of these with other such Scriptures, say that these Hebrews were not born again and that all Christian commentators express this view. Such a claim is unfounded for some of the most scholarly commentators I know of teach that these Hebrews for whom the book of Hebrews was written were newly born Christians.

A. B. Davidson, "Epistle to the Hebrews," Pages 121, 122, says; "Verse 6. If they shall fall away; . . . or, and fell away. The whole might read: for in regard to those who were once enlightened, and tasted . . . and were made partakers . . . and tasted . . . and (then) fell away, it is impossible to renew them again, etc. The translation if they fall away, is that of all the early English Versions (Tynd. Gen. etc., Rheims has: and are fallen), and there is no reason to suppose it due to any doctrinal bias. It rightly enough indicates the point where the hypothesis begins. Though the apostle's language is general and spoken in a historical way, it has no relevancy unless meant to be a picture of the 'Hebrews.' Up to this point he has in them a real Christian history before him; beyond this point, so far at least as they are concerned, he has only a supposed case, for to prevent his supposition from becoming a reality is the earnest aim of the whole epistle, and especially of this passage. Falling away does not mean falling into sin, even grievous sin, but renouncing the faith of Christ wholly. It is called

The Lighted Pathway

Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path
(PSALM 119:105).

REV. WILLET L. MORETZ
SWANNANOVA, N. C.

“... According to your faith be it unto you” (Matthew 9:29).

To begin this week's devotion will you get your Bible or New Testament and read the entire ninth chapter of the Gospel recorded by Matthew? In this chapter you will find a sequence of miracles. For the greater part, they deal with faith as a power adequate for every need.

In the first eight verses Christ deals with the faith of those who brought a man sick of the palsy to Him, “. . . and Jesus seeing their faith said unto the sick of the palsy; Son, be of good cheer; thy sins be forgiven thee” (Vs. 2). What a glorious time it will be if ever again we come to have such great faith that we may bring our lost friends to Christ and hear Him say that because of our faith He will save from sin. Jesus saw and honored the faith of those who brought one who was helpless to Him. We can and should bring our sinner friends to Him in prayer, and in a personal way invite them to accept Christ as their Saviour. We may bring our needy friends to Him in prayer as often as we desire, by name, in faith believing.

As we go through this chapter, we may observe the human actors who play important parts in the miracles which are recorded. Look what great needs they have, and what great faith! The ruler's need is apparently so great that nothing can any longer be done, for we are told that his daughter is already dead. And yet his faith is greater by far than his overwhelming need, for he demonstrates that he believes Jesus has the power to affect a resurrection (Vs. 18).

The need of the woman who had been sick for twelve years was also appallingly great (Vs. 20). Yet the greatness of her faith convinced her that a mere touch of His garment was enough to heal her (Vs. 21, 22). So great, too, was the need of the blind men. Yet so great was their faith that they believed Jesus could do the impossible and make the man see (Vs. 28).

The need of the demonized mute was likewise great; yet his family had faith so great as to bring him, a most pathetic case, to Jesus believing that the great Healer of Nazareth could break the grip of both dumbness and demonism (Vs. 32).

We have seen the great needs of those presented in these miracles, and the great faith exhibited by them and their friends in the Son of God as being able and willing to meet their needs, though impossible in the eyes and ability of man. When we look at the Great Physician in all His infinite compassion, as set forth in Verse 36, we see that with infinite power He meets every need, no matter how great it is (Vs. 35). God forbid, then, that we imitate the scornful mourners that we read about in Verses 23 and 24, or the stubborn Pharisees of Verse 34! Regardless of how staggering our need may appear, let us ask the compassionate Christ to meet and care for it, remembering His word, “According to your faith be it unto you.” With this assurance from the lips of our Master, may we think of some pressing need or burden and commit it at this very moment to the all-sufficient, all-powerful Saviour with such faith in Him that He will be pleased to grant the blessing needed.

Have we ever stopped to think how utterly unreasonable, even ridiculous is the position of unbelief? Jesus still searches our hearts and rejoices to find faith, love and obedience therein, without asking for outward signs of any kind.

“And the apostles said unto the Lord, Increase our faith” (Luke 17:5).

FARMERS AND TITHING

In Leviticus 27:30 we read: “And all the tithe of the land, whether of the seed of the land, or of the fruit of the tree, is the LORD'S: it is holy unto the LORD.”

God expects farmers to tithe. It is strange, but true that farmers, the very people to whom the law of the tithe was given, often believe that it is much easier for the salaried man to tithe. When did God change the law of the tithe? The man on the farm must account to God for that which grows on his soil.

Tithing cannot be separated from real faith in God. Is the farmer afraid to tithe? Then he does not believe the promises of God. Doesn't the farmer feel that the land and all that it produces belongs to God? Then he does not believe that God is the Creator. Doesn't the farmer feel that he owes God something? Then he is an ungrateful soul. Does the farmer believe God? Then let him obey God.

All that the farmer has belongs to God. “The earth is the LORD'S, . . . the world, and they that dwell therein” (Psalm 24:1). “The heavens are thine, the earth also is thine: as for the world and the fulness thereof, thou hast founded them” (Psalm 89:11). “Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, . . .” (James 1:17). “The silver is mine, and the gold is mine, saith the LORD of hosts” (Haggai 2:8). “For every beast of the forest is mine, and the cattle upon a thousand hills” (Psalm 50:10).

Mount Olive College Ready for Year

W. Burkette Raper

It's Not too Late Yet!

The time is now at hand for the beginning of a new school year at Mount Olive Junior College. But there is still time for new students to enroll. Here is our schedule for the opening of school:

September 1—Faculty conferences begin.

September 3—Freshmen and transferring students arrive.

September 3-6—Placement examinations.

September 6—Registration of all students.

September 7—Classes begin.

The farmer is God's tenant responsible to Him. "So then every one of us shall give an account of himself to God" (Romans 14:12). "Moreover it is required in stewards, that a man be found faithful" (1 Corinthians 4:2). No tenant would expect to use the landlord's land without giving something in return.

Tithing is an act of love. It is proof of one's gratitude and love to Christ and your desire to support His program on earth. It gives a sense of partnership with God and brings peace of mind.

Tithing brings blessings to the tither. "Bring ye all the tithes . . . prove me now herewith, saith the LORD of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there will not be room enough to receive it" (Malachi 3:10). "... He which soweth sparingly shall also reap sparingly; and he which soweth bountifully shall also reap bountifully" (2 Corinthians 9:6). "... It is more blessed to give than to receive" (Acts 20:35).

FRESH AIR, PLEASE!

My study is rather a low room and it is necessary to use an oil stove for the purpose of heating. During the early stages of this winter I noticed that after about an hour the stove began to fail and almost go out. I tried to find out the cause; bought new wick, tried to clean it, but without success. It refused to burn and radiate heat. One day I discovered that by leaving the door open a little the stove worked splendidly. The cause of the failure was the closed door, and when the original supply of oxygen was used up, failure followed. How many people are like that today. They close the door of their hearts to the pure love of Christ, and wonder why their lives are poor and ineffective.—Selected.

"The One who came from Heaven could go back to Heaven only through the veil of 'His flesh,' and we may follow where He has gone."—Selected.

10:00 a. m.—Opening convocation with an address by Dr. Leo Jenkins, dean and vice-president, East Carolina College, Greenville, North Carolina (public invited).

September 7—7:30 p. m., assembly of all students enrolling for night courses in business education.

September 18—Last day to register for the fall term.

Better Service

In every way, Mount Olive Junior College is prepared to render a more effective service to its students during the coming school year:

1. Four new faculty members have been added to the teaching staff and all full-time teachers who were with the college last year will be returning.
2. New equipment has been added to the science laboratory.
3. The library has been improved.
4. The entire first floor of the college building has been repainted.
5. New furniture has been added where needed.
6. The reception room has additional furniture and furnishings.
7. The largest enrollment in the history of the school is expected. Enrollment in past years:

1954-55 (first year)	24
1955-56	41
1956	60 or more
8. All of our students will enter with the assurance that credits earned here will be accepted by senior colleges in eastern North Carolina.

Help for Needy Students

Mount Olive Junior College was established for the purpose of helping more young men and women receive a college education in a Christian institution. We have never refused admission to a worthy student because that student did not have the necessary funds. We will assist any student to attend Mount Olive Junior College who can meet the following requirements:

1. A high school graduate.
2. A high school record which indicates that the student can do college work.
3. Recommendation of his high school principal that he is worthy of special assistance.
4. Recommendation of his pastor that the student is of good character and is dependable and trustworthy.

Students who can meet the above requirements and are interested in furthering their education, may contact W. Burkette Raper, president of Mount Olive Junior College. Arrangements can be made whereby the student will repay his loan af-

RELIGIOUS PERSECUTION

We who live in the United States at this time have no fear of religious persecution. Minority groups have open and free privileges to worship God according to the dictates of their own conscience. But this is not so in some parts of the world, according to the records. We only know what we read in the papers and magazines, both religious and non-religious. The following is taken from The Convert, a magazine in which an article entitled, "Latin American News Letter," appeared which was published by the Committee on Cooperation in Latin America, New York 10, New York:

Largest Protestant Church Closed by the Colombian Government

"The Protestant Church of Barran-Cabermega, Department of Santander, was closed yesterday by the Colombian government. This congregation belongs to the Four-square Gospel Church and is the largest in the republic. It has 400 communicant members."

There was much more in the letter concerning the closing of the church. We do not agree with the theology of the Four-square Church by any means, however we use this portion of the letter to show that the Colombian government is under the domination of the Roman Catholic Church. Thank God that we live in the United States! The letter was signed by Lucio Pabon Nutex, minister of government.

Evangelical Church of Quibo Closed

"In May of 1956, the Protestant Church was closed at Quibo, capital of the Department of Choco. Furthermore, police have been stationed in front of the church and home of the resident missionary to see that no Protestant Colombian enters these places." My reader, how would you like to be in the situation of those Protestants of Choco? It is happening in other places; it can happen in more. Rome is a power.

Protestant Church of Atanquez Closed

"On April 30, 1956, in the village of Atanquez, Magdalen Department, Rev. Orland H. Corwin was ordered to suspend services for the Colombian Protestants, citing Order Number 4004 of the Ministry of Government. Since that time, meetings in the Protestant chapel have been suspended."

There were religious groups in the day of Christ that persecuted Him. In regards to persecution He said, "Remember the word that I said unto you, The servant is not greater than his lord. If they have persecuted me, they will also persecute you; if they have kept my saying, they will keep yours also" (John 15:20).

Protestant Church in Barranquilla Stoned

"On May 14, 1956, in the Modelo District Barranquilla, capital of Atlantico Department, two priests and a group of Catholics took positions a few meters from the Protestant church and after preaching a sermon against Protestantism, with the aid of loud speakers, the priest yelled, 'Down with the Protestants! We don't want the Protestants! No!' The two priests then left, and the crowd threw a shower of stones at the church. The following day, May 15, a group of boys entered the porch of the pastor's house at the side of the church, throwing stones and wounding one of the servants."

A Church Profaned

"In La Morena, Valle Department, because of the persecution of the Protestants, more than 300 believers had to abandon the village. In the same village the early part of this year, a group of fanatics broke into the Protestant chapel which was closed, and profaned it. On leaving, they filled the walls inside and out with insulting phrases. They also confiscated various articles which were sold to the public by these same assailants."

There are several other instances where churches have been closed or forbidden to conduct religious meetings since the year of 1948. But here is a summary, according to The Convert: "There were 40 church buildings destroyed by fire or dynamite. Seventy-five believers were killed because of their religious faith. More than 200 schools were closed by the government."

The above described conditions are hurtful, but all the persecution is not in Colombia. It is in Spain and other countries where there is a dominant religion—a religion that has political power.

According to the records, there is persecution by the Roman Catholics on one hand and by the Communists on the other. Thus Protestantism is between the two great powers that are determined to destroy Protestantism from the earth. Christians had better read and find out the truth concerning the enemies of Christianity. The tribulation that Jesus spoke of is being experienced again as in the early days of the Church when Christians were crucified, burned at the stake, sawn asunder, imprisoned and killed by mobs. Jesus said, "These things I have spoken unto you, that in me ye might have peace. In the world ye shall have tribulation; but be of good cheer; I have overcome the world" (John 16:33).

May we notice another very interesting and informative Scripture as to conditions that must be met: "And when he had opened the fifth seal, I saw under the altar the souls of them that were slain for the word of God, and for the testimony which they held: And they cried with a loud voice, saying, How long, O Lord, holy and true, dost thou not judge and avenge our blood on them that dwell on the earth? And white robes were given unto every one of them; and it was said unto them, that they should rest yet for a little season, until their fellow servants also and their brethren, that should be killed as they were, should be fulfilled" (Revelation 6:9-11).

Evangelical Christianity

Evangelical religion is fought by many of those who call themselves Protestants or Christians. I quote from a letter received from the National Association of Evangelicals, entitled, "Do You Have a Radio?": "Chances are you do for there are more than 140,000,000 in America, almost one for every man, woman and child. They are in automobiles, bedrooms and kitchens, and, thanks to the portables, almost everywhere you go.

"Chances are, too, that you listen to the ministry of the Word of God over the air . . . for there is more preaching of the gospel by radio than ever before. But did you know that such ministry is threatened, that liberals are again trying to force paid religious time from the air? In March of this year, the Broadcasting and Film Commission of the National Council of Churches issued a statement urging radio stations and networks to stop selling time for religious purposes, complaining specifically about such programs as Billy Graham's Hour of Decision."

Yes, the liberals are against old-fashioned evangelical gospel preaching that saves men from hell-fire.

Just a Little

Little by little, some folks are growing a little careless. On Sunday mornings they sleep a little late, and come to church a little tardy. Some chew gum a little, talk a little, laugh a little, sing a little, give a little, and listen a little to the sermon. After dismissal, they argue a little, and gossip a little, go home and forget what little they heard and act a little as if they care little for the greatest, grandest, holiest and most precious privilege on the earth—that of worshipping and of serving the Lord Jesus Christ.

When you see any of the signs in your life, you had better take warning. You are drifting away from the Lord and your life is slowly being devoured by the enemy of your soul, the devil.—Edgemont F. W. B. Church Challenger, Durham, N. C.

—FOR OUR—

BOYS and GIRLS

Eric Russel's Vacation Job

Abbie Fosdick Ransom

THE trolley car whizzed by a moment too soon for boarding, and Eric turned away with a sigh of disappointment as another boy on the opposite corner sang out: "Hello, Eric!"

"Hello, yourself!" Eric returned, good-naturedly, and then he added: "Where you going?"

The other jerked his head cityward as he crossed to Eric's side of the street. "Looking for a job for the summer," he answered.

Eric's face brightened. "I'm not the only one on the anxious seat, then?" he asked, whimsically. Then he observed more soberly, "Got the promise of anything, Wellington?"

"No, just looking; have you?"

"They want a boy at McIntyre and Brown's," Eric explained. "I'm going there."

An expression Eric did not like came into the eyes of Wellington Chambers. It was only a shadow, and was gone in an instant, but he had seen it there before and it always gave him a feeling of distrust. But his companion brought up an entirely different subject when he spoke again.

"Ever ride free?" he inquired.

"When the other fellow has paid my fare."

"I have, dozens of times; it's easy when you know how. You couldn't, thought—you haven't the grit."

"Shan't try," Eric returned, shortly. "I've money for carefare if I am hunting a vacation job."

"You're a coward," retorted Wellington. "You're afraid to beat it; I stump you to try."

"I could if I wanted," Eric replied, hotly. "I've seen the other fellows do it, but I always preferred a seat."

"I stump you," Wellington repeated. "There it comes now; I thought you were a coward, and now I know it."

With a disdainful laugh he recrossed the street to signal the oncoming electric. Eric stood undecided, then as the car started on he ran a few steps and sprang upon the inner running board while the conductor was busy assisting a lady with two children to alight. Right where he sprang on a portly gentleman occupied the end seat and as the conductor moved from one part of the car to another collecting fares, Eric swung back and forth, concealing himself behind this passenger. Once or twice the gentleman appeared about to speak, but the boy's eyes were fixed, first on the conductor, then on the outward-bound cars which were continually passing. For five minutes the dodging and shirking kept him busy and by that time the car had almost reached its terminus. Then, just before they passed the guard at the entrance to the elevated station, Eric edged his way to the front and seated himself beside Wellington and directly behind the motorman.

"You can't tell me you never did that before," his friend sneered. "I never saw the game played slicker."

"I shan't tell you anything," and Eric's tone was savage. "I feel like a thief."

Wellington laughed as the car slowed down and the passengers disembarked. "Think I'll go down to McIntyre's with you," he remarked. "They might happen to want two boys."

McIntyre and Brown's was one of the most reliable business houses in the city; the treatment accorded their employees was more than just, it was generous; and among those who knew the firm it was regarded as an honor to secure a place in their establishment. Mr. Russel had already spoken to them concerning his son, and Eric had considered his position there as fairly well assured. But now his cheeks were burning with rage at his own weakness. Times without number he had resolved never to do what he knew to be wrong, but those little words, "I stump you," had more than once proved his undoing.

"I am a coward," he repeated over and over, "too cowardly to do right; too cowardly to keep promises I make to myself and they are as binding as any promise. I deserve a thrashing and wish somebody would give me a good one. I believe Wellington did it on purpose to upset me so I'd lose my chance of a job with Mr. McIntyre."

Several electric trains were allowed to come and go before he felt composed enough to continue his trip; Wellington stuck close, but he was too angry to speak, and when, finally, he entered a train, station after station was passed in silence. When he reached the store at last and asked for Mr. McIntyre, Wellington followed, but Eric did not bestow upon him even a glance. The clerk to whom he applied for direction sent him to the private office of the firm, and Eric's heart seemed almost to stop beating when the gentleman seated at a desk whirled round and showed himself to be the one behind whom he had played at hide-and-seek with the conductor of the surface car. His expression told Eric that he was recognized, but the greeting was kindly, and a little courage crept into Eric's tone as he said:

"My name is Eric Russel; I'm John Russel's son, and Father told me this morning that you wanted to hire a boy."

"We wish to hire an honest boy," Mr. McIntyre corrected, gently.

A flush mounted up and over Eric's face, his eyes dropped, then he raised them, looked straight into those of the gentleman opposite, and he answered, simply, "I think you'll find me honest, Mr. McIntyre, if you give me a chance."

"I believe we better not, my boy." The words were spoken very kindly, but Eric knew the decision was irrevocable. "After what I saw of you this morning I don't think it best, do you?"

Eric wanted to reply, but could not. A lump was in his throat so large that no words would pass, and without speaking, he turned and went out, leaving Wellington alone in the office. All the way through the store it seemed as though every clerk was saying to himself. "There goes a thief," and his breath returned with a gasp when he was once more in the street. Every nerve in his body tingled and quivered with shame and the perspiration stood in drops over his forehead. He thrust his hand into his pocket for a handkerchief and touched his purse; it brought a sudden resolution to him and he started on a brisk walk. Ten minutes later he was in the general offices of the electric car company and asking for an interview with the president of the road he had defrauded. It was only a short time when a boy ushered him into the presence of the president's private secretary and while, at first, it was hard to talk, an encouraging word from the official soon brought out the entire story.

"I suppose Wellington has my job," Eric concluded, "and I don't know that I care very much. At any rate, I wouldn't care if he hadn't been the one to dare me to do it. But I presume the harder it is for me to know why he's beat me out the longer I'll remember my promise to myself, and then I won't be such a coward as I was again."

"I'll fix the matter up all right," replied the secretary, fingering the money Eric had given him. "I'm much obliged to you for coming to me, if you'll wait a moment perhaps I can put you in the way of a job."

It was nearly a quarter of an hour later when he re-entered the room. "Mr. McIntyre wishes to see you," he reported. "I've been talking with him over the wire, and the place is still open. He says he wouldn't engage your friend because he didn't like his eyes; said they had a shifty look. Now, if you can 'make good' with him, this little incident won't weigh against you. Good morning."

Tears came into Eric's eyes and ran down upon his cheeks. "I'm much obliged to you, Mr. Secretary," he said, brokenly. "I believe I've learned my lesson and I wouldn't have needed it at all if I hadn't been a fool for a good while back."

Mr. McIntyre greeted him with the same kindness as before. He entirely ignored any previous meeting and the question he asked were those having a bearing upon Eric's grade in school and his ambition for a business career. Then he gave him a note to be delivered to the head clerk in the shipping department, and as he turned again to his desk he observed, gently: "You'll find temptations lurking here the same as on the street, my boy; resist the first one and the second one will never faze you."—The Sunday School Advocate.

In Memory of Glenn W. Bolin

Glenn W. Bolin was born December, 1930, and died in the service of his country on February 25, 1956.

He leaves to mourn his loss his wife, daughter, mother, father and two brothers.

The following poem was written in his memory by his aunt, Peacie Miller:

Glenn, we miss you so much here,
'Tis lonesome to the ones so dear;
But if on God they cast all care,
He can take away their fear.

We prayed for you while overseas
That God would bring you home to these.
When you returned it had been so long,
But we knew our prayers had reached the throng.

The few short months you then had here,
We know you enjoyed your family dear.
Although your suffering was so very bad,
You knew God was the best Friend you had.

And when the Lord came to carry you home,
The prayer you prayed will help us on.
I know that you are in heaven fair,
By God's grace, I'll meet you there.

Chipley, Fla.—The Woman's Auxiliary of the Piney Grove Church elected new officers for the coming year on Monday afternoon, August 13. The officers elected are as follows: Mrs. Bertie Baxter, president; Mrs. Pearl Barrow, vice-president; Mrs. Zena Owens, recording secretary; Mrs. Vera Owens, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Marie Owens, treasurer; Mrs. Vea Peele, youth chairman; Mrs. Clara McAdams, Y.P.A. sponsor; Mrs. Oma Owens, study course chairman; Mrs. Essie B. Toole, program chairman; Mrs. Clara McAdams, personal service chairman.

These new officers were installed by the pastor, the Rev. Chester A. Huckaby, at the church on Friday, August 24, at 7:30 p. m.

Venezuelan Youth Conference Draws Large Attendance

The opening of the Pan American Congress on Youth Evangelism in Caracas, Venezuela, was attended by an audience of 7,500 people. Sponsored by the Youth for Christ International, the congress opened on Sunday night, August 5, at the Nuevo Circo Arena. More than 2,000 delegates were registered from all parts of Venezuela, other South and Central American republics, the United States and the Caribbean Islands.

Rev. Asdurbal Rios of Maracaibo, Venezuela, spoke on opening night and 58 people responded to the invitation to accept Christ. Rev. James Savage was the director of the congress along with Dr. Robert A. Cook, Youth for Christ president, with Gene Jordan heading up the 300 voice choir.

Highlight of the second day was the message of Mrs. Marjorie Saint, widow of Nate Saint, one of the five young missionaries martyred last January in Ecuador. She showed a film of the first meeting with the Aucas and told the 1,200 who heard here at a day session, "We went to Ecuador for one sole purpose—to tell lost men and women of Christ." She added that contact is still being sought with the Aucas.

Following her stirring message more than 500 young people responded to an invitation to dedicate their lives to Christ. Ted W. Engstrom, executive director of Youth for Christ, said after the meeting, "Without question this has been the greatest meeting I have ever been in. God moved in power."

Music at the congress included a male quartet from Detroit, Michigan; Bill Carle, bass soloist from Los Angeles and former Metropolitan Opera star; a Taylor University girls' trio; a bass trio from Cleveland; Gene Jordan, marimbast; and a male quartet from San Cristobal, Venezuela.

Closing date of the congress was August 12, after which teams of preachers, singers and instrumentalists conducted evangelistic campaigns in churches and cities throughout South America. The 77 delegates from the United States returned by chartered plane to Miami on August 27.

It doesn't take much of a pull to start a man down hill.—Selected.

Tom and Ruth Willey Write

August 2, 1956

Our Dear Friends:

"Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who hath blessed us with all spiritual blessing in heavenly places in Christ" is truly our testimony in these marvelous days. We have hardly had time to stop and rest since we arrived on July 12!

The Lord provided so that we could get our equipment over practically duty-free. We had no more than gotten our boxes to the mission when we had to plunge into the work of our third annual youth camp. How the Lord did bless there! Actually we did not expect many young people to attend since we had given the camp but very little publicity during the last few months, but here, too, the Lord blessed and sent us one of the finest groups of young people we have had. What a blessing to arise early in the morning for the sunrise services conducted altogether by these precious young people. The services were of great blessing all through the week and we believe that the Lord has really worked in a deeper way than ever in the hearts of those who attended. One young fellow commented on the last day, "Oh, if tomorrow were only the first day of camp again!"

Words are not sufficient to express our joy in being here in the work of the Lord. The challenge is great; in fact, at present we are in the midst of drawing up plans for our nationwide youth conference which will possibly be held in November. We do covet your prayers as to plans and contacts that must be made. We expect around 500 to 1,000 from all over the island, so be much in prayer for the music, speakers and the possibility of a radio program.

Ruth has been adapting herself quite well to the life here. She still isn't very friendly with the lizards and bugs, though she is gradually getting to know them better. She has two that constantly play in front of her typewriter. She begins language study sometime next month so pray that the Lord will bless in this respect.

We both want to express our gratitude to the many with whom we visited and to the many who helped us reach the field. You, in a very real way, have a part in everything that the Lord does through us. "Faithful is he that calleth you, who also will do it. . . . The grace of our Lord Jesus cient quantities to render them partially insensible, they are going to be insufferably dull and stupid.

There is something childish about this program of escape. It is precisely at this point that a creative faith makes its greatest contribution to life. It does not offer an escape from our difficulties; it furnishes us with power to face them. It does not remove our problems; it gives us the courage to tackle them and the judgment to solve them.

What the psychologists call an escape mechanism is held in contempt by the scientists. The whole of psychological science is aimed to assist the individual in facing reality. There is something weak and pitiable about the person who cannot do that. The really strong are those who do not seek solace in drugs, but rely upon their own powers and intelligence.

The drinker is really a sissy. He is one who can't take it.

SUCCESS

Success is in the way you walk the paths of life each day;

It's in the little things you do and in the things you say.

Success is not in getting rich or rising high to fame;

It's not alone in winning goals which all men hope to claim.

Success is being big of heart and clean and broad of mind.

It's being faithful to your friends and, to the stranger, kind.

It's in the children whom you love and all they learn from you;

Success depends on character and everything you do.

Christ be with you. Amen" (1 Thessalonians 5:24, 28).

The Source of Human Conflicts

(Lesson for September 9)

Lesson: James 3:4, 5; 4:1-12.

Golden Text: Hebrews 12:14.

I. INTRODUCTION

This lesson will deal with the cause of human conflicts as they are caused by the tongues and lusts of men. Then the remedy will be given for those who will make its application in their lives. Since James devotes the entire fourth and fifth chapters of the book to this discussion, we shall go outside the prescribed Printed Text to bring the whole message before the student.

Throughout the chapter a description is given of a tongue which is controlled by Satan. In Verse 6 the tongue is described as "... a fire, a world of iniquity: ... it defileth the whole body, and setteth on fire the course of nature; and is set on fire of hell." It is a fire in that it can so easily start a mighty passion or conflagration that the individual may lose his reason, say things that will place him in a position of wanting to inflict bodily harm on someone else, even to the point of taking another's life and becoming a murderer.

Lusts cannot be satisfied. The lustful heart looks upon an object and covets it until the person is forced by the drive to seek attainment. If the coveted object cannot be secured the lustful person becomes frustrated and driven to additional sins. If the object is secured, the lust is still not satisfied because its possession does not give the anticipated satisfaction. For this reason, "Ye lust and have not: ye kill, and desire to have, and cannot obtain: ye fight and war, yet ye have not, because ye ask not" (Vs. 2).—The Bible Student (F. W. B.).

II. HELPFUL HINTS

1. Not even the power of a mighty ship's rudder is comparable to the force of the human tongue (3:4, 5).

2. There is no doubt in the open mind about the source of the trouble that besets mankind (Vs. 1).

3. Perhaps the greatest hindrance to answered prayer is the selfish motive that prompts many prayers (Vv. 2, 3).

4. Only those who are opposed to the way of righteousness can really love the world and what it has (Vs. 4).

5. The only way the spirit of man can be changed is through the new birth of the Holy Spirit (Vv. 5, 6).

6. The first essential to victory over self is complete submission to the will of the Lord (Vv. 7, 8).

7. As Godly sorrow leads men to repentance, humility and contrition will give evidence of it (Vv. 9, 10).

8. Since the Lord is the only Lawgiver and Judge, no one has the right to judge his brother (Vv. 11, 12).—The Bible Teacher (F. W. B.).

9. The tongue does not steer the course of a human life, but it is an indication of the course we are following (James 3:4).

10. Really, the tongue was made to bless. It is wonderful that we can praise God and that we can express gratitude toward others. By all means, let us use it for God.

III. ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

1. James likened the human heart to a fountain and a tree. "Out of the same mouth proceedeth blessing and cursing. My brethren, these things ought not to be. Doth a fountain send forth at the same place sweet water and bitter? Can a fig tree bear olive berries?"

The picture fits the Holy Land where salt and bitter springs are found. Though near each other, they do not flow "at the same place." Their points of origin are different. Grace can make the mouth that once poured out cursings, "send forth" blessing. The bitter waters of Marah (see Exodus 15:23-25) were purified when Moses caused a certain tree to be thrown into the stream. That tree typified the Cross of Christ introduced into the life-stream of humanity.—Defender Magazine.

2. The source and cause of strife and fightings are in the evil nature of the flesh which seeks gratification. "From whence come wars and fightings among you? come they not hence, even of your lusts that war in your members?" The word "lusts" is rendered "pleasures" in the A. S. V. This is the better translation, because the word "lusts" has come to have an almost exclusive reference to sensual passions, and James intended to include all forms of self-pleasing. Peter writes of the "... fleshly lusts, which war against the soul" (1 Peter 2:11).

3. On the other hand, "God resisteth the proud." Literally this is, "setteth Himself in array against the proud." The quotation probably is from Proverbs 3:34. The one who is proud is one who shows himself above his fellows, and so lifts himself up against God. Pride is the mother of envy; it is peculiarly satanic, for by it Satan fell (1 Timothy 3:6; comp. Ezekiel 28:11-17; Isaiah 14:12-15). All the quarrels, feuds and worldliness rebuked by James have their source in pride, and those who are guilty of these sins set themselves against God. And God will also set Himself against them, and for this reason they will not succeed. Nothing succeeds like real humility, for it has God on its side, finding favor with Him.—W. S. Hottel, D. D.

4. God just cannot stand proud people. He is against all those who in a haughty spirit regard themselves superior to their fellow men. Pride makes trouble wherever it emerges.

Why do nations fight? Because they want for their own what some other nation possesses. Why do we have church fights? Because someone wants his or her own way. Why do husbands and wives fight? For the same reason, the selfish desire to dominate.

Our lesson for today should be of unusual importance to us and of great value. We live in a world where the nations are at one another's throats, where countless homes are broken by strife, where churches and organizations are split and splintered by dissension. If we can learn the cause and cure for this worldwide sickness of society it should be most profitable.—Moody Monthly.

5. A traveler who sailed along the coast of South America tells an interesting story. While his ship lay at anchor near the coast, it became "lily-bound." in that climate, the growth of vegetation is very rapid. In a few days, the vessel became the center of a great, floating island of beautiful lilies! They grew so fast that the chains became entangled. Soon the flowery mass caused the vessel to drag anchor and drift in the wrong direction. Then the crew had a long and hard task. With cutlasses and hatchets, they released their ship from the lilies. How easy it is for Christians to become so entangled with the gay and golden flowers of riches and worldly pleasures, that their lives drift in the wrong direction! We must keep ourselves free from the entanglements of this "present evil world."—The Bible Expositor.

6. An interesting Scripture to practice is Philippians 4:6-8. If a person persists, centering his attention on the sins of his fellow man, he is apt to become a chronic faultfinder who is unable to see much good in anybody or anything.

Questions and Answers

'sinning wilfully,' that is, apostatizing against experience and better knowledge, in X. 26, where the history and experience described above in Verses 4, 5 is called 'receiving the knowledge of the truth.'

"It is impossible . . . repentance. Impossible must not be toned down to 'very difficult,' nor must the edge of the expression be turned by suggesting 'impossible for man'; for though it be true that in saying 'impossible to renew' the apostle has in his mind the work of himself or any Christian teacher, yet such means is God's appointed means, and so far is he from contemplating any agency or interference higher than man's, that he rather implies that to the higher agency the impossibility is due (Vv. 7, 8).

"Seeing they crucify . . . afresh gives the ground of the impossibility in general, which lies in the magnitude of the sin—crucifying as they do, being crucifiers of the Son of God. The last words bring out the heinousness of the sin; comp. X 29, where the mental conditions implied in apostatizing from the Christian faith, especially in the case of Hebrews, are strongly brought out. It is probable that the rendering, crucify afresh or again, is the right one, though the addition 'to themselves' is rather in favor of simply crucify. To crucify again is not to do it for a second time in their history, but to do on their part what was once done before, in Christ's history by others, the unbelieving Jews, with whom in their heinous deed and unbelief they associate themselves. The shade of force in to themselves is difficult to catch; it may express the consciousness that accompanies the act, or possibly the effect of the act on themselves: they crucify the Son of God, thus cutting off all fellowship between themselves and Him, and destroying the possibility of benefit from Him. And put . . . open shame, lit. and make a public spectacle or example of Him, as a malefactor and false Christ, deserving His ignominious death. To themselves they crucify Him, in the face of the world they make a public spectacle of Him (comp. X. 29)."

HARVEST HOME

Sow in the morn thy seed;
At eve hold not thy hand;
To trouble and fear give thou no heed,
Broadcast it o'er the land.

Thou knowest not which shall thrive,
The late or early sown;
Grace keeps the precious germ alive,
When and wherever strewn.

Thou canst not toil in vain:
Cold, heat, and moist, and dry,
Shall foster and mature the grain
For garner in the sky.

Thence, when the glorious end,
The day of God shall come,
The angel reapers shall descend,
And heaven shout, "Harvest home!"

—James Montgomery.

EDITORIAL

WE CAN PROVE IT

When we say that every family in the denomination should be receiving The Free Will Baptist weekly, we believe we can prove it. Therefore, if what we say here convinces you, we challenge you to pass the paper on to someone else who is not a subscriber, asking him to consider these statements. Perhaps he too will be convinced and will send us his subscription. We further challenge you, in the beginning of this new church year, to persuade your church to adopt "The Every Family Plan" which we shall explain, or some group to cooperate with us in our "Group Discount Plan."

What does The Free Will Baptist offer our people? Let us give you a brief resume of the contents of each issue:

(1) The editorial page is devoted to the expression of the editor's opinion upon the vital issues which face the denomination as a whole, or any segment of our people. What we say in the columns is not necessarily the belief of the board of directors of the Free Will Baptist Press, the stockholders or any individual or group other than the editor himself. We enjoy complete freedom to express our opinion on every issue. Furthermore, what we say is not always in line with popular opinion; we exercise no hesitancy in speaking out against what we believe to be hurtful trends which will hinder the cause that we love. However, we never express an opinion until we have first given it careful consideration in the light of all available information. This we firmly believe to be the editor's prerogative and his opportunity for constructive service.

(2) Three pages of each issue are usually devoted to feature articles written preferably by people anywhere in the denomination who have something to say for the glory of God. The ideas advanced are those of the writer and not necessarily the beliefs of the editor or other authorities. The only limitations on these articles are these: The editor reserves the right to revise articles to make them conform to his style; he also reserves the right to refuse to publish articles which deviate too far from generally accepted doctrine of the denomination.

Sometimes we are forced to secure feature articles elsewhere because not enough of our people submit such manuscript to us. We urge our ministers and lay people everywhere to write feature articles and submit them to us. Do you realize that one gospel message printed in The Free Will Baptist goes into more than 4,000 homes and into hospitals, university libraries and more than a dozen offices of other religious publications? One message printed here will reach far more people than you could reach by almost any other means. Therefore, if the Lord gives you something to say, why not write it in the very best manner possible and let us help you reach a great many people?

(3) Space is given to publish news items from churches, individuals and groups from all over the denomination. We welcome news items from anywhere in this nation and other nations of the world. Since we have a Christian publication, we must insist that news be of a religious nature. Wherever you live, from north to south and from east to west, send us religious news items of special interest; we shall be glad to publicize what you are doing that others may be informed and inspired.

(4) We give space to publicity of every phase of our denominational program. Under "Christian Education" we publish articles and items from our two institutions of higher learning, Free Will Baptist Bible College and Mount Olive College. Our policy is to publish every manuscript which we receive from these institutions as space permits; we have kept this resolution in detail up to this moment.

Under the heading, "Missions," we give publicity to missions from both the national and state levels. We print material from both national boards as it comes to us, and also material from state boards. We urge more of the state boards to send us information on what they are doing for missions at the state level.

Under "Woman's Auxiliary" we publish items from the national organization, state and district organizations and local church organizations. If your work has not been publicized, it is because we have not received the manuscript. Why don't you send it to us?

We devote one page each week to a discussion of the Sunday school lesson. The teacher and pupil will get invaluable help by studying this page.

We carry articles on superannuation and other phases of our work as they are submitted to us.

(5) We carry obituaries and memorial articles. We also carry the "Mail Box" in which people may make special announcements and ask for specific information.

(6) In addition to all this, we carry regular columns by men of wide experience and excellent training. These columns are designed specifically for the following purposes: "The Lighted Pathway" for devotional reading; "Questions and Answers" and "Notes and Quotes" to give information on Bible doctrine and church practice; "The Pastor's Notebook" as an aid to ministers; "Stories for Boys and Girls" especially for children.

These are the contents of every weekly issue of The Free Will Baptist. Where else could you find such a wealth of printed material on a weekly basis for such a small price—$2.00 per year? And, to us, the most attractive aspect of it is that you may participate actively in its production. We are striving to make it your paper. Will you help us?

What circulation plans are in effect to secure subscribers? We have a plan for the entire church, one for a group within the church, and one for individuals.

(1) The "Every Family Plan" is one by which the church clerk sends us the names and mailing addresses of the heads of all families in the church. We mail The Free Will Baptist to all these homes weekly and bill the church quarterly at a 10% discount on the individual subscription price. If your church is interested, please write us for details.

(2) The "Group Discount Plan" offers any organization within a church the privilege of securing subscriptions and keeping 10% of collections for its treasury. If your church does not adopt the "Every Family Plan," please write us for details of this plan.

(3) The "Bonus Subscription Plan" offers any individual in

By Ted Springer
(As told by Ted Miller)

IT'S the ninth inning of the ball game, the score is tied, and the runner streaking around third base is trying to beat the throw to home plate. It's going to be close—a desperate slide that kicks up a cloud of dust. Is he safe? Is he out? Only the man in the black uniform crouched over the play knows for sure, and on his decision hangs a ball game!

That's the kind of thrill that makes my job interesting, for you see, I'm a baseball umpire. While the screaming fans are straining to see a close play, I'm right there on the field, hovering over the action. As you can imagine, the job is exciting, but it is also tougher than you might expect, for the umpire must be right, and sometimes that's a rugged task.

Take it from me, an umpire needs the bounce of a rubber ball, and the eyes of an eagle to do a good job in a fast ball game.

I found that out in a spring exhibition game I umpired in St. Petersburg, Florida, between the champion New York Yankees and the St. Louis Cardinals. It was an action-packed thriller, and when I left the field at the end, I was as soaked with sweat as some of the hard-running players.

It reminded me of the life of every successful Christian—striving every day to win victory over sin with the guidance of our Almighty Captain, the Lord Jesus Christ.

When Uncle Sam called me into the service of our country in 1951, I thought the thrills of umpiring were over for awhile, but I discovered the Army could use this kind of training, too. They soon put me to work as an umpire. In fact, my most exciting umpiring experience occurred at this time. Let me tell you about it.

I was in the Army, stationed at Fort Hood, Texas, umpiring a game. This particular game was moving along at an ordinary pace until the runner on first base, who was also the manager, thought he saw the opposing pitcher make a balk (an illegal motion). Immediately he went charging toward the plate umpire, a friend of mine.

My friend said he didn't see the balk, so they both hurried out to me on the baseline to get my opinion. Now that they had asked me, I knew I'd have to call it and I didn't relish the job. For you see, the decision was going against the manager, who was also a first lieutenant, while I was a lowly first class private!

"No," I told the manager, "that wasn't a balk. You also left the base without calling and getting time out, so . . . you're out!"

That was more than the first loogie could stand; he had expected to advance a base, and here he was called out! As he argued under the hot Texas sun, his temper got the better of him and he started swearing recklessly.

No umpire can permit a player to curse him and still maintain control of the game. So I had the perilous duty of putting the manager out of the game. You can imagine how popular that made me. Privates just don't order lieutenants around in the Army!

My order stirred up more commotion, and at first the lieutenant refused to leave. But rather than forfeit the game to the other team, he finally walked angrily away. Later, in a conference with officials of the league, the lieutenant tried to prove his point, but they showed him the rules proving I was right and he was wrong. He then admitted his error.

Many people I see today are something like that lieutenant. They have heard what the rules of life are, but like the lieutenant they don't really make sure about them.

Maybe some of you would be startled to realize that God sees every move you make and every thought you have. The Bible clearly teaches this. And it all goes down in a sort of record book that will prove how wrong you have been. That book will not be opened until after you die, when it's too late to change over to God's rules, and you will be out of heaven for good—unless you do one thing now!

That one thing is to ask the Lord Jesus, who keeps the record book, to be your Saviour from all sin—sin in the past, the present and the future—and then a miracle happens! Because Jesus died for your sins, He can forgive them and say as He did in Isaiah 44:22, "I have blotted out, . . . thy sins: . . ." They are gone from the record book when you ask Christ to be your Saviour, and then you'll be "safe" in heaven! The sooner you go by God's rules, the happier you will be in the game of life.

I know that some people don't think much of umpires, and sometimes it looks like players in an argument hate the umpire. Actually, most experienced players deeply respect the umpire. They know he is trying to do an honest job, and the game couldn't be played without him. He isn't pulling for either team; he's there to do a job.

Are umpires always right? Yes, they are, officially. (They cannot go against the rules, of course!) When an umpire calls a close play, he has the advantages of supervised training, long experience, knowledge of the rules and a good view of the play.

But I can almost hear some of you stoutly insisting that an umpire is not always right. Well, though I might be called a traitor by some of my fellow umpires, I'll have to tell the truth and admit that umpires do make occasional mistakes. That happens because they are only human, and they err without meaning to. But officially, the umpire's decision goes into the record book even if wrong.

Aren't you glad there are no mistakes in the heavenly record book? We may think of God as the Great Umpire, with penetrating vision, constant alertness and perfect judgment, who will never call you "out" if you're really "safe" in Christ. He won't charge "errors" against you that you didn't commit. But you are only "safe" and on the way to heaven when Jesus is your Saviour. If you have not invited Him into your heart, you are "out," meaning you cannot get into heaven.

Umpiring gave me many opportunities in the Army to tell how God is the perfect Umpire, who sees everything and never calls a play wrong. I think all Christians should witness about Christ, because many people haven't let God call the decision on their lives. By that I mean they haven't given their hearts to God. We must tell them all about the rules to get to heaven, and the Lord Jesus Christ is the only Way.

Jesus Christ is looking for men, women and young people who want to be on the winning team. You can join up by trusting Christ as your Saviour and Captain.—American Tract Society.

For the Journey

A young Christian packing his bag for a journey said to a friend, "I have nearly finished packing; I only have to put in a guide book, a lamp, a mirror, a microscope, a telescope, a volume of fine poetry, a few biographies, a package of old letters, a book of songs, a sword, a hammer, and a set of books I have been studying."

"But you cannot put all that into your bag," objected the friend.

"Oh, yes," said the Christian. "Here it is." And he placed his Bible in the corner of the suitcase and closed the lid.—Adapted.

Commissioned to Evangelize

Rev. Wade Jernigan

THE church was, is and forever shall be commissioned to evangelize, which commission, from Christ to us, is based upon His authority given unto Him both in heaven and earth. Since it is the man of authority speaking and since never a man spake like this man, we would do well to sit up and take notice. Christ gave us the watchwords when He said, "He that hath an ear, let him hear." He also gave us some very straight speech when He said, "If you love Me keep My words." In the following statement we have our warning, "Not every one that saith unto me Lord, Lord, but them that do the will of the heavenly Father."

With the watchwords, straight speech and warning before us, let us go further into the subject.

Mr. Webster tells us that evangelism is the preaching or proclamation of the gospel. With this definition in mind let us look at what has been called the Great Commission and see if it is not a commission to evangelize. Not only do we want to examine the commission as it is given in Matthew 28:19, 20 (this one is used more than any other), but also in Mark 16:15; Luke 24:27; John 21:15-17; and Acts 1:8.

If one word could be used to sum up the evangelistic commission I am persuaded to believe it would be action. For in the commission we have such action words as go, teach, baptize, teaching. But we will not put it all into one word, but will look at each action word trusting that each of us will understand that this command cannot be obeyed in proxy. Each of us must be an Isaiah in spirit and say, "Here am I, send me."

GO—The word, send, is not a synonym for the word, go. Too long we have prayed, "Lord, send laborers into the field" without including ourselves. If we are going to sing, "Ready to go, ready to stay," then let us make sure that we are "ready to do His will."

Go on the authority of Christ. When Christ said, "Go ye therefore"; the therefore had reference to His statement, "All authority is given unto me in heaven and in earth." No ambassador has ever enjoyed the authority in going for his country that the ambassador for Christ enjoys in going for his Lord. Every child of God has credentials from the Lord to tell the good news of a full and free salvation.

Go in the power of the spirit. Christ taught during His personal ministry that the husbandman should first be partaker of his own fruit. We learn from this that a man must have an experience with the Lord before he can introduce others to Christ. With this realization we can appreciate more the commission as seen in Acts 1:8. Christ stated that His disciples would receive power after that the Holy Ghost had come upon them. Paul tells us in 1 Corinthians 12:3 that "... no man can say that Jesus is the Lord, but by the Holy Ghost." He also states in Romans 8:9 that "... if any man have not the spirit of Christ, he is none of his." Many people are saying that they have not received the baptism and the power, but if you are a child of God you became such by the Holy Ghost (1 Corinthians 12:13); and by becoming a child of His, you did receive the power to go witness. Let us hear the admonition of the angel to Gideon in Judges 6:14, "... Go in this thy might, and thou shalt save Israel from the hands of the Midianites: have not I sent thee." Allow me to paraphrase this Scripture that we might apply it to ourselves. Go in this thy might (power to witness) and save the lost from the hand of the devil: the Lord has sent you.

Go with a heart filled with love. Paul teaches us in Romans 5:5 that the "... love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost. ..." With God's love shed abroad in our hearts we should be able to go and have compassion on the hungry multitudes who stand in the valley of decision. To me the Great Commission is found in Christ's command to Peter, "Feed my sheep; feed my lambs; feed my sheep." Christ wanted Simon to feed the Jewish sheep which were already in the fold. He wanted Him to feed the new converts, the lambs. Jesus also wanted him to feed the other sheep I have which are not of this fold. Let us remember that Peter was questioned about his love each time the Lord said, "Feed." It's only as we are filled with God's love that we can undertake the job of evangelism.

TEACH—We have learned through study that the word, teach, as it is used here, means make disciples. Solomon, in Proverbs 14:25, said, "A true witness delivereth souls: ..." The psalmist, David, in Psalm 40:3 said, "He hath put a new song in my mouth, even praise unto our God: many shall see it, and fear, and shall trust in the LORD."

The making of disciples included preaching—preaching of the gospel. We can better understand why the gospel must be preached when we have examined some of the following Scriptural statements. In Romans 1:16 we learn that the gospel "... is the power of God unto salvation ..." Paul did not say that it was one of the powers, a power, or a part of the power but said "... the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Greek." The Romans were instructed that "... faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God" (Romans 10:17). No wonder Paul said, "Woe is unto me if I preach not the gospel." He further stated, "How then shall they call on him in whom they have not believed? and how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard? and how shall they hear without a preacher?" (Romans 10:14). Certainly it must have pleased God by the foolishness of preaching (evangelism) to save them that believed the gospel.

The eunuch was not saved until Philip guided him through the Scriptures unto Jesus. Paul was not converted until Ananias gave him the message from God. Cornelius was not saved until Peter said, "Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons." The gospel, all of it, must be proclaimed if souls are to be won for the Lord. Making disciples included instructions that must be given unto the penitent seeker. I believe that first things truly should be first in this connection. In Luke 24:47 we learn "... that repentance and remission of sin should be preached (taught) in his name among all nations, ..."

The soul winner, after proclaiming the gospel to the extent that a sinner is convicted, should be able to explain repentance (Bible repentance) unto the unsaved to the point that he sees both what it really is and how one may repent of his sins. When one has genuinely repented of his sins, faith is present, and this faith placed firmly in God's grace certainly brings the knowledge of the remission of sins. In Acts 3:19 we read, "Repent ye therefore, and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out when the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord."

Making disciples requires personal witnessing. Christ was a great preacher in His own right; He was the greatest teacher (instructor) that the world has ever known. He also was a personal witness. Most of His early converts were won through personal contact. In fact, all of His apostles were won through personal witnessing. Just before ascending to the Father, Christ commanded that His followers tarry at Jerusalem until they were endued with power from on high. This power was to enable them to witness unto all people. Let us be free from all prejudice and join ourselves to the chariot. When we have joined ourselves to the chariot, let us witness as Philip did to the eunuch. Philip could not see the black face for seeing the black heart. He realized that God was not in the skin-saving business, but sent His Son to seek and to save the lost souls. We are to witness to all, for all need our witness.

BAPTIZE—Just because some people have gone off the deep end on water baptism we should not forget the teaching of Christ on the subject. I have no time to argue that what Christ taught is nonessential, not necessary, nor needful. His stay on earth, and especially after He started preaching, was too short for Him to twiddle away His time. Regardless of what you think of water baptism it is included in Christ's commission to evangelize. To get a man to acknowledge his sin, repent and experience forgiveness, is certainly an important part of the commission; but we cannot ignore the rest of it and be able to say with Paul, "I have shunned to declare the whole counsel of God." When I go fishing, I like to string my fish and take them home with me. God is going to hold us responsible for every soul we lead to Him that we fail to teach all things, including baptism.

Those who are made disciples, who believe, who have repented, who have the remission of sin, are to be baptized. They are to be baptized in the name of the Father, the Son and the Holy Ghost.

The promise, Lo, I am with you, is only to those who teach whatsoever I have commanded you. You have not obeyed the commission in its fullness until you have made a disciples, baptized a disciple and taught a disciple to observe all things commanded. Christ asked the question on one occasion, "Why call ye me Lord, and do not the things which I say?" There is a tendency among some of our people to let up on many of the things which were included in the faith of our fathers and the faith once delivered unto the saints. Let us not grow weary in our well-doing for in due time we shall reap the harvest of the faithful. If we have taken heed to the doctrine we preach, let us continue in it, in so doing we will save ourselves and the ones who hear us.

Let us claim the promise of the commission, I am with you always, by obeying the go, the teach, the baptizing and the teaching to observe all things. Then and only then can we truthfully say we are evangelistic. It is not enough to be evangelical; we must be evangelistic. We all know that the church of Ephesus was evangelical, and for this they were complimented, but the Lord saw that they were failing in the field of evangelism. Seeing that they were no longer engaged in the effort to reach the lost as they once were, He said, "Nevertheless I have somewhat against thee, because thou hast left thy first love. Remember therefore from whence thou art fallen, and repent, and do the first works; or else I will come unto thee quickly, and will remove thy candlestick out of his place, except thou repent" (Revelation 2:4, 5). Failure on our part to heed this warning means the removal of our candlestick. If the candlestick is removed our light is gone. If our light is gone we are in darkness. If in darkness then we are in sin. If we are in sin we are dead.—Adapted from an article in The Promoter, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.

Rev. W. B. Davenport

PICTURED above is the Rev. W. B. Davenport, a seventy-eight-year-old retired Free Will Baptist minister of near Ashland City, Tennessee. His life has been one of great service to our denomination at large as well as to his immediate association, the Cumberland Association of Tennessee. The following are two testimonials concerning Rev. Davenport's record and influence.

Mrs. G. T. Hunt says:

"Rev. Davenport has a very enviable record as a preacher of the gospel. He dedicated his life to God and to his service in the gospel ministry August 9, 1916. From that date until October 3, 1955, when he retired, he served faithfully in the Cumberland Association of Free Will Baptists.

"During these years he has traveled 59,192 miles and has preached 2,066 sermons. He has visited 3,710 homes and preached 503 funerals. The people who have been converted in his services total 1,064. He has baptized 572 candidates, received 623 applicants into the church, and solemnized 60 marriages. Yet, for all this service he has received the small amount of $34,858.27 as financial remuneration. On this meager pittance he reared nine children. This fine enviable record stretches over a period of 40 years."

Mrs. Vera Elliott says:

"And he turned him unto his disciples, and said privately, Blessed are the eyes which see the things that ye see: For I tell you, that many prophets and kings have desired to see those things which ye see, and have not seen them; and to hear those things which ye hear, and have not heard them" (Luke 10:23, 24). How wonderful to walk with Jesus as Brother Davenport has for so many years! He has been so faithful to God, and yet unafraid of the devil. Brother Davenport served as my pastor for a number of years. He was always so patient and kind; he held Jesus up in power and revealed the sweetness of Jesus. As he preached one could feel that deep settled peace and joy that can only come to God-called men. He was willing to be led by the power of God, trusting with faith that He would keep His promises.

"I shall never forget that during one revival he baptized 89 people. Brother Davenport is loved by all. Just by talking with him, one can feel the presence of Jesus. He is now almost blind, but he still has a heavenly smile. Isn't it wonderful that so many have come to know Jesus through him? I thank God for allowing me to be acquainted with a man like Brother Davenport."

A man who believes truth can stand on his feet. I pity those men who live on negatives, on what they don't believe. I met a man some time ago, and he said he didn't believe this, and he didn't believe that, and he told me forty things he didn't believe. I said: "Will you tell me what you do believe?" And the poor fellow didn't know what he did believe. If it's the truth, my friends, stick to it; hold on to it; but if it's not true, give it up.—D. L. Moody.

Mount Olive College President Writes

August 31, 1956

Dear Friends:

Last spring Mount Olive Junior College, Mount Olive, North Carolina, conducted a financial campaign among Free Will Baptist churches in North Carolina and also in the town of Mount Olive, the city of Goldsboro and surrounding communities. The campaign consisted mostly of pledges to be paid to the college over a period of five years. The purpose of the campaign was to secure funds that would make it possible for Mount Olive Junior College to improve and expand its educational service to the point where we could offer Christian education to our young men and women in all walks of life.

The results of the campaign were gratifying. More than $200,000 was pledged to the college; payment on most of these pledges is scheduled to begin this fall. If your church has already made its drive for pledges to Mount Olive Junior College, you will want to begin now to receive the money. We would like for each church to work the drive for the college as is best suited to its local situation. Someone in your church can be designated to collect the pledges and send the contributions to the college in a lump sum; if they desire, individuals may send their gifts directly to the college and their church will be credited with their donation.

If your church did not conduct a drive for Mount Olive Junior College last spring, we ask you earnestly to do so now.

Where possible, we would like for the pledges to be made over a five-year period. We will be happy to send you as much literature and as many pledge cards as you need. If you would like for a representative from the college to meet with your church and explain any details about the campaign or the work of Mount Olive Junior College, please let us know.

We believe that Mount Olive Junior College is destined by God to grow and become a leading college in the field of Christian education. In a few days a record number of students will be registering for the new school year. To provide for an increased student body in 1957 we are beginning now to lay plans. On October 1 we plan to purchase fifty acres of land located four-tenths of one mile from our present campus. This land will cost $40,000, and is to be paid for at the rate of $8,000 per year.

We firmly believe that the future belongs to those who prepare for it. We urge you to do all you can for Mount Olive Junior College, for only by saving our youth can we save our church.

We hope that you will constantly remember us in your prayers and visit us whenever you can.

Sincerely yours,

W. Burkette Raper

Questions and Answers ON THE BIBLE

Conducted by J. F. BARROW

W. H. G. Thomas, "Let Us Go On," Pages 72-74, says, "These Christians are to go forward, 'for' (v. 4) it is impossible to restore those who through continued spiritual babyhood fall away. The description of these people must be noticed. They were 'once for all enlightened.' They had 'tasted of the heavenly gift.' They had been 'partakers of the Holy Spirit.' They had 'tasted' the Word of God and the spiritual world. These four statements clearly imply a real and definite spiritual experience. It does not seem possible to interpret these phrases of illumination only, of light rather than of life.

"Then comes the question of the fall: 'If they shall fall away.' The thought must be strictly limited to the text and not made general. It is no ordinary or general fall, but a deliberate apostasy, not backsliding but wilful departure. Practically everything turns on the force of the word 'impossible' which, of course, must not be in any way weakened. It is absolute and unqualified. Whoever may be referred to here, it is 'impossible' to restore them. This fact alone shows clearly that the passage cannot refer to ordinary backsliding from which restoration is, of course, possible. But does it mean impossible to man or to God? Some think that the reference is to human agency only, implying that man can do nothing with apostasy, which must be left with God. As it is no question of mere relapse but a definite turning aside, it is obviously impossible for the Christian community to restore such a wilful state. But is best to take it just as it stands and interpret it of impossibility in every respect. The explanation of this impossibility is seen in Verse 6, where there is a significant change of tenses. It is pointed out that it is unfortunately possible to 'keep on crucifying Christ afresh,' that is, after they have fallen, and on this account it is impossible to 'keep on renewing them to repentance.' Active hostility to Christ ever persisted in cannot be a matter of restoration, though, of course, as it has often been pointed out, if the cause ceases to operate, the effect will cease to follow.

"There seems to be no doubt that this section is not concerned with mere professors of Christianity, since every prominent word used is found applied to believers in other parts of the New Testament. The word 'once' means not to be repeated, as in 9:7, 26, 27, 28, while 'enlightened' is the same as in 10:32, 'partakers' as in 3:1, and 'tasted' as in 2:9. Moreover, a mere professor of Christianity could not go on to maturity when he had not really started, nor could salvation in the elementary sense be denied to such a person. Then, too, a professor would not be warned, since he had never possessed grace. The passage is apparently a supposed case to correct their wrong ideas, and the argument seems to be that if it were possible for those who have had the experience of Verses 4-6 to fall away, it would be impossible to renew them unless Christ died a second time, and this would put Him to an open shame and prove that His work was not of infinite value."

A. B. Davidson, "The Epistle to the Hebrews," Page 123, says, "The Author's conception of the case seems this:—It is that of men once truly enlightened (vi. 4-8, x. 32, 38, iii. 7),—for the Hebrews spoken to are the People of God,—who against this knowledge renounce the faith of Christ (ii. 3, iii. 8, 12, x. 38, 39, xii. 25, and especially vi. 4-8, x. 26-31, xii. 14-17). This sin is of such aggravation that the judgment of God inevitably falls upon it (ii. 1 with ii. 3, iii. 12 with iv. 11, vi. 6 with vi. 8, x. 26-29), as it did on Israel in the wilderness."

Albert Barnes, "Notes on the Epistle to the Hebrews," Page 141, says, "And were made partakers of the Holy Ghost. Partakers of the influences of the Holy Ghost—for it is only in this sense that we can partake of the Holy Spirit. We partake of food when we share it with others. So we partake of the influences of the Holy Spirit when we share these influences conferred on his people. This is not language which can properly be applied to any one but a true Christian.

"5. And have tasted the good word of God. That is, either the doctrines which he teaches, and which are good, or pleasant to the soul; or the word of God which is connected with good, that is, which promises good. The former seems to me to be the correct meaning—that the word of God, or the truth which he taught, was itself a good. It was that which the soul desired, and in which it found comfort and peace. Comp. Ps. cxix. 103; cxli. 6. The meaning here is, that they experienced the excellency of the truth of God; they had seen and enjoyed its beauty. This is language which cannot be applied to an impenitent sinner. He has no relish for the truth of God; sees no beauty in it; derives no comfort from it. It is only the true Christian who has pleasure in its contemplation, and who can be said to 'taste' and enjoy it."

W. H. G. Thomas, "Let Us Go On," Pages 135, 137, says, "The Possibility (v. 26).—After receiving the full knowledge of the truth, it is only too possible to continue to sin willingly (3:12; 6:7). The reference to the 'full knowledge' of the truth seems clearly to indicate a spiritual experience, and not intellectual information alone. The tenses are also expressive because they point to persistent sin. The evil seems to be somewhat like the presumptuous sin of Num. 15:30 and Ps. 19:13. It evidently means a sin that deliberately goes against God and right.

"It must never be forgotten that the Gospel, with all its freedom and grace, does not modify in the slightest degree the character of God as holy, just, and true. In these respects the revelation of the new covenant is identical with that of the old. While we have 'entrance,' it is into the 'holiest' (v. 19).

"Before passing on to the next section the connection between the three warnings of Chapters 2, 6, and 10 should be observed. From indifference (chap. 2), it is not difficult to proceed to rejection (chap. 6), and from this it is a short step to contempt (chap. 10). It is a reminder which we do well to heed, that 'grace is not operative whether we believe or not.'"

I trust that these quotations together with what else is said here may help to disillusion those who think that the Bible is one sided in that it only portrays the sovereignty of God. It does that, and no Christian should question this fact. On the other hand it just as vividly portrays the freedom of man to choose for or against God is just as truly taught and that man will be dealt with in terms of either eternal judgment or eternal rewards.

The Lighted Pathway

Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path
(PSALM 119:105).

REV. WILLET L. MORETZ
SWANNANOVA, N. C.

"For I have told him that I will judge his house for ever for the iniquity which he knoweth; because his sons made themselves vile, and he restraineth them not" (1 Samuel 3:13).

During the next several weeks I want to give you a series of messages. The first group will deal with family relations concerning this life, and the last group will deal with the same thought in the life to come.

I recently read a sermon, preached about one hundred years ago, by Rev. John S. Watkins, First Presbyterian Church, Raleigh, North Carolina, on the subject, "Parental Responsibility," from which I will give excerpts, thoughts and comments.

Eli was a good man . . . He was devoted to the service of God . . . But there are other responsibilities resting upon us besides those which relate to our own individual character. We sustain certain relations to those about us—and out of these relations arise numerous and heavy responsibilities. "No man liveth to himself."

Eli was a father, and God held him accountable, as a parent, for the horrible vices and excesses of his sons which he might have prevented, at least in a great measure. He thoughtlessly indulged them, and permitted them to disgrace themselves and pollute God's holy place with their vile immoralities. He failed to exercise that parental authority with which he was clothed, and withheld that power of restraint which he was bound to exert. Consequently, he incurred the displeasure of the Almighty. In not restraining the sins of his children when it was in his power, he became partaker of their guilt, and brought down the awful curse of God upon his family—a curse which was entailed from generation to generation. The ears of all Israel tingled when they heard that his sons were slain, his own neck was broken, and his family dispersed.

The fact that God sent upon him, his family and posterity, so great a curse, on account of the neglect of parental restraint, sets before us in a very strong light the greatness of parental responsibility.

Our text teaches that God has committed to parents, in giving them children, a sacred and solemn trust, and that He will hold them to account for the manner in which they have discharged it. There is but little hope of our coming up to the full measure of our duty in this regard unless we are rightly impressed with a sense of our responsibility. We have only to glance around us in society to be persuaded of the painful truth that this solemn responsibility which God has imposed, rests lightly on the minds and hearts of many. The constant complaints of neglect, on the part of Christians, of family religion and religious training in the home, bear witness to the truth that they do not feel the solemn weight of their obligations.

If this is true of so many who profess to be the children of God, ought we to be amazed at the indifference which prevails among those who make no pretensions to piety?

As all those who have children must meet God at the bar of judgment, not in the capacity of private, isolated individuals, but in the capacity of parents, to give account of the sacred trust committed to them, surely it is well for them to anticipate these solemn senses, to earnestly inquire into and honestly face their responsibilities now. In view of an assembled world before God, our children shall stand by our side before the Grand Assize, and call us blessed, or pronounce curses upon our heads.

In Colossians 3:18-21 are to be found complete instructions to every member of the family. If these verses are put into practice by all our homes will be secure and the problem of juvenile delinquency will be solved.

UNMOVED

"None of these things move me" (Acts 20:24).

He did not say, none of these things hurt me. It is one thing to be hurt, and quite another to be moved. Paul had a very tender heart. But the apostle had determined not to move from what he believed was right. He did not count as we are apt to count; he did not care for ease; he did not care for his mortal life. He cared for only one thing, and that was to be loyal to Christ, to have His smile.—Selected.

The Grand Old Book

Whenever you see a crowd stopping at a given point, looking in some window, examining some object, interested in some article, whether their comment is favorable or unfavorable, you know that they have found something out of the ordinary.

In Philadelphia it is the Liberty Bell; in Washington, D. C., it is the original copy of the Declaration of Independence; and having elbowed our way through so many crowds we have become convinced without a doubt that it is the unusual, the something different that attracts the multitude.

There is one article on the streets of time which the world has never passed with indifference, that is the Bible. The high, the low, the rich and poor have stopped to look on this book, some for a moment, others for years, some to praise, others to criticize. Surely no ordinary book could attract so much attention. The answer is the fact that it is inspired Word of God. Read it daily and bring it to church with you every Sunday.

NOTES — AND — QUOTES

By J. C. Griffin

WAITING ON THE LORD

As I was going out on a certain bus line, I saw people standing at bus stops waiting for the bus. Some of them were looking in the direction from which the bus would appear. These people lived two or three blocks from the regular bus line. They had gone to the bus stop to board the bus. They did not expect the bus to go off its regular route, so they were meeting the conditions by going to the right, lawful place to get on the bus.

As I thought of those people waiting for the bus, I thought of another group of people who were waiting on the Lord. Just as the people were expecting the bus to go on its regular route, the group waiting on the Lord were expecting blessings that are sure to come to the ones who wait. The Lord has promised to meet the expectations of the righteous.

The Answer to Prayer

If we are really waiting on the Lord, we are sure that the Lord is going to answer when we pray. Something can happen to delay the arrival of the bus, but nothing can prevent the Lord from giving the blessing to the believer who meets God's conditions. Jesus has promised that if we ask we shall receive, and if we seek we shall find. These promises are certain. In order to get on the bus, one has to go to the bus stop. In order to get the blessing from the Lord, we must get on the prayer line. God will meet us there on scheduled time. He is never late. We are often late in getting to the stop, but God meets His promise.

The psalmist said, "I waited patiently for the LORD; and he inclined unto me, and heard my cry" (Psalm 40:1). Thus the psalmist waited until the Lord came. He waited patiently. He did not get in a hurry and say, "The Lord delayeth His coming." He just waited patiently. That is God's way; He is sure to come to the one who waits patiently. Notice that the psalmist also said he inclined unto me, and heard my cry. The word, incline, means to lean, to bow or to dispose. Thus God has arranged to meet and to impart Himself to the very heart and life of the individual who is standing on the promises.

Partakers of Divine Nature

"According as his divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness, through the knowledge of him that hath called us to glory and virtue: Whereby are given unto us exceeding great and precious promises: that by these ye might be partakers of the divine nature, having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust" (2 Peter 1:3, 4). Yes, God has promised to give to us eternal life and a new nature. That old sinful, lustful nature that dominates the life of the individual out of Christ must be cast away, but we must go to Him in order to receive that new life. God will condescend to lift us up out of sin and death and to give to us the nature of a true child of God—the divine nature.

Then we will not love the world nor the perishable, but we will love the Lord with a true heart. Just as our nature in the unconverted state is to follow evil, so our nature in the converted state is that of love for the fellowship of the Lord Jesus Christ. But let us turn our attention back to the individual who is standing at the bus stop, waiting for the bus to arrive. We must perfectly trust the Lord for our salvation which is promised to all who will meet the conditions. Jesus said, "... him that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out" (John 6:37). But we have to go to Christ. This means more than merely confessing sins; it means that we are waiting and fully trusting the Lord Jesus. We have reached our destination where we can wait for His inclining ear, wait for His coming down into our hearts. And as we wait, we know that He comes with power over sin, thereby making us true children of God. The psalmist said, "Truly my soul waiteth upon God: from him cometh my salvation. He only is my rock and my salvation; he is my defense; I shall not be greatly moved" (Psalm 62:1, 2). The psalmist here declared that his salvation was from the Lord. There is no substitute; it is either salvation on God's arrangements or it is damnation.

God's Plan

"For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life" (John 3:16). There is no salvation without believing on the Lord Jesus Christ.

What is it to believe? How can we believe? We just take the Lord at His word. We just believe that Jesus is the Son of God as the Bible teaches, thus casting all of our care on Him for our salvation. "He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life: and he that believeth not the Son shall not see life; but the wrath of God abideth on him" (John 3:36).

Examples of Faith That Saves

"Then Peter said unto them, Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost" (Acts 2:38). "Then they that gladly received his word were baptized: and the same day there were added unto them about three thousand souls" (Acts 2:41). "Repent ye therefore, and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out, when the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord" (Acts 3:19). The Lord will not disappoint you. He will be there on scheduled time. When you repent, confess your sins, and obey His commandments, He will stop and take you on His bus.

"Then Philip opened his mouth, and began at the same scripture, (Isaiah 53) and preached unto him Jesus. And as they went on their way, they came unto a certain water: and the eunuch said, See, here is water; what doth hinder me to be baptized? And Philip said, If thou believest with all thine heart, thou mayest. And he answered and said, I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God. And he commanded the chariot to stand still: and they went down both into the water, both Philip and the eunuch; and he baptized him" (Acts 8:35-38). Philip believed in a believer's baptism. So do we as Free Will Baptists. Repent of your sins, believe the Lord Jesus Christ to be your Saviour, confess Christ in baptism, and you will be aboard that bus that will take you to glory.

The Philippian jailer said, "... Sirs, what must I do to be saved? And they said, Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved, and thy house. And they spake unto him the word of the Lord, and to all that were in his house. And he took them the same hour of the night, and washed their stripes; and was baptized, he and all his, straightway. And when he had brought them into his house, he set meat before them, and rejoiced, believing in God with all his house" (Acts 16:30-34). There is no way to eternal life, but by Christ. Faith in Christ does the work. I have tried it, have you?

"How Big Is Your God?"

According to the Washington Post, the Princeton astronomer, Henry Norris Russell, had concluded a lecture on the Milky Way and was asked by a woman, "If our world is so little, and the universe is so great, can we really believe that God pays any attention to us?"

"That, madam," replied Dr. Russell, "depends entirely on how big a God you believe in."—Selected.

All that is necessary for the triumph of evil is that good men do nothing.—Edmund Burke.

STORIES

—FOR OUR—

BOYS and GIRLS

"THE EYE"

By Edwin Raymond Anderson

ALL that half-mile walk home, Charlie felt vaguely worried. He knew that he should not have gone to the show with those Cormier boys, for had not his mother told him over and over again that the Cormier boys were bad boys, and that it was wrong for him to play with them? Charlie shook himself slightly. Play with them! Why, it had been more than that! He had been across the town to the show with them! What if someone had seen him and gone home ahead of him to tell Mother about it? For he remembered what his mother had told him only yesterday morning. It was after breakfast, and Mother had called him over to one side of the kitchen:

"Remember Charlie," she had said in that soft, quiet way of her voice, "the Cormier boys are bad boys. Why? Because they do not love Jesus. They do not go to Sunday school. Why, you saw them last Sunday morning didn't you, Charlie, when you came out of church? There they were standing across the street, laughing!—laughing at people as they came out, and laughing all the while at Jesus Himself!"

Charlie stopped. It seemed as if the voice were still running through his brain, still warning, still pleading. But it was only a pause for a moment, for there was a rough push on the arm, and a rougher voice.

"What's the matter, boy—," the voice dripped with scorn, "what's the matter? Still worried about your mother? Never mind!" The voice took on a rougher edge and Dan Cormier laid his hand upon the younger boy's shoulder. "Remember what I told you. No one saw us, do you hear? Just tell your mother that you were out. That's all!"

And before he knew it, Dan Cormier was gone. He crossed the street and went down the side lane, and Charlie knew that he had but one street left to go before he reached home and—Mother. He took a deep breath for the remaining steps and made up his mind. He would not tell his mother. After all, if Dan Cormier was right, and if no one saw them coming out of the show—well, why tell? Yes, that's right!

why tell? He threw back his shoulders in a gesture of defiance. Of course Mother had always said that God's Eye was always upon him, and that Mother would always know where he was, but that was Sunday school talk, and nothing more to it.

He felt better now for his thinking. Not that he especially liked Dan Cormier, but after all—

"Hello Son!" The voice cut through his thoughts as a chilling knife. Charlie had not realized that he had so quickly reached home, nor that Mother was standing there. "You have been out for a long while—"

She let the words trail away, as if waiting for his answer. He mounted the steps and inwardly braced himself. This would be the test of—of what Dan Cormier had said.

"I have, Mother?" Why, he even surprised himself at the levelness of his tone! "I have? I'm sorry that I stayed—so late —"

"Son, where were you?" The tone of the voice hurt, but he had to play the thing all the way through! "You were not out with those bad Cormier boys were you?"

"No, Mother. No. I—I was just out. That's all—just out." He turned as if to enter the house. Surprisingly enough his mother said nothing further, but turned to the door. With a hand on the knob she paused for an instant.

"I will leave it with you, Charlie. But I just want you to remember what I have been saying over and over about the Eye of God. He always knows where you have been, and He will always tell me in one way or another." An instant later the knob was turned and Mother entered the house.

The two of them ate supper alone, as Father was working late at the shop that evening. There was not much of anything said. Charlie could not shake off the feeling of some huge eye that hung over him. But over against that eye, there was the rough, sneering face of Dan Cormier and the words that fell out of the side of his thin lips, "Still worried about your mother? No one saw us; do you hear? No one!" And then that huge eye would swing back across the picture of his mind.

Suddenly there was the ringing of the front doorbell, and to Charlie it seemed as the ringing of some huge bell of doom. His eyes met Mother's, and she motioned him to the door.

"I believe that it is the paper boy, Charlie. He was coming late this evening. I heard over the radio that there was some trouble down at the printing press that would hold the paper up for a while. Will you get it, Charlie?"

What a relief! And anything to relieve the strain. He opened the door, said a quick, "Hya Joe," to the paper boy, and brought it back to the kitchen and to Mother seated there awaiting the news. He waited a while as Mother idly turned the pages and then excused himself from the table, and went upstairs.

Only a minute or two had passed and he heard it. A slow measured step coming up the stairs, and the beating of his heart could tell by the very sound of it that rough, bad Dan Cormier had been all wrong. He dared not look up even when the shadow fell full length across his desk. Not until the trembling hand was laid upon his shoulder did he slowly turn. Mother's eyes were swimming with tears as she sat on the opposite chair. Out of the corner of his eye did he notice that she clasped the evening newspaper in her hand. The silence was becoming unbearable—and finally broke.

"Yes, Mother I lied to you! I lied to you! I was out with Dan Cormier this afternoon!" He felt the words tumbling out from some deep corner of his heart like some relieving flood.

Her voice was strangely broken. "And you were at the awful picture show with him, too, Charlie! And after all the warnings!"

He froze in his chair. The picture show! How could she know about that? But he was so sure that no one had seen him there.

"Come over here and sit beside me, Charlie," she said, and waited until he had done so. He could not get over the shock of her discovery. How could she have found out? Was she really right after all, about her telling him about the Eye of God watching?

She had raised the newspaper and folded it across the center. "Look, Son. Look!"

And Charlie looked. What he saw caused a sick, very sick feeling to flood over his whole being. There was a picture of the show across the town in which Dan Cormier and he had been that afternoon. And there were a number of people coming out at the close of the afternoon show. And there over to the right, so clear, and so distinct was Dan Cormier and himself. He looked at the heading and read, "Sights Around Town"—and he remembered. It was a regular feature of the newspapers, as one of the photographers would go around the town and snap different pictures here and there. But just how did it happen that just on that afternoon that photographer should be there and take that picture? And then he knew. Then he knew, for the first time in his young life, what his dear mother meant when she talked to him about the "Eye of God" always watching, always telling Mother where he had been. And he knew the meaning of Mother's tears and her arms now so tightly wrapped about him. And he knew that Dan Cormier was so very, very wrong. He snuggled in Mother's arms. "You're always right, Mother, always!"—Gospel Herald.

OBITUARIES

Obituaries, 150 words long, are inserted free of charge. When they exceed this number, one cent for each additional word should be enclosed in Postage Stamps in the letter with the obituary.

Obituaries and in memoriams of persons who have been dead a year or longer are not wanted for publication in THE FREE WILL BAPTIST.

In Memoriam

The following poem is submitted in memory of Mr. Willie P. Vail of Pikeville, North Carolina, by his children, Ruth, Gladys, Marie, Pip, Tom and Henry. Mr. Vail had been dead one year, Sunday, August 26.

A home we all enjoyed,
A voice we loved is still;
A place is vacant now
That no one else can fill.

Oh, how hard we tried to save you,
Prayers and tears were all in vain;
Angels came and took you away
To a world of no more pain.

We miss you in our home, dear Daddy,
We miss you everywhere;
Home's not like it used to be, dear Daddy,
Because you are not there.

Get Out the Scissors

Rollo O. Swisher, in "The Gospel Trumpet"

The Christian religion teaches us to love one another in our conversation as well as otherwise.

Charles H. Spurgeon was once visited by a woman who felt that Spurgeon's cravat was too long. To her it was a sign of worldliness. (Ministers of that day wore what the dictionary calls a stock—a broad, stiffened band worn as a cravat.)

Spurgeon listened patiently, took off the offensive cravat, handed it to the woman, and told her to adjust it to the length she thought it ought to be. "But," he added, "dear sister, may I perform a service for you, too?" "Certainly," she replied, "I shall appreciate it very much."

"Well," said Spurgeon, "you also have something which is too long to be in accord with Christian humility, which has caused me and others a great deal of grief. I should like to cut it down to its proper length." "Indeed," she inquired. "What can it be? Here, use the scissors as you please." With calm friendliness Spurgeon said, "Dear sister, will you stick out your tongue, please?"—The Free Methodist.

He Is Faithful to The Lord

Mrs. Guyton Altman
Dunn, North Carolina

(Editor's note: The following article was prepared from the auxiliary program for August by Mrs. Guyton Altman of Lee's Chapel Church.)

"Moreover it is required in stewards, that a man be found faithful" (1 Corinthians 4:2). Not only must a good steward be faithful in tithes and offerings, but he must also be faithful in every phase of his life. He must be a faithful worker in his church, regular in attendance, faithful in prayer and Bible study, and ready to do anything God would have him do and be led by the Holy Spirit. We all know we are supposed to give a tenth of all our earnings to the Lord's work. The Christian who begins to give a tenth of his income to the Lord will have at least six surprises. He will be surprised (1) at the amount of money he has for the Lord's work; (2) at the deepening of his spiritual life; (3) at the ease in going from one tenth to larger givings; (4) at the ease of meeting his own obligations with the nine tenths; (5) at the prudent disposal afforded to a faithful and wise steward over the nine tenths that remain; and (6) at himself for not adopting the plan sooner.

"... but first gave their own selves to the Lord, ..." (2 Corinthians 8:5).

Before we can be a faithful steward we must give ourselves completely to God and take hands off our lives, or are we like the following poem?

I'll go where you want me to go, dear Lord,
Real service is what I desire.
I'll say what you want me to say, dear Lord,
But don't ask me to sing in the choir.

I'll be what you want me to be, dear Lord,
I like to see things come to pass.
But don't ask me to teach girls and boys,
I'd rather just stay in my class.

I'll do what you want me to do, dear Lord,
I yearn for the Kingdom to thrive.
I'll give you my nickels and dimes, dear Lord,
But please don't ask me to tithe.

I'll speak when you want me to speak, dear Lord;
I'll say what you want me to say.
I'm busy now with myself, dear Lord;
I'll help some other day.

Are we too busy to find out about the Lord and what He wants us to do?

Beside our own lives we should give our children to the Lord and be faithful in teaching them the way of eternal life. We should teach them to give all they possess to God, also we should bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. So let us yield ourselves and all that we have to our Master, withholding nothing from Him who hath withheld no good things from us.

Recall how the Master has challenged us, "Ye are the light of the world. . . . Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven" (Matthew 5:14-16). It is not sufficient to say, "But I have followed the steps of others." Christ has said, "Follow Me and I will make you fishers of men." You cannot apologize by saying, "I have led, but no one followed," or "I have taught, but no one learned." Someone, somewhere, has followed and learned. You are leading someone in life and it is our mission to walk so closely with Christ that we can lead them to God.

Are we the good steward God would have us to be?

The Florida Free Will Baptist Woman's Auxiliary Convention sponsored a week of camp July 23-27, 1956. Classes were held daily in stewardship, methods, missions and soul winning. Even though not all the Florida auxiliaries were represented, the study and fellowship proved an inspiration to all present. ## From the Field

Columbia, N. C.
August 15, 1956

Dear Brother Riggs:

Enclosed you will find post office money order in the amount of $35.00. This is a donation for foreign missions given in memory of my mother, Ophelia Spencer, who went on to be with the Lord ten years ago this past July 4. My prayers are that it may be used for the glory of the Lord.

Yours for missions,
Mrs. H. S. Swain

Dear Sir:

I would like to have two of your missionary posters for our church. We are progressing slow, but there is a work to be done here and I am glad God has led us this way. We covet your prayers.

This city is a city of 170,000 people and so many different races. There are Catholics on every corner.

We have a young man who is enrolling in the college at Nashville in September, and we believe he is really a true Christian.

We have had one Catholic woman saved which is something to thank God for.

We have 16 members now. We ask your prayers that God will send us more laborers to help us.

Your sister in Christ,
Mrs. W. W. Winters,
Church Clerk

August 14, 1956

Dear Worker in Christ,

It is with God's help that we again send to you a small gift for foreign missions. We know that it isn't much, but we send it with our prayers that God will bless you all that are doing His work.

I think I told you this before, but if I haven't I would like for you to know that we here at Holly Spring Free Will Baptist League have put aside to give each quarter 10% of our offering, praying that it may be of help to you.

We also have a Missionary Prayer Band here at our league and each Sunday night, before we have our program, we have prayer for our missionaries. Sometime we pray for some special one and sometime for all the missionaries; always we pray that God will bless and take care of them as they go about doing His work.

I know that each month I get a letter from the mission board telling us all about things you are doing, but I was wondering if maybe there were some special things that we might be praying for in our prayer band? So if you would let us know about some of these things we would like to have prayer about them at different times in our prayer band.

We will be praying always for you who are working there at the board and may God bless you.

Yours in Christ,
Alice Dean Quinn

Rev. Billy Jackson To Hold Revival

The Rev. Billy Jackson will hold a revival on September 13-22, 1956, at the Piney Grove Free Will Baptist Church, Beaufort County, North Carolina. He will be assisted by the pastor, the Rev. Willis Wilson.

Services will begin each evening at 7:30. Everyone is cordially invited to attend these services.

Church Attendance

If all of our pupils in Sunday school followed the poor example set by some leaders in the church, and even some teachers, we would not be able to even have a church service on Sunday morning. I cannot think of anything much more discouraging to a pastor and other faithful workers than to see people make a quick exit from the church grounds when Sunday school is over. This is certainly a poor display of love to God. It is a poor example for others to follow. It is a poor way to help carry on the work of the church. It lessens tremendously the confidence that people have in you. It says to your pastor and the choir that you do not appreciate their messages in song and sermon, and in effect by your actions you are saying that you do not care if we do not have a church service at all.

Please, dear church member, realize that the church is God's divinely appointed institution to carry the gospel, and that all of us should be faithful in supporting the services of the church by attending and bringing others. See you in church Sunday.—Edgemont F. W. B. Church Challenger, Durham, N. C.

Christ Among the Churches

(Lesson for September 16)

Lesson: Revelation 1:9-11, 17, 18; 3:14-22.
Golden Text: Revelation 3:20.

I. INTRODUCTION

The last book in the Bible from which the Printed Text is taken for this lesson is considered a marvelous book of prophecy. It is "The Revelation of Jesus Christ, which God gave unto him, to show unto his servants things which must shortly come to pass; and he sent and signified it by his angel unto his servant John" (Revelation 1:1).

The central fact of Revelation is sometimes lost to its readers in the maze of the mysteries contained in the book and in the reader's efforts to solve them. In our reading and study, let us never lose sight of the fact that this book reveals Jesus, exalted and clothed with heavenly majesty. Let us see, also, the exaltation and triumph of the believers in Christ of all ages whom the book portrays with Him.—The Bible Student (F. W. B.).

II. HELPFUL HINTS

1. It's an impossibility for the servants of the Lord to be put where He cannot find and use them (1:1-3).

2. There is no reason why the witnesses of Christ should quake with fear when they see the Lord (1:17, 18).

3. Nothing seems to nauseate the Lord so much as Christians whose spiritual zeal is lukewarm (3:14-16).

4. No church is so wretched, miserable, and poor as the one which feels that it has no need (3:17).

5. There is a kind of gold, fine raiment, and sight that only the grace of God can provide (3:18).

6. Those whom the Lord does not rebuke and chasten should seriously consider their relationship to Him (3:19).

7. Those who hear the knocking of the Lord at the door should let Him come in, but they don't have to (3:20).

8. Unless the ear of the soul hears the Spirit's voice, there can be no genuine response to His call (3:29, 21).—The Bible Teacher (F. W. B.).

III. ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

1. John, then, was in the isle that is called Patmos for the Word of God and the testimony of Jesus. The island called Patmos is described as a barren, rocky island with no remainders of the palms which once gave it the name Palmosa. It was about ten miles long and six miles wide. To this barren place John was banished for the sake of the Word of God and the testimony of Jesus. He became an outcast and an exile for the sake of the Lord.

2. John became in the Spirit on the Lord's Day, so F. W. Grant renders it. We are to understand by this that the Spirit laid hold upon John in a special manner, so as to carry him whither He would and to show him what He would and to cause him to hear what He would. In the general sense of the meaning of the expression in the Spirit John was constantly in the spirit, as every believer is (Romans 8:9; Galatians 5:25). It was a special manifestation and operation of the Holy Spirit that is here implied and indicated. John, banished to Patmos, was to have heavenly visitants, behold strange visions and hear strange voices and sounds, and he needed a special preparation and endowment to commune with his visitants, to discern the visions and to understand the sounds and voices. For this purpose he became in the Spirit.—W. S. Hotel, D. D.

3. Verses 12-16 describe what John saw as the source of the great voice, namely seven golden candlesticks in the midst of which was one like the Son of man. The symbolism of this passage sets forth the attributes and present glory of the Christ. He wears priestly garments, His hair is a beautiful sagely white, His eyes pierce like fire, His brass-shod feet bespeak judgments, His voice is awesome as the ocean, He is a seven-starred ruler, the two-edged sword and truth proceeds from His mouth, and the total sun-like brilliancy of His countenance is too overwhelming for mortal eyes to look upon.

But Verse 17 reveals that in this awesome personage there is the same power to silence human fears, that was manifest so often when the Master walked among men. He is still the Son of man.—Selected.

Compare John's vision of Jesus in our lesson with a great prophet's experience as recorded in Daniel 10. Both were godly men.

4. Christ called the attention of the Laodiceans to the divine position, by saying, "I stand at the door." He was outside! There was no room for Him within. They had room for pride and room for the world; but no room for Jesus. The One who loved the Church, gave Himself a ransom for it, and loosed it from its sins in His own blood; He was standing outside, begging for admission!

In Christ's request for admission, there is a divine inclusion expressed in the words, "If any man hear My voice." Yes, He is willing that not any should perish. He knocks at every man's heart; He longs that all men should be saved and come to the knowledge of the truth.—The Bible Illustrator.

5. A citizen of the Southwest heard his preacher say that a man can do more work in six days than in seven, providing he keeps the seventh for the Lord. He went to him and said, "I have proved that! When I came West, I led the company. When Sunday came I turned my horses out to graze, and got out my Bible to read. The rest said, 'Why are you not going to travel today?' My answer was, 'I did not leave my religion in the old state. My teams and my family need the rest.' The company moved on, and I did not overtake them the first week until Thursday. The second week I overtook them on Tuesday. After that they never overtook me, and I reached my destination two weeks ahead of all the others, with my family well, my teams in good condition, and my wagons sound. The others lost horses. Members of their family got sick, and their wagons broke down!" The hero was seventy when he told the story. He always observed the Lord's Day. Seldom did he miss church!—Selected.

6. A young lawyer, an infidel, boasted that he was going West to locate some place where there were no churches, no Sunday schools and no Bibles. Before the year was over, he wrote a former college classmate, a young minister, begging him to come out where he was and start a church and Sunday school and preach. "Be sure and bring plenty of Bibles," he pleaded as he closed his letter. Then he added, "I have become convinced that a place without churches, Christians, Sunday schools and Bible is too much like hell for any living man to stay in!"—Selected.

7. It is a sad fact that many Christians read Revelation 1:6 without realizing that every Christian is a priest. Perhaps many pastors ought to preach from this verse at least once a year.

THE NEW YEAR HAS BEGUN

Mount Olive Junior College began its third year of operation as a junior college on September 3 when fifty-five full-time students enrolled. Returning students found the college much improved and better prepared to carry on its work during the coming year. The last day for students to enroll for the fall semester is September 18.

The college offers the first two years of studies that are basic to almost any profession. Among our students this year are future teachers, ministers, nurses, business men, secretaries and bookkeepers. After graduation from Mount Olive Junior College, these students will be able to transfer to senior colleges if they choose to further their education.

By receiving their education in a Christian college these young men and women will be much better prepared to render service in their local churches. Bible is a required part of every program of study at Mount Olive Junior College.

We hope that our readers will visit the college this fall and see the quality of work we are doing. Everything our church hopes to accomplish depends upon trained and qualified leadership.

EDITORIAL

HUMANE TO ANIMALS

An article in The Washington Religious Review, written by United States Senator Richard L. Neuberger, was of such absorbing interest to us that we have decided to pass it on to our readers in this column. It is very timely in that it points out flagrant waste of our animal life in the past and defines important problems which face us now in this respect. Senator Neuberger says:

"People often ask me why I spend so much of my time protecting the welfare of animals. They refer to my active support of legislation to outlaw barbarism in packing plants and to require humane slaughter of livestock.

"They wonder about the fact that I protested the liquidation of the famous White House squirrels. They look inquiringly when I urge a halt to the oil drilling and gas prospecting now taking place all over our national wildlife and waterfowl refuges.

"They ask me why I oppose dams which would flood out the feeding grounds of elk herds in the upland solitudes of the Pacific Northwest.

"I have for them several answers. The first is that Dr. Albert Schweitzer, the great humanitarian working to bring medical care to the natives of the African jungle, often has said that one of the real symbols of a truly civilized person is whether or not he is kind to animals.

"And I also cite one of my favorite quotations from the Bible, 'And the King shall answer and say unto them, Verily I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me' (Matthew 25:40).

"I always have believed that cruelty to beasts of the field and to wildlife is a black mark in heaven—particularly cruelty which is wanton and totally unnecessary.

"For example, we are among the few so-called cultured nations which tolerate indiscriminate and butchering methods of slaughter in packing plants, before animals are rendered insensible by chloroform or stunning pistols. If there are less brutal systems of slaughter, why should they not be used?

"At the entrance to the great Nairobi National Park in South Africa is a quotation by King George VI of England that I like. It reads: 'The wildlife of today is not ours to dispose of as we please. We must account for it to those who come after.'

"I feel strongly about this. When Lewis and Clark, the first west-bound Americans, crossed the plains in 1805, there were an estimated 60,000,000 bison foraging between the Mississippi River and the Bitterroot Range. When the American Bison Society was organized by Theodore Roosevelt and other conservationists half a century ago, these men had difficulty finding a few hundred survivors of that once-vast herd.

"The butchery of the buffalo was savage and wasteful. Whole animals were slaughtered merely to get a tongue or a few choice morsels of meat. Visiting potentates from Europe fired at bison from train windows and left the dead carcasses to rot on the prairie. It was brutal and immoral. It made no sense. It would have disgraced a Genghis Khan. And it made our American Indians into homeless refugees. They had cherished the buffalo and had killed only for need. They made the hides into tepees; they ate the meat; they stewed the bones; they burned the chips for fuel.

"The white man went on a slaughtering rampage, and the bison disappeared. The Indians starved and froze. Who was the savage and who the so-called civilized man in this grim situation?

"I do not want this kind of barbarism repeated in the America I know and love. Some people may scoff at my warnings that our ducks and geese could be jeopardized by the surrender of national wildlife refuges to oil and gas drilling. Yet this imperils the real purpose of the refuges, which is to offer sanctuary to the waterfowl winging along the Atlantic and Pacific flyways, between the Canadian Arctic and tropical climes. After all, our nation once was populated by countless millions of passenger pigeons. They were the most numerous bird on earth. A fearful slaughter commenced, for sport and for food. Today there is not another passenger pigeon left on the globe—the species has been wiped out, to the last bird.

"All of these things may help to explain my solicitude for wildlife and for all animals generally. When I think of helping animals, a stirring episode out of our historic past comes to my mind.

"Abraham Lincoln was studying requests for pardons for Federal prisoners. To each request was attached an impressive sheaf of letters from important personages, such as Congressmen, bankers, mayors and millionaires.

"Finally, the President came to a lone piece of paper. To this pardon was appended no recommendation from some individual of wealth or power.

"'Has this man no friends?' Lincoln asked his secretary.

"'Evidently not, sir,' the secretary replied.

"'Then I will be his friend,' said the President, reaching for his pen.

"I realize that animals, whether of the field or the forest, do not vote. They do not make campaign contributions to enrich the coffers of politicians running for office. But I will be their friend. I imagine He who spoke the Sermon on the Mount would want it that way, too."

The editor is in hearty agreement with the senator in his convictions on this matter. And he would like to add a few pertinent statements of his own:

The heritage which we enjoy is given us of God, but not that we might waste and deplete it. We are sinning against generations yet unborn when we rob them of that which we enjoy by our selfish wastefulness. We are sinning against them when we violate game and fish laws which are designed to preserve some of the pleasures and benefits which we derive for those who will come after us.

We are furthermore violating the humane principles of Christ and the laws of common decency when we, through cruelty and sadism, brutally mistreat domestic animals which God has given for our pleasure and profit. The Christian should not be guilty of such things.

Worldliness and Separation

Billy Graham

"Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him. For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life, is not of the Father, but is of the world. And the world passeth away, and the lust thereof: but he that doeth the will of God abideth for ever (1 John 2:15-17).

GOD calls us to be a separated people: "Come out from among them, and be ye separate" (2 Corinthians 6:17). We are a peculiar people—not, however, in the sense that we dress strangely or are eccentric. We are a chosen group. The moment you came to Christ you were adopted into the family of God. The old things you used to love you now hate. Things you used to hate you now love.

The world consists of:

Lust of the flesh—This means a strange urge to gratify your own desires, not only sensual desires, but all types of fleshly lusts.

Lust of the eye—This is a fierce passion to see and enjoy that which the flesh desires.

Vain glory—This means show, pomp, and is evident when you strut before your inferiors or class, when you show off or display a cocky attitude.

All of this is worldly.

Don't make a mistake, however, Don't become the victim of the unscriptural teaching of separation which has been referred to as legality in the guise of spirituality. This modern legality has placed its taboo on certain practices, while sometimes ignoring more harmful ones. We call a person separated if he does not attend certain places of amusement. This is one of Satan's lies and has become a great stumbling block to many young people.

What is worldliness actually?

A prominent writer described it very aptly: "It is the self-indulgent attitude of the heart and mind toward life." It is not merely doing certain forbidden things or going to certain proscribed places. Worldliness is what we are, not just what we do. It is in reality an inner attitude, for as a man "... thinketh in his heart, so it he: ..." (Proverbs 23:7). Any Christian whose interest is directed toward himself is worldly.

In Belfast, Ireland, a woman came to me one night and said, "Oh, Mr. Graham, I enjoyed your message, but I lost the blessing." I asked why. She said, "I think I detected lipstick on your wife's lips." I answered, "My wife doesn't usually wear lipstick, but that is a strange place to have your blessing. Your blessing is resting on lipstick instead of on the message of the Word of God."

This poor deluded woman had been taught that the slightest bit of make-up was an evidence that a person was worldly, while in her own heart she had come to a place of pharisaical and religious pride, which was far worse.

In many places young people have been debarred from Christian fellowship because they did not conform to certain standards set by a local group. I find that throughout the world there are differences in custom. For example, in some places in the South they consider a person worldly if he goes swimming with a mixed group.

You cannot set your standards by what others are doing! Do not use other people as a canon! Do not make your Christianity negative! When you become a Christian, you are a new creature in Christ Jesus. You no longer live to satisfy certain appetites and desires; rather, you love to obey and follow Christ. Christ demands more than adherence to some form or standard of life.

There are certain things we know to be right. There are other things we know to be wrong. It has always been right to tell the truth, to be honest and upright. It has always been wrong to steal, lie and murder. But in between there is a no man's land which puzzles us. There are certain habits, friendships, amusements, sports, purposes of plans which we are not certain would be pleasing to God. The Bible doesn't definitely say, "Thou shalt" or "Thou shalt not!" It is a perplexing problem!

Here are six questions you should always ask yourself as a test: Does it violate any particular part of Scripture? Does it take the keenness off my spirituality? Can I ask God's blessing on it? Will it be a stumbling block? Would I like to be doing that thing when Christ comes? Is it expedient?

Have you been indulging in worldliness? John says, "If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him."—American Tract Society.

How the Fine Was Paid

Once, when Mr. LaGuardia was mayor of New York City, he presided at a session of the police court. A trembling old man was brought before him, charged with stealing a loaf of bread. He said, "I did it because my family was hungry!" "Well, I've got to punish you," said Mr. LaGuardia. "The law makes no exception, and I can do nothing but sentence you to a fine of ten dollars." Then he, added, after reaching into his pocket, "Here's the ten dollars to pay your fine. And now I remit the fine!" Then, tossing the ten-dollar bill into his famous outsize hat, he said, "Furthermore, I'm going to fine everybody in this courtroom fifty cents, for living in a city where a man has to steal bread in order to eat. Mr. Bailiff, collect the fines, and give them to this defendant!" The hat was passed, and a joyous old man left the courtroom with forty-seven dollars and fifty cents!—Selected.

A Good Habit

"I have so fixed the habit in my own mind," said Stonewall Jackson, "that I never raise a glass of water to my lips without asking God's blessing. I never seal a letter without putting a word of prayer under the seal. I never take a letter from the post without a brief sending of my thoughts heavenward."—Selected.

Speaking of Others

When it was reported to the amiable Italian poet Tasso that a malicious enemy spoke ill of him to all men, he replied, "Let him persevere, his rancor gives me no pain. How much better is it that he should speak ill of me to all the world than that all the world should speak ill of me to him."—Selected

A Man of His Word

S. Paul Weaver

LEE BURTON was standing before Judge White and the judge was speaking. "This is the second time you have appeared before me. I could give you two years for your last offense, but I am not here to break men but to make them if that is possible. Lee, you are young and too promising a fellow to waste your life as a criminal. I shall have to pass sentence in this case, but on your promise to go straight when you get out I'll give you a light sentence. What is your answer?"

Lee glanced for a moment at the floor and then looking up into the eyes of the judge said in a voice that did not carry far but which was nevertheless firm and assuring, "I promise."

"That's fine!" said Judge White with a smile, and then added, "Three months, Lee, and I know you will keep your word."

Three months later, on a beautiful May morning, Lee Burton heard the prison gate close behind him. He was once more a free man. He walked toward the heart of the city and buying a paper studied the Help Wanted columns. He found several advertisements to his liking and set out at once to apply for the positions. But one by one proved fruitless and when night came he was still jobless.

Tired and hungry he entered a lunchroom and quickly ate a sandwich and drank a cup of coffee. That night he slept on a bench in a secluded part of the city park. Early the next morning he once more began the search for employment, always meeting with a negative answer. Fate seemed against him although he was willing to do anything from ditch digging to office work.

Thus for five days he combed the city in search of work and each night found him back in the park. The meager sum of money given to him at the prison was gone. Lee was beginning to feel desperate.

The evening of the fifth day he saw by the news bulletin in front of the city's leading newspaper office that a big convention was being held in the city and that one of America's great religious leaders was to address the convention in Music Hall that evening. A thought flashed through Lee's mind that made him hold his breath for a moment. He moved to the street curb his hands buried deep in his pockets. For five minutes he stood thus in deep thought and then, with quick and deliberate step, crossed the street and looking in the window of a jewelry store saw that it was seven o'clock. The meeting was at seven-thirty.

Twenty minutes later Lee reached the Music Hall. At the entrance he paused for a moment to look about him. He saw no one he knew. He had expected that. Then he stepped into the auditorium and took his place among those who were standing at the rear, as all seats were taken. He noticed here and there a bluecoat, and once it seemed to him that one of the officers was watching him quite closely. He began to feel uneasy and wished he were outside. Then the orchestra began to play and he felt more at ease and forgot the officer.

Soon the men who were to have part in the program filed upon the platform. Lee watched them as they took their seats. Suddenly he held his breath as he saw none other than Judge White coming upon the platform. He watched every move the judge made and for a moment it seemed as if he were back in the courtroom listening to the words of the judge, "Lee, you are young and too promising a fellow to waste your life as a criminal." Then a voice by his side seemed to say, "But what is a fellow to do when he has looked for work and cannot find any, and his money is all gone, and his stomach is crying for food?"

Cold beads of sweat stood out upon Lee's face and hands. Within a struggle was going on such as never took place on land or sea, or in the air. Lee was indifferent to all about him and it was only when the judge arose to introduce the speaker of the evening that Lee once more came to himself.

Lee remembered very little of the address, but one thing the speaker had said started him to thinking. "The world's great need," the speaker had said, "can only be met by the Man of Galilee, Jesus Christ, the world's only Saviour. He is the solution for all our problems whether they be individual, social, national, or international."

Lee's thoughts centered about those words as the meeting came to a close and he filed out into the night. One question continually came to his mind as a result of what the speaker had said, "Can Jesus Christ meet my need?" Lee knew very little about the Christ and many of the thoughts that flashed through his mind would have seemed strange to a Christian.

As Lee moved in the direction of the park and the seclusion of the park bench for the night, he passed a building from which came the sound of singing. Looking up he saw a sign which read, "HOPE MISSION—Come In." "Why not go in?" Lee said to himself, and moved toward the door.

There were possibly a hundred men in the Mission and they were singing as if they enjoyed it. Then when they had stopped singing a man arose and announced that if there were any men present who needed shelter for the night, or food, that they were to remain after the meeting. After the man had offered a short prayer for the men most of them began to leave the place. Lee, too, started for the door when the man who had made the announcement suddenly stood in front of him and taking him by the hand said, "Friend, better stay and have a cup of coffee." Before Lee could utter a word of protest he was being led into a small side room where with a dozen other men he was treated to hot soup, sandwiches and coffee. While they ate the man who had invited him to stay told them in a simple way about the One who could help them, and Lee was surprised that he was speaking of the same Man of whom the speaker in Music Hall had spoken, even Jesus Christ.

Twelve years later a great conference of Christian leaders was being held in Music Hall. It was the last evening of the conference. The chairman announced that because of the intimate association between Judge White and the speaker of the evening he had been asked to introduce the speaker.

In a few well-chosen words the judge spoke of the man who was to address that great gathering and concluded his introduction by saying, "I have now the great joy of introducing to you Lee R. Burton, our city's outstanding religious leader and mission worker."

For almost an hour Lee R. Burton held his audience of five thousand people spell-bound with his message in which he appealed to every man present to give himself whole-heartedly to the service of Jesus Christ. His final words were these: "Twelve years ago tonight a young man entered this building with the intention of picking the pockets of men attending a convention similar to this one. That young man was out of jail but five days. For as many days he had combed this city seeking employment without avail. He had no money. His stomach was crying for a good square meal. For four nights he had slept on a bench in the city park with only the starry heavens for his covering. He was tired. He was discouraged and disheartened. To him it seemed this was a cruel world and that his only hope was to pick the pockets of his more fortunate fellow men. But as he stood back there hesitating to act he saw Judge White step upon this platform and he remembered the promise he had made to the judge to go straight. Then he heard the speaker of the evening say that Jesus Christ was able to meet man's every need. That young man picked no pockets that night. Leaving this hall with a battle raging in his soul he was led by the providence of God to wander into the HOPE MISSION, where he fell at the feet of Jesus Christ, whom he accepted as his Saviour, and Lord, and Master. All that that man is tonight he is by the grace and help of God through Jesus Christ. Friends, I was that young man."

Seconds later Judge White stepped up to him and, with tears streaming down his cheeks, threw his arms around the speaker, and all he could say was, "God bless you, Lee; you've more than kept your promise."

What is a Miracle?

Naaman Borders, Waverly, Ohio

I WANT to relate a story of what happened in our own home. It was not something that took place in a far away country in the long, long ago, or what Grandma dreamed or what Brother Smith thought about it, but something that really happened in our own family and neighborhood very recently.

It is concerning our own daughter-in-law who resides in our neighborhood. She is now 32 years old and has two children, ages 11 and 13. She had been sick for about three years, gradually getting worse, and for three or four months she was not able to do her work. She lost weight and her appetite, and she could not sleep on her left side; so she had to be propped up in the bed with two or three pillows. She became pale and swarthy; her breath was short and she smothered. She finally had to be propped up in a chair. At last I said to my son, "You had better take her to a hospital or you are going to lose her."

She had been taking medicine from first one doctor and then another, but none of it did any good. So he took her to the hospital in Huntington, West Virginia, where she stayed a week. There she went through all kinds of examinations and was told that she would have to have a heart operation because the aorta was closing up. My son became alarmed and took her to his brother who is a doctor in southern Alabama, and a surgeon. My son there gave her another complete examination and said the same thing as the doctors at Huntington. Seven doctors told her the same thing. My son was told that since an operation on the heart was very serious, he'd better take her to the best in the country and that one of the best doctors was in Cleveland, Ohio.

My son and his wife took the train at Mobile and headed for Cleveland. My wife, the children and I also went along; but when we arrived in Cincinnati, our daughter-in-law had to be wheeled in a chair from one train to another, as she was not able to walk. My son put her in a roomette and went on to Cleveland while the rest of us headed back home.

The next day after we arrived home we looked down the road and saw them coming home. I asked them, "What in the world is the matter?" They explained that the hospital was so crowded that they had no room for her and told them to come back in four days. That night her condition became worse, so I told my family, "There must be something done at once or she will leave us. Let's every one of us take it to the Lord in prayer and pray earnestly, surrender our own lives, and vow to God to live for Him the rest of our lives."

My son had been converted years before but had backslidden. So we all prayed and my son vowed to begin tithing, a fact which meant $25 a month. In only a day or two our daughter-in-law said, "Folks, I believe I am healed." From that time on, the pains all left her, and she could sleep in the bed on either side. She was no more short of breath, her wheezing was all gone, and she began to gain in the flesh. She is now doing her work and looks well.

I wanted to write this story two or three months ago, but I wanted to wait and be sure that she was healed permanently. So I am writing this that others may have faith for their healing. We have a Great Physician who can heal all manner of diseases. Nothing is too hard for God to do. All things are possible for them that believe. People are becoming more and more of the opinion that God will hear and answer prayer in divine physical healing. Many of our best doctors will tell you the same

Chaplain Vacancies in Reserve Units of Grave Concern

A large number of chaplain vacancies exist in Army Reserve units in Third Army and constant efforts are being made to interest eligible clergymen to seek appointment as chaplains for these vacancies, according to Chaplain (Col.) John F. Gaertner, army chaplain.

Clergymen who have not reached their 33 birthday, who have 120 semester hours of undergraduate study and 90 hours of credit from a recognized theological school, are eligible to become a chaplain, provided they receive an ecclesiastical endorsement from their denominational agency.

Reserve chaplains assigned to a unit train with their unit at weekly drills and accompany the unit on a two-weeks summer training period. Reserve chaplains may also attend USAR schools, the chaplain school, Fort Slocum, New York, and take extension courses prepared at the chaplain school. Retirement credits are received for these periods of training.

Chaplain Gaertner has called on all chaplains to consider themselves recruitment agents and to present the case of the army chaplaincy to clergymen.

"We will be glad to receive the name of any clergymen who might be interested in a reserve commission in the chaplaincy."

Clergymen who have any questions regarding a commission in the chaplaincy are urged by him to correspond directly with the Army Chaplain, Headquarters Third Army, Fort McPherson, Georgia.

The Word of God

E. J. McKay, Dunn, North Carolina

There never was a time like this,
The time in which we live,
When atheists and communists
Intend to rule the world.

And they are working night and day
Against the Lord and Christ;
And they will have an emperor,
The Antichrist, or Beast.

It's well to know what's going on Beyond our home and town;
So let us read the daily news,
The Holy Scriptures, too.

This sinful generation needs
To read the Word of God,
The Spirit's sword and instrument,
Used in converting souls.

thing. So my dear friends, let's look up and believe that God is still alive and will hear the humblest prayer.

St. Louis Church Organizes Youth Fellowship

On Thursday night, August 30, a large group of young people assembled at the South Side Free Will Baptist Church, St. Louis, Missouri, and organized a youth fellowship.

The meeting opened with singing and prayer. Mrs. Avery DeWitt, youth chairman of the Southeastern Missouri Auxiliary Convention, made a very interesting talk on the importance of keeping the youth busy in the work of advancing our Lord's Kingdom by personal witnessing, visitation and assisting in the ministry of the church. Mrs. DeWitt also emphasized the necessity of the young people living fully surrendered and dedicated lives to the cause of our Lord.

The Rev. W. A. Hales, pastor of the church, was elected temporary chairman and Miss Sharon Kellerman as temporary recording secretary. The following persons were elected to offices and committees: president, Bob Denman; vice-president, Norma Hales; secretary-treasurer, Sharon Kellerman; assistant secretary, Pat Phillips; choir director, Finis Barr; assistant choir director, Marilyn Barr; pianist, Ned Templeton; sponsors, Mr. and Mrs. Chesley Hill, program chairman, Wilma Barr; assistant program chairman, Mac Long.

The group voted to hold their meetings on Tuesday night of each week. They voted also to adopt the name "Christ's Ambassadors." Among some of the things the group discussed doing was that of visiting in hospitals, convalescent homes and other institutions to hold services and distribute tracts. They also plan to publish a weekly paper and sponsor other activities which will win souls to the Lord and promote interest in church work.

Miss Sharon Kellerman, secretary, says: "South Side Church has a fine group of young people and it is believed that with such an organization, its progress will be much more rapid than in the past. We solicit the prayers of Christians everywhere that as 'Christ's Ambassadors' we may be found faithful at all times and in all things."

Questions and Answers ON THE BIBLE

Conducted by J. F. BARROW

3824 Richland Avenue, Nashville 5, Tennessee

Question: Please explain "Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also; and greater works than these shall he do; because I go unto my Father" (John 14:12). In what way can we do greater works than Jesus did? Can we exceed what He did as He raised Lazarus from the dead, calmed the Sea of Galilee, or cast seven demons out of Mary Magdalene, etc.?—F. J.

Answer: The Greek expression from whence this expression, greater than these, is translated, could and probably does here mean greater in quantity, scope or number. I doubt that in the light of the context we should make it mean greater in quality or strength, etc.

A. T. Robertson in his Word Pictures, Volume 5, Page 251, says, "Shall he do also . . . Emphatic pronoun ekinos, 'that one also.' Greater works than these . . . Comparative adjective neuter plural from megas with ablative case touton. Not necessarily greater miracles and not greater spiritual works in quality, but greater in quantity. Cf. Peter at Pentecost and Paul's mission tours. 'Because I go' . . . Reason for this expansion made possible by the Holy Spirit as Paraclete (16:7)."

These words, of course, were first of all spoken to Jesus' immediate followers, the twelve apostles who had been ordained for a special work at a specific time. These were the persons to whom Jesus said this and were given first consideration. They were the same persons whom He had commissioned in the beginning of His public ministry. "And when it was day, he called unto him his disciples: and of them he chose twelve, whom also he named apostles" (Luke 6:13). See Matthew 10:1-15. "But now hath God set the members every one of them in the body, as it hath pleased him. . . . And God hath set some in the church, first apostles, secondarily prophets, thirdly teachers, after that miracles, then gifts of healings, helps, governments, diversities of tongues. Are all apostles? are all prophets? are all teachers? are all workers of miracles? Have all the gifts of healing? do all speak with tongues? do all interpret? But covet earnestly the best gifts: and yet shew I unto you a more excellent way" (1 Corinthians 12:18, 28-31). These apostles had commissioned to them a unique sphere of ministry and were given special gifts peculiar to themselves alone by which to fulfill the assignment. This being true, the passage is to be viewed in a different light from what some see it.

Arthur W. Pink makes the following interesting comment in his Exposition of the Gospel of John, Volume 2, Pages 364, 365:

"'Because I go unto my Father' (14:12). It is important to note how that in this 'because' the Lord Jesus has Himself given us a partial explanation here of how His promise would be made good, though it is largely lost by placing a full stop at the end of 14:12. If we read straight on through 14:13 the Saviour's explanation is the more apparent: 'Greater things than these shall he do, because I go unto my Father, And whatsoever ye shall ask in my name, that will I do.' Christ would henceforth give to their prayers power from on high, so that what they did, He would do in and through them. Thus, in His 'seed' was the pleasure of the Lord to prosper (Isaiah 53:10). If the full stop be insisted on and its force rigidly pressed, 14:12 would then teach that the disciples must now continue to work in the place of their Lord the still greater things, because He Himself was no longer there. But this is obviously wrong. He left them, it is true; but He also returned to indwell them (14:18), and in this way came the harvest of His own seed-sowing. 'And herein is that saying true, One soweth, and another reapeth. I sent you to reap that whereon ye bestowed no labour' (4:37, 38). Link 14:13 and 14:12 and all is plain and simple: thus connected we are taught that the greater things done by the apostles were, in reality, done by Christ Himself! As Mark 16:20 tells us, 'And they went forth, and preached everywhere, the Lord worketh with them.' But what He did was in answer to their believing prayers!"

There is also the fact that Jesus promised His disciples another Comforter who would teach them all things and would lead them into all truth. This Comforter, the Holy Spirit, came on the day of Pentecost as a companion to be with the Church as a whole and also to dwell in the heart of each individual member of the Church forever. He did not only manifest Himself upon the followers of Christ at Pentecost, but also at Cornelius' house, and also upon the disciples that had been baptized by John, and on from there. He has made and will continue to make Himself known in and through obedient followers of Christ until Christ sets up His Kingdom upon the earth. Then He will still operate in and through the Christians.

F. L. Godet, Commentary on the Gospel of John, Volume 2, Page 276, has the following to say:

"Verse 12 forms the transition to this new promise. Jesus begins by setting forth the effect (the works which they will do) in order to go back to the cause (His power acting in them). The expression: shall do the works which I do, refers to miracles similar to those of Jesus, which were wrought by the apostles, and the following expression: he shall do even greater things, refers, not to more extraordinary outward works—the greatness of miracles is not thus measured (Weiss)—but to works of a superior nature even to corporeal healings. What Saint Peter did at Pentecost, and Saint Paul did throughout the world,—what a simple preacher, a simple believer effects in causing the Spirit to descend into a heart, Jesus could not do during His sojourn on earth. For, in order that such things should be realized, it was necessary 'that the wall of separation between God and men should have been destroyed and the Holy Spirit have been given to mankind' (Gess); in other words, that, as the end of the verse says, the glorification of Jesus should have been accomplished: 'because I go to the Father.' The branch, united to the vine, can bear fruits which the vine itself cannot bear. Greater does not, therefore, mean here: more stupendous, but more excellent; and this term does not refer merely to the extension of the apostolic ministry beyond the limits of the theocracy, as Lucke, Tholuck, Olshausen, de Wette understand it—this difference is here only secondary—but to the nature of the works accomplished.

"This superiority of spiritual productivity promised to the disciples will be founded upon the exaltation of Christ's own position: 'Because I go to the Father.'"

M. R. Vincent in Word Studies in the New Testament, Volume 2, Page 242, has the following to say:

"Greater works. Not more remarkable miracles, but referring to the wider work of the apostolic ministry under the dispensation of the Spirit."

This last quotation agrees with what I have said in the outset.

The Lighted Pathway

Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path
(PSALM 119:105).

SWANNANOVA, N. C.

Text—read again 1 Samuel 3:13.

In looking upon our little ones we often think of their temporal wants. We bring all our resources under contribution to advance their earthly interests. We anxiously provide every means by which they may be able to enjoy the advantages of education and maintain social standing. We are eager for them to have a fair start in life and to get on well in the world. And all this is right. But we forget too often that within these little forms is enshrined an immortal spark that shall burn with increasing brightness through the ever revolving cycles of time. They shall live after the stars have faded from heaven and the sun has ceased to shine.

If you neglect your child and fail to do your duty towards it, so that it is lost at last through your disregard of its claims upon you, you initiate a line of suffering that will stretch through the unending ages, broadening as it goes. And that neglected child may have a numerous posterity which will follow in the same track, so that the ever widening and ever progressive streams of woe will be multiplied indefinitely, all starting from you as the source.

Children are born in a condition of perfect helplessness and ignorance and entire dependence. Parents are their natural and rightful protectors and governors. God planned it so. Being responsible for their existence they are bound to support, instruct and direct them. Besides, parental obligation is not only based on natural relationship, but on the express ordinance of God. The family is a divine institution, and God has constituted the parents the sole guardians and governors of their children. Yea, He has invested them with absolute power over them for one fourth of their whole lives, supposing that they live to the age of three score and ten.

There is no escape from the responsibility arising from the authority with which God has invested parents. To try to escape it brings only suffering and sorrow and shame to both parents and children. They must give attention not only to their physical and mental, but also to their moral and spiritual training.

God has constituted parents spiritual guardians, and they are bound by Him to teach their children right views of life—the great end of life. They are bound by God to impart to them the truth concerning God and the future world.

There are some who maintain that parents ought not to instill religious truths and doctrines into their children's minds, but should wait until they become old enough to judge for themselves, that they ought to leave their minds unbiased. The easy answer to this lies in the fact that while they are waiting for this maturity of judgment, the devil is at work sowing the seeds of evil in the souls and plying his secret, ruthless task of preparation for destruction.

It is said that one of the good kings (Jehoshaphat), that he “. . . sought to the LORD God of his father, and walked in his commandments, and not after the doings of Israel” (2 Chronicles 17:4).

Paul speaks of Timothy's faith as a thing naturally to be excepted. It existed in his grandmother and then in his mother, and on these grounds the apostle was persuaded that it was Timothy's possession (2 Timothy 1:5). Not that he actually inherited it, but received it through the relationships of a godly parent and grandparent who brought him to believe in and accept the Lord Jesus Christ as his personal Saviour.

Do not these and the many other examples found in the Bible confirm the words of Solomon in Proverbs 22:6? “Train up a child in the way he should go: and when he is old, he will not depart from it.”

1. Abraham, the Father of the Faithful (Hebrews 11:8).
Through his obedience we have come to know him (Genesis 12:4; 22:15-18).
2. Moses, the Great Deliverer of Israel (Hebrews 11:24).
When obedient, success; disobedient, failure (2 Chronicles 13:18; Hebrews 11:27, 28).
3. Joshua, the Mighty Conqueror of Canaan (Joshua 24:24).
His success because of obedience. Israel (Joshua 1:8; Judges 1:19, 21, 27, 29-31, 33).

5. Philip, the Jerusalem Deacon (Acts 8:26, 27).
The man who stirred the whole coast country (Jonah 3:2; Acts 26:19).
6. Paul, the Great Apostle to the Gentiles (Acts 26:19).
Obedient to Him whom he served (Philippians 3:6, 7; Romans 1:14-17).
7. The Early Christians Who Laid the Foundation (1 Peter 1:22).
They obeyed the Truth as given them in the Gospel (John 8:32; Romans 10:9, 10).

Wherever there is likely to be great success, the open door and the opposing adversaries will both be found. If there are no adversaries you may fear there will be no success. A boy cannot get his kite up without wind, a wind which drives against his kite. Opposing work, although in itself evil, is wonderously overruled by God for the best purposes, since persecution often arouses natural sympathy, and this becomes a ladder by which love climbs up into the heart.—C. H. Spurgeon.

WAITING UPON THE LORD

"But they that wait upon the LORD shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run, and not be weary; and they shall walk, and not faint" (Isaiah 40:31).

It is an evident fact that this Scripture refers to the spiritual man in the truest sense. However, there may be instances when the true child of God can and will seek the Lord and wait on the Lord for physical strength to perform a task that is beyond the natural strength of man. Examples of such manifestation are found in the life of David when God gave him physical power over a bear, a lion and the uncircumcised Philistines.

David's Victory Over Goliath

"And David said to Saul, Let no man's heart fail because of him; thy servant will go and fight with this Philistine. And Saul said to David, Thou art not able to go against this Philistine to fight with him: for thou art but a youth, and he a man of war from his youth. And David said unto Saul, Thy servant kept his father's sheep, and there came a lion, and a bear, and took a lamb out of the flock: And I went out after him, and smote him, and delivered it out of his mouth: and when he arose against me, I caught him by his beard, and smote him, and slew him. Thy servant slew both the lion and the bear: and this uncircumcised Philistine shall be as one of them, seeing he hath defied the armies of the living God" (1 Samuel 17:32-36).

Someone may say, "Preacher, do you believe that story?" Yes, I believe it because it is written in the Bible. The all-powerful God was in the transaction. God gave David this power, but David was a man after God's own heart. God was equal to the occasion. But if you read the whole story concerning the death of Goliath, you will see that David performed the work according to God's plan and not according to Saul's. David could not wear Saul's armor. He had to use something more simple. Just a sling and a little stone did the job in the hands of God as David performed the task. The mighty arm of God was back of the arm of David. There are many instances that have given us the manifestation of God's power through the yielding of man to God's power and waiting on the Lord.

They that wait on the LORD shall renew their strength is primarily for the inward man or the spiritual man. Paul said, "... though our outward man perish, yet the inward man is renewed day by day" (2 Corinthians 4:16). So the man who leaves his all in the hands of God is made stronger as the days come and go. We talk a great deal about revivals. A renewing of spiritual strength to the true believer is the result of waiting upon the Lord. This waiting means fully trusting the Lord.

Having reached the Red Sea, Moses said, "... stand still, and see the salvation of the LORD, ..." (Exodus 14:13). Then God spoke and said, "... go forward" (Exodus 14:15). So Moses stood still until God spoke. When He spoke, Moses moved forward with obedience to His command by stretching forth his rod, the rod God had touched with power, and the sea opened permitting the children of Israel to go over safely.

Who will deny that this act of God's grace strengthened the faith of Moses and renewed his strength for the wilderness experience? So it is plain to our mind that God often renews our strength by letting us see some manifestation of His grace, even in natural things.

Recently a doctor who had performed an operation on a friend of mine acknowledged that the man's recovery was due to the power of God. The act of God strengthened the faith of the writer. This instance is only one of hundreds that your servant has seen. We not only must believe that God will do exactly what He says He will do, but we must wait on the Lord—not run before Him, but just wait with the expectancy that God will perform the job as we yield our all unto Him.

They shall mount up on wings as eagles. The eagle is the king of birds; he can soar higher and last longer than other. The story is told that one day when a great storm was raging little birds of all species were flying for refuge, seeking shelter. A man spied a great eagle perched on a high mountain peak. Fearlessly he sat as the storm approached. Finally he stretched forth his wings and began to fly higher and higher. With his powerful telescope, the observer watched the eagle soar higher until he was well above the storm and appeared as only a speck. Having reached such height, the eagle pursued his course away from the storm. With the mighty power of his wings the eagle could soar beyond the storms. As we wait on the Lord, we, too, can soar above the storms of opposition and the power of sinful men who are backed by the power of Satan. We can go so high on the wings of faith that all darkness will disappear and we will be in the sunlight of God's marvelous grace.

They shall run, and not be weary. I cannot run very fast or very long. There was a time when I could, but my physical running is a thing of the past. However, I am still running; and what physical strength I have is amazing. But my faith in God and His Son, the Lord Jesus Christ, keeps me from being weary. Paul said, "... let us not be weary in well doing: ..." (Galatians 6:9). We are going to reap in God's good time; for the remainder of Verse 9 says, "... for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not." Every now and then we sing, "Every day with Jesus is sweeter than the day before." Thank God for the privilege to wait and know that God is mindful of our need for spiritual strength.

They shall walk, and not faint. Walking is the sign of age. Sometimes I notice some old person walking very slowly. I find that by walking slowly we do not tire so easily. This is a promise to the man who waits on the Lord that there will be no fainting. However, I find that people who did not put all their trust in the Lord and wait on the Lord, have fainted and fallen by the wayside. They have given up; they have thrown up their hands and have fainted.

A person who has fainted is in a helpless position. He falls over, rolls his eyes, trembles, seems to be lifeless and has to be taken care of by someone. Such a case is pitiful. It always hurts me to see a person faint physically, but when I see a man keel over under the powers of spiritual darkness, my heart almost breaks. Sometimes I even dream about such a person. I want to fan him and wash his spiritual face so that he may be revived. But only God can revive such a person. Let us remember that if we will wait on the Lord we will never faint. We will never become unfruitful and inactive. We will work until the end. Just wait on the Lord and keep on going.

Introspection

To get his goodnight kiss he stood
Beside my chair one night
And raised his eager face to me,
A face with love alight.

And as I gathered in my arms
The son God gave to me,
I thanked the lad for being good,
And hoped he'd always be.

His little arms crept 'round my neck,
And then I heard him say
Four simple words I shan't forget,
Four words that made me pray.

They turned a mirror on my soul,
On secrets no one knew.
They startled me, I hear them yet;
He said, "I'll be like you."

STORIES

FOR OUR

BOYS and GIRLS

Puppies and Peers

HI, Carl! Wait a minute, can'tcha?" Carl Slocum slowed down as Bob Smith caught up with him. "Want a job for Saturday? A few of us can get jobs picking winter pears at Parson's. Like to go along?"

Would he? Carl just beamed as he answered, "Sure." It was so nice to be included. Carl was new in Marlowe and he was hoping some of the boys would get acquainted and invite him to go to Sunday school with them Sunday. He hated to go to a strange one alone. They surely would on Saturday. He could ask them if they didn't but that was like inviting himself and he hated to do that. Maybe he should ask Bob now, but Bob was busy telling him how much one could make picking pears and Carl decided to wait until Saturday.

On the way to the orchard Saturday morning Bob was so friendly. He even shared his bike with Carl. "Let's stick together and try for the same tree," he said. "We'll try for one near the fence. I always do. I'll show you why when we get there."

They got the tree of their choice and were soon filling their baskets with the big firm pears. They were warned to handle the fruit carefully and not bruise any. Bruised fruit does not keep well and this fruit should be kept for months as to be shipped long distances. They were almost through with their first tree when Bob unfolded his plan.

"We could use a few of these pears ourselves, couldn't we? You just ought to taste them about Christmas time, they get so sweet. I know. I got a tree next to the fence like this one last year and I slipped a dozen big ones through and hid them in the grass and came back in the evening and picked them up. It was dead easy. I just remembered what tree I had worked on. I mean to get more this time. They never miss them and no one knows, so here goes," and Bob tossed four pears over quickly where they fell in the tall grass.

"But that's stealing," Carl gasped. "Don't you know it's wrong to steal? Doesn't your Sunday school teach you that?"

"Sunday school? So that's the kind of a guy you are? A Sunday school sissy. Glad you told me," Bob laughed loudly.

Carl's temper flared up. He clenched his fists tight and raised his arm. No one had ever called him a sissy before. He wouldn't stand for it. He would show Bob who he was talking to, but then he remembered he was a Christian now and Christians don't fight. He slowly lowered his arm as he remembered. Maybe he wasn't a very good Christian but he had asked Jesus to come into his heart and he would live for Him. He meant it too.

Bob watched him amused. "Don't you like pears, Carl?" he asked.

"Sure I like pears, but I wouldn't steal them. I'm a Christian and I go to Sunday school but I'm no sissy. I wish you'd go, too, Bob and then you would see how wrong this is."

"Sez you." Bob laughed and tossed over another bunch of pears.

The boys hadn't noticed the puppy that was playing around among the trees. When he saw the first pears thrown he ran to investigate as puppies do when one throws a stick and tells them to go and get it. He had just found the first pears when the second ones landed on his back. He yelped so loudly that the pickers ran to see what had happened. Could a hidden rattler have gotten the pup, rather late in the season for rattlers though. Mr. Parsons was among the number and it was he who found the pears. He turned to Bob and Carl for an explanation.

"Oh," Bob began laughing, "Carl here was showing me what a good pitcher he is. He wants to join our ball club. I guess he didn't see the pup."

Carl couldn't believe his ears. So this was the kind of a friend Bob had turned out to be, lying as well as stealing. Carl felt sick.

"Why did you throw such good pears," Mr. Parsons turned to Carl. "Don't you know they're worth money. Maybe you were trying to just steal a few."

Carl looked him in the face, "I don't steal Mr. Parsons, and besides I didn't throw those pears. I'm a Christian."

"Oh, listen to him, would you," Bob raised his hands in mock dismay and looked at Mr. Parsons.

"Who threw them then?" Mr. Parsons was still watching Carl.

Carl turned to Bob for the answer, but Bob was too busy trying to get Mr. Parsons' attention. "You see, Mr. Parsons," he was saying, "Carl is a new guy here and I didn't know a thing about him. I thought he would be a good picker so I brought him. I'm sorry."

"You may go," Mr. Parsons told Carl. "Call for your money tonight."

Carl was simply sick when he got home and told his mother. "The boys around here will all think I'm a thief and a liar. They won't want me in their Sunday school."

"I don't imagine many of them go if they are friends of Bob. You don't find Christian boys chumming with his kind."

"Like I did. I wish I would have found out before I went just what kind of a boy Bob was. I thought they all went to Sunday school because I always did. When Bob called me a sissy, I wanted to fight him but I remembered that Christians don't fight either. I guess it is just as wrong to fight as to steal."

"The Bible tells us that all good things work together for good to them that love God, so you can expect good to come from this. You were tempted twice to do wrong simply because you were in wrong company. God wants you to pick good boys to chum with. He showed you by letting you get into trouble."

"Well, I wish I'd never heard of Parsons and his pears," Carl threw himself down on the davenport and thought of it all. Why couldn't he have let the boys know right at first he was a Christian and then this would never have happened. He would remember next time. How he hated to go back for his money. He was tempted to just let it go but his mother urged him to go. "Show them you've nothing to be ashamed of. It is guilt that makes us afraid."

Mr. Parsons met him in the driveway. "I'm sorry for this morning," he said as he paid Carl. "I felt at the time I was a bit hasty and so I decided to watch Bob. I caught him hiding a good peck of my best pears under some bushes that grew close to the fence. He owned that he had put it over you. I can't tell you how sorry I am. I cleared you with the boys but I didn't need to for they know what Bob is."

Carl was so relieved he could hardly keep the tears back.

"You said you were a Christian," Mr. Parsons continued. "I'm glad to hear it. My boy is a Christian, too, and we would like to have you go to Sunday school with us tomorrow. Would you like to have us stop?"

"Thank you, Mr. Parsons," Carl was so glad. "I've been hoping so to go with someone, that was the reason I was so glad to come this morning with the boys. I thought they would invite me to go with them tomorrow."

"Not to Sunday school. That bunch doesn't go to Sunday school. Neither do their parents. They do not realize what they are missing."

When Mr. Parson called next morning he brought in a half bushel of pears. "Lay them in a cool place and by Christmas they will be fine for eating," he told Carl's mother.

Carl gave his mother an understanding look. He knew they were both thinking of how God was working out good for them, as the Bible said He would, and those pears were a sure sign. They had far more than Bob had attempted to steal and theirs were obtained honestly. What would Bob say if he knew. Carl decided to tell him if he ever got a chance and prove to him that it pays to go to Sunday school and follow the Bible's teaching.—My Pleasure.

Counseling Young Men Regarding the Army Reserve

Clergymen are frequently called upon to give advice and counseling to young men in regard to participation in the military reserve training program.

Since a military obligation has been placed by Congress under the provisions of the Armed Forces Act of 1955 upon all able bodied young Americans to participate in the reserve training program and since various types of participation are offered, it is quite natural that young people are looking for authoritative information and advice in planning their own affairs.

An article of some help in this connection entitled "An Army Colonel Advises His Sons on the Draft," which appeared in U. S. News and World Report, April 27, 1956, is recommended.

The army chaplain would be happy to furnish any additional information to clergymen if desired.

DEDICATED LIVES

Mrs. L. E. Ballard

DURING the month of April it was my glorious privilege to visit our mission work on the island of Cuba, and to attend our tenth annual Cuban Free Will Baptist Convention. The experience was the fulfillment of years of dreaming. The things my eyes beheld, my ears heard, and my heart felt can never be expressed by mere words. The best way I know to give a brief statement of my impressions is to say that our senior missionaries, Rev. and Mrs. T. H. Willey Sr., have laid a solid foundation of sacrificial service and love until every phase of our work in Cuba is saturated with the spirit of the Living Christ. Truly, these noble soldiers of the Cross can say with Paul, "For to me to live is Christ." Long years ago they died to personal ambitions and have so dedicated themselves to His service until their whole lives are centered around the ambition to make Christ known in Cuba and to all of Central and South America. But they do not call all this sacrifice, but only joy.

This same spirit is shown also in the lives of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Phenicie, who delight to work hand and heart with the Willeys that Christ may be exalted in their adopted land. Their selflessness is shown in this testimony, "We love our work, for we feel that we are in the will of God." Dear Lucy Wischart's life too is as radiant as the flower blooming in the desert, for she has been able to lose herself in love for Christ and Cuba. She has been able to lift needy hearts and lives to Christ. She is especially a real blessing to the Cuban students as she works with them.

Someone has said that there is romance on the mission field. I agree, but it is a romance between the Lord's servants and Himself, for only those who are completely in love with Him and dedicated to His will could accept and love the hardships of the life of a missionary. The outstanding thing that I observed in our work in Cuba was that not only are our missionaries dedicated to God but all our Cuban Christians seem just as dedicated to fulfill the Great Commission, despite hardships, trials and adversaries.

I wish all our people in America were as eager to attend worship and learn of Christ and His way as are these lovely Cuban Christians. They walk through heat and dust, often eating only a very small amount of beans and rice, to have Christian fellowship.

The unselfishness among these people truly revealed that they have met Jesus.

One of the highlights of my trip was to meet and embrace Maximina—the widow who sent her wedding band by Brother Willey to our National Association in California, in 1950. The story Brother Willey told of her great love for Christ, shown by her willingness to part with her wedding ring—a symbol of her all—so stirred my heart that day in California until, even though I had no money, I begged Brother Willey to let me bring the ring to North Carolina and ask our people to redeem it for Maximina. The Lord blessed the telling of the story in North Carolina and Virginia, and between three and four hundred dollars was raised to redeem the ring, and help build our church in Cuba. I had the joy of returning the ring to the dear one who was so willing to give it to Christ, and she was wearing it when I met her in April. We could not talk to each other except through an interpreter, but we understood the universal language of a common love as we wept together in the joy of Christ. Then with tears overflowing from her eyes, she lifted her hand toward heaven and said that we would be able to talk and rejoice together in His presence some day. Maximina is our Bible woman in Havana, where she works with the sick people in the hospital. She asked me to ask you to pray that God would give others to labor with her in this great mission, and this is what we should pray about all of the Cuban and mission work. Surely God lives and works in Cuba through these people who are making sacrifices you and I know nothing about. Going to Cuba has caused me to resolve that any little place God may give me to work in here in our homeland will be so wonderful that I cannot complain, for the hardest place here is easier than the easiest place on the mission field.

Pray often, for prayer is a shield for the soul, a sacrifice to God, and a scourge for Satan.

Prayer is as the pitcher that fetcheth water from the brook, therewith to water the herbs. Break the pitcher, and it will fetch no water; and for want of water the garden withers.—John Bunyan.

A Vision of the Church Victorious

(Lesson for September 23)

Lesson: Revelation 7:9-17.

Golden Text: Revelation 11:5.

I. THE INTRODUCTION

We have before us today a lesson which is encouraging. It is laden with hope that is beautiful and sweet. It carries us to a yet future age when God's people will be entirely free from all hindrances, all handicaps, all weights and all sorrow. We are unable to grasp a positive description of heaven and future glories, because we do not know enough about them; but if we were in possession of a clear and complete description, no one could relate it or understand it. Our concepts and ideas of heaven must be expressed in negative forms because this is the only way that they can be understood. For this reason we are told that God will wipe away all tears. This we can appreciate, but the blissful joys that will take the vacancies created by a total removing of them cannot be expressed in words. We can get an idea of heaven as a place void of death, but who can grasp the fullness of life that reign there? A state in which we will not hunger for natural or spiritual food conveys to our feeble minds an idea that is wonderful, but how would one explain complete and perpetual satisfaction in these areas? A clime void of darkness and unpleasant climatic conditions might deepen our appreciation and understanding of God's realm; but how would you tell us about the perfect brilliancy of its light? or how could you describe its climate?—The Advanced Quarterly (F. W. B.).

II. HELPFUL HINTS

1. The saved of all ages, when assembled in heaven, will make a host too vast for the angels to count (Vs. 9).
2. When all the redeemed stand around God's throne, they will raise a mighty anthem unto Him and the Lamb (Vs. 10).
3. The angels, also, who stand around the glorious throne, will lift their voices in a glorious amen! (Vv. 11, 12).
4. It is only in the blood of the Lord Jesus Christ that robes stained with sin can be washed white as snow (Vv. 13, 14).

5. Only those who are clothed in the righteousness of Christ will ever be permitted to serve before God's throne (Vs. 15).—The Bible Teacher (F. W. B.).

III. ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

1. This is probably the most familiar passage in the book of Revelation. While we do hear the Hallelujah Chorus at Christmas time and on rare occasions, it really is only a line out of the nineteenth chapter of Revelation. And while we do hear pastors quote the Golden Text for today's lesson frequently, it is only one verse out of the eleventh chapter. This paragraph from the seventh chapter is really used often at memorial services: next to the twenty-third Psalm and the first paragraph of the fourteenth chapter of John, ministers are very fond of these words. And they are words of hope; they are words which tell about folks who are in the very presence of God and who are enjoying divine care.

2. Among the most beautiful items in this vision of the martyrs is the description of how God cares for them. While they were on earth, they suffered from devilish persecution. They were homeless and hungry. In the Glory Land, they will enjoy the shelter of God and the care of the Great Shepherd, who will lead them to the fountains of Living Water. Some of them were hurt by the heat of the sun; there will be no danger like that in the City where there is no night and where the Lamb is the Light (Revelation 21:23). Some of them and probably most of them shed many a tear: here we have "God wiping away all tears from their eyes." The same idea is found in Verse 4, "There shall be no more . . . sorrow, nor crying."—The Bible Illustrator.

3. "They washed their robes" is the counterpart of 1:5 in which Jesus is said to have done the washing. Both ideas are important. Christ provides the atonement basis of purifying the heart and conscience. We, by faith, appropriate the provision. This is not merely imputation of Christ's righteousness. Says Clarke, "Their white robes cannot mean the righteousness of Christ for this cannot be washed and made white in His own blood. This white linen is said to be the righteousness in which they stand before the throne; therefore it is not Christ's righteousness, but it is righteousness wrought in them by the merit of His blood, and the power of His Spirit."—Selected.

4. The host of angels that surround the throne of God are not overlooked by John in this vision. We must remember the angels are a higher order of creation than man. They are the messengers of God from heaven to earth. Before the creation of man they had already had their struggle, having lost a part of their number through the deception of Satan before the world began. There, in the vision, are the victorious angels who chose loyalty to God and also have won the victory in Him. They, too, are beyond the reach of the arms of Satan.

The angels have seen the struggles of the saints with the forces of evil in the world. They have been in constant surveillance of the struggling Christians, though unseen by them, and have ministered the strength and blessings of God to sustain the dependent and humble children of God. They have seen the schemes of Satan to destroy the faith of these Christians, and have seen the Christians resist the devil in the power of the Lord.—The Bible Student (F. W. B.).

5. An old lady dearly loved her Lord. She had the habit of saying, "Praise the Lord!" Often, when the minister was preaching, she would say, "Praise the Lord!" The minister was sometimes disturbed when the old lady said, "Praise the Lord!" He would forget what he was saying. He offered her a pair of blankets if she would keep still. She was poor and needed the blankets, so she did her best to earn them. Sunday after Sunday, she was as quiet as a mouse. Then, one day, a visiting minister came to preach. He preached on forgiveness of sin, and all the blessings that come with it. As he preached, the old lady thought less and less of the blankets, and more and more of the joys of salvation! Her cup of joy finally ran over. Leaping to her feet, she exclaimed, "Blankets or no blankets, praise the Lord!"—Selected.

6. When Polycarp was brought into the stadium in Smyrna, many efforts were made to induce him to deny Christ, but to no avail. When the proconsul urged him, saying, "Swear, and I will set you at liberty; reproach Christ," Polycarp replied, "Eighty and six years have I served him, and he has done me nothing but good; how then can I blaspheme my King and my Saviour?"

After being repeatedly threatened to no avail, the great crowd in the stadium cried out that he should be burned alive. The record says, "The multitudes immediately gathered together wood and faggots out of the shops and baths, the Jews especially, according to custom, eagerly assisted them in it." With noble fortitude Polycarp endured the flames, and after his body was consumed his Christian friends "took up his bones, as being more precious than the most exquisite jewels," and deposited them in a fitting place.—Selected.

Rev. James F. Miller Heads Improvement Program

Rev. James F. Miller, chairman of the Board of Trustees of Free Will Baptist Bible College, Nashville, Tennessee, has been elected to head the improvement program for the college which was authorized by the National Association at Huntington, West Virginia, in July.

Brother Miller will continue his duties as pastor of the First Free Will Baptist Church in Kinston, North Carolina, until October 1. At this time he will give full time to the promotion of the improvement program and will have headquarters at Free Will Baptist Bible College in Nashville, Tennessee.

The executive committee of the Board of Trustees met recently with the president of the Bible College and approved plans for launching the improvement program. It is hoped by the executive committee that at least $50,000 of the proposed $200,000 can be on hand by early spring to begin the first unit of work.

Brother Miller is to devote his time to contacting the pastors and interested friends of the Bible College in the interest of a greater Free Will Baptist Bible College. Brother Miller is widely known throughout the denomination and highly respected by everyone who knows him.

Mr. Miller has been with the National Association since its organization. He has served as moderator, chairman of the general board, and has served in other capacities. He has been a member of the Board of Trustees of the Free Will Baptist Bible College for 12 years and was elected to another six-year term at the July meeting of the association. Mr. Miller will bring to his new task a wealth of experience.

A Christian College for Men and Women

"... I have set before thee an open door, ... " (Revelation 3:8).

Mount Olive Junior College, Mount Olive, North Carolina, a Christian college for men and women, is owned and operated by the North Carolina State Convention of Free Will Baptists for the purpose of offering higher education in a Christian institution in as many walks of life as possible for our young men and women.

Since opening as a junior college in Mount Olive in the fall of 1954, the college has enjoyed steady and substantial growth in every area. Last spring a financial campaign was launched among local citizens and in Free Will Baptist churches in North Carolina. To date, more than $200,000 has been raised in cash and pledges to be paid during the next five years. Our goal is to raise one million dollars by the end of 1961.

One million dollars sounds like an impossible goal, but when broken down it is reasonable. To reach our goal we need to raise $200,000 per year. We are confident that if Free Will Baptists will give an average of $2.00 per member per year, outside gifts and student fees will be sufficient to give us a total of $200,000 per year.

With faith in God and confidence in our friends, we plan in October to purchase fifty acres of land near our present campus for the purpose of building a college plant over the next few years adequate to accommodate an enrollment of five hundred boarding students.

"The future belongs to those who prepare for it."

The following is the plan of campaign in Free Will Baptist churches:

1. To have one person in each church who will work in his church for the college.
2. To obtain pledges over a five-year period. (We want the pledges signed in good faith, but they are not legally binding.)

3. To contact every member possible. (Many small gifts are better than a few large ones.)

4. To obtain the cooperation of every church and ask each church, Sunday school, league and auxiliary to pledge to the college.

5. Use whatever method will work best in your church.

6. The objective is not to see how much cash can be raised immediately, but to get the college on a stable financial program during the coming years.

7. The money will be spent for college building, endowment, faculty, loan funds and scholarships.

8. Every church will be fully credited with the receipts from its members.

9. Send your pledge cards to the college as soon as possible.

10. You can obtain any information or literature you need from the college.

This is the greatest opportunity Free Will Baptists have ever had. To fail now is to forfeit our right to ever succeed again.

Listed below are three additional reasons for all Free Will Baptists to support Mount Olive College and its plan for higher education:

1. Mount Olive College is approximately fifty miles from any other college of its kind.

2. The college population in North Carolina is expected to double by 1970, and most colleges are already filled to capacity.

3. There are five hundred Free Will Baptist college students in North Carolina alone.

Heart Pearls

My grandma has a string of pearls

With which she would not part;
She does not wear them 'round her neck,
She wears them in her heart.

Her pearls are Bible verses that
She learned along the way;
And to her precious jewel string
She adds a pearl each day.

Among her pearls are, "God is love,"
And, "Thou God seest me,"
"Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace, Whose mind is stayed on Thee."

No wonder Grandma is so good,
Has such a kindly look,
It is because of all the pearls
She gathered from God's Book.

My grandma started long ago
When but a little girl,
I've started, too, and every day
I'm adding one more pearl.

—The Beams of Light.

PHARISEEISM

We had the responsibility of observing and trying to help a teen-age girl on one occasion who had a serious social problem. When we had gathered all the facts possible on her case, we found that the problem went deeper than social maladjustment. Let us give you a description of her:

She was a beautiful girl without abnormality or blemish of face or figure. She always dressed neatly and took pride in her personal appearance. She was of average intelligence and made good grades in school. She had professed Christ as her personal Saviour and was exceedingly loyal to all the services of her church, taking an active part in them. Her high moral standards left nothing to be desired. However, one fact stood out to create her problem: nobody liked her. Her excellent capabilities and capacity for leadership went to waste, for nobody would follow her.

What was this girl's trouble? If we find an answer to what was wrong with her, we shall also discover why many other potentially great Christian leaders fail to wield a very great influence for Christ in their homes, their communities and their churches. We found that her pharisaical attitude toward others caused them to reject her and refuse to have anything to do with her.

What is phariseeism? The term is used to describe the Pharisees, a sect of the Jews, and all others who emulate their example. We are told that, in the beginning, the Pharisees were a group who bound themselves together under certain doctrinal beliefs and vows for the purpose of purifying the worship of God under the Mosaic Law. In the beginning their intentions were good and their motive commendable, but after a while their worship degenerated to the point of hypocrisy and error. They were one of the groups which persecuted Jesus during His ministry and were among those whose clamorings sent Him to the Cross. Eight times in Matthew 23 Jesus said, "Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! . . ."

Now, this girl had not degenerated in her worship to the point of hypocrisy, and neither have others who find themselves in the classification with her. They are honest and sincere in their worship. They are actually Christians, but they have at least one characteristic of the Pharisees which robs them of the opportunity of doing much good. They have adopted the better than thou attitude which was displayed by the Pharisee about whom Jesus told in Luke 18:9-15.

These people with the pharisaical attitude make for themselves a rigid set of rules, some of which are based upon the teaching of the Word of God and some upon their own estimate of what Christianity ought to include. They either live by these strict rules or approximate them closely enough to try to convince themselves and others that they abide by them. Then they use this set of rules as a criterion for judging others as to their relationship with Christ. When others do not measure up to their pet standard, they develop an attitude of superiority over the others. From their imaginary thrones of self-righteousness they look down their noses at the poor unfortunates who are so weak as not to be able to measure up to the standard of favoritism in the eyes of Christ. The air of intolerance which this attitude breeds repels others and builds a barrier over which they cannot reach to help strengthen the weaker ones.

When these self-righteous individuals find that they have lost the esteem of their fellows, they begin to build a world within themselves. Not only do they feed their ego by gloating over their righteousness, but they parade their goodness before others to compensate for their loss. They also develop a persecution complex as a defense mechanism so that they can accuse others and excuse themselves for their failures.

We must face the fact that we have such personalities among us. Indeed, it is most difficult for a devout Christian to refrain from measuring others by his standard of righteousness. And it is difficult to keep from relegating to damnation those who do not measure up to that standard. However, we must remember that Jesus emphatically teaches that we must not sit in judgment against others, "And why beholdest thou the mote that is in thy brother's eye, but considerest not the beam that is in thine own eye? . . . Thou hypocrite, first cast out the beam out of thine own eye; and then shalt thou see clearly to cast out the mote out of thy brother's eye" (Matthew 7:3-5).

We, who do not believe the Bible to teach that we shall ever attain perfection while we still live in this tabernacle of flesh, cannot hope to get in position to judge our fellows. This judgment is reserved for Him who shall sit upon the throne of His righteousness in the end time. The only judgment which we are permitted to exercise is that which is given in the Word of God. When we go beyond the Word in our judgment to our own interpretation, we become Pharisaical and therefore hypocritical in our judgment. We might remember the old proverb which says, "One who lives in a glass house should not throw stones."

The integrated personality for Christ is one who is genuinely humble, earnestly concerned about the salvation and spiritual development of others, and willing to love them despite the fact that they do not agree with him in their convictions. He is one who is willing to let Christ make others the kind of Christians He wants them to be. This type of person will have a far greater influence for Christ among men than one who subscribes to the doctrine of Phariseeism.

NATIONAL SUPERANNUATION

You will notice in the Mail Box of this issue the change of address of National Superannuation from Nashville, Tennessee, to the Rev. K. V. Shutes, Route 5, Thomaston, Georgia. His reason for being forced to make the move, together with his future plans, was given in a letter to us as follows:

"So many doors are being closed to me until I did not see anything to do but to accept some church work.

"Mrs. Shutes can continue to keep the books, and we can carry on much of the work by correspondence. I shall visit as many associations in October and November as possible. I also hope to make some itineraries during the year."

Therefore, all future correspondence with the National Superannuation Board should be sent to Mr. Shutes at the new address.

Romance of a Prayer Meeting

Anna Weaver Yoder

PRAYER meetings throughout the churches are too often thought to be, and indeed really are cut and dried formal meetings that woefully lack the spirit for which they are intended. Too rarely do Christians attend or conduct these midweek services with direct evangelism in mind. True, intercessions are frequently made for unsaved ones, but such are seldom in attendance—in fact, they are hardly expected to be there!

In some communities, however, cottage prayer meetings are the order, and in these, soul-saving goals are more often striven for. The following account is of an unexpected turn of events in one such cottage meeting.

It was one of those cold, midwinter nights that make one feel more like staying by the fire than venturing out into the snow. But this little group of workers loved the Lord, and started out for their regular Friday evening in the Flannigan home. Mrs. Flannigan was crippled with arthritis, and her husband also suffered from ill health; so neither of them could attend services at the church.

Their home was up in the hills, at the end of a road that was difficult to traverse through the snow. This might have been enough to make folks feel justified in staying home on this particular night. But the Lord wanted them there, and they were willing to go for Him as well as the joy such service would surely bring to themselves. They arrived safely, and soon filed into the little living room, which was dimly lighted by kerosene lamps. The Flannigans welcomed them warmly. While removing her coat, Miss Bell, one of the workers, noticed the slight movement and dim shadow of a third figure in the dark kitchen beyond.

"Who's in the kitchen, Mrs. Flannigan?" she asked as she moved toward the kitchen door.

"Who's in the kitchen, Mrs. Flannigan?" she asked as she moved toward the kitchen door.

"Oh, that's Mrs. Kuhns, our neighbor," explained Mrs. Flannigan. "She's German and doesn't understand much American (the colloquial term for English language). She lives over the hill, through the woods, and just happened to be here when you came. She's going home now."

Miss Bell reached the kitchen door by the time Mrs. Flannigan had explained, and in the near darkness came face to face with the stranger, who wore a dark kerchief about her head, and a large apron. Miss Bell's presence seemed to frighten her, for she backed farther into the darkness.

"Good evening, Mrs. Kuhns!" Miss Bell said, amiably. "Won't you join us in our prayer meeting?"

"Ach, nein!" cried the old lady from her dark corner. "I strange!"

"You don't happen to be Mary Kuhns' mother, do you?" Miss Bell wondered.

"You know my Mary?" Mrs. Kuhns nearly shouted, incredulously, as she almost ran to Miss Bell from her dark corner.

"Yes, I know her."

And Mrs. Kuhns pressed Miss Bell's hand fondly as she beamed, "So you know my Mary!"

It was easy then to lead her on into the living room, where she timidly took a seat just inside the door.

The meeting began with the singing of a number of well-known and favorite hymns and gospel songs, followed by a prayer, and then testimonies. Five people had told of their love for the Lord and named ways in which He had especially blessed them. Then Mrs. Kuhns asked if she might speak, too.

"Indeed you may," the leader assured her, and then in her broken language she told the group:

"I know now why I had to come over here to the Flannigans tonight! Seems like something just pushed me. My old man didn't want me to come, because it's a long, lonely walk through the woods. But I had to come, somehow. Oh, how you people have helped me! Those songs! and oh, just you dear people! I want to know your Jesus, too. But now I must go home." She ended with a sob, and turned as if to leave.

"But can't you stay for prayer yet—just a few minutes?" Miss Bell urged.

"Yes, I will," she replied, dropping at once to her knees and folding her upraised hands reverently.

Someone prayed, "Dear Lord Jesus, don't let this dear lady go home before she's saved tonight!" Then another of the Christians prayed, filled to overflowing with a burden for the woman's soul; and then the poor, seeking soul prayed, too, but in her own language. No one present understood her, but those near her could tell she was not getting to God. Miss Bell, kneeling beside her, began to tell her the sweet gospel message—the message of Jesus and His great Calvary love, while others continued to pray that the seeking one might understand.

When Miss Bell told her of Jesus' great love on Calvary, Miss Kuhns began to pray again, this time earnestly beseeching the Christ for forgiveness and mercy. Suddenly a light broke upon her countenance. She jumped to her feet and cried, "I'm saved! I'm saved!"

Laughter and tears mingled freely as a newly redeemed soul threw her arms about Miss Bell and kissed her, and then about each of the women, kissing them and hugging them, and shaking the men's hands, crying over and over, "I'm saved! Glory, I'm saved!"

By this time the evening was far spent, and the changed Mrs. Kuhns at last started for home. Several folks accompanied her through the deep darkness of the woodland path, until she saw her own kitchen light.

"You must come and tell my man about your Jesus, too," were the parting words.

Upon arriving at her door, she was greeted none too pleasantly by her indignant husband.

"Why have you stayed so late?" he demanded.

"Oh, I got salvation!" she told him, her face beaming. "The Christians were at Flannigans' for a prayer meeting, and they helped me to know Jesus. Now I'm saved! I can go to heaven when I die! Oh, it is wonderful!" she beamed.

The old man only grunted, then concluded, "You're crazy," and refused to hear any more of her story.

The next day found Mrs. Kuhns singing the same sweet gospel songs she heard the night before, as she went about her work. There was such a holy light upon her face that her husband could not ignore it.

"What's wrong with you today?" he wanted to know.

"I'm just so happy in Jesus," his wife replied.

The singing continued through the scrubbing of the kitchen floor. Old Josh Kuhns seemed incredulous.

"Mam, what's wrong?" he asked the second time, later.

"I'm just happy," the new Christian replied simply.

He went out into the snow and mud a while and walked about until his shoes were thoroughly muddy. Then he returned to the house and intentionally failed to wipe them on the mat at the door, tracking ugly marks across the clean linoleum.

Why Sin is Sin

Elder A. L. Sellers, Quitman, Georgia

THIS is a subject that needs to be given serious consideration. Sin was the cause of God's becoming grieved that He had made man. Sin has been the cause of all the trouble man has ever had. Regardless of the truth of these statements, man loves to indulge in sin.

Notice what it did for the first couple that ever lived. They were given a beautiful home with no responsibility but to care for it. They were given instructions not to eat of the tree of knowledge of good and evil for it was poison. They followed instructions for awhile, and all went well; we don't know for how long. One day they had a visitor. He had the appearance of a serpent, but seemed to be very intelligent. He began to question them about this tree that God had said would cause them to die if they ate of it.

"And the serpent said unto the woman, Ye shall not surely die: For God doth know that in the day ye eat thereof, then your eyes shall be opened, and ye shall be as gods, knowing good and evil" (Genesis 3:4, 5). With this deceptive story he caused them to believe that God just did not want them to eat of the fruit of that tree, and that they would not die as God said they would. They acted accordingly, and to their sad disappointment they died to their home and the joy that they were then experiencing. The trouble that was theirs to endure no one knows but them and God.

So it has ever been with every person who refuses to believe God. The children of Israel could not enter the promised land because of unbelief (Hebrews 3:19). The six hundred thousand men and women over twenty years old failed to enter the promised land because they refused to believe God.

God did not tell Adam and Eve not to eat of that fruit just because He did not want them to become wise, but because He knew that it would be detrimental to their future welfare. Notice what happened to them before they ate of the forbidden fruit. They were made to believe that God had lied, and because of that belief they disobeyed and brought destruction upon themselves. "... the soul that sinneth, it shall die" (Ezekiel 18:4). The person, who refuses to believe God, separates himself from the fountain of life; therefore, death is inevitable. God, being God, can't force you to believe, therefore He can't keep death from following your unbelief.

God, in bringing this great universe into existence for man's pleasure, saw where the safety and dangers were, and gave him a guide that would lead him safely through those places. Now it is your privilege to follow the Guide and receive the blessings of safety, or disobey the Guide and suffer the sad disappointment of disobedience.

HEADQUARTERS BUILDING DRIVE

WITH less than $5,000 owing on the denominational headquarters building, the National Association, in session last July, endorsed an all-out effort to pay the balance and thus put the denomination out of debt on all of its property.

The actual balance is $4,901, according to Rev. W. S. Mooneyham, executive secretary. Personal letters have been sent to 100 pastors urging their participation in the drive which is set to climax October 15. All churches, however, are urged to have a part in the campaign.

A special "Certificate of Appreciation" has been prepared and will be sent to all churches making a contribution in this final effort, the secretary said. The certificate reads, "Presented to _____ Free Will Baptist Church to be placed in the files and made a part of the permanent records of said church, in recognition of having made a generous contribution to pay the final indebtedness on the first headquarters building owned by the National Association of Free Will Baptists." It also shows a picture of the headquarters building.

The building was purchased in 1953 at a cost of $18,000. A campaign last year fell $5,000 short of paying the balance. The executive secretary expressed confidence that the small balance could be paid by October 15 if the churches would respond.

The headquarters building is located just two blocks from the Free Will Baptist Bible College and serves as the nerve center for the denominational program. Six of the denominational agencies maintain offices in the building, five of them with full-time promotional secretaries.

Departments whose work is carried on from the headquarters are foreign missions, home missions, executive, woman's auxiliary, Sunday school and Free Will Baptist league. "It is absolutely essential to the expanding denominational program that we have a headquarters building," Mr. Mooneyham said, "and it must be paid for if we are going to have it. It is therefore necessary that all of our people share in this ministry."

God has not said not to do something just because He did not want us to do that thing, but because He knows it would not be well for us if we did do it.

"Dear reader, don't be deceived by Satan's deceptive agents, and believe, as those of the past, that God just doesn't want you to do those things that He has said not to do. Be sure that He knows that it would not be well for you if you did do those things, and you will suffer as those before you if you disobey.

Sin is sin because it is that which is detrimental to the welfare of humanity.

Those pastors to whom personal letters were sent were asked to challenge their churches to give $50 in this final effort and other churches are asked to do as well.

All contributions should be sent to Free Will Baptist Headquarters, 3801 Richland Avenue, Nashville 5, Tennessee, marked for "headquarters debt."

Cragmont Activities For August

Rev. J. E. Wooten, Manager

AA AUGUST was a month of real activities at Cragmont Assembly, Black Mountain, North Carolina. But it can be said truthfully that it was a very successful month in most every respect. The scheduled conferences were well attended and wonderfully inspirational. The daily association and fellowship were strengthening and soul-enriching. It was equally true with a guests and visitors.

The first conference of the month was Rev. L. E. Ballard's Youth Conference. As usual with Mr. Ballard and his young people, it was a fine group from various sections of the state. They were courteous and friendly and considerate in their personal relations throughout their stay, and left happy in the fact that they had been privileged to come to Cragmont. Most of them were Christians when they came and practically all who were not joined the others before they left in praising the Lord for personal salvation.

The next occasion of the month was one such as has never been witnessed at Cragmont Assembly before—insofar as we have been able to learn. On Sunday afternoon, August 12, Rev. William (Bill) Davidson and Miss Evelyn Yelley spoke the words which made them man and wife.

Bill is the son of Mrs. J. E. Wooten of Cragmont, and Evelyn is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Yelley of Wheelersburg, Ohio. They were both students of The Free Will Baptist Bible College last year. The wedding arrangements were quiet but beautiful, and solemnized in the presence of a small group of family members and friends. Rev. J. E. Wooten of Cragmont officiated.

Following the marriage ceremony in the assembly chapel, the young people of The Blue Ridge Association held their regular second Sunday afternoon worship service. It was a splendid service and well attended. The emphasis of the entire program was placed on missions. There were well chosen and splendidly rendered messages in songs, and deeply spiritual and convincing messages delivered by various speakers. Everyone enjoyed the service, and all were strengthened and uplifted by it.

On Monday, August 13, the Woman's Auxiliary Conference convened. It was well attended, and the group remained until Monday, August 20. It goes without saying that it was a splendid conference. Mrs. L. E. Ballard and her women always have such conferences. Those in attendance were fine Christian ladies. The name of Christ was magnified through their program and efforts, and the personal association and fellowship blessed and strengthened those in attendance. The annual Woman's Conference at Cragmont is of inestimable value in the Kingdom work of Christ. The women go back to their local churches and communities with renewed energy and zeal for the cause of the Saviour, and take hold of the church program with more courage and determination to carry the work forward. Their lives are renewed with spiritual energy.

Between the Woman's Conference and the Taylor Family Week, things were relatively quiet at Cragmont. Only a few visitors called for short stays.

On Monday, August 27, the Taylors arrived. Several families, headed by Mr. Fountain Taylor, and practically all members of the same church, remained until Friday, August 31. They were accompanied by their pastor and his wife, Rev. and Mrs. Lloyd Vernon. It was a most pleasant and enjoyable time. Their daily devotional services were inspirational, and the fellowship with such fine Christians was wonderful and uplifting to all present. There were also some other family groups who came as guest during the week.

Thus the conference season at Cragmont Assembly came to a close. But guests and visitors and friends are invited to come at any time during the year. If you plan to come for the night or for meals, please let us know in advance if possible. But come any way.

A Blessing from God

Phyllis Harris, Enfield, North Carolina

I HAVE just come home from another glorious youth conference at Cragmont, Black Mountain, North Carolina. I have been there for several years and each year it grows dearer. The fellowship there is greater than any place I know. We go there not knowing the other campers and always come back with a host of new friends. The Christian blessings are rich, indeed; we feel God's presence so close that it seems as though He were really walking by our sides.

This year the staff was composed of Rev. L. E. Ballard, director; Rev. Lee Whaley, and Mrs. Sue Thompson, counselors; Mattie Lou Harris and Phyllis Harris, junior counselors; and Mrs. L. E. Ballard, chaperone and house mother.

In the mornings we arose early and had our morning watch or devotions before breakfast. After breakfast there was a chapel service followed by our classes. "The Church of Tomorrow" was our first class. It was taught by "Uncle Loy" and dealt with how we as the church of tomorrow must make it truly God's church. After this the group split up and Mrs. Sue Thompson taught the younger group how to pray, while "Ma Ballard" taught the older ones a "Youth Evangelism" course in which we learned to lead the lost to Christ.

After our fellowship time we had a "Christian Life Council" in which all of the staff members answered questions that arise among Christian youth of today.

Following was an "Inspiration Time" composed of courses, Scripture reading and testimonies. Rev. Lee Whaley taught us some great Bible truths all four days. His theme verse was Ecclesiastes 12:1, "Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth, . . ." In this as well as all other classes there were many blessings bestowed upon us as a united Christian group.

Each night there were exangelistic meetings in the chapel where nine found Christ as their Saviour for the first time in their lives. Many had backslidden and went to the altar for a closer walk with God. All of the campers dedicated themselves to the Lord and eight were called to a definite service for Him.

Each night before bedtime there were group prayer meetings. Part of the time these were conducted by two Bible college students who were working in the kitchen at Cragmont this summer. Also, one night, these two gave a playlet on missions.

The other side of our experiences included climbing Mount Allen, visiting Newfound Gap and stopping in Cherokee on the way back to see "Unto These Hills," and shopping in Asheville. We had the last afternoon to do more or less as we pleased. Some went hiking, some played games, and some packed for the return trip home.

Cragmont is a wonderful place for a vacation. It is the wish of all the campers that everyone, saved or lost, might spend one week at Cragmont and find out what a blessing it really is.

Here are the testimonies of a few campers:

"If there is a better place for our young people in this world, I don't know where it could be. I've never had such a wonderful experience in all my life as when I met God at Cragmont. I wish it were possible for every young person, especially the unsaved, to spend a week at Cragmont and feel God as I have this week."—Brenda Barrow, La-Grange, North Carolina.

"I've had a wonderful time at Cragmont this year. This is my first year at Cragmont but I regret that I have never been before. I thank the Lord for Cragmont because here I feel the very presence of God in every step I take. I hope I can come back next year."—Carolyn Lee, Four Oaks, North Carolina.

"I thank the Lord for saving my soul and I will go anywhere He wants me to. I love Him more than anything in the whole world. I thank the Lord for Cragmont."—Morrell Jones Jr., Scotland Neck, North Carolina.

"I want to thank the Lord for saving my soul. Cragmont has really meant a lot to me this week and may God bless it."—Nancy O'Geary, Greenville, North Carolina.

The blessings of Cragmont are being told everywhere by those who have witnessed them. As we tell them, others want to go and have that same wonderful experience. Every year as more go there, the needs are steadily increasing. Let us pray that God will always dwell there, bestowing His blessings and that more people will attend and support Cragmont with tithes and offerings so that it might become even more of a blessing from God.

The only way in which one human being can properly attempt to influence another is the encouraging him to think for himself, instead of endeavoring to instill ready-made opinions into his head.—Sir Leslie Stephen.

Questions and Answers ON THE BIBLE

Conducted by J. F. BARROW

3824 Richland Avenue, Nashville 5, Tennessee

Question: Please explain "Wherefore seeing we also are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us, Looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith; who for the joy that was set before him endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God" (Hebrews 12:1, 2). (1) Who is the cloud of witnesses? (2) What is meant by every weight? (3) What is the sin that "besets us"? (4) What is the "race"? (5) What was the joy set before Jesus?—William Thompson, Woodbine, Tennessee.

Answer: (1) The cloud of witnesses consists of those that have been faithful in their witnessing while here upon the earth, such as those named in Chapter eleven, as well as those referred to in 11:36, which of course includes all who have been faithful under the most strenuous circumstances in punishment, including those who have died a most cruel death at the hands of God's enemies. K. S. Wuest, in "Hebrews in the Greek New Testament," Page 210, says: "The word 'others' is the translation of heteros which means 'another of a different kind.' This word introduces a different class of victories achieved by faith, although mockings and scourgings were endured by the martyrs just mentioned. The words 'yea, moreover' (eti de) are used commonly to express a climax. Such imprisonment as was endured by Jeremiah (38:9), was certainly to be dreaded even more than scourging.

"Translation: and still others of a different nature, received a trial of mockings and scourgings, yea, moreover, of bonds and imprisonment."

It has been somewhat difficult for Christians of the past century in America and England to fully understand what the Bible has to say about "the martyr's crown" and what it says about persecutions or sufferings for Christ's sake. There is a Greek word to be found in the Greek New Testament that is sometimes translated martyr in the King James' version and sometimes witness. This should indicate to us that many early witnesses for Christ became martyrs for Him. Many Old Testament saints were martyred because of their witnessing and many, many others were cruelly treated by both Jew and gentile, by those who were in authority as well as those who were just ordinary common folk. The day in England and America may be fast approaching when to be a Christian witness will mean to be a Christian martyr. The language used throughout the Bible, both in the Old Testament and in the New Testament, which describes the lot of the godly, indicate that they are not a people generally befriended by the world or carnally minded people of the world but rather a people separated from those having standing and honor in this world's system. Some think that among these referred to in Hebrews 12:1, 2 are the angels with all the heavenly host. The first readers of the book of Hebrews saw an athletic figure in which the trainee had been running with encumbrances or handicaps as he trained for a contest in which several trained athletes were going to contest for a crown, the highest honor to be conferred upon a contestant that won. They, the earth as the stage and heaven as the audience, position or perspective, all these people named in Hebrews eleven, together with who else had striven in the contest between the right and the wrong, the devil's forces, and God's forces, the workers of evil and the soldiers of the Cross. Since we, who in this life are working against the world, the flesh and the devil, have such a crowd as these that are named rooting for and cheering us, we should drop the weights and leave off the sins that limit us. We should run with patience the race that is before us, not giving up as some have done, not fretting or grumbling as others have done, but having faith in God we should be patient while we work out our salvation with fear and trembling, for there is a goal before us. Christlikeness is the goal. Paul is talking about this same thing when he says, "I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus."

(2) Webster's dictionary says, to beset means "... To hem in; surround ... besiege, encircle ... to curse; call down evil upon; ... ." According to the teaching of the Bible we are going to have to give an account to God for every idle thought, deed and act of our lives. The Bible further tells us, Revelation 21:8, that all liars are going to spend eternity in a lake of fire and brimstone. That would be one weight or sin that a Christian would need to lay aside. We are told that no murderer can enter heaven and that a person who is angry with his brother without a cause is a murderer and therefore in danger of hell fire. All who have such thought must be separated from them, otherwise they will act as weights to hinder one's entering into heaven. Ephesians 4:30-32; Isaiah 26:3; Isaiah 1:18 will aid one in seeing God's attitude toward a murderer and His provision by which one may be freed from such. Any kind of a sin that one has become a slave to will serve as his besetting sin or hindering weight. A Christian who is in this race is spiritually running to Christ as his goal and as he does this he is departing or running away from the ugly sins that once handicapped or hindered him.

(3) The besetting sin and the weight alike are carry-overs from the old or the sinful life that seeks to crowd our minds or take the time that should be used for Christian advancement or growth in the knowledge of Christ. These sins of the past will do like thorn or briar roots that have occupied a field wherein we now have corn. Either the root must be dug up and burned or the briar chopped off each time a sprout comes to surface, otherwise the corn will be choked out and there will be husk instead of corn at harvest time. Every sin should be put away from a Christian and kept prayed out of sight and out of our thoughts. We should always keep in mind that the blood of Jesus Christ, God's Son, cleanses from all sin and that "He that covereth his sins shall not prosper: but whoso confesseth and forsaketh them shall have mercy" (Proverbs 28:13).

(4) As has been indicated above, this race is the Christian life in which the Christian is praying, yielding to the Holy Spirit and working while with God's help he is saying an emphatic No! to every wrong thought, is assenting to each truth learned from the Bible and Christian experience and is becoming more Christlike with each passing second. In thus living he is working hard to please Christ and thereby become more like Him. When he slips now and then or yields to temptations he confesses to Christ, forsakes the wrong and goes on with a more definite determination to do as Christ would have him do in what ever time is left in which to run the race.

(5) That joy which was set before Christ was the result of a redeemed race. A saved people which should be bought by His own shed blood on Calvary. He said that Abraham saw His day and was glad. Abraham was only a man, but God let him see so far into the future. Christ being God could, no doubt, see all eternity before

The Lighted Pathway

This word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path (PSALM 119:105).

REV. WILLET L. MORETZ
SWANNANOVA, N. C.

We are still considering the text found in 1 Samuel 3:13.

In view of all that has been said during the last two weeks it is perfectly plain:

(1) That parents should pray constantly and fervently to God for wisdom and grace that they may be enabled to bring up their children aright. They should bear them upon the arms of their faith to the great Physician, who is able and willing to heal all their diseases and to present them faultless before the presence of His glory.

(2) Parents should especially seek to live pure, holy and happy lives, that their children may see and feel the excellence of that religion which they profess.

They busy themselves in vain with the words and acts of religious observance unless they show in their lives the power of religion to make them God-loving, and holy and contented.

(3) They should endeavor to make their homes attractive. A happy Christian home is one of the surest antidotes against sinful amusements and dissipations. Here is where so many parents fail the children. The popular attitude seems to be that home consists of a place to come at the close of day, a place to eat and sleep; forgetting that the home is the greatest institution on earth, established by God Himself, for the happiness of each member. It must be built and perpetuated on and by love. In it God has decreed that His Word should be taught, learned and obeyed (Deuteronomy 6:7-9).

(4) Parents should regard the right training of their children as greatest and most important works of their lives. In attending to this duty aright they are doing most for the church, most for society, most for their country and, most important of all, most for their God. And they should look forward with bounding joy to a blessed and eternal reunion in heaven—to that time when they shall stand before their God and Saviour, and say: "Here am I and the children Thou hast given me."

In closing this series of messages on "Parental Responsibility," I want you to give careful consideration to the following poignant, yet extremely important, article which I pass on to you, parents, with the prayer that it will awaken you to your duty to your children:

FBI director, J. Edgar Hoover, blamed the postwar juvenile crime wave on soft-headed parents who do not teach their children respect for God.

He told the House Appropriations Committee that the problem cannot be remedied by playgrounds, youth agencies and Boy Scouts unless parents also teach their children respect for God, the law, and for others.

Social agencies cannot take the place of the father and mother "conscious of their responsibilities to inculcate in youth respect for God," Mr. Hoover said.

He also said that juvenile delinquency will not be decreased until parents are held legally and financially responsible for the misdeeds of their children.—Selected.

The other morning as a preacher friend and I were eating breakfast our conversation drifted into the subject of juvenile delinquency and its causes. As we were talking we came to the conclusion that the three main causes are liquor, narcotics and loose sex practices. A woman, eating at an adjoining table, said, "Pardon me for butting in, but don't leave out their carelessness, no-good parents who are most to blame." In farther conversation I learned that she was a wife and mother who was anxious that her own children should grow up to be Christians, and that she realized her responsibility to them and was trying to fulfill it.

NOTES — AND — QUOTES

By J. C. Griffin

CHRIST'S PLAN FOR SETTLING DIFFERENCES

Everybody has a plan for settling all the troubles and differences of man. If you will go to some place where people assemble, say a barbershop, a bus station, a railroad station, a street or even around the church door, you can hear many plans for the settling of disputed matters in the government, the social affairs of the world, the political affairs, the financial affairs, the labor problems and the church affairs. Almost everybody has a plan that will settle everything and give to us the Utopia for all our troubles. For instance, the bachelor can give you more advice about rearing children than the man who has fathered ten. The old maid can also give more advice regarding children than the mother.

I heard the late and great man, Uncle Bud Roberson, say, "A certain young man who was associated with me in my evangelistic work wrote a book on the Rearing of Children, which was the best that I have ever read. The writer of the book took to himself a wife and in a few years children were born to the couple. So I said to the young man, 'How does your book work in the rearing of children?' The answer came back, 'Uncle Bud, it is one thing to write and another to put the writing into practice.'"

It is true that we learn more by experience than by study; however, both help. When we learn all that is possible, we still think there are other things to learn. My father used to say to me, "Son, everybody knows what to do with a bad thing except the man who has to deal with it for himself." Politicians tell us how to get along with the Communists of the world and stop the spread of Communism. That story has been explained by politicians for the past quarter of a century, but Communism keeps spreading. We hear a great deal about our political economy, but the plans set forth by political enemies differ. Sometimes I almost agree with the old Quaker who said to his brother, "I doubt everyone but thee and me, and sometimes I have a little doubt of thee." Sometimes I wonder is anyone knows what is best. Some may have a good plan; some may have a better plan.

Christ Knew What He Was Talking About

It is a fact that personal differences will arise. The cause for these differences is ignorance in many instances. I think I know what is right, and my brother thinks he knows what is right. We both may be all out of reason. These differences may result in gross sin and sinful action if not settled according to righteousness. The righteous Son of God has given to us a plan that will work when properly tried. It will free us, or it will bind us. Let us see what He said.

"... if thy brother shall trespass against thee, go and tell him his fault between thee and him alone: if he shall hear thee, thou hast gained thy brother. But if he will not hear thee, then take with thee one or two more, that in the mouth of two or three witnesses every word may be established. And if he shall neglect to hear them, tell it unto the church: but if he neglect to hear the church, let him be unto thee as an heathen man and a publican. Verily I say unto you, Whatsoever ye shall bind on earth shall be bound in heaven: and whatsoever ye shall loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven" (Matthew 18:15-18).

The Plan, as Given by Christ, Works

When the plan given by our Lord is tried, it either binds the offender or looses him. If the offender refuses to hear the offended privately, the offended takes one or two with him to the offender. Then the offended takes it to the church; and if the offender refuses to follow the plan of the Lord, that offender is under the condemnation of almighty God both in heaven and in earth. I heard a lady say, "I'd go to hell before I'd forgive _____," calling the name of a person who had offended her. That spirit can work very efficiently in landing a soul in hell.

Jesus says, in speaking of the man who would not forgive, "And his lord was wroth, and delivered him to the tormentors, till he should pay all that was due unto him. So likewise shall my heavenly Father do also unto you, if ye from your hearts forgive not every one his brother their trespasses" (Matthew 18:34, 35).

So, according to the Word of the Lord Jesus, if we hold out against the forgiveness of those whom we should forgive, there is no forgiveness for us. But now let us go further in the study of forgiveness as spoken by our Lord. "Therefore if thou bring thy gift to the altar, and there rememberest that thy brother hath ought against thee; Leave there thy gift before the altar, and go thy way; first be reconciled to thy brother, and then come and offer thy gift" (Matthew 5:23, 24). We are wasting our time and making a groundless, hopeless, unrighteous, shameful plea unto the Lord when we say things that we call prayer, especially when there is envy, hatred, jealousy or malice in our heart toward any living human being. In order to get right, we must first repent of our own sins and have a forgiving spirit inserted into our own life. Then we can go with the spirit of true forgiveness.

Don't think for one moment that God will endorse our sin of holding malice or failing to make things right with our fellow man as far as we possibly can. Do not entertain for a moment that God will bless us and give to us that petition as desired when there is unforgiven sin in our lives. God will not endorse our sin by giving us the blessing we seek. We must go God's way or our going is vain.

The New Commandment

"A new commandment I give unto you, That ye love one another; as I have loved you, that ye also love one another. By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another" (John 13:34, 35). How may we be known as disciples of the Lord? The answer is plain—by love one for another. The apostle, John, in writing of the epistle bearing his name, said, "Again, a new commandment I write unto you, which thing is true in him and in you: because the darkness is past, and the true light now shineth. He that saith he is in the light, and hateth his brother, is in darkness even until now. He that loveth his brother abideth in the light, and there is none occasion of stumbling in him. But he that hateth his brother is in darkness, and walketh in darkness, and knoweth not whither he goeth, because that darkness hath blinded his eyes" (1 John 2:8-11).

This Scripture needs no explanation. It is plain. But another Scripture, bearing on the subject is hereby given: "Whosoever hateth his brother is a murderer: and ye know that no murderer hath eternal life abiding in him" (1 John 3:15).

I am afraid that there are those who claim to be Christians who have hatred in their hearts against someone. We had better examine our hearts; we had better get our bearings.

Him, which would include the final judgment or the great white throne judgment at which place no Christian will be judged. What a joy it must have been to Him, who gave His life a ransom for all that would accept it, when He could see the millions, the redeemed of all ages, all tongues and races.

FOR OUR

BOYS and GIRLS

EILEEN'S REWARD

Eudora Landstrom Olson

"Hi! Aren't they beautiful?" Eileen almost whispered the words. Her eyes shone as she looked longingly at the pretty dresses which filled the big display window at Hardy's.

"Oh, Eileen, they're lovely!" Jane's eyes widened. "Look at that yellow one with the brown butterflies all over it. Wouldn't you love to have that?"

Eileen ran over to the end of the window. "But look at this green one! Oh! And that pink and white one back there with the wide collar!"

"Here's a pretty plaid," Jane called from the other end. "Don't you just love plaids?"

"Oh, I do!" Eileen exclaimed.

Jane clapped her hands quickly. "Let's run tell our mothers about the dresses." She glanced suddenly down at Eileen's knees. "My, you sure need a new dress, Eileen. Look, yours is much too short."

Eileen's face became very serious. "Maybe Mother can let the hem down on this dress."

Jane stared in surprise. "But you need new dresses anyway."

"But I can't buy new ones right now, Jane. Mother told us yesterday that we couldn't any of us have any new clothes this winter, not even new school dresses . . ."

For some time the little girls walked on in silence. As they neared Bentley's Grocery, Eileen turned in.

"I must buy a loaf of bread for Mrs. Erwin," she said. "She asked me to get it on the way home from school." She approached the counter. "A small loaf of plain rye bread, Mr. Bently. The ten-cent size."

"Nine cents today," Mr. Bently smiled as he handed a penny back to Eileen.

"Why don't you buy some candy with the penny?" Jane asked as they went out of the store.

"Jane! How can I? That isn't my penny. It's Mrs. Erwin's."

"But she expected to pay ten cents for the bread. She'll never know this loaf didn't cost a dime."

"But I wouldn't." Eileen stared. Ever since Jane had been going to see Celia, the new girl, she had been saying such queer things.

"Well, then, why don't you keep the penny and call it your pay?" Jane asked, as she tried balancing on the edge of the sidewalk. You're running errands for Mrs. Erwin every day. And last Saturday you spent half the morning hunting for her dog because she thought he was lost." Jane's eyes flashed . . .

"Jane! That's dreadful to talk like that! Mrs. Erwin is old, and she can't get out every day. I like to do her errands . . ."

Jane laughed. "I'd rather have a penny's worth of candy than her thank-yous."

Eileen ran up Mrs. Erwin's stairs. The little old lady smilingly opened the door. "Thank you, my dear child."

"And here's a penny change, Mrs. Erwin. The bread was only nine cents today. Eileen reached in her pocket for the change. A scared look came into her eyes. The penny wasn't there. Perhaps—the other pocket? But it wasn't there, either. A great lump rose in Eileen's throat. "I—I—guess I must have lost the penny," she stammered. "I'll—I'll get you one from my bank."

She turned and ran for home, up in her room and into her dresser to dig up the precious bank. Quickly she shook it, shook it again and again until, finally, a penny dropped out. She blinked back the tears. She hadn't wanted to touch those pennies. Mother had said that in a couple of weeks, if there was enough, she might use the money in the bank for a new dress. And every penny counted. There were all too few, Eileen knew.

Mrs. Erwin's smile widened as she looked steadily at the penny Eileen laid in her hand. She looked again at Eileen's face. "Thank you, Eileen."

"Thank you! Thank you!" Jane mocked, as they walked down the street. "What did I tell you? She's so stingy she wouldn't even give you that little penny."

All evening Eileen was troubled. She wished Jane wouldn't talk so mean. She wondered how she could make Jane change. "I'll have to try again tomorrow," she whispered as she settled for sleep. "Dear God, help me to show Jane the right way."

Next afternoon found the little girls sitting on Eileen's front steps, deep in conversation.

"You see, Jane," Eileen said very earnestly. "If you keep what isn't yours, it's just the same as stealing it."

Jane's face had a very thoughtful expression as she stared back at Eileen. She was very quiet.

"Don't you see, Jane?" Eileen persisted.

Slowly Jane answered. "Yes, I think I see. And I see what you mean when you say the pleasure you get out of doing something for someone else is pay in itself." Slowly she got to her feet. "'By, Eileen. I'm going home to see if my mother needs anything."

As Eileen watched her friend going off down the street, a warm, happy feeling went all through her. Jane understood now. Suddenly Eileen turned quickly as a soft voice called.

"Oh, Mrs. Erwin, did you call before? I didn't hear you." Eileen ran down the walk and over to Mrs. Erwin's home.

"No, I called only once, my dear." She handed a large box to Eileen. "There, my dear, is a little thank-you for the errands you have so willingly run for me. And for being that most likeable of all things—an honest little girl."

"For me? This is for me? Oh, thank you, thank you, Mrs. Erwin." Eileen ran for home, and inside the house, called, "Mother! Mother! Come see! Something Mrs. Erwin gave me. A present."

Eileen snipped off the string and pulled off the lid on the box. Carefully she laid aside the folds of tissue paper.

"Oh, Mother! Oh, Mother!" For an instant she couldn't say more. "Mother, the pink and white dress I saw in Hardy's window. The one with the deep collar. Oh! Help me try it on, please."

And when she lifted it out of the box, there underneath was another dress, the lovely blue and green and white plaid which she had admired so much.

Her eyes beaming, and a big, happy smile all over her face, Eileen stood before the mirror in Mother's room.

"Oh, Mother! And to think they're mine because—"

"Yes, dear! Yours because my little girl was honest and unselfish."—The Olive Leaf.

PATRICK HENRY'S WILL

I have now disposed of all my property to my family; there is one thing more I wish I could give them; and that is the Christian religion. If they had that, and I had not given them one shilling, they would be rich, and if they had not that, and I had given them all the world, they would be poor.

Intercessor's Prayer Band

In Romans 1:9 Paul tells the Christians at Rome "... that without ceasing I make mention of you always in my prayers." He was praying for Christians he had never known. That is what we as members of the Prayer Band are doing. Many of us pray each day for someone we have never known, but it is a wonderful experience to pray for fellow Christians and to know they are praying for you.

We are always asking God for things, but do we ever stop to say, "Thank you, Lord," for His many blessings to us? David tells us in Psalm 92:1, "It is a good thing to give thanks unto the LORD, and to sing praises unto thy name, O most High." Have you received a blessing through the Prayer Band? Has some request been answered for you through the prayers of the Prayer Band members? If so, write me and as we share it with other members we will be strengthened in our prayers. Here are the testimonies of several as given to us at Cragmont Assembly, Black Mountain, North Carolina, during the Woman's Conference:

"I praise the Lord for the blessings received through answered prayer as the members of our group have remembered me. I have been strengthened, encouraged and helped spiritually and physically as a result of prayer. Praise the Lord for His wonderful love."

"I praise the Lord that I am a member of the Prayer Band. I have felt the effect of the prayers of my group. It is so wonderful to know that people are praying each day for the things that burden our hearts. We have seen the results in our church in that we had a wonderful revival and we praise the Lord for it. I praise the Lord that He answered the prayers of our group in my behalf and raised me up. Praise the Lord for His marvelous power."

"I thank the Lord for the privilege of being a member of my group of 'Prayer Warriors,' praying for churches and revivals. No one except my Lord and I will ever know how much it means to know each member of my group is praying for me."

"I have always been deeply interested in Christian education. Since I have been praying for our educational program I have become more concerned and burdened than ever. We know God will answer our prayers for our colleges."

"I have much confidence in our women in the Prayer Band. I know God answers prayer."

Wouldn't you like to receive some of the blessings these ladies are receiving? If you would like to join our Prayer Band write me and I will add your name to our list. Our Prayer Band is growing so that we deemed it necessary to add three more groups. In doing this we had to split the former groups. When you receive your letter from me soon, please note the group you are in and what your prayer responsibilities are.

Many have written me asking that we remember loved ones who are lost. I feel all of us have loved ones who are lost, so do not fail to remember them in each day's prayer. We also have one request for prayer for revival services at Juniper's Chapel Church near Vanceboro, North Carolina, beginning October 28. Pray for revival everywhere.

RELIVING OUR VISIT

Rev. T. H. Willey Sr., Missionary to Cuba

As I write this final report covering our visit of the Cuban pastors among our people, all the familiar noises of the mission station fill the air—the song of the birds, the constant hum of crickets, the bawl of calves, and the long-drawn bray of a wild donkey.

The privilege of visiting in your homes, the kindness, and gracious hospitality, will ever be a sweet lingering memory. The fellowship of pastors scattered from Florida to Texas, then back to North Carolina, Virginia, West Virginia and Ohio has given our Cuban pastors an appreciation not only of America and her people but especially of our Free Will Baptist people.

Everywhere we went we were enriched. Each state with its beautiful churches and spiritual fervor has been inspirational.

Going over into Kentucky was returning back home. It was in Kentucky that I began to preach around thirty-five years ago in Brittel County and along the Big Sandy. On this trip I met again dear ones who thirty years ago found the Lord under my ministry.

Brother Ratchiff, as always, was the man to whom we gravitated. To know him is to love him. He and his wife were kindness itself.

Our churches are beautiful. Our first meeting was in Cattlesboro where every kindness and courtesy were extended to us. Then we went to English Hill and other equally interesting groups. Our meetings in the northeastern part of the state were climaxed by a meeting with an annual picnic which was more like a camp meeting. Here we were enabled to meet many more of our fine pastors for a brief time. The response to the need of chapels was gratifying.

Saying goodbye was not easy. From Ashland we went on to Paintsville, Kentucky, where we fellowshiped with the many friends whose kindness has endeared them to us. The meeting at South Side Church was made more impressive by the presence of the new pastor who declared in no uncertain terms that he and his people were for all-out support of world evangelism. Leaving the beautiful valley of the Big Sandy, we headed for Bristol, Virginia, where we formed new and equally precious friendships. In Bristol we found a beautiful church and an aggressive pastor, Brother

Stokes. How graciously we were entertained! I have passed through this part of the state many times knowing no one.

Elizabethton was a rich time of blessing. Brother Floyd and the other pastors whom it was our happy privilege to fellowship with endeared themselves to us. While at Elizabethton it was our pleasure to attend a local quarterly meeting. Thirty years ago I left a meeting in a community much like that to go into a strange land where ever since I have talked and listened to another language than my own.

Our next meeting was out from Knoxville, Tennessee, with Brother Tommy Birch, Brother Paul Woolsey and other groups of fine interested people. What a joy to be with these dear loved ones! There they gave us a very liberal offering.

Through the Cherokees and on to North Carolina, we visited with Brother Hollingsfield and had new and rich experiences in the western part of my home state. Then we went on to be with our brethren in the Piedmont section of the North State. What people and churches! How good our Father is to give us the hearts of such people to know they love us and are praying.

Heading southward we were soon in South Carolina with our fine young preachers. How our denomination has grown! Many years ago I visited Horse Branch, and I must confess that my heart thrilled to renew the old friendships.

From Horse Branch we headed for Savannah, Georgia, and other loving hands and hearts. Brother and Sister Moulton did everything possible to make memories of Savannah sweet.

We then headed for Jacksonville, Florida, and found a cordial greeting and a wonderful spirit of cooperation from the fine pastors there.

We then headed for Jacksonville, Florida, and found a cordial greeting and a wonderful spirit of cooperation from the fine pastors there.

Then we went on to Auburndale with new doors open to the cause of missions. After driving all night, we found Brother Sterling Tucker was waiting for us. Then the end of our trip was indeed a time of joy to our Cuban pastors—to find their families and many of their congregations waiting for them.

We thank you again and shall never cease to thank God for you. We love you, our people, as never before.

Protestant Persecution In South America

Rev. Raymond Riggs

Destruction of churches. Forty-seven churches and chapels have been destroyed by fire and dynamite, and many other buildings used by Protestant congregations have been damaged.

Protestant Schools closed. Since 1948, over 200 Protestant primary schools have been closed, most of them by government order. With an adult illiteracy rate of 44% in Colombia the government's short-sighted repression of Protestant education has aggravated an already alarming school deficiency.

Protestants killed. Seventy-five Colombian Protestants, men, women and children, have been murdered because of their religious faith during the eight and one-half years of persecution.

Churches closed. The Minister of Government, Jesuit-trained Dr. Lucio Pabon Nunez, has ordered the closing of scores of Protestant churches. Since January 1, 1956, he has closed over 40 churches. Thousands of Protestant Christians in the mission territories of Colombia are meeting clandestinely in houses and fields to worship God according to their conscience, in spite of Dr. Pabon Nunez's orders.

We would do well to remember these persecuted Christians in prayer during these days. Surely we are living in the end of time and our redemption draweth nigh. Let us hasten the Word to as many as possible while we have time.

But the song ceased not, and the joyful smile was not dimmed by its usual storm cloud.

"What is wrong with you?" the old man asked the third time as he watched his wife wipe up the mud without the slightest tinge of impatience or anger.

"Josh, it's Jesus in my heart. I found Him last night."

The Great Invitation

(Lesson for September 30)

Lesson: Revelation 22:1-5, 8, 9, 16-21.

Golden Text: Revelation 22:17.

I. INTRODUCTION

It is altogether fitting that the Word of God should close on the note of invitation to man to come back to the God who made him. The entire Bible is dedicated to the proposition of reconciling sinful man to the Holy God. It is rightfully called the Book of Man's Redemption. And in this last chapter God is making one last plea for man to renounce sin, throw off the yoke of Satan and return to the Shepherd and Bishop of his soul.

In this last great invitation the Lord, through John, is quite explicit concerning the place to which people are invited. Although human words cannot describe heaven, John devotes Chapter 21 and a part of Chapter 22 of this book to a description of some of its outstanding features. The student should read Chapter 21 carefully to find the approximate size of the Capital City and the materials of which its parts are made. He must remember, also, that this is only the City of the New Jerusalem which will be planted in a new earth to be inhabited eternally by the saints of the Lord. Our Printed Text for today gives a description of the center of attraction in the city of God.—The Bible Student (F. W. B.).

II. HELPFUL HINTS

1. The river and the tree of life in heaven will preserve the lives of the saints forever (Vv. 1, 2).

2. The presence of God and His throne in heaven will forever protect it from the curse of Satan (Vv. 2, 3).

3. Since there can be no darkness in heaven, there will be no need of earthly light there (Vs. 5).

4. If angels are unworthy of the worship of men, how much less worthy are the saints who are dead! (Vv. 8, 9).

5. The Word of God is first of all for those who compose the churches by His name (Vs. 16).

6. Both the Spirit and the bride have an important part in presenting the gospel invitation to men (Vs. 17).

7. Those who dare to change the Word of God do so at the peril of losing their souls (Vv. 18, 19).

8. Only those who are rich in grace and faith can earnestly say, Come, Lord Jesus. Amen (Vv. 20, 21).—The Bible Teacher (F. W. B.).

III. ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

1. In the river of water of life and in the tree of life John gives us a description of the water supply and the health clinic of heaven. The river whose water preserves the life of the redeemed forever gushes forth from the throne of God and of the Lamb and makes its way through the new paradise. And on each side of the river the tree of life, whose fruits provide food for the saints and whose leaves preserve their health, flourishes twelve months in the year in all eternity. The extent of paradise is not known, but apparently it covers the earth, which, at that time, will have been purged with fire from heaven and made ready for the eternal abode of the saved of all ages. Therefore, we might safely conclude that the river of life flows from the throne of God to the ends of the new heaven and earth, with the tree of life flourishing on its banks.—The Bible Teacher (F. W. B.).

2. All this speaks of joy, life, fruitfulness and full deliverance for the believer in Christ. There is no longer any accursed thing to be found. Christ bore our curse on the tree of Calvary, but even that is now in the past.

The blessedness of the city is epitomized in the words, "they shall see his face." No wonder the songwriter cried out, "Oh that will be glory for me." They shall see Him, for they belong to Him. His name is on their foreheads.

3. John's experience of Verses 8 and 9 clearly establishes the fact that though God uses men to convey His message, it is His message, and the glory is to be His. Another fact is conclusively stated in Verse 16, where all of divine history is bound up together in the reference to "the offspring of David" who is "the bright, the morning star."

Then comes the gracious invitation (Vs. 17) when its threefold appeal by the Holy Spirit, by the "bride" which is the church and by all those who have heard and believed down through the ages. It is gathered up in that beautiful word "come." No one who is athirst will be turned away, but may drink freely of the water of life.—

Moody Monthly.

4. The Tree of Life is spoken of the first time in Scripture in connection with the Garden of Eden. It was found "in the midst of the garden" (comp. Genesis 2:9). It would seem that Adam ate of the Tree of Life in his unfallen state, since he was told he may freely eat of every tree of the garden, save of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil (comp. Vv. 16, 17). After Adam had transgressed and sinned by eating of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, the way to the Tree of Life was barred by the cherubim with the flaming sword (comp. 3:23, 24). Adam, through his sin, forfeited his right to both the garden and the Tree of Life. Had Adam eaten of the Tree of Life in his fallen state he would have continued to live forever in a sinful body. To prevent this, he was driven from the garden and barred from the Tree of Life. This was both a judgment and mercy from God; a judgment upon Adam for his sin and mercy in preventing his living forever in a sinful state and condition, since such a life would not be a life of highest bliss and fullest glory and joy. Redemption through Christ alone can give a life of highest bliss and fullest glory and joy. Only the redeemed in glory can and will know such a life.—W. S. Hottel, D. D.

5. A little boy was born blind. A skilled surgeon performed a delicate operation on the boy's eyes. The operation was a success. For days, his eyes were covered with bandages. The time was nearing when the bandages were to be removed. Said the nurse to the lad, "My boy, tomorrow we are going to remove the bandages from your eyes. When the bandages are removed, whom do you want to see first?" Without a moment's hesitation, the lad exclaimed, "I want to see first the doctor who gave me my sight!" We want to see first the One who gave us our spiritual sight!

"Only faintly now, I see Him,
With the darkling veil between,
But a blessed day is coming,
When His glory shall be seen!"

6. And whosoever will, let him take the Water of Life freely. Thank God, our gospel is a "whosoever will" gospel! Any man of any clime, color, or condition, may come to the One who has said, "Him that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out." The vilest, the sinfulest, the unworthiest may come. Yea, even the devil's outcasts may come. In the other years, Sam Hadley came, though he had sunken so low that he "had to jump up to touch the bottom of hell!" The only condition Jesus imposes upon anyone's coming to Him for forgiveness is that he shall thirst for the Water of Life: "... If any man thirst, let him come unto me, and drink" (John 7:37).—The Bible Illustrator.

Convocation at Mount Olive College

Dr. Leo Jenkins, dean of instruction at East Carolina College, Greenville, North Carolina, told the 60 members of the Mount Olive College student body how to use their college days wisely, as the junior college, Mount Olive, North Carolina, officially opened for its third year of operation.

Students, he said, must decide why they are desirous of an education, whether it be how to think or a marketable skill. If they are wise, he concluded, they will try for both. He suggested students prepare for three things: To earn a respectable livelihood, to appreciate their great heritage, and responsible citizenship.

Dr. Jenkins was introduced by Mrs. Preston Sutton, registrar. Daniel Fagg led the responsive reading for the convocation service, and M. L. Johnson gave the opening prayer. President W. B. Raper made announcements and Rev. D. W. Hansley, chairman of the board of trustees, gave the benediction.

Classes officially began Friday following a week of orientation for freshmen and transfer students. A few late registrations has brought the total enrollment to 61, about 20 more than last year and six above the 55 anticipated before the doors opened last Monday.

The enrollment figures are well above the requirement for accreditation, and President Raper has expressed confidence the school will be placed on probation for accreditation this fall, a step toward full recognition as a junior college. The college has met the other known requirement for accreditation.

At a board of director's meeting following Dr. Jenkins' address, expansion for the college was mapped. The trustees voted to purchase a 50 acre lot near the elementary school and began making long-range plans for a plant capable of accommodating 500 students.

Small and Bowab, architect firm of Raleigh, will begin work immediately on a master plan, determining locations for further buildings and parking areas.

THE BEST YEARS

E. J. MORGAN

The best years that a man may know,
The years that bloom most fair
Are not those years when fortune smiles
With treasures rich and rare,
Nor when the cheers of fickle crowds
Arise from shifting throngs,

Or when in peace life swings and sings
In lilting, laughing songs;
But when man's heart with love is fired
And faith defeats his fears,
And when in strength he stoops to serve
Lo, these are man's best years.

SUBMARGINAL INCOMES

Economists classify the incomes of individuals and families as either luxury incomes, marginal incomes or submarginal incomes. The family with a luxury income has enough money to purchase the necessities of life and some left to spend on luxuries. The family with the marginal income has only enough money for the bare necessities. The family with a submarginal income does not have enough money to pay for the bare necessities of life; therefore, it is a charge upon society to supply the remainder of the money to support the family.

Let us apply the classification of the economists to the institutions and agencies of our denomination. A parallel can be found in all of them, from the boards and departments of the National Association all the way to the local churches.

There may be several reasons for submarginal living. Of course, the real reason is that there is not enough money available to buy the necessities. However, several factors may contribute to this scarcity:

(1) There may be too many mouths to feed and bodies to clothe for the pay envelope to satisfy. Large families have given away to small ones, essentially because of this condition.

It is evident that this condition which necessitates diminishing of the family is about to apply in the cases of some of our national agencies unless we increase the income to them. National superannuation and national home missions are in particularly distressing circumstances at this time, a matter which we shall discuss subsequently.

(2) A family may want more than its budget will allow. Unwise budgeting and unwise spending will produce a crisis in family living. The ease of possession through installment buying, the glitter of high pressure advertising, and the lack of foresight and judgment on the part of the buyers cause them to yield to the temptation to obligate themselves for more and higher payments than they can make.

Have we, as a denomination, obligated ourselves for more than we can pay? And have we permitted our wants to overpower our better judgment to the point where we are unable to meet our bills? Is a denomination of approximately 400,000 people with a great deal of God-given wealth unable to support a program which calls for a far smaller annual expenditure than that of a number of other denominations which are smaller than we?

(3) Disease or illness may strike members of the family to cut off its income and cause it to be unable to pay its bills. Now, every family may expect a certain amount of sickness and disease; but most illnesses are preventable, and a cure has been found for most diseases.

If there are illnesses and incapacities among us, we should hasten to apply the proper medication in each case. The surgeon's knife, even though painful, is sometimes necessary to amputate an affected part lest the corruption spread to destroy the whole body. And above all, we should apply all available immunizations against future epidemics of contagious diseases.

There are certain undesirable outgrowths from submarginal living. Enlightened society, in recognition of this fact, has taken steps to reduce this kind of living to a minimum, and even eradicate it. Our federal government grants subsidies, pensions, and other forms of financial assistance to individuals, families and larger groups or organizations. Let us note some of these undesirable outgrowths:

(1) Disturbance and unrest beset the family which has a submarginal income. Delinquency, both adult and juvenile, begins to show itself. The peace of the home is destroyed, and divorce often ensues. Thus the home is broken and the society has its problems multiplied.

(2) Talent which might have been expended for the good of society becomes either lost or diverted to other channels. We must face the fact that enthusiastic individuals, possessed with vision, consecration and capacity, become terribly discouraged when they fail to accomplish their objectives because circumstances beyond their control throw a barricade in their pathway.

Two incidents have occurred recently in our national program which should give us much concern:

(1) The Reverend K. V. Shutes, promotional secretary for national superannuation, has been forced to accept a pastorate and give only part time to the work of superannuation.

For fourteen years this editor served as administrative officer for the superannuation board, giving his time and energy to the program during its infancy. He served the entire time without pay. During this time the board accumulated a reserve of more than $5,000 for expansion of the program. In two recent sessions of the National Association, the association voted to divert $3,000 of this reserve from superannuation to another agency.

At its 1955 meeting the National Superannuation Board voted to employ a full-time promotional secretary, and the Reverend K. V. Shutes was employed. This move was made because the board needed someone to raise money for expansion of the program in answer to much criticism from the field that the program was not growing fast enough. At that time the editor turned over to Mr. Shutes a little more than $1,800 which remained in the treasury. During the next nine months Mr. Shutes and his wife gave themselves unreservedly to the work of superannuation; but they met with discouragement on every hand. We cannot describe the disappointment which came to us, and which surely came to K. V. Shutes, when he was forced, because of lack of support, to reduce the work of the office again to a part-time basis.

(2) The Reverend Damon C. Dodd has resigned as promotional secretary for national home missions. Since we do not have firsthand information of the working of this board throughout the years, we must draw our conclusion as to what underlies his resignation. Let us quote from his last news letter as promotional secretary for the board, dated August 27, 1956:

"However, our funds as of now have been completely expended and we have nothing with which to pay our missionaries or our outstanding accounts. We need $3,000 in offerings during the month of September to enable the home mission board to maintain its regular program and support the home mission teams. . . ."

Do you not agree with us that submarginal incomes in these two instances have brought a serious situation into our midst?

Plan of Salvation

Rev. Edward E. Morris

(Editor's Note: The following article is an adaptation of Chapter 4 of the book entitled Handbook of Free Will Baptist Doctrine written by Rev. Edward E. Morris for preachers, teachers and laymen.)

SE EK ye the LORD while he may be found, call ye upon him while he is near: Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts: and let him return unto the LORD, and he will have mercy upon him; and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon" (Isaiah 55:6, 7).

Seek ye the LORD. This word seek means to go in search of, look for, restore to, inquire for, to make search or inquiry, try or endeavor. "But if from thence thou shalt seek the LORD thy God, thou shalt find him, if thou seek him with all thy heart and with all thy soul. When thou art in tribulation, and all these things are come upon thee, even in the latter days, if thou turn to the LORD thy God, and shalt be obedient unto his voice; (For the LORD thy God is a merciful God;) he will not forsake thee, neither destroy thee, . . ." (Deuteronomy 4:29-31).

Jesus sets forth the necessity of seeking in Luke 11:9-13: "And I say unto you, Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you. For every one that asketh receiveth; and he that seeketh findeth; and to him that knocketh it shall be opened. If a son shall ask bread of any of you that is a father, will he give him a stone? or if he ask a fish, will he for a fish give him a serpent? Or if he shall ask an egg, will he offer him a scorpion? If ye then, being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children: how much more shall your heavenly Father give the Holy Spirit to them that ask him?"

Here is one of the conditions of salvation: you are to seek the Lord. Jesus said, Strive to enter in at the strait gate. This seeking must be with the whole heart which is tired of sin and is longing for something better. Ye shall seek and ye shall find. So, if you want to find eternal life, seek for it. Look, inquire, ask. Jesus said, ye shall receive. Now as we come to the second phase of this subject, I want you to note that the seeking is to be done while he may be found.

" . . . they shall seek me early, but they shall not find me" (Proverbs 1:28). " . . . those that seek me early shall find me" (Proverbs 8:17). In Luke 13:24, 25 we find, "Strive to enter in at the strait gate: for many, I say unto you, will seek to enter in and shall not be able. When once the master of the house is risen up, and hath shut to the door, and ye begin to stand without, and to knock at the door, saying Lord, Lord, open unto us; and he shall answer and say unto you, I know you not whence ye are." There is a time for men to be saved—when they have the gospel call to repentance. One of the writers said, "Today is the day of salvation, if ye hear His voice harden not your hearts." It is dangerous to fight against God. When He calls, answer, for He has the words of eternal life.

Call ye upon him while he is near. "And it shall come to pass, that whosoever shall call on the name of the Lord shall be saved" (Acts 2:21). "For whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved" (Romans 10:13). Calling upon the name of the Lord is essential and a part of God's plan for the salvation of sinners. Jesus has always heard the sinner's plea. " . . . God be merciful unto me a sinner. . . . this man went down to his house justified . . ." (Luke 18:13). Calling upon God is still necessary.

Let the wicked forsake his way and the unrighteous man his thoughts. Forsake means to leave, depart, abandon. In Colossians 3:1-8 you will find what He means for you to forsake—anger, wrath, malice, blasphemy, adultery, drunkenness and so on. One of the things that is wrong with the world today is that men want to be children of God, but they don't want to depart from their wickedness. To become a child of God means to forsake everything that is unlike Christ and take up your cross and follow Him. There is not any such thing as a whiskey-drinking, beer-guzzling child of God. The standards of Christianity today are just as high as they have ever been. I am persuaded to believe that too many are joining the church who are strangers to the Cross of Calvary, for He sets men free from the law of sin and death and we are no longer the servants of sin but the servants of God.

Let him return unto the LORD and he will have mercy upon him. Isaiah 1:18 says, "Come now, and let us reason together, saith the LORD: though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow; though they be red like crimson they shall be as wool." The time to come is now. The thing to do is to reason together with the Lord. It does not make any difference to God about how old you are, or how long you have been a sinner. God is willing to save you if you are willing to give up and plead guilty. He'll wash you white as snow. I want you to remember that God has already made His move: Jesus has died, the atonement is made, the table is spread. All things are now ready. But you will never eat or drink at the fountain of life until you come—come humbly with the longing in your heart for something better, higher, greater and nobler; the Lord will move in and live with you. Jeremiah 31:34 says, "I will forgive their iniquity and I will remember their sin no more." Thanks be to God that when our sins are forgiven they are forgotten and will be remembered against us no more. God's pardon is full and complete. This pardon sets men free from the law of sin and death.

Paul said in Acts 26:18, "To open their eyes, and to turn them from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto God, that they may receive forgiveness of sins, and inheritance among them which are sanctified by faith that is in me." So, if you want pardon from sin, seek the Lord. Seek Him while he may be found; call upon him. All of this must be when godly sorrow has convicted you and you have become anxious enough to forsake the ways of the world and follow in the footprints of Jesus.

In Luke 15:11-32, a young man said to his father, "Give me the portion of goods that falleth to me." The father didn't argue with him about it. He gave him his portion; and not many days after this young man took a journey into a far country. There he wasted his substance in riotous living. Your life is your own. God is not going to compel you to stay at home. In fact, Jesus said, "He that keepeth his life shall lose it, but he that loseth his life for my sake shall keep it unto life everlasting." So it is with your life. You can keep it and waste it in riotous living. That is your prerogative. This young man came to want; so will you. No doubt those that had enjoyed spending his money deserted him when it was gone. He was tired, hungry; and he went and joined himself unto a citizen of that country and he sent him into the field to feed the swine. He was so hungry he could have eaten with the swine. Isn't it a shame that people have to come down to the very bottom sometimes before they realize that God has plenty and to spare?

This young man came to himself. This world needs to come to itself today. If it would, there would be a great home-coming. He remembered that his father had plenty and to spare, and he said, "I will arise and I will go to my father and I will say, I have sinned against heaven and before thee." Here's your confession. If you are lost, you will have to make one too. The father forgave this son when he came home, and our heavenly Father will forgive the lost when they come home. When are you coming home if you are lost? Everyone says, "I am going to be saved. I aim to be saved." That's all good, but when are you going to be saved? The father of this son said, "... this my son was dead, and is alive again; he was lost, and is found. . . ." (Vs. 24).

All are dead in trespasses and in sins, but when they come home and receive that more abundant life that is in Christ, they have complete forgiveness of sins and are children of God. If you are lost, why don't you hurry home? The table is still spread and the Father is still willing to forgive.

Superannuation Month

REV. M. L. JOHNSON

SINCE again we come to the month which has been designated, in our united program, as "Superannuation Month." It is hoped that every Free Will Baptist church, Sunday school, league, auxiliary and other organizations, as well as many individuals, will make liberal donations to superannuation during October.

As we come once again to consider this very worthy cause, let us pause to ask ourselves, "Are we doing what we should?" Are you satisfied with what you have done? I am happy for the progress that we have made. We are doing much more than we did ten years ago, but we are still far behind. I doubt that we can find another denomination in our state that is as large as ours, with as much as we have, and yet does as little for its retired ministers and ministers' widows as we do. There is much to be desired in this field of our work. We now have 24 retired ministers who receive regular monthly pension checks and 23 widows who receive regular quarterly pension checks. While we are happy to be able to send these checks, yet we realize the amount of the checks is very small compared with the unselfish service rendered by these people while they were able. We need very much to increase these checks and to add many others to the list. However, the only way for these increases to come about is for our people to give more for this cause. You can help by making sure that you and your group, do the very best you can. Those who served us in the past are counting on us now.

It has been a source of great pleasure to be associated with this work for the past thirteen years. I have been able to know just how much these small checks are appreciated by the ministers and widows. I am afraid we do not appreciate the sacrifices they have made in the past nearly as much as they appreciate being remembered now. If you could just sit down with me and talk with some of them, or read some of the many letters which I have received from these ministers and widows, I believe you would try to do more for superannuation. They were faithful while they were able to serve, and we cannot afford to overlook them now; they are counting on us. Please let's not let them down.

All funds for superannuation should now be sent to Rev. Wilbert Everton, Route 3, Wilson, North Carolina.

Dr. Carl Armerding and his son, Hudson Taylor Armerding, were sitting in a meeting. As one of God's servants preached the wondrous gospel of the grace of God, tears filled the eyes of Dr. Armerding. Said he to his son, "Son, why does a man act like this?" Said the son, "Dad, thank God that you can act that way!" God save us from a "dry-eyed" religion!—Selected.

WHO IS RESPONSIBLE?

MRS. J. W. ARNOLD
Whitesboro, Texas

RECENTLY a good man resigned a church before his time was up. He was heard to say about his former church, "I am afraid that it will never do too much good, as there have been too many preachers there of the wrong kind who have ruined the name of Free Will Baptists in that city."

The question is who is responsible for these evil doers being over our churches? Who lays hands on men who haven't proven themselves, to ordain them?

One man said, "I want my ordination that I may be able to take over the duties of a church." But that man was not fit to be over his own home, much less a church. This man left the church that he was pastoring because of trouble that he caused, went to a neighboring church and asked to be ordained. He got his wish!

Our elders who will ordain a man such as this are guilty too, for they are turning him loose on our churches to kill and destroy them. If a man cannot prove himself, he definitely does not need to be ordained!

"This is a true saying, If a man desire the office of a bishop, he desireth a good work. A bishop then must be blameless, the husband of one wife, vigilant, sober, of good behaviour, given to hospitality, apt to teach; Not given to wine, no striker, not greedy of filthy lucre; but patient, not a brawler, not covetous; One that ruleth well his own house, having his children in subjection with all gravity; (For if a man know not how to rule his own house, how shall he take care of the church of God?) Not a novice, lest being lifted up with pride he fall into the condemnation of the devil. Moreover he must have a good report of them which are without; lest he fall into reproach and the snare of the devil. Like wise must the deacons be grave, not double-tongued, not given to much wine, not greedy of filthy lucre; Holding the mystery of the faith in a pure conscience. And let these also first be proved; then let them use the office of a deacon, being found blameless. Even so must their wives be grave, not slanderers, sober, faithful in all things. Let the deacons be the husbands of one wife, ruling their children and their own houses well. For they that have used the office of a deacon well purchase to themselves a good degree, and great boldness in the faith which is in Christ Jesus" (1 Timothy 3:1-13).

We can see by this Scripture what our bishops should be; and unless they measure up to this standard, they should not be

Home-Coming at the Church

MARIETTA D. WILLIS

It's always such a pleasant thing

To hear the people pray and sing;
To see them walking down the aisle

With sober faces or a smile.
And when the sermon's at an end,
To clasp the hand of an old, old friend;
Friends who've been away so long,

Now strolling about among the throng.
Dinner is served upon the ground
And nature's blessings do abound.

Some of the faces there are new,
And others are older, not a few.

It makes us think of times gone by
When we were young; how time does fly!

So then before we've had a chance
To talk with all, or get a glance;
The church again rebounds with song,
So back we enter with the throng,
To hear again the people sing

In praises to the Lord our King.
But now we look and dim the sky,
So with a sigh we say good-by.

Questions and Answers ON THE BIBLE

Conducted by J. F. BARROW

3824 Richland Avenue, Nashville 5, Tennessee

QUESTION: I would like for you to explain the ninth chapter of Romans, especially Verses 11-14, so as to give a correct view on predestination.—Mrs. Aurie Hayes, Arapahoe, North Carolina.

ANSWER: In the exposition of this passage of Scripture we must follow the general rule of interpreting a passage of Scripture in the light of its context and also in harmony with every other passage in the Bible that gives light on the subject. This also includes passages that seem to present a counter truth if there be such passages. The observance of this rule is, of course, governed or limited by the knowledge the one expounding the passage or truth has of the whole Bible. Since I fall far short of a complete knowledge of all that the Bible teaches on predestination, what is said here will not give a complete comprehensive view on the subject. When we speak of God's predestinating something we simply mean that He pre-arranges its destiny or end according to His foreknowledge. God has known the end of all things from the beginning so well that He did not wait until He had made the world and the living things that move in it, including Adam and Eve, before He gave Jesus as the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world, but instead He offered Him as the Lamb slain before the foundation of the world. "And all that dwell upon the earth shall worship him, whose names are not written in the book of life of the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world" (Revelation 13:8). Compare John 3:14-17; Isaiah 53:7; John 1:29; 1 Corinthians 5:7; 1 Peter 1:19; Revelation 7:10; 12:11; 14:1; 15:3; 17:14; 19:9; 21:22.

Having done this He knew how to plan every feature of worship from the time He killed animals (Genesis 3:21) to make complete coverings to serve instead of the fig-leaf aprons, in the direction of Cain and Abel in a proper mode of worship (Genesis 4:4; Hebrews 11:4), together with all of the Old Testament saints that offered blood sacrifices in worship. This, of course, includes the tabernacle and temple with each feature of their ritual. The continued burnt offering, the daily lamb, the morning and the evening sacrifices, as well as the two goats, the slain goat and the scape goat that were offered on the day of atonement with all else included in Jewish worship. These served as an index finger pointing to the time when Christ should actually die on the Cross for our sins. He was the antitype that each of these types represented and continued to call the attention of the worshipers to as they participated in this type of worship service. God the Father, you see, had prearranged (predestinated) the sacrifice of His Son on Calvary and was pointing to it daily, weekly, yearly, etc., keeping His followers reminded that they were redeemed sinners, redeemed by one arranged to be offered as a sacrifice by the divine counsel before the earth was created. We are reminded of the same sacrifice, viz., that of Christ on the Cross when we partake of the Lord's Supper. In this we look back to the Cross and Christ's suffering there for our sins. We are to continue this practice until He comes.

It was prearranged that the Jews continue in their type of worship until He came the first time. It has been predestined, pre-planned, that we take the Lord's Supper until He comes the second time and takes us to be with Himself. Jesus knows us now much better than we know ourselves. Matthew 10:29, 30 tells us that neither a sparrow falls from the tree nor a hair from our heads but that He knows about it. In Romans 8:27-30 we are told that God searches all things, that He knows the mind of the Spirit, that all things work together for good to them that love God, etc. "For whom he did foreknow, he also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of his Son, that he might be the firstborn among many brethren" (Romans 8:29). In this verse we have the basic truth that underlies all Biblical teaching on the subject of predestination.

God has always known how many people would be born as descendants of Adam, when Adam would commit his first sin, how many descendants of his would be lost, how many saved, every thought each would think or have from birth to the grave and what experiences of all kinds each would have. Knowing all this and loving everybody He provided the kind of means of salvation that would make certain the largest per cent of saved people. When He made you and me in His own image after His own likeness, free moral agents, beings with the power of choice between good and evil, then He limited Himself in His relation to us. He could not deal with us as though we were a robot or mechanical device. He could only deal with us in the sphere in which He placed us and in which He predestinated or planned to keep us. In this realm He offers us certain things but cannot or will not force us to accept them. He first made it possible for Adam to have fellowship and happiness with Himself in that pure, free from sin state in which He created Adam and Eve. Eve and Adam chose their own ways rather than God's way. God knew that they would do this before He made them, but still He made them for His own glory. He does not want any one member of the human family to be lost, therefore He has provided a way of escape from this sinful condition in the gift of Christ. "The Lord is not slack concerning his promise, as some men count slackness; but is longsuffering to us-ward, not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance" (2 Peter 3:9); "Come now, and let us reason together, saith the LORD: though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool" (Isaiah 1:18); "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets, and stonest them which are sent unto thee, how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not" (Matthew 23:37); "But as many as received him, to them gave he the power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name (John 1:12); "That if thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved. For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness; and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation" (Romans 10:9, 10). Now God invites us in pleading and enticing language to accept His way promising eternal life to those that come to Him. "Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart: and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light" (Matthew 11:28-30).

These Scriptures together with many others throughout the Old and the New Testament make it clear that God has not arbitrarily condemned anyone to eternal destruction without having first provided a way of salvation and then inviting him to accept His provision.

The Lighted Pathway

Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path
(PSALM 119:105).

REV. WILLET L. MORETZ
SWANNAHOA, N. C.

"For now we see through a glass darkly; but then face to face; now I know in part; but then shall I know even as also I am known" (1 Corinthians 13:12).

Soon after the death of my father, in December, 1931, my mother asked me a question which is one frequently asked and which demands much thought to be able to correctly answer. Her question was, "Will we be able to recognize our loved ones in heaven?" I assured her that I believed we would know each other there and quoted to her the words of the text. These words seemed to satisfy my mother just as they have proved a source of satisfaction to thousands of others in their days of loss of loved ones.

Soon after the death of one of the leading preachers of our denomination, his almost invalid widow asked if I thought her husband could look back to this earth and know of her suffering while left here to do the best she could without his love and care. My answer there was that she would always have his love and the God would provide someone to care for her; and that he would look forward to that time when her suffering would be over, and they would be together, this time forever.

It is a question of no little difficulty to determine what the difference shall be between our present bodily state where soul and body are united, and that in which we shall be out of the body and we are dependent for its solution upon the Word of God. It would seem, however, first of all, that there is no warrant whatever for the materialistic idea that the soul is unable to feel or to act without bodily organs. The state of trance, prophetic vision, the apostles being caught up to the third heaven and hearing unutterable things, would all seem to point in the opposite direction. Still, the question whether we shall know the loved ones who have gone into eternity before us when we get there is one that interests us all and must be answered in the light of Scripture, not so much by direct affirmation as by reasonable inference. This question I shall try, by God's help and direction, in this and subsequent articles, to answer. For we know that they have not ceased to exist, and, if saved, they are in heaven. But when we enter the many mansions habitation, shall we know them, and they us?

The poet has asked the question in the following lines:

"When the holy angels meet us,

As we go to join their band;

Shall we know the friends that greet us

In that glorious spirit-land?"

Millions have gone through the gateway of death, but none have returned to tell us of what is there, so that we cannot adduce the testimony of experience. Reason would point in favor of heavenly recognition, rather than against it. It would be reasonable that those we have known and loved here, we shall know and love in heaven. It would be irrational to suppose that any such transformation shall take place at death as shall destroy the affections God has put into our hearts and has bidden us to cherish. It would be a dreary thought that human friendships are only for earth; that they end in death, and that we shall enter heaven, one by one, as strangers in a strange land, unremembered and unrecognized by those we have loved and who have loved us in this world; that the mother who has watched with tenderest love, in sickness and in health, the child that has gone before should be to that child in heaven as if she had never known it. It is a cold, hard, repulsive thought. We know that love is right. God is love and commands us to love one another. All the divine precepts unite in this. Friends in Christ here shall meet as friends there. Praise God for that assurance!

CHRIST FOR ALL OUR NEED

1. Christ is our Salvation (Luke 2:27-30).
If you have found Christ you have found salvation (Luke 19:9; Isaiah 12:2; 49:6).
2. Christ is our Life (Colossians 3:4).
Christ spoke more upon this than upon any other subject (John 10:10; 1 John 5:12).
3. Christ is our Teacher (John 3:2).
We are invited to come and learn from Him (Matthew 11:29; Acts 1:1).
4. Christ is our Strength (Philippians 4:13).
What a discovery Paul made—not he but Christ (Galatians 2:20; Ephesians 6:10; Psalm 18:2).
5. Christ is our Peace (Ephesians 2:13, 14).
He came not to "make peace"—He is our Peace (Colossians 1:20; Romans 14:19).
6. Christ is our Victory (1 Corinthians 15:57).
Victory now and victory in the future life (Romans 8:37; Philippians 3:20, 21).
7. Christ is our Hope (1 Timothy 1:1).
Plans of men fail—Christ brings hope (Colossians 1:27; Daniel 7:13, 14).

THE BLESSED MAN

REV. J. F. MILLER

BLESSED is the man that walketh not in the counsel of the ungodly, . . ." (Psalm 1:1). The word ungodly means wicked, sinful or impious. When a Christian, by his own volition, walks in the counsel of the ungodly he will find himself unhappy. The word counsel means advice or consultation. When a Christian begins to seek advice from the ungodly man he finds himself in a state of confusion.

The unregenerated man does not have a mind that is subject to spiritual things. Romans 8:7 says, "Because the carnal mind is enmity against God: for it is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be."

Therefore if a Christian seeks counsel from the ungodly man, he finds his interest divided between the spiritual and the carnal; and no man is big enough to be happy when his interest is divided.

" . . . nor standeth in the way of sinners, . . ." (Psalm 1:1). It is not to be understood that Christians are not to associate with sinners, but that they are not to stand in their sinful ways. They should, by their ways, testify to the sinner of the new life and the new-found joys of the spiritual life.

" . . . nor sitteth in the seat of the scornful" (Psalm 1:1). When a man, by his own choice, sits in the company of the scornful, he puts himself in a relation to his Creator and Maker in which he has no right to expect to be happy. And at this very point the devil takes the advantage of the Christian, suggesting to him that happiness may be found by partaking of the things which are part of the life of the ungodly man. No happiness is found in the things of the world, for the man who has had a born again experience.

" . . . his delight is in the law of the LORD; and in his law doth he meditate day and night" (Psalm 1:2). The blessed man delights in the law of the Lord. The godly man finds such joy in the planning of his life in the will of God that he has no desire for the trashy, perishable things of the world.

The blessed man has the assurance of the fruitfulness of his life. " . . . he . . . bringeth forth his fruit in his season; . . ." (Psalm 1:3). What could bring more joy to the heart of a man than to see the fruits of his labor in the souls that he has won to the Lord? " . . . he that winneth souls is wise" (Proverbs 11:30).

In the gospel according to John we have the challenging truth of fruit bearing in three degrees—fruit, much fruit and more fruit. Men who have a Godlikeness are separated from the world, and are kept by the power of God through faith ready to be revealed. They have assurance of peace, joy and satisfaction in this world, and in the world to come eternal life.

What more could any man wish for than that which has been promised him by the God who never fails—the God who is able to keep and does keep every promise that He has made to His obedient children. To obey is to be happy. It is our duty to obey, and God in return will make us happy. Blessed is the man who believes God.

WHO IS RESPONSIBLE?

ordained and put over our churches. Should we not be careful lest we ordain a man who is not qualified? Are we not taking things out of God's hands? "Lay hands suddenly on no man, neither be partaker of other men's sins: keep thyself pure" (1 Timothy 5:22).

"A good thing about telling the truth is that you don't have to remember what you said; but a good memory is needed once you have lied."—Highland Park, Michigan, Church Bulletin.

"It is not the amount of our praying that brings about our forgiveness but the greatness of the mercy of God."

Seven Great Invitations

1. The invitation to Noah and his family (Genesis 7:1).
Interesting in that it is a type to us (John 14:4; Acts 4:12).
2. The invitation to the patriarch Abraham (Genesis 12:1-3).
Another type—called out people (Hebrews 11:8-10; Acts 15:14; 2 Corinthians 6:17).
3. The invitation to come for soul rest (Matthew 11:28-30).
It is the desire of man to seek rest and peace (Philippians 4:7, 9; Isaiah 55:1-3).
4. The invitation to receive the Spirit (John 7:37, 39).
A gift promised to every believer (Romans 8:14, 15; John 16:7).
5. The invitation to accept the great salvation (Luke 14:17).
The invitation here in parable form. Jews' reaction (Luke 14:18; Romans 1:16).
6. The invitation to meet the coming Christ (Titus 2:13, 14).
This invitation sounded out today. To all mankind (Revelation 22:17).
7. The invitation of all invitations (Revelation 22:17).
The Bible thus closes with an invitation (Acts 2:37-39; 10:34, 36; Mark 16:15, 16).

It Hurts Me

He who holds a grudge injures himself more than the one against whom he cherishes the spirit of spite. Hatred and malice, like anger and worry, are injurious to the body, since they poison the blood. More serious is the injury which they bring to personality. A bad spirit paralyzes the powers which should help to refine our natures and make for finer character. And this spirit of ill has a strange way of increasing, for "a grudge is the only thing that does not get better when it is nursed." Indeed, nursing a grievance makes it seem worse and causes it to assume still larger proportions in one's mind.—Selected.

NOTES — AND — QUOTES

By J. C. Griffin

THE HOLY SPIRIT AS PRESENTED BY CHRIST

There are many ideas that men have concocted concerning the Holy Spirit which are unsound, unbiblical and contrary to the evidence set forth by the writers of both the Old and New Testaments. So it is our purpose to give you a few of the facts, as given in the Bible. We shall also discuss some of the teachings of man that are contrary to the Bible.

The Holy Spirit Convicts Us of Sin

Jesus says, in His promise to send the Holy Spirit, "And when he is come, he will reprove the world of sin, and of righteousness, and of judgment" (John 16:8). If we were never convicted for our sins, we would never repent. But the Holy Spirit comes with His convicting power and shows us that we are lost sinners. Thus, seeing ourselves lost and under the condemnation of the Almighty, we are led to confess our sins and seek the Lord Jesus as our personal Saviour. His promise, Seek and ye shall find, is then in full effect.

A sinner under conviction can never be happy until he has fully repented of his sins, accepted the Lord Jesus, and become obedient to the teaching of the Lord. When we have met the conditions as to confession and forsaking of our sins and cast all care on Jesus, we are born again or born of the Spirit.

Born Again—Born of the Spirit

Jesus said, "... Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God" (John 3:3). After Nicodemus had questioned Jesus about the spiritual birth, "Jesus answered, Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God" (John 3:5). We have not found sufficient proof in the Bible to substantiate the doctrine that any man can be born of the Spirit without repenting, turning from sin, and surrendering his life to Christ. As I see it from a careful study of God's Word, no one can be born of the Spirit and say, "I believe in Jesus Christ as my Saviour," until he has been reprov'd and convicted that he is a lost sinner.

The Philippian jailer said, "Sirs, what must I do to be saved?" This jailer realized that he was lost and wanted to be saved. The Holy Spirit had brought this conviction and he wanted to be saved. Someone may say that there is nothing said about the Holy Spirit in connection with this event. That is true, but Paul says, "Wherefore I give you to understand, that no man speaking by the Spirit of God calleth Jesus accursed: and that no man can say that Jesus is the Lord, but by the Holy Ghost" (1 Corinthians 12:3). So we believe that it was the Holy Spirit who moved Paul and Silas to sing at midnight and pray. We believe that it was the Holy Spirit who motivated the actions of Paul and Silas and brought about a supernatural manifestation of God's power, causing the jailer to call on the name of Jesus with a yielding of all to Christ. So he was led to obey the teachings of the Lord by washing the stripes of the prisoners, and making them his guests after baptism was received by himself and his household. This leads me to believe that they were born of water and of the Holy Ghost.

Empowered by the Holy Ghost to Witness

"But ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you: and ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judaea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth" (Acts 1:8). Thus we are only able to witness for Christ after that we have truly repented of sins, fully believed in the Lord Jesus Christ as our personal Saviour, and been made partakers of divine nature. Let us notice what Peter says about this divine nature. "Whereby are given unto us exceeding great and precious promises: that by these ye might be partakers of the divine nature, having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust" (2 Peter 1:4). Only a born again child of God can have the divine nature. A person who is born again is born of water and of the Spirit as described in John 3:5.

The Holy Spirit Leads God's Children

"For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God" (Romans 8:14). The Spirit of God, who is the Holy Spirit, leads us to repentance, to true conversion, to a true satisfying fellowship with God the Father and the Lord Jesus Christ, and an obedience to the command and the teaching of the Lord Jesus.

"But ye are not in the flesh, but in the Spirit, if so be that the Spirit of God dwell in you. Now if any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his" (Romans 8:9).

The Holy Spirit, an Intercessor

"Likewise the Spirit also helpeth our infirmities: for we know not what we should pray for as we ought: but the Spirit itself maketh intercession for us with groanings which cannot be uttered. And he that mind of the Spirit, because he maketh intercession for the saints according to the will of God" (Romans 8:26, 27). We are also told, "... Christ ... also maketh intercession for us" (Romans 8:34). Thus the Holy for us" (Romans 8:34). Thus the Holy Ghost or Holy Spirit and the Lord Jesus maketh intercession for us. So we do not need any other intercessor. The claim of another intercessor is a man-made claim. It is not Biblical.

The Names Given to the Holy Spirit

Some names given to the Holy Spirit are Holy Ghost, the Spirit of Grace, the Spirit of Truth, the Spirit of Life, the Spirit of Promise, the Spirit of God and of Christ. The same attributes that are given to the Father and to the Son are also given to the Holy Ghost or Holy Spirit. This substantiates the fact that the Father, the Son and the Holy Spirit form the Trinity. They are identical, but have different personalities. Jesus says, "And I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you for ever; Even the Spirit of truth; whom the world cannot receive, because it seeth him not, neither knoweth him: but ye know him; for he dwelleth with you, and shall be in you" (John 14:16, 17).

Notice that Jesus said, I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another Comforter. May we notice the twenty-sixth verse of this chapter: "But the Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my name, he shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you." Here Jesus says I will pray the Father. Thus the first Person is the Father, the second Person is Jesus, and the third Person is the Holy Ghost or the Comforter. These make three Persons. These three Persons form the Trinity.

Pastor Russell and his children do not accept the Trinity. Some other cult religionists deny the Holy Trinity too. May we notice another verse of Scripture found in John 15:26, "But when the Comforter is come, whom I will send unto you from the Father, even the Spirit of truth, which proceedeth from the Father, he shall testify of me." Notice again, Christ says, I will send. Send from whom? Yes, the Father. What is the Comforter's mission here? He shall testify of me.

BOYS and GIRLS

"Sunday School Boy"

CHESTER SHULER

JOHN opened his eyes and blinked. At first he wondered where he was. The room was not familiar. And then he remembered! He was at Uncle Henry's house, in the big city. And it was Lord's Day morning, at that.

With a bound, John was out of the comfortable bed and getting into his best clothes. He must look his nicest when he went to the big city church. Again, he heard Mom's words, as he was leaving home, "Be real polite, John. And be sure you go to Sunday school. You know you haven't missed in three years. There's a nice, big church just about two blocks from your uncle's home," she had added.

John listened. The big house was very still. Uncle and aunt and cousin Gretchen didn't seem to be awake yet. He looked at his watch. Why—it was getting late! They would miss Sunday school if they didn't soon get moving! Maybe he had better call them—but no, that wouldn't be polite.

At home Sunday school began at nine o'clock. But, of course, they didn't have far to go in the city. Only two blocks, Mom had said. That was O. K. After another fifteen minutes of silence, John began to walk around uneasily. Besides, he was hungry. And then he heard one of the bedroom doors open upstairs. Soft, padded footfalls sounded on the steps, and Uncle Henry came down. He was wearing a robe, and his hair hadn't been combed.

"Hello, there, my boy," he grinned. "What's the matter? Couldn't you sleep well?"

"Oh, yes, Uncle Henry. But it's getting—er—that is, I thought I'd better get up, or we might be late for Sunday school, or something, and—"

Uncle Henry had gone out the front door. Now he returned, his arms full of Sunday newspapers. He tossed the funnies to John. "Umm—" he mumbled, looking at the headlines. "Sunday school, eh? That's right—I suppose you go to Sunday school out in the country, don't you, Johnny?"

John started, and felt queer in the tum-

my. "Oh, yes, Uncle Henry. I haven't missed a Sunday in three years. I'm to have a nice Bible as a reward from our school if I go five years without missing. I wonder, Uncle Henry," he rattled on eagerly, "if they give attendance credit cards at your Sunday school. Mom said I'm not to forget to ask for mine, so our superintendent will know I was in Sunday school today."

Uncle Henry suddenly lost interest in the headlines. "Credit cards, eh—? Oh, I see. Yes, I've an idea they have some, Johnny. Well, now, you see—" Uncle Henry seemed to be having difficulty finding words—which was odd for a famous lawyer, John reflected. "You see, there's usually so much to be done around the house Sunday morning, and we just don't seem to make the grade, you know. But of course—" he hesitated again, and scratched his tousled head, "I know how your Mom feels about such things, and I don't want you to break your record, so-o-o—You know what? I'm going to wake those gals now, and maybe—just maybe, Son—they'll decide to get ready." He bounded up several steps, then paused: "You're quite a missionary, Johnny!"

John listened. There was subdued conversation upstairs. Then banging of some doors, and soft footfalls. After bit, Uncle Henry came bounding down again, dressed, and looking happier. John thought how much he looked like his own daddy used to look, when he "played boy" too! Soon they were eating a hurried breakfast.

John wondered why his uncle kept watching the window. He wondered, too, whether the women were going to Sunday school. But he didn't ask; maybe that would not be polite. They were just finishing breakfast, when Uncle Henry muttered: "I never thought they would do it!"

John turned and saw—Aunt Alice and pretty Gretchen coming down the stairs. Uncle Henry sprang to his feet and urged them to take a bite to eat. But they shook their heads. Gretchen was smiling at John. "Hello, there, Mr. Missionary," she joked. "May we go with you to church, please?"

John felt so happy inside, he was afraid a big tear might come into one of his blue eyes! "Oh, boy!" was all he could say—and then he wondered whether it was polite to say such things in the city!

The doings in the city Sunday school were so different from those in the little church at home that John was kept in wonderment for the next hour.

After Sunday school was over Uncle Henry asked if John would like to go to church. "Sure," he said; "but maybe they wouldn't like it—" He nodded toward the ladies.

"Oh, but 'they' would like to, John," laughed Aunt Alice.

The sermon wasn't so interesting as those at home, because he couldn't understand some of the huge words the minister used, but John enjoyed being there—and especially having his folks with him.

At the noon meal everyone seemed in good spirits. "I believe early rising agrees with us, Henry," smiled Aunt Alice. "I believe I'll go back to that ladies' class again next Sunday. They were as sociable as could be, and I discovered that some of my best friends are members too."

"I liked the girls' class too," cousin Gretchen said. "I never dreamed that Harriet Speece, who works with me in the office, was a member, but there she was, sitting next to me! She made me acquainted with a lot of young folks—and wants me to come back this evening to the youth meeting . . . says there are lots of nice boys come to that!"

Uncle Henry looked at John and laughed, as he slipped him a second hunk of chocolate cake instead of eating it himself. "Well, Mr. Missionary Boy, it looks as though you can report to your Mom that you not only went to Sunday school, and were polite as could be, but you also did a lot of good among the 'city heathen relatives' of yours. For your Uncle Henry's sure going back to that men's Bible class again next week—even if the women do forget to go."

"Don't worry about us, John," Gretchen laughed. "Dad will oversleep if any of us does—it won't be your cousin, I can promise you!"

"Oh, boy," gulped John. "That'll be—great!" He guessed he ought to say something more polite than that, but anyway, he felt very, very happy inside!

Being a Christian, and a Sunday school boy, was O. K. after all—even when visiting in the big city.—My Pleasure.

Attention Youth Chairmen of North Carolina

For several months the young people's Sunday school class of my church had been wondering whom it could secure to replace its efficient class treasurer who would be leaving for college this fall. He had been such an inspiration and challenge to loyalty as he had faithfully performed his duty in the class, but no one could ever think of him stopping short of developing his God-given potentialities by not preparing his life for a nobler and fuller service to God and man.

Recently I met him on the church steps and asked, "When are you leaving for college?"

He dropped his head and said in a despondent tone, "I won't be leaving."

"Why, what has happened?" I asked anxiously.

"Finances. I had hoped until the end that something would work out for me, but it hasn't," he said.

Friends, this was an actual conversation with one of our promising young Free Will Baptist boys, but his case is one of the many that challenge us today. How I wanted to say, "We have the answer to your problem. Provisions may be made for you through our Anna Phillips Loan Fund." But I could not do that.

The Anna Phillips Loan Fund has come to the rescue of many worthy boys and girls and has set them on the road to a successful life of service. Many of our pulpits are filled with men who would testify that they are what they are first, because of the Grace of God and secondly, because the Anna Phillips Loan Fund made its contribution to their lives.

Our day of opportunity for our youth is at hand and they challenge us. God has given us the institutions through which they may be trained. Now, can we afford to fail them?

The Anna Phillips Loan Fund Committee wishes to make the following suggestions:

1. That each local auxiliary youth chairman seek to establish a systematic method of support for the loan fund. This may be done through the use of the Anna Phillips Loan Fund charts that can be obtained through the Free Will Baptist Press, Ayden, North Carolina.

2. That each district youth chairman put the urgent need before our auxiliary conventions as they convene during the next few weeks, and that they ask that consideration of the loan fund be made in the allocations.

There is no worthier cause than an investment in the lives of our Christian youth. Our sincere desire is that we may be able to give assistance to some of our waiting applicants by the second semester of school, and this need may be met with your assistance in this worthy cause.

Prayer and Praise Letter

September 4, 1956

Dear Prayer Partner,

We here in the foreign mission department like to think of you as a prayer partner in the cause of Christ. "Ye also, as lively stones, are built up a spiritual house, a holy priesthood, to offer up spiritual sacrifices, acceptable to God by Jesus Christ (1 Peter 2:5). We who are saved have an obligation to pray one for another especially to intercede on behalf of lost souls everywhere.

REPORT FROM AFRICA

Our first preliminary report re—the survey of our African field has just recently arrived from Brother and Sister Stevens. We submit it in part in this letter. "The survey of the Bondoukou Circle of the Ivory Coast has been completed with no mishaps. We felt His presence went before in every circumstance. I will not attempt to give detailed account here, we are working on the report to the mission board, which will include quite a number of typewritten pages, this report will be sent by air mail within three or four days.

"The Ivory Coast is a section of French West Africa and one missionary has put it very well when he said the whole area is a land of spiritual destitution. The Bondoukou (pronounced Bunduku) Circle which has been ceded to the National Association of Free Will Baptists is 150 miles wide and 250 miles long with 185,000 people speaking four major languages. Among such a great host of people there is only one little ray of witness for Christ. A very little church at Koun bears that witness. That church has existed since 1922 when a man from Koun went away to a coastal town to work. There he heard the news of Christ in a foreign language and came back to Koun to tell the news. Through these 34 years many appeals have been sent for missionary help, but to this date that help has not come.

"Lobi people have settled in the northern section of the circle and we spent two days among them. The state of heathenism in which they live surely pulls at one's heart strings. The complete nakedness of the women's bodies is a slight picture of their soul's condition. Only a very small portion, 28,000 of the very large Lobi tribe, live in the Bondoukou Circle. The entire tribe still carry on such heathen practices as:

"1. At the age of 15 every boy and girl is sent into the forest in pairs completely unclothed and there they must learn of each other for one month. This is not marriage at all. It is merely part of the ceremony of initiation into the Lobi tribe. Unless a youth goes through this full ceremony which involves far more than this he is never considered a member of the tribe.

"2. Babies which get sick and thin are said to be turning into an animal so are carried away from the home and deposited in an ant hill to be eaten alive by the ants.

"3. Twin girls or two nboys are allowed to live, but mixed twins are automatically killed at birth.

"The success of any missionary endeavor is determined by the extent to which the nationals (Africans) are willing to take the responsibility of Christ's commission to tell their own people. We feel God has initiated a very wonderful beginning in this regard. At the little Koun Church we found a young man about 19 years of age who has been away to a government school for six years and is eager to go to Bible school. We talked with the Christians at Koun and they feel he is essential there to hold the church together. Also due to the recent death of his father, family responsibilities make it impossible for him to go at present. In school he has learned to read and write French, therefore we are having a Bible correspondence course in French sent to him. I believe he is a very keen and promising young (Free Will Baptist?) pastor. Pray for him; his name is David."

SPARKS TO BE COMMISSIONED FOR AFRICA

As you perhaps know, Rev. and Mrs. Lonnie Sparks are the first approved candidates for Africa and their commissioning service will be conducted during the missionary conference to be held in the Bible College Auditorium, October 9, 10. We hope to have the Sparks on their way to language school by January 1. Please pray with us to that end.

Speaking of missionary conference, we certainly hope you will attend. Even though the conference will be shorter this year, we believe you will enjoy every speaker. Those who will appear on the program are as follows: Miss Volena Wilson from India; Miss Lucy Wischart from Cuba; Rev. and Mrs. Lonnie Sparks to Africa; Tulane Mooneyham from Africa (Tulane is a brother to our W. S. Mooneyham. He has been a missionary to Africa the last five years under the Church of God Foreign Mission Board); also Rev. Homer E. Willis of the National Home Mission Board will speak.

Then too, we will have as special guest speaker, Fred C. Schwarz, M.D., surgeon and psychiatrist from Sydney, Australia, now on his fourth world tour. Dr. Schwarz has spoken to many churches and Bible colleges around the world, as well as to civic and service clubs. On various occasions he has spoken to combined meetings of Senators and Congressmen in our nation's capital, as well as to the defense department, the joint chiefs of staff, National War College, central intelligence, etc. These high ranking officials feel that Dr. Schwarz has diagnosed the true nature of Communism to a large degree and has prescribed sound treatment for it.

The message, however, is not political, but deeply spiritual, and is important in any program of Christian education.

The undesignated offerings received during the missionary conference will be equally divided between the National Home and Foreign Mission Boards. You are privileged however to designate your offerings to either department if you so desire. Every church should send a delegate to this conference and a generous offering for the cause of missions. If you need a real "Spiritual Tonic" attend the annual missionary conference on October 9, 10 in Nashville, Tennessee.

In the Beginning, God

(Lesson for October 7)

LESSON: Genesis 1:1-31.

GOLDEN TEXT: Genesis 1:31.

I. INTRODUCTION

God's creative act was that of making the heaven and the earth. God does not explain in detail how He went about His creative work, but He does tell us emphatically that He is the Cause of all things, "In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth. And the earth was without form, and void; and darkness was upon the face of the deep. . ." (Vv. 1, 2). There are those who say that perhaps millions of years transpired between the action of God in Genesis 1:1 and Genesis 1:3. This they surmise because science says rock formations in the earth show the earth to be much older than the approximately six thousand years of which the Bible tells. It is altogether possible that this might be so; however, it is not necessarily so because the God who created the earth could have created the rock formations to appear much older than they are. We must also keep in mind the fact that time, as we know it, did not begin to be reckoned until after the fall of man. Years of time in which people grow old and die is a product of the fall of man from the high and holy estate in which God originally created him. The days of God's creative activity before the fall of man cannot necessarily be reckoned in terms of our days of time; for God, being eternal, cannot be limited.—The Bible Student (F. W. B.)

We were privileged once to look at the sky through a small telescope. Jupiter's moon could be seen and thousands of hidden stars appeared. The world's largest telescope, located in California, reveals the fact that stars and other heavenly bodies cannot be numbered. There are untold millions of them. It is easier to believe in a Creator, God, than to believe that the universe could come into existence by chance.

II. HELPFUL HINTS

1. There was a beginning to everything that has been made, but He who made all things is eternal (Genesis 1:1).

2. No formless void is entirely hopeless if the Spirit of God is allowed to brood upon it (Vs. 2).

3. The Word of God is so powerful that anything He speaks is sure to come to pass (Vs. 3).

4. God is Light, and wherever God is allowed to have His way there is going to be light (Vv. 3-5).

5. God can gather or distribute the waters, and He can also cause them to abound with life (Vv. 9, 20).

6. In obedience to the command of God the earth is still bringing forth herbs, grass and trees bearing fruit (Vs. 11).

7. Man was made to be like God and to share His dominion; he failed, but God's plan for him will not fail (Vv. 26, 27).

8. God not only created various forms of life, but made every provision for the maintenance of such life (Vv. 28-30).

—The Bible Expositor.

III. ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

1. "In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth" (Vs. 1). The time when God created the heaven and the earth is unknown to man, nor is it important to us. In fact, this phrase, in the beginning, antedates time as we know it, and probably refers to an epoch in the remote past. The most important fact of this verse is that sometimes, somewhere, of His own will and by His own power, without substance and independent of external influence, the eternal and almighty God created the universe.

Everything was good when it came from His hand, even the first man and woman were sinless, innocent, holy and good. But sin came in and brought hardship, sorrow and death upon Adam and upon his seed, dooming them to the judgment of hell. But while the serpent was still on the scene, the Lord revealed His plan to provide a Saviour who would crush his head and banish him to the lake of fire, where he and his servants will be punished forever.—The Bible Teacher (F. W. B.)

2. Cressy Morrison, in his book, Man Does Not Stand Alone, which created a sensation a few years ago, calls attention to many factors necessary to life on this earth of which people do not ordinarily think. One is concerning the speed of the earth's rotation. Mr. Morrison says:

"The earth rotates on its axis in twenty-four hours, or at the rate of about one thousand miles an hour. Suppose it turned at the rate of a hundred miles an hour. Why not? Our days and night would then be ten times as long as now. The hot sun of summer would then burn up our vegetation during each long day, and every sprout would freeze in such a night.

"The sun, the source of all light, has a surface temperature of 12,000 degrees Fahrenheit, and our earth is just far enough away so that this 'eternal fire' warms us just enough and not too much. If the temperature on earth had changed so much as fifty degrees on the average for a single year, all vegetation would be dead and man with it, roasted or frozen. The sun's temperature is marvelously stable, and during millions of years has varied so little that life as we know it has survived."—Selected.

3. When one considers the wonders of the world we live in, with its endless variety of plant and animal life, and the various forces discovered, one stands in wonder and awe. A few simple illustrations will be sufficient: The wonders of the human eye, which seems to project objects at a distance but which in reality are but pictures focused on the retina of the eye; the marvels of electricity, radio, and radar. In the presence of marvels all around us, surely we, too, can exclaim with the psalmist, "O Lord, how manifold are thy works! in wisdom hast thou made them all."

How presumptuous, how stupid, how silly for would-be scientists to have written volumes, through the generations, in an effort to explain the universe on any other basis than "In the beginning God"! Their learned speculations are often disproved by each succeeding generation.

4. A young man told an elderly lady there was no God.

"Well," said the lady, "I have not studied such things, but since you have, can you tell me from whence comes this egg?" "Why, of course, from a hen," was the reply. "And where does the hen come from?" "Why, from an egg," Then the lady inquired: "Which existed first, the hen or the egg?" "The hen, of course," rejoined the young man. "Oh, then a hen must have existed without having come from an egg?" "Oh, no, I should have said the egg was first."

"Then I suppose you mean that one egg existed without having come from a hen?" The young man hesitated: "Well, you see—that is—of course, well the hen was first!" "Very well," said she, "Who made that first hen from which all succeeding eggs and hens have come?"

"What do you mean by all this?" he asked. She replied, "Simply this, I say that He who created the first hen or egg is He who created the world. You can't explain the existence even of a hen or egg without God, and yet you wish me to believe that you can explain the existence of the whole world without Him!"—Selected.

Improvement Program For Bible College Planned

REV. JAMES F. MILLER

Plans have been adopted for the promotion of the improvement program for a greater Bible college. These plans were adopted by the Board of Trustees of the Free Will Baptist Bible College, Nashville, Tennessee, and approved by the National Association while in regular session July 11 and 12, 1956, at Huntington, West Virginia.

The executive committee met in Nashville, Tennessee, August 21, and adopted the following plan:

FIRST, to set a goal of $50,000 for the erection of the first building in said improvement program. This building is to be a wing joined to the Memorial Auditorium and will be used for a dining hall, kitchen and students' lounge. The committee hopes to raise the first $50,000 by April 1, 1957. If this amount can be raised by that date, it is reasonably safe to say that this building can be ready for use by the opening of school in the fall of 1957.

SECOND, James F. Miller, chairman of the Board of Trustees, has been employed to go on the field to promote the program.

We need five hundred $100 gifts to reach the first goal. Special checks made payable to the Free Will Baptist Bible College Improvement Fund are being prepared and will be furnished to every individual, to every church, Sunday school, woman's auxiliary, league, etc. wishing to make a gift to the improvement fund of $100 or more. This does not mean that a church or a subordinate body or an individual could not give more than $100; neither does it mean that a church or any of its auxiliaries which could not give $100 would be deprived of the privilege of giving what they were able to give. If all will give as we are able to give, it will be easy to raise $50,000 by April 1, 1957.

My plan as the promotional agent will be to solicit the cooperation of our pastors and lay leaders, together with the cooperation of the associational leaders in every state. It will be impossible for me to visit every church, but I want every church and pastor to know that we are depending on you. I hope to go into many of the associations and help to build up such organizations as will best promote the cause of our Bible college in the several associations. If I am not able to get to your church or association, I will be glad to give you any help that I can from my office which will be set up at the college October 1. After that date you can write me at 3609 Richland Avenue, Nashville, Tennessee.

All of us need to understand that this improvement program is separate and apart

THAT FRIENDLY TOUCH

Folks like to feel your friendly touch.
Some think life does not offer much.
Some are discouraged, lone and sad.
The world to them seems cold and dead.

Help me forgive my neighbor near.
Help me to speak a word of cheer.
Help me to be a friend in need.
Help me be kind in act and deed.

I'll try to be a happy lad.
I'll try to make my neighbor glad.
I'll try to have a cheerful face
And make the world a better place.

SUPPRESSION OF TRUTH

When asked why the Catholic church forbids Catholics to read certain books and see certain plays and movies, John Cogley, executive editor of The Commonweal, a weekly journal for Catholic laymen gave an interesting answer. We quote his answer, in part, from his article, "What is a Catholic," in A Guide to the Religions of America:

"What a Catholic believes by faith, he believes absolutely. He is ready to take the Church's word on what constitutes a danger to this faith.

"Catholics regard their Church as a moral teacher. When books, plays, movies, etc., are forbidden, it is because it is the Church's judgment that, for the ordinary person, such books, plays, etc., may provide either a temptation to sin, a false religious understanding, or a challenge to faith which he is not equipped to handle. Many of the works on the index of forbidden books are theological studies written in good faith by devout Catholics; the Church has proscribed them because they contain some theological error. . . ."

This dictatorial type of activity seems odd to us as a congregational people who are bound together in larger organizations merely for the benefit of fellowship and forming policies to recommend for acceptance by the local bodies if they feel that such recommendations will help them render a fuller service to the Lord. However, with reference to obscene literature, we are firmly convinced that local churches and heads of families should use every means at their disposal to discourage and, if possible, suppress the reading of trash that is wreaking such havoc among our young people, and even our adults. Pastors might well speak out in no uncertain terms to their people as did the Reverend Ronald Creech, pastor of the First Free Will Baptist Church of Florence, South Carolina, in his mid-week church bulletin of September 25. He said:

"I have become more increasingly alarmed at the lax attitude of Christians toward the reading material of their children. . . ."

"Christians in general, and the Christians who are members of this church in particular, are absolutely not as concerned as they should be at what their children read. When a child can rattle off a dozen names of gangsters or movie stars and has to think long and study hard to remember a dozen names of Bible characters, it is time not only to think but to weep and repent.

"The Bible is not being read. Parents are not providing good Bible story books and Christian literature for their children. The result is that the minds of the young folk are being filled with crime, sex, love, murder, etc. . . ."

We earnestly commend this faithful pastor for sensing the grave problem which plagues all our churches to some extent, and for his fearlessness in attacking it. Along with his bulletin he included a tract, The Truth About Comic Books, published by Back to the Bible Publishers, Lincoln, Nebraska, which gives some astonishing facts about the tragic effect of comic books upon the lives of children.

While we are striving to remove trashy literature from our homes and the hands of our people, let us be careful that we are not suppressing the truth. Those hands should not be left empty, but given literature which is uplifting and character building. From what the Catholic editor said about his church's strict supervision of the reading of his people, we have come to understand more fully why a certain thing happened in one of our pastorates. We had to buy a number of New Testaments for our daughter to take with her to school at this place so that she would have access to one when she wanted to read the Bible during the school day. The reason was that Catholic children attending that junior high school were continually borrowing her New Testament to read for themselves. These children told her that they were not permitted to have Bibles in their homes; and, being so hungry to know what God says for them, they could only receive that message by conniving to read it at school without the knowledge of their parents or their priest.

We Protestants are horrified by such strict censorship. But are we not, in great measure, as guilty as the parents of these children? Let us consider some pertinent facts:

(1) Every child should have a Bible of his very own as soon as he is old enough to read. There are many homes which contain only a family Bible, and some homes which do not even possess one Bible. Many parents who say they are not able to buy a Bible for each of their children spend much more money than the Bibles would cost on luxuries, or waste it on baubles.

(2) Throughout the more than two years we have been at the Free Will Baptist Press we have been striving to expand our Sunday school, league and other religious literature so that churches might be able to do a better job of giving our people the truth. We are delighted with the fine response from our churches in orders for this material; but some churches, either because they are unaware of the value of this material or are hesitant to invest the additional money required to purchase it, are still not taking advantage of the assistance it can give them.

(3) The Free Will Baptist, our weekly denominational publication, should go into every Free Will Baptist home. It is the voice of God speaking through Free Will Baptist writers to all age groups of our people. Any Free Will Baptist who has something worth saying for God has access to expression through its columns. It publicizes what our people are doing and keeps them informed as to what others are doing. It knows no state, national or continental boundary lines. It ministers to even the little one through its Children's Page. Are you a subscriber, and are you contributing to its effectiveness?

(4) The shelves of the book room at the Free Will Baptist Press are filled with informative, interesting Christian literature and activity material for people of every age group. We shall be happy to send catalogues and other publicity material to anyone requesting them; and you may order this material from us at prices which compare favorably with that of other publishing houses and book stores.

Are we suppressing the truth by failing to provide reading material which is character building and will present Christ to our children?

*Rev. J. W. Alford, Secretary-Treasurer
Route 1, Morehead City, N. C.*

He will receive and disburse all funds, and will keep all records for the board. He urges that all churches in the state send their mission offerings—state and national, home and foreign—through his office. He gives assurance that all earmarked offerings will be forwarded to the proper agency exactly as they are designated. He asks this so the board will have a record of all offerings made to missions from the state.

*Rev. Rashie Kennedy, Public Relations Director
P. O. Box 913, Greenville, N. C.*

He will have charge of publicity through press, radio and television, together with all other contacts in the field of public relations.

We are pleased to introduce to our readers the North Carolina State Free Will Baptist Mission Board which will serve during the 1956-57 convention year. The board had a meeting on September 18 in Washington, North Carolina, to reorganize after the North Carolina State Convention, in its recent annual session, re-elected the Reverend N. Bruce Barrow to succeed himself on the board.

The Reverend James A. Evans, vice-chairman, is not shown because a picture was not readily available. He will preside at meetings of the board and otherwise assist the chairman in all his duties.

Rev. N. Bruce Barrow, Chairman Lucama, N. C.

He will direct all fund raising campaigns and will represent the cause of missions at conventions, associations, union meetings, etc. He will direct the general activities of the board.

The Reverend Homer E. Willis, promotional secretary for the board, has been living in Greensboro, North Carolina, where he began a work which was organized into a Free Will Baptist church on Sunday night, September 30. He has also been active in establishing other preaching points which have good possibilities of being organized into churches also.

Since receiving the information for this page from the mission board, we have received information that Mr. Willis has resigned his position with the board to become promotional secretary for the National Home Mission Board. He will live in Nashville, Tennessee, and occupy the office at 3601 Richland Avenue of that city.

*Rev. D. W. Hansley, Librarian and Architectural Director

He will have charge of films, books and church and parsonage plans. He will assist churches in selecting plans for new buildings.

The Secret

Rev. Durwood Long, Pastor
Harmony Church, Lake Butler, Florida

(Editor's Note: This message was delivered to the South Georgia Association of Free Will Baptists by the writer on September 21, 1956.)

MULTITUDES have heard of the unusual service under the preaching of the Rev. Jonathan Edwards in Enfield, Connecticut, in 1741. During the sermon, "Sinners in the Hands of an Angry God," sinners cried aloud for mercy and agonized in conviction. What was the secret of this wonderful meeting when a town was turned from open sin to a revival which led to righteousness? The facts concerning the accomplishments of the early Church lead one to ask, what was the secret which gave ignorant and unlearned men the ability to defy the Roman Empire successfully, to heal the lame, to restore the dead and to produce genuine flames of evangelism. What was the secret? It was not in their talent to speak, nor to sing, nor to argue. It was most certainly not in their wealth and influence; for they had no wealth to speak of, and their influence was negative. Was the secret political power? Assuredly not, for they wielded none. Was the secret in the doctrine? No! It was in none of these. The secret of the revival in Enfield, Connecticut, as in the success of the early Church, lay in prayer. A special prayer meeting was held in Enfield the day before Edwards' sermon. Prayer was a constant practice of the early Church.

As one attempts to describe prayer, he finds that he is at a loss for words, and must use similes or metaphors to begin to define prayer. Prayer is many things, in this light. It is the bow which sends home the promises of God; it is want felt, help desired and faith to receive of God. Prayer is the pulse of the soul, the breath of spiritual life, and the genuine mark of conversion. It is the winding-up of ourselves by communion with God. Prayer is the thirsty seeking water—and like a pitcher, it carries the water of life. It is the burdened pleading for relief. Prayer is helplessness casting itself upon all-power, infirmity leaning upon strength, and misery wooing bliss. Like a miner, prayer uncovers gold and jewels to us. It is unholiness embracing purity to its bosom, and becoming clean; it is corruption panting for immortality and in-corruption. Prayer is the flight of a soul to the bosom of God.

There is a dearth of real prayer in the world and a surplus of unreal prayer. The man who prays in difficulty will not always pray when things are pleasant; but the man who prays in smooth seas will pray in the storm. Many are as the Irishman, who, in the midst of a squall upon the sea, prayed, "Lord, I've never asked You for anything and if You'll get me out of this, I'll never ask You for anything again."

Real prayer is spiritual communion with God, even without spoken words. Moses is said to have cried aloud, yet he spake not a word. Hannah prayed earnestly, but with only moving lips. Words, we are convinced, are the baggage of prayer. Prayer is the laying hold of God by fervent desire. In this, the heart is the main matter; for without heart, prayer is nothing but hypocritical mockery. There is more grace in the bray of a mule, or a cackle of a hen than in a prayer without heart. Though one be nursed in the lap of piety and wrapped in the garments of religion, prayer without heart is mockery. With little heart, prayer is a failure. Someone's real prayer might go like this, if he really prayed his heart's thoughts: "Dear Lord, I'm thankful that I'm better than others. I made a great effort to come to church, though I didn't want to. I came—aren't you glad, God? When the offering plate was passed, I unfolded a dollar bill into it—and God, I'm expecting four more back tomorrow. The minister asked us to pray for old so and so, but there's no use, is there Lord? You and I know that he's gonna get saved. Well, I'd rather be fishing today, God, or rather have gone to the show last Sunday, but since this is the only way to get to heaven, I suppose I'll stick around here. Bless me and mine, Lord, in mine and Jesus name. Amen." Success does not appear to prayerers without heart, but is inevitable for those who pray from heart and with heart.

The church would do more, be more and say more if it possessed the secret. With this secret in possession, the church is powerful. Follow the power of the early Church in Acts, especially in the first part. With this secret, the church becomes what Christ intended for it to be, a spiritual body. More or less understood in view of power and spirituality is unison. There is no greater unifying force in the world than that of prayer. From the National Association down through the various local associations and to the homes of every individual member, prayer would make us a solidified group. With the secret in possession, the church becomes a victorious group, overcoming the enemies in Satan, the world and the flesh. Prayer will also embolden a church, as it makes it zealous and God glorifying. It guides the church in its course of action while making it flexible to the will of God, one of the greatest objectives of prayer.

Without the secret, God's Church becomes stagnant—a social organization. It ministers become mixers instead of separators, the deacons become corporate directors, and the Sunday school becomes a farce. In effect, the church becomes backslidden when it loses the secret. It is powerless and because of this, there are no revivals nor souls won to Christ. Sinners laugh to hear that the church is praying for them. God's group also becomes strife-ridden as a result of non-possession of the secret. If anyone thinks withdrawal is the solution to strife and disagreement, examine the history of the United States, especially the period 1840-1865, when few problems were solved by conflict and withdrawal. The church in general, becomes non-accomplishing without prayer.

There are many detriments to prayer in our churches. One has said, "I deeply value the man who can lead me to the truth but I value still more deeply the man who can lead me to the throne." This is the need—leadership. Yet, this is one of the greatest detriments to possessing the secret—non-spiritual leadership. Many ministers become so involved with church administrations and material progress that the secret is lost. Deacons who do not, will not and cannot pray provide a poor example, and the secret slips through the grasp. Sunday school teachers who would be frightened out of their wits to lead in prayer keep the secret from coming fully into the possession of the church. Other church leaders who are non-spiritual deduct from the total power of the church. Perhaps the greatest detriment, however, is a malicious heart. Where there is hatred, there is no prayer. Never be fooled. Hatred corrupts prayer and pollutes every petition you make. Still of greater importance in the list of detriments is lack—lack of willingness to do what is in your power to do is a serious detriment. There is also a lack of faith in God, and a lack of a sense of need, all of which damage seriously our chances of appropriating the secret.

To obtain this secret, there must be a desirable program of prayer. The church meeting must remain strictly that, instead of a third preaching service. There must be a youth prayer program. It may be a separate mid-week service, a special part of league, or a special evening during the week, but it must be there. There has to be an encouraging and exemplifying of family altars. The leaders should provide information in order for the church to pray intelligently. A prayer box, or some other way to share requests, will be provided in the desirable program. There will be special prayer services of officers, before, after, or during certain services. The methods are not especially important, but the objective is—the possession of the secret. Whatever way, let us make ourselves prayer conscious and find the secret.

estly sought the Lord, and was saved. Then God used him in a powerful way, and he became a Methodist elder. If this man had failed to yield himself to God, he would have brought swift destruction upon himself. In Romans 1:18 Paul said, “. . . the wrath of God is revealed from heaven against all ungodliness and unrighteousness of men, who hold the truth in unrighteousness.” So this man was holding the truth in a sinful heart, and thereby bringing a swift judgment upon himself.

God Almighty is not to be trifled with, just as electricity is not to be trifled with. “. . . Let every one that nameth the name of Christ depart from iniquity” (2 Timothy 2:19). Many a man has cut the life-line that has bound him to his God by making some blasphemous statement, thereby bringing down upon himself the wrath of God. Pharaoh did just that when he told Moses, “Who is your God that I should obey Him?” Right then God turned him over to a hardness of heart to go his own way, and he and his army were drowned in the Red Sea. He that will not receive the love of the truth shall be given over to a hardness of heart to believe a lie and be damned.

Man can reject the truth so long that he will have no desire whatsoever to accept it. Man can linger so long in the valley of indecision until the patience of God will be exhausted, and God will step aside to let him fall. Indecision can be as fatal as rejection. “He that being often reproved hardeneth his neck, shall suddenly be destroyed, and that without remedy” (Proverbs 29:1). Ecclesiastes 12:1 tells us that “. . . the days . . . come . . . when thou shalt say, I have no pleasure in them.” In 2 Chronicles 36:16 we read, “But they mocked the messengers of God, and despised his words, and misused his prophets, until the wrath of the LORD arose against his people till there was no remedy.”

When men and women fail to hear God's messengers, fail to read their Bibles, and turn a deaf ear to God's Spirit, it's just like tearing up a road map when one is on a long unfamiliar journey. It's just like the headlights on your car going out leaving you lost in the darkness, or like driving your car without a steering wheel.

David said, “Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path” (Psalm 119:105). Not only did he say this, but he further said, “. . . in his law doth he meditate day and night.”

When trouble is so high you can't climb over it—so wide you can't walk around it—so deep you can't dig under it—the only way to beat it is to WADE RIGHT THROUGH IT!

WHAT IS TRUTH?

NAAMAN BORDERS

Waverly, Ohio

WHEN Pilate was sitting in judgment in the trial of Jesus, our Lord told Pilate, “I came into the world to bear witness of the truth. Everyone that is of the truth heareth My voice.” Pilate said to Him, “What is truth?” But before He had time to answer him, Pilate went out unto the Jews and said, “I find no fault in Him” (John 18:37, 38).

When we speak of truth we generally mean that it's a statement which is not false. It has this same meaning in the Bible but in a much deeper sense. In Psalm 119:142 we read, “. . . thy law is truth.” Let us now notice some other Scriptures pertaining to the word truth. “. . . his truth shall be thy shield and buckler” (Psalm 91:4). “. . . the truth of the LORD endureth for ever. . . .” (Psalm 117:2). “Buy the truth, and sell it not; . . .” (Proverbs 23:23). “The law of truth was in his mouth, . . .” (Malachi 2:6). “And ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free” (John 8:32). “. . . I am the way, the truth, and the life: . . .” (John 14:6).

Jesus didn't say, “I will speak of the truth,” but he said, “I am the truth.” So it seems that the truth, the Word of God and God Himself is what the word truth means in the Bible. The Bible itself, which is only paper and ink, is not really the Word of God, but it speaks of the Word of God. If every Bible in the world were burned up, the law of the Spirit of God would be the same. The psalmist declared that His word endureth for ever. The Bible declares that His words abide in us. So the Word of God is infinitely more than paper and ink.

The Bible tells us how to find God. God is everywhere all the time, and the Bible is the way or the compass pointing us to God and the truth. Jesus is not the Son of God because the Bible says so, but the Bible says so because He is the Son of God. For instance, two and two do not make four because the principles of arithmetic say so, but the principles of arithmetic say so because two and two do make four.

The laws of God are written in nature; they are written in our hearts and consciences. We break the laws of nature and we suffer; we break the laws of the Spirit and we suffer. That is one reason we suffer so much in this world, or at least we could avoid much suffering if we would not break so many laws of God. If we violate the laws of nature ignorantly, we suffer; and if we violate the laws of the Spirit ignorantly, we suffer just the same. So it behooves us to study the Word of God and see what He means by the laws of the Spirit. In Chapters 7 and 8 of Romans, Paul speaks of the law of sin leading to death and the law of righteousness leading to life. “. . . the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death” (Romans 8:2).

Sometimes we can break the laws of the land and get by with it, but this is not so with the laws of God or the laws of the Spirit. I once knew a man who began preaching just for the salary he was to receive. The same man later confessed that he had not been converted, but he was honest enough to preach the Word straight; he preached himself under conviction, earn-

Questions and Answers ON THE BIBLE

Conducted by J. F. BARROW

3824 Richland Avenue, Nashville 5, Tennessee

QUESTION: I would like for you to explain the ninth chapter of Romans, especially verses 11-14 so as to give a correct view on predestination.—Mrs. Aurie Hayes, Arapahoe, North Carolina.

ANSWER: "The Gospel of God" or a similar title designation is the most commonly given by the orthodox commentators that I have consulted on Romans. The place of the Jew in the economy of God is a subject that is outstanding in several chapters. Chapter nine is among these. This chapter may be outlined as follows:

1. The apostle's solicitous burden for Israel, 9:1-3. Here Paul, like Moses in Exodus 32:32, is willing to sacrifice his all that the people of his national heritage, those he loves better than his own life, might be redeemed. This is indeed being Christlike and is what Christ requires of us for He has said, "... If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me" (Matthew 16:24). The Holy Spirit says through John, "Hereby perceive we the love of God, because he laid down his life for us: and we ought to lay down our lives for the brethren" (1 John 3:16). See Psalm 116:12; Romans 1:14; 15:1; 1 Corinthians 4:7; 6:20; 2 Corinthians 8:9; Galatians 5:24. Romans 9:2 indicates that Paul's love, feeling and attitude for the Jews, his kinsmen or brethren according to the flesh hold him in an abiding submission to God. He does not love them, feel sorry for them and pour out his whole soul in intercession for them now and then when he hears of their being mistreated or when he realizes them to be in danger of God's wrath, but he has offered himself as the go between and will not draw back until he has done all possible to win them to Christ. This surrendered attitude took him into dangerous places, subjecting him to satanic wrath both in synagogues, among hostile Jews and in being brought before gentiles in different positions of authority. Figuratively speaking, he was always in the process of being offered as a sacrifice to Christ and appealed to all Christians to offer their bodies to God (Romans 12:1, 2). He was always being crucified (Galatians 2:20). Every Scripture that gives personal information about Paul after his Damascus road experience (Acts 9:3-20), gives proof to the fact that he lived the gospel that he preached and he constantly exhorted others to follow him in this kind of a self-sacrificing, self-denying life.

Martin Luther, in his "Commentary on the Epistle to the Romans," Page 120, says:

"The apostle begins this chapter with a strong affirmation and oath, moved to this by an irrepressible urgency. With these words he desires to win their confidence, for he was regarded by the Jews as one who was not at all interested in their salvation: indeed, as one who above all others persecuted them and destroyed their salvation. The blindness of the Jews caused him to give expression to his sorrow of heart and to treat the doctrine of predestination. Their stubbornness practically confirmed what he knew long before, namely, that not the (work) righteousness of him that runneth, but the gracious purpose of the merciful God is the cause of man's salvation."

C. R. Erdman, "Epistle of Paul to the Romans," Pages 101, 102, makes the following comment:

"The Christian church would never lack converts if all its members or even its ministers felt for their friends and fellow countrymen the deep concern expressed by the apostle, Paul, for his kinsmen the Jews.

"He has been gazing with rapture upon the present blessedness and future glory of Christian believers; and as he now turns to consider the unbelief of his own people, Israel, the contrast causes him to cry out with anguish of heart. He attests the truth of his statement by affirming that he speaks as one whose life is centered 'in Christ' and whose 'conscience' is under the direct influence of 'the Holy Spirit.'

"The intensity of his feeling is emphasized by describing it as 'great sorrow,' and as 'unceasing pain' of heart. He does not specify the cause of his grief, but leaves it to be implied; but he solemnly attests his sincerity by stating that, if thus he might secure the salvation of his people, he could wish himself 'anathema,' 'accursed,' and so separated 'from Christ.' He does not assert that such a wish is actual or that such an end could be accomplished by such means. Here we must avoid 'the error of explaining the language of feeling as though it were that of reasoning and reflection.' Paul thus expresses his unmeasured devotion. He was like Moses, who prayed for his guilty people, 'Yet now, if thou wilt forgive their sin; and if not, blot me, I pray thee, out of thy book which thou hast written.' So the apostle is expressing his willingness to make any sacrifice to accomplish the salvation of Israel."

2. The apostle points out seven advantages that belong to the Jews of which the gentiles are destitute (Romans 9:4, 5).

(1) Adoption is the first of these. Webster says of adoption, "The admission of a person to a more intimate relation." It is a Roman legal term which describes or points out the act or means by which one was placed as an heir or made the heir of another. The Encyclopaedia Britannica, Volume 1, Page 177, says, "Adoption is the act of a person taking upon himself the position of parent to another who is not in fact or is not treated by law as his child, and the person so acting is recognized by the law as having the right and duties of a parent by nature."

A. R. Fausset, "Bible Encyclopaedia and Dictionary," Page 18, says, "... By the Roman law of adoption, which required a due legal form, the adopted child was entitled to the father's name, possession and family sacred rights as his heir at law. The father was also entitled to his son's property and was his absolute owner."

In a real sense of the word God adopted Israel under the form of the old covenant. He sent Moses to deliver her from Egypt. The blood of the pascal lamb on the doorpost was the sign. God being Israel's Father, protected Israel against the death angel and then at the Red Sea against both Pharaoh's army and the flood waters of that sea that killed Pharaoh and all his forces. Even though He is punishing Israel a little while for her disobedience, by, figuratively speaking, breaking her as a tame olive branch from the olive tree and grafting the church a choice wild branch in and by letting her city, Jerusalem, be trampled under foot for a season. Yet He says over and over again, "I will remember my covenant with Israel. . . . I will restore her." All Christian Jews that I know who try may much more easily come into a clear understanding of God's word. Timothy Stone, Hyman Appelman and Solomon Birnbaum, serve as examples to illustrate this fact. I marvel at their insight into the word of God. They are some of God's ancient covenant people that accept their place in the New Covenant. They have many advantages as they do this. God speaks of Israel in such terms as, "When Israel was a child, then I loved him, and called my son out of Egypt" (Hosea 11:1), and "... my son, even my firstborn" (Exodus 4:22, 23). "... a peculiar treasure unto me

As we continue our thinking on the subject of "Heavenly Recognition," I shall ask that we consider, along with the text used at the beginning of these messages, 1 Corinthians 13:12, the words of David in 2 Samuel 12:23, upon being told of the death of his son, "But now he is dead, wherefore should I fast? can I bring him back again? I shall go to him, but he shall not return to me." Surely there are no stronger words in the Bible to support the doctrine that we will surely know our loved ones in the next. Else what comfort could David have found in the idea expressed in the words, "I shall go to him"?

In the story of Dives and Lazarus, found in the 16th chapter of Luke, Abraham says, ". . . Son, remember that thou in thy lifetime receivedst thy good things, . . ." (Luke 16:25). So, too, we know that we must give account to God for all that we have done here on earth. Shall we, then, remember everything else, and yet, in regard to the closest, sweetest ties of our earthly lives, that so largely influenced our thoughts, words and actions here, memory shall be a blank? Those who have loved and helped us, whom we have loved and helped, shall they be forgotten forever? And if memory lives on, and if love lives on, can there fail to be reunion and recognition in the life beyond? I like to think in the words of the poet:

If all be swept from memory, and no more
A recognition win,
Than if no breathing life had gone before—
Than if they had not been:
The tender things, the nameless ministries
That once made life so fair—
The sweet experience of a thousand things—
Could any angel change?
Nay, let me hold the sweet conclusion fast,
That the pure memories given
To help our joy on earth, when earth is past,
Shall help our joy in heaven.

But now to come to the Scriptures for more direct evidence to bolster our hope of heavenly recognition, we read over and over, when any of God's ancient people died it was said, "He died and was gathered to his fathers," or "to his people." Those statements cannot refer simply to the burial of the body. Abraham was buried far away from the resting place of his fathers. Moses was "gathered to his fathers," and yet he was buried on Mount Nebo, "and no man knoweth of his sepulchre." Jacob "yielded up the ghost and was gathered to his fathers," yet he was not buried for forty days afterward. And we could go on indefinitely. The meaning evidently is that the departing ones went to join their ancestors in the great beyond, and the thought is that of one's kindred and friends gathered and were waiting to receive him. "I shall go to him, but he shall not return to me," cries David on the death of his child. He plainly believed that his child was living in another world, and that when his own course was ended he would meet him, and know him, and love him as before.

Recognition runs all through Jesus' account of the rich man and Lazarus. Abraham knew the rich man, for he recalls his life to him. The rich man recognized Lazarus and begged for his help. The rich man also recognized Abraham whom he had never known in the flesh.

In the mount of transfiguration, also, Moses and Elijah appear as companions, although Moses was in heaven five hundred years before Elijah.

I believe I shall clasp my mother's hand up there again. I believe you will know at once and love the little darling child you gave up to God, that you will again be by the side of your Christian husband to be parted no more, that your sainted wife is waiting for you on the other side, and that pastors will meet their dear flocks there and rejoice with them throughout all eternity.

SEVEN THINGS TO NOTE IN NEW TESTAMENT CONVERTS

1. They received the Word of God (Acts 2:37, 41).
They therefore believed on Christ (Romans 10:9, 10; John 5:39).
2. They repented of their sins (Acts 2:38).
No forgiveness without repentance (Luke 24:47; 1:76, 77; 13:3-5).
3. They made a public confession (Romans. 10:10).
This is not secret discipleship (Matthew 10:32, 33; 1 John 4:15).
4. They received Christian baptism (Acts 2:38, 41).
One Lord, one faith, one baptism (Acts 16:30-33; Galatians 3:26, 27).
5. They were given the Holy Spirit (Acts 2:39).
This was promised to every believer (John 7:37-39; Romans 8:9, 16).
6. They continued in the things of the Lord (Acts 2:42).
They were steadfast in these things (John 8:31, 32; 1 Corinthians 15:58).
7. They were added to the Church by the Lord (Acts 2:47).
This made them a part of the Lord's body (1 Corinthians 12:18; Acts 5:14; 11:24).

Presence of the Creator

While sitting by the ocean side one day on a beautiful sandy beach, I watched the restless water go to and fro as far as sight could see across the waters. The sky was blue above me and beautiful to every eye. The sand beneath my feet rolled around fast. Then I marveled at the beauty God touched nature with and the Creator in sightseeing was there alone. The soft breeze blew gently on my face and seemed to whisper to me, "God in nature is here; He who made all wonders and these of today is standing by you in helpful understanding of this nature display."—Elder A. J. Jenkins, D. D., Lit. D., MacArthur, Ohio.

Your Minister's Prayer

I do not ask
That crowds may throng the temple,
That standing room be priced;
I only ask that as I voice the message,
They may see Christ!

I do not ask
For churchly pomp or pageant,
Or music such as wealth alone can buy;
I only ask that, as I voice the message,
He may be nigh!

I do not ask
That men may sound my praises,
Or headlines spread my name abroad;
I only pray that, as I voice the message,
Hearts may find God!

I do not ask
For earthly place or laurel,
Or of this world's distinctions any part;
I only ask, when I have voiced the message,
My Saviour's heart!

His Peace Is Ours

Jesus says: "My peace I give unto you, not as the world giveth give I . . ." And the world cannot take it away. Other goods, however precious, may and must perish, but the promise of Him, who gave this peace is: "Your joy no one taketh away from you." And is it needed? Oh, how can you live, die and meet God and judgment, without being reconciled to God and having this peace? It is for you.—K. Meckel.

Mrs. Betty Jane Mercer

On July 4, 1956, God saw fit to call Mrs. Betty Jane Mercer to share heaven's glories with the redeemed. We just can't understand when we look through this veil of sorrow, but we do have a great consolation that God does all things well and that we will see her again face to face.

She was an untiring charter member of the Cabin Free Will Baptist Church, Duplin County, North Carolina, until her health failed her completely. She then kept her truth in God's promises. We are sure that "Aunt Betty" could say, "It is well with my soul." She was a kind and affectionate wife and mother, proving to be the joy and pride of her family.

The community at large is grateful to the Power of existence that "Aunt Betty" was a part of our universe.

JESUS CHRIST BEGOTTEN BY THE HOLY GHOST

"Now the birth of Jesus Christ was on this wise: When as his mother Mary was espoused to Joseph, before they come together, she was found with child of the Holy Ghost. Then Joseph her husband, being a just man, and not willing to make her a publick example, was minded to put her away privily. But while he thought on these things, behold, the angel of the Lord appeared unto him in a dream, saying, Joseph, thou son of David, fear not to take unto thee Mary thy wife: for that which is conceived in her is of the Holy Ghost. And she shall bring forth a son, and thou shalt call his name JESUS: for he shall save his people from their sins. Now all this was done, that it might be fulfilled which was spoken of the Lord by the prophet, saying, Behold, a virgin shall be with child, and shall bring forth a son, and they shall call his name Emmanuel, which being interpreted is, God with us" (Matthew 1:18-23).

If none of the other Scripture writers had said anything about the conception of Jesus Christ except Matthew, the above would be sufficient to prove that Jesus Christ was begotten by the Holy Ghost and born of a virgin. Remember that Mary was a virgin, not just a young woman as the new revised edition of the Bible says. There are thousands and thousands of young women who are not virgins, but the mother of the Lord was a virgin.

Luke says, "And in the sixth month the angel Gabriel was sent from God unto a city of Galilee, named Nazareth, To a virgin espoused to a man whose name was Joseph, of the house of David; and the virgin's name was Mary. And the angel came in unto her, and said, Hail, thou that art highly favoured, the Lord is with thee: blessed art thou among women. And when she saw him, she was troubled at his saying, and cast in her mind what manner of salutation this should be. And the angel said unto her, Fear not, Mary: for thou hast found favour with God. And, behold, thou shalt conceive in thy womb, and bring forth a son, and shalt call his name JESUS. He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest: and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David: And he shall reign over the house of Jacob for ever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end. Then said Mary unto the angel, How shall this be, seeing I know not a man? And the angel answered and said unto her, The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, and the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee: therefore also that holy thing which shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God. . . . For with God nothing shall be impossible" (Luke 1:26-37).

Both Matthew and Luke say that Mary conceived by the Holy Ghost. So I prefer to believe what God tells by these inspired men. Again, we turn our attention to Pastor Russell, the founder of the doctrine of Millennial Dawn; and may we say that the doctrine of Russell is going into every nook and corner as it is heralded by his followers, namely, Jehovah's Witnesses.

In his book, False Doctrines and Fanaticism Exposed, Pages 33, 34, E. E. Shelhamer says: "Jesus in His prehistorical state was a mere creature (Volume 1, Pages 174, 179, 184). The book expressly teaches that our Lord, prior to His incarnation during His earthly life, was only a creature, higher indeed in the rank of being than the angels, yet, like the angels, a created being. This is the doctrine of Socinian which the reformers rejected with abhorrence; of modern Unitarians, which all evangelical Christians repudiate."

Over against this fatal error we set the majestic words of the inspired John 1:1. "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God." In Verse 14 we read, "And the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us, (and we beheld his glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father,) full of grace and truth." Again we quote God's Word: "Beloved, believe not every spirit, but try the spirits whether they are of God: because many false prophets are gone out into the world. Hereby know ye the Spirit of God: Every spirit that confesseth that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is of God" (1 John 4:1, 2). Therefore, to say that Jesus Christ was a mere creature, and then to make Him no more than man, is to deny the Word of God as recorded in both Matthew 1 and Luke 1.

Brigham Young said, in the Journal of Discourses, Page 50, "When the Virgin Mary conceived the Child, Jesus, the Father had begotten Him in His likeness. He was not begotten by the Holy Ghost. And who is His Father? He is the first of the human family." Thus, Brigham Young disputes the plain Word of God as stated by both Matthew and Luke, both of which say that Mary conceived by the Holy Ghost. We prefer to believe the Bible rather than any man's theology. If Jesus Christ was begotten by the first of the human family, as stated by Brigham Young, He was only man. But John says, as referred to before, the Word (Christ) was made flesh: that is, He was the incarnate God.

The Holy Spirit, a Person

The doctrine that the Holy Spirit is a material substance is unbiblical. It is a perversion of the Scripture. Why should Jesus Christ attribute to the Holy Spirit personal pronouns, if the Holy Spirit is a material substance? We will now examine the words of Christ which we prefer to accept and rest our salvation on rather than the words of Joseph Smith, Brigham Young, Orson Hyde or any other man on earth or any man that has ever lived on earth. Let us notice the words of Jesus Christ: "Nevertheless I tell you the truth; It is expedient for you that I go away: for if I go not away, the Comforter will not come unto you; but if I depart, I will send him unto you" (John 16:7). Notice the personal pronoun, him. How far from reason would it be to say, "The material substance is come," or "I will send Him (material substance)." In John 16:7-15 the pronoun he is used ten times, himself is used one time, and him is used one time.

In John 14:26 Jesus says, "But the Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my name, he shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you." Notice the pronoun him in this verse also. Also notice that He is a Teacher. We prefer the teaching of the Holy Spirit or the Holy Ghost as translated in the King James Version of the Bible.

He Maketh No Mistake

My Father's way may twist and turn,
My heart may throb and ache,
But in my soul I'm glad I know,
He maketh no mistake.

My cherished plans may go astray,
My hopes may fade away,
But still I'll trust my Lord to lead
For He doth know the way.

Tho' night be dark and it may seem
That day will never break;
I'll pin my faith, my all in Him,
He maketh no mistake.

There's so much now I cannot see,
My eyesight's far too dim;
But come what may, I'll simple trust
And leave it all to Him.

For by and by the mist will lift
And plain it all He'll make,
Through all the way, tho' dark to me,
He made not one mistake.

BOYS and GIRLS

THE SKATES

Lorena Haines

SEVENTY-THREE, seventy-four, seventy-five, and one last grimy quarter made two dollars. He had enough! Tony Garcia's face broke into a grin of anticipation and his eyes shone with delight as he finished counting the hoard of nickels, dimes, and pennies with the one lone quarter making up the required amount. The skates were still in the window of the Variety Store; he had seen them only this morning on his way to school. There they stood shining and with their bright tan leather straps folded neatly: guaranteed roller bearings too! It had taken much working after school, and the selling of many papers to save up that much money, more than what he had to give to his papa for to help buy the frijoles for the rest of his brothers and sisters. But now he had it, and soon he, Tony Garcia, would be skating up and down the sidewalk with the rest of the boys and girls at school. Tony was completely happy as he tied up the precious hoard in the corner of the old handkerchief and thrust it far back under the broken edge of the porch that adorned the front of the Garcia family's adobe dwelling. The sun was still hot although almost set, and Tony was about to start off down the dusty unpaved street to join in the ball game with the other boys on the corner lot when he heard his mamma call from the kitchen door:

"Tony! Tony! These water buckets need to be filled."

"Yes, Mamma, I am coming." Tony did not try to get out of helping his mother since he had learned about Jesus at the Spanish Mission in El Paso. It was true that sometimes he found himself about to act like the "old" Tony, but then he thought of what Jesus would want him to do since He had been invited to come and live in Tony's heart, and always Tony found it easy to do the right thing. It surely was a wonderful thing to have Someone living in his heart to help Tony do what he should, just as the mission Sunday school teacher had told them it would be. Yes, he was glad that he, too, had invited Jesus to come and live in his heart.

Tony brushed by his sister Lupe, who sat holding the baby in her lap in the very doorway, and picking up the two large empty buckets went across the yard and across the next lot to the one dripping hydrant that served six families for water in the Mexican quarter near the river. Carrying the two sloshing buckets back to the porch, Tony set them down long enough to pour the tin wash pan full, and taking them in the house to his mother, returned and began to wash his face and neck in the pan, for he had just remembered that tonight was the night at the mission when the man who had been to many lands was going to tell them of this "home mission" many things. Also Tony had long urged his papa and mamma to come to the mission, and at last they had promised to come tonight if all went well.

Tony scrubbed his face until it shone, and neatly combed his damp uncut black hair at the cracked mirror beside the door before reminding his papa and mamma of their promise.

After much urging, they finally agreed to leave the baby with Lupe and Carlotta and taking Pedro who was five and Juan who was seven they set out for the bus line with Tony, right after their supper of frijoles and tocos. The city was teeming with life for it was spring and the evenings were warm in this border city, but Tony pressed on determinedly past the "movie" houses as his papa and mamma would like to stop and just "look at the signs" on each one, and so it was that the singing was just begun as the Garcia family, led by Tony found seats in the mission hall.

"There's not a friend like the lowly Jesus, No not one, no not one!"

sang the strangely-mixed crowd of some thirty-five people in the mission hall, and Tony joined heartily in, for he had been here before many, many, times, and had invited Jesus to come into his heart over a month ago. It is true that he was one of those who sang of his "freend" and of the "lonely" Jesus, but what he lacked in knowledge was more than made up by his fervent feeling, and who can say that the music was not perfect by the time it reached the heavenly listeners?

His papa and mamma did not sing, but Tony noticed that his papa's shoe beat faintly in time to the music.

After three or four songs had been sung and announcements of future services had been made the pastor arose and introduced a tall and smiling man as Dr. Gladwell, missionary and social worker just returned from Europe, "who will," said the pastor, "speak to us in behalf of the needy children of Europe."

Tony and his family listened carefully as the man told of hungry and cold boys and girls in Europe and of how each one could help here in the United States by saving, and giving as much as he could to buy food and shoes and clothes for those in other lands who did not have so many blessings as we here in this country have. He told particularly of twelve-year-old Tony Stacconi of Italy, who had walked more than two miles through the snow without shoes to get a loaf of black bread for his sick mother.

Tony Garcia felt his heart ache as he listened to the story of that other Tony, who did not have shoes. Suddenly, he remembered the old handkerchief tied tightly around his precious money; he would give that, that the other Tony might have shoes in the bitter cold of Italy. Then swiftly came to mind the long-desired skates, and in Tony's heart the battle was on, and battle it was for Tony had not long had Jesus living in his heart, and the desire for the skates was strong. Finally came the thought that Jesus had given much more than skates for him, and surely that other Tony was as well loved by the Lord Jesus as He, Tony Garcia, was. Was it not a fact that he had much more of most everything than he needed? He would do it! And quickly at the very first of the call to give, up went Tony's brown hand and he cried:

"I geeve two dollair for the shoes for Tony. Shoes are more better than skates to buy! Yes?"

Tony did not see the look of amazement that came into his papa and mamma's eyes for they knew of the long-desired skates and the savings to buy them. Here was a fine way to live and by their own boy Tony too! Perhaps, they, too, should ask the mission Jesus to come and live in their hearts, as Tony had so often told them of doing. They had been somewhat mystified by this up until now, but this, this was something they could understand.

Quite a few of the others who were present also pledged or gave, and in the end it was a surprisingly large amount that was raised to help the needy, from those, who they, themselves, lived far below what most of us think to be the absolute "standard of living."

As the Garcia family trudged home after the service, Tony's heart was filled with the honest glow that comes from "giving unto others," and it seemed almost more than he could contain, when his papa suddenly spoke up and said:

"Tony, thees asking Jesus to come and leeve in your heart; is it hard to do? Weel He come into enybody heart?"

"Yes, Papa, He is good and will come een and leeve een your heart if you ask." Tony hastened on with the Scripture he had heard so often at the mission, "He say in the Book, 'Come unto Me . . . and I will give you rest.'"

"I weel do it," Tony's papa replied, "and we weel go to mission church many time, eh, Mamma?"

"Si, si, Papa. I geev Heem my heart when I hear our Tony geev Heem the two peso," said Tony's mamma.

Tony's heart swelled with gladness. It surely was a truth as the Book said, "Give, and it shall be given unto you." He had given the skates, and Jesus had given him, Tony Garcia, his papa and mamma to go with him to the mission church. Tony was glad.—Gospel Herald.

Portland, Oregon

Dear Fred:

I have already heard excellent reports of your ministry in Washington and the contact in New York. They were greatly pleased and challenged by your conversation and address. I am certain the Lord has opened a wonderful door there, and that much good will come of it. You are a faithful servant of the Lord, and I believe He is using you to advance His Kingdom in this particular message He has given you. It is certainly needed at this hour.

We shall be upholding you to the Throne of Grace as you minister in Portland. I have many friends there and the Lord has much people. Harold Jefferies is one of my dear friends. Please give him my love and regards.

Thanking you again for your help, I am
Cordially yours,
Billy Graham

State of Texas Elects Woman's Auxiliary Officers

The Texas Woman's Auxiliary Convention met in June at the Good Hope Church, Henderson, Texas. The following officers were elected for 1956-1958: Mrs. C. B. Thompson, president; Mrs. O. E. Fulton, enlistment chairman; Mrs. Gaston Clary, youth chairman; Mrs. T. V. Kankey, personal service chairman; Mrs. Bob Trant, study course chairman; Mrs. A. F. Halbrook, program chairman; Mrs. H. Ray Berry, secretary-treasurer; Mrs. Huey Gower, field worker.

The following resolutions were also adopted by the convention:

(1) That this convention pay $25 in to the Youth Encampment Fund.

(2) That this convention pay $15 to the Wesley and Aileen Calvery Fund, and also urge the women of our auxiliaries to pray for the Calverys and to write to them.

(3) That this convention give the speaker of the morning, Rev. Everett D. Hellard, an honorarium of $10.

(4) That our ministers be urged to attend our conventions. We welcome their counseling and prayers.

(5) That the new list of officers and copy of resolutions be mailed to each auxiliary in the state.

(6) That we extend a rising vote of thanks to the host church for splendid hospitality shown the convention.

A TINY PREACHER

Martin Luther once said: "I have one preacher that I love better than any other on earth; it is my little tame robin, which preaches to me daily. I put crumbs upon my windowsill, especially at night. He hops to a little tree near by, and lifts his voice to God and sings his carol of praise and gratitude, tucks his little head under his wing, and goes fast to sleep, and leaves tomorrow to look after itself. He is the best preacher that I have on earth."—The Gospel for the Youth.

The Ten Commandments

(Lesson for October 14)

LESSON: Exodus 20:1-17.

GOLDEN TEXT: Exodus 20:3.

I. INTRODUCTION

Today we shall study the unique historical document which God gave to His people for their government at the time He led them out of the bondage of Egypt. This document, the Ten Commandments, stands alone as the first code of laws given in writing for the government of His people. Furthermore, because God is unchangeable and His relationships with men remain always the same in true essence, this document has lived throughout the millenniums to serve as the basis for true religious worship and good moral conduct. During the Christian era governmental documents at all levels have been drawn upon the basis of the truths contained in the Ten Commandments, the Constitution of the United States of America being an excellent example.

Let the student take note that God has the same right to dictate laws to him by virtue of the same threefold argument which He gave to the Israelites. We are His because He created us, because we have chosen Him as our God, and because we daily enjoy the bounteous blessings out of God's heart of great mercy.—The Bible Student (F. W. B.)

II. HELPFUL HINTS

1. Though Moses was the human leader employed, the hand of the Lord delivered His people (Vv. 1, 2).

2. The God who made us, and then saved us by His grace, will not share His honor with the gods of the world (Vs. 3).

3. Those who worship and serve other gods bring trouble to themselves and to their unborn seed (Vv. 4-6).

4. Reverend and holy is the name of the Lord, and those who misuse it are guilty of sin (Vs. 7).

5. The Christian's Sabbath is the Lord's day, and should be observed as a day of rest and worship, as Verses 10 and 11 strongly suggest and recommend.

6. Children who honor their father and mother will usually respect their parents' God (Vs. 12).

7. The same law that forbids the shedding of blood also forbids the act of adultery (Vv. 13, 14).

8. To admire an object that belongs to another is not wrong, unless and until the admiration creates a covetous desire for the object. We should be happy to see our neighbor possess admirable things, and we may desire things like his without being covetous. But a desire that will cause us to pull shady deals in our efforts to secure what another has is to contradict this last of the Ten Commandments.—The Bible Teacher (F. W. B.)

III. ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

1. The editor of a small weekly newspaper in a Nevada town was in need of some material to fill up his columns, so he had his compositor set up the Ten Commandments, and he ran them without making any editorial comment. Three days after the paper was published, he received a letter saying, "Cancel my subscription. You're getting too personal."—Christian Victory.

2. In many of the teachings of Jesus the moral demands of the Decalogue reappear. He embodied the essence of the Decalogue in his own ethical precepts. Instead of lowering the standards of conduct, he elevated them to such an extent that they would be hopeless of attainment through one's own efforts and apart from the strength which comes from God.

Thus Jesus says that a man who hates his brother is a murderer, even if he never lifts a finger against him.

3. A magazine article some years ago told about a Japanese young man who was traveling in the United States. He said, "I saw a Japanese boy on a train listening to an American mother and her son. The mother said to the son, 'Son, go and bring me a drink of water.' The son replied, 'I won't do it.' That Japanese boy jumped as if a dynamite bomb had exploded under him. It appalled him. He had never seen anything like it. You might cross Japan from every direction of the compass, and you would never see anything that approaches that, where a child would say to his parent, 'I won't do it.'" Concerning this matter, some Americans might learn something from the Japanese.

The fifth Commandment has been further strengthened by the Holy Spirit. See Ephesians 6:1-3.

4. WHAT DEFIANCE OF THE SEVENTH COMMANDMENT LED TO

Here is a story that I clipped from a Washington paper. It tells of a very modern young couple who defied this ancient code. She, according to her opinion, was a thoroughly emancipated young woman, he an emancipated young man. But somehow they could not see it through. They were found one day locked in each other's arms in their gas-filled apartment. On the table was this letter written by the woman: "We have been accustomed to laugh, Fred and I, at the moral code as a set of man-made rules to frighten timid folks into being good. But we have learned through our own experience that the wages of sin is death, yea, many times worse than death, hell on earth."—Dr. Clovis G. Chappell.

The seventh Commandment was strengthened by Jesus according to Matthew 5:27-28.

5. Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbour.

The character of the neighbor must not be impugned. This command implies false testimony in court, misrepresentation, slander, talebearing and gossip. Talebearing is a terrible crime (Proverbs 6:19; 11:13; 20:19; 18:8; 26:20). An unruly tongue is set on fire by hell and does hellish work (James 3). With what ease and seeming pleasure some Christian people even can utter false statements about others and circulate slanderous reports!

Some people stress the word against in the ninth Commandment. Remember that Ananias and Sapphira didn't lie against Peter or anyone in the young church, but they were struck dead for acting a lie. See Acts 5:1-11.

6. One cannot easily overestimate the importance of Mount Sinai. The apostle, Paul, reminded us that the law was our schoolmaster to bring us to Christ. It established a standard of righteousness and justice in a world that had no standards. Our Congolese friends never having heard of the law, practiced polygamy and child marriage. They buried the live baby with the dead mother. They murdered twins. They turned the aged women out into the jungles to be devoured by beasts. They practiced slavery. Their moral relations were horribly vile and degraded. They gave the poison cup to the one suspected of witchcraft. They were filthy in body and mind. Fear and superstition held them under a reign of terror. All this was true because they had no law of God and therefore no standard of righteousness. All idolatry, all paganism, is lawlessness. In fact, this is true of all sin.—The Bible Expositor.

The time to look down on your neighbor is when you're bending over to give him a lift!—Selected.

it giving the reasons why each should own it, a fourth who knew a friend of the owner got busy and secured the deed through his friend. Appearing on the scene later, he nonchalantly discussed the subject with them affirming finally that none of them needed to worry, for he had had the deed recorded in the county courthouse and that a copy of it was in his pocket. He still owns the land after fifteen years and the others are without it because the owner signed a document entitling him to it. Gentiles may wrangle as much as they please, Jews have a covenant that will never be the property of gentiles. We, that are Christians, have something in the form of the new covenant which is far better, but we do not have that which has been assigned to them. Palestine is among the covenant blessings they have a contract or covenant to and which we shall never have. They are blood descendants of those who obeyed God and left Egypt against human reason, crossed the Red Sea, then later Jordan, etc. Our forefathers were probably cannibals at that time, disobeying God in every possible way.

(4) The giving of the law is the next advantage mentioned here. The fact that Israel had the law gave her an opportunity to obey it. Our ancestors needed to contact the Jews before they could get the law and learn its precepts. "But to Israel he saith, All day long I have stretched forth my hands unto a disobedient and gainsaying people. I say then, Hath God cast away his people? God forbid. For I also am an Israelite, of the seed of Abraham, of the tribe of Benjamin" (Romans 10:21; 11:1).

(5) Serving God was the next advantage to the Jew. The gentile could only serve as tradition helped him. In most cases this was so steeped in superstition and idols that it required more effort on his part so much so that in Isaiah 53:6 God declared all to be gone astray, turning after his own way. The serving of the law through the tabernacle kept reminding the Jew that Jesus was coming, whereas the gentile in every form of traditional worship and service to his idol was driven further from nature and therefore further from God.

(6) The promise of a redeemer was symbolized by the offerings from Cain and Abel on down. The Jews had the correct symbols offered in the right way which assured them of forgiveness and cleansing in Christ's blood as long as they acted obediently. The gentiles were engaged in what Abraham was before his call and actually did not know what they worshiped. God said that they worshiped demons. The Jews through the law could know that God was going to raise him up a prophet (Christ) like unto Moses. He had promised it.

(7) Christ was given to the world through the Jewish nation. A virgin who descended from David brought Him forth in a miraculous virgin birth so that in a peculiar sense He is the Jewish Messiah which does not hinder Him from being the Saviour of the world.

"The members of Shady Grove Free Will Baptist Church wish to express our gratitude to God for the manifold blessings we have received during the past eight years under your guidance as our pastor.

"Your steadfastness, your adherence to the teachings of God's Word, your faithfulness and loyalty to the cause have been a source of inspiration to us.

"You have been as a good shepherd leading his flock in paths of truth and righteousness, encouraging us always to seek the straight and narrow path that leads to life everlasting.

"Cherished memories indeed are your compassionate prayers on behalf of the sick and suffering, your deep yearning for the lost, your constant and consistent study of God's Word, and your desire to know and to do His will.

"We pledge to you our undying love and gratitude and pray God's blessings upon you as you continue your high calling in Christ Jesus."

HYMNAL

A joint committee composed of members of the Board of Publications and Literature of the National Association of Free Will Baptists and the Board of Directors of the Free Will Baptist Press has received authorization from both the boards to effect the publication of a Free Will Baptist hymnal. The committee has asked the editor to serve as its secretary to handle its correspondence.

The over-all objective of the committee is to assemble and offer to our people a hymnal which will meet the needs of our churches in all their services of worship. This is going to be a herculean task in view of the fact that it must be designed to serve so many different geographical areas throughout the nation where people are acquainted with, and accustomed to singing, many different songs and types of songs. However, with the cooperation of our people from all the areas of the denomination, it will not be an impossible task.

The use of the word, hymnal, indicates to us that the committee desires to include a great number of the old hymns which have lived throughout the years. We believe that our people need many of these selections which, when they are sung, will voice the joyous overflow of their hearts in praise and adoration to God who is their Father. As a minister and a pastor, we have had our own heart stilled and conditioned for bringing the gospel in sermon by the congregation's having sung some of these worshipful, Spirit-filled hymns before we began the message. We have also observed that the congregation, too, was conditioned by the Spirit to receive the message.

On the other hand, we have had the trying experience of occupying the sacred stand to bring God's message when the songs which had been sung were not in keeping with the occasion of worship. The singing had reacted unfavorably on both the preacher and the worshipers so that it was difficult to sense an atmosphere of worship in the service. We hope our people are coming to realize, more and more, that singing is not just an activity to fill up space and consume a part of the service time, but is an integral part of our worship designed of God for a special purpose.

We furthermore believe that, in addition to the hymns that serve to express man's worship to his Maker, a serviceable book should contain gospel songs which testify to others of our faith in Christ and urge them to come to Him for salvation. These songs have a place of particular importance in our evangelistic services. The committee will perhaps encounter greater difficulty in selecting these songs because of the wide variety from which these songs may be selected.

We hope the committee will also include a limited number of choruses for children, some solos, duets and choir numbers in the hymnal. A wise selection of songs for special occasions should also be included, together with appropriate responsive readings, a topical index and an alphabetical index.

This is the thinking of the editor as to some of the contents of an adequate hymnal for our denomination. What is your thinking? Elsewhere in this issue of The Free Will Baptist you will find an insert which we hope you will cut out, fill in the names of songs, publishers and writers, and send to us, together with a letter making any suggestions which you think will assist the committee in making the hymnal serviceable to you in your church work. The committee has asked us to use this method of securing information as to what our people want in a hymnal. We shall keep all of your correspondence on file for serious consideration in making up the contents of the hymnal. Let us urge you to please give the committee this much needed information.

There are also a number of song writers in our ranks, whose addresses we do not have; and there are also some publishers of songs among us. The committee is anxious to contact these people and get their suggestions, together with copies of songs which might be included in the hymnal. If you are a song writer, or if you know the names and addresses of any of our song writers, will you please write us giving this information.

Financial arrangements for publishing the hymnal have been made as follows:

By mutual agreement of the two boards concerned, the Free Will Baptist Press will finance the publication of the hymnal. The Free Will Baptist Press will be the distributing agent to handle the sales. All proceeds from its sale will accrue to the Press until all the expenses of publication have been paid; thereafter, all net proceed from sales of the hymnal will be divided equally between the two boards.

If our people will help the committee in bringing out a hymnal which will meet our needs to the extent that it will sell at a profit, the denomination will receive the total benefit of all the money which is cleared. The Free Will Baptist Press, being a nonprofit organization, devotes all of its profits from all of its sales to the expansion, improvement and development of denominational projects, especially the enlargement and improvement of the literature program of the denomination. The Board of Publications and Literature of the National Association, also a nonprofit organization, is dedicated to sponsoring more and better literature for the denomination. At the present time, this board is in dire need of funds with which to publish a denominational history and other pieces of literature.

In conclusion, let us remind you that the success of this project will, in great measure, depend upon whether or not the hymnal is adequate and acceptable to our people. You can have a part in selecting its contents if you will give us your suggestions. The men who will work with the editor in assembling the materials and supervising the printing of the hymnal are two of the most highly qualified men in the field of church music. The Rev. I. J. Blackwelder will represent the Board of Publications and Literature, and the Rev. R. N. Hinnant will represent the Board of Directors of the Free Will Baptist Press. Both men have had wide experience and training in church music, and both are among the leading ministers of the denomination.

Please send all your suggestions and contributions to J. O. Fort, Editor, The Free Will Baptist Press, P. O. Box 507, Ayden, North Carolina.

To Whom Shall We Go

Rev. A. B. Bryan

Route 1, Benson, North Carolina

"Then Simon Peter answered him, Lord, to whom shall we go? thou hast the words of eternal life" (John 6:68).

JESUS was upon the earth for thirty-three and one-half years. At the end of His thirty-second year He had become a popular figure. It seems as if He was seeking to come to a climax in teaching His disciples. The multitude knew Him to be a miraculous man, and spoke of Him as some great prophet, and were following Him, some because of genuine love, some for the loaves and fishes, and others possibly for the excitement and thrill of the crowd. Jesus taught them that He would set up a Kingdom, and the disciples understood it to be an earthly kingdom. They rejoiced at the thought of Christ as their King, and they were about to take Him by force and make Him their King (John 6:15). Jesus, knowing of their misunderstanding, began to speak of His spiritual Kingdom in such terms until their finite minds could not grasp the direct meaning. Some of them began to murmur and became peaved because they could not understand Him. Jesus told them in unmistakable terms that His Kingdom would not be an earthly kingdom, and "... many of his disciples went back, and walked no more with Him" (John 6:66). He then turned to the twelve and said, "... Will ye also go away?" (John 6:67).

These penetrating words were uttered in trying moments. It took courage and real faith to stand the test under such circumstances. Some who had been faithful were turning away, and it seemed that all He had been instrumental in accomplishing was about to fail. The thought of an earthly kingdom with the miraculous Christ as King had become faith in vain.

This is a direct question to the Christian church and to its membership: Will ye also go away? How much disappointment can the Modern Christian undergo today and continue to be a true disciple? It is said of a certain Christian family that they worked hard, and saved until they had a comfortable, well-furnished home. Suddenly the mother was taken ill, unto death; the friends came to mourn the loss of a lovely mother and companion. While the funeral was in session, their home and all their belongings were destroyed by fire. The dear husband, reconciling himself, as best he could, and still weeping said, "The Lord gave it all to me, and has allowed it to be taken from me; I know no one else on whom I can depend." I am afraid that when the going becomes hard for many of us, there will be the losing of faith and the turning away from Christ.

Above all, the apostle, Peter, had the right spirit, and a penetrating question for the entire race: To whom shall we go, thou hast the words of eternal life? On whom else shall we depend for life? Heaven says, this is the Christ, even from the fall of man in Eden. Satan acknowledges through the man among the tombs that Christ had the greater power. Earth obeys His word. The waves cease their rolling at the command of Christ, disease is cured, and the withered hand is restored. Mother nature bursts into materialism at His command; the loaves and fishes feed the multitude with His blessing. Death had to release Lazareth in His presence; the sun refused to shine at His crucifixion. The whole creation of God says life has its abode in Christ. "I am the bread of life" (John 6:48). "I am the living bread which came down from heaven: if any man eat of this bread, he shall live for ever: ..." (John 6:51). Plant life receives its nourishment from the soil of the earth in order to live and bear fruit. When nourishment and moisture are gone, it withers. We know that God formed man of the dust of the earth. All the substance of his body was of mother nature, and did not require a miracle for its form, but "... God ... breathed into his nostrils ... and man became a living soul" (Genesis 2:7). Thus, man is like God, intelligent, has the power to reason for himself, and will exist or live forever.

We must note that man was placed in the third world or sphere of God's creation. He was not placed in plant life, although his body is of the earth or ground. He was not placed in the physical or animal world alone, although he is a tangible being, for "a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth" (Luke 12:15). Man is God's higher creation, and has been placed in His spiritual world; therefore, we must deal with him on the strength of the latter. Since man sinned and became of the fallen nature, we must deal with him according to sin, salvation, and man, an eternal living soul.

To whom shall we go? Not to plant life, for it springs forth with the season, in co-operation and at the call of mother nature. Not to physical or animal life for it fades away because of sin and the fallen nature. Tangible things just cannot endure. Man comes forth in the spiritual realm, opens up as a flower—first, the bud, then the full bloom which soon fades away. Thus, he goes to complete spiritual light or spiritual darkness, whichever he chooses. If he is to be saved, he must use his power of reason, and find restitution in Christ. He must be bought back by his rightful Owner, the One who formed him and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, causing him to be a living soul.

There are two sides to the spiritual realm with a great gulf fixed between. Man's destiny is obtained by his decisions in this life, while his mind is capable of making worthwhile and concrete decisions. Choose ye this day whom ye will serve. Choose you this day which side of the gulf you desire to live on. Man is making decisions every day for physical life, as if he could safely trust in the physical or animal world, and often shuns the fact that spiritual decisions are being made also. Which way is your decision? Do you choose to go away or find restitution in Christ from all sin?

A Basket of Beans

Rowland Hill, a famous preacher, was going down a street, when he saw a drove of pigs following a man.

"This," said Hill, "excited my curiosity so much that I determined to follow. I did so; and to my great surprise I saw them follow him to the slaughter-house. I said to the man, 'My friend, how did you induce the pigs to follow you here?'"

"He replied, 'I had a basket of beans under my arm, and I dropped a few as I came along, and so they followed me.'"

"And so it is," added Hill, "that Satan has the basket of beans under his arm; and he drops them as he goes along, and what multitudes he induces to follow him to an everlasting slaughterhouse!"

Are you one who is being led by him?—Selected.

Facts About Superannuation

Rev. K. V. Shutes
Route 5, Thomaston, Georgia

FIRST let us look at the meaning of the word superannuation. Super is a prefix which means above or over. The word superannuate means to dismiss from service, or cause to retire on a pension on account of age or infirmity.

We Free Will Baptists have retired most of our aged ministers without a pension in the care of their children, loved ones or friends. Shall we continue to do this, or do we want to amend our doings of the past?

How long has the program of superannuation been carried on in the National Association of Free Will Baptists? In the year of 1945 this phase of our denominational work was instituted. The Superannuation Board of the National Association of Free Will Baptists set up a plan whereby the eligible ministers of our churches could be endowed. In that same year there were 25 policies issued to Free Will Baptist ministers. Then in 1946 only one policy was issued; in 1947 there were three issued; in 1948 six were issued; in 1949 we fell back to three again; in 1950 we came up to four; in 1951 we went down to one; in 1952 we came back up to three; in 1953 we advanced to 11; in 1954 we went down to two, and in 1955 four were issued.

Why were there no more policies issued in this period of ten years? The answer is this: The income to the board was so limited that they could not take on more than the board could pay half of the premiums, and only about 10 per cent to 25 per cent of the Free Will Baptist ministers are interested in such a program. Then too, there are so many state and local associations and churches that will not let one visit in them to tell the people about it, and many of them do not know anything about this program of our churches.

It will take from 15 to 25 years to awaken our people to the importance of such a program, at the pace we are going. But if you could travel the states as I have done and find the great number of ministers, who have worn their life out in the ministry and are not getting one dime from their association, it would break your heart.

Who can get this endowment that is offered through the National Board of Superannuation? Any Free Will Baptist minister or missionary between the ages of 21 to 55 may apply for it.

How can one get it? You may write to the National Superannuation Board in care of Rev. K. V. Shutes, Route 5, Thomaston, Georgia, for information. If the ministers who are interested would write to the above address, and state their name, age, address, and whether they want endowment at 65 or endowment at 70, also furnishing us with the name and address of their chairman of board of deacons, we would be happy to write to their churches and see if we can get them to pay half of their premiums.

Why call on the churches to help? Because we have over 1700 ministers, and a great number of them would like to be endowed, but the income to this board will not even pay the secretary's salary and traveling expenses, and running expenses of the office. If we could get the churches to pay half of their pastors' yearly premiums, and the pastors pay half, we could go fifty times faster with this program.

We have a great number that are paying half of their pastors' premiums, and a few that are paying all of the premiums. A number of these pastors were already endowed when I began serving as promotional secretary for the board. In the cases of all of the fellows who have been endowed since I came in office, their churches have either paid all or half of their initial premiums, with the exception of two, and these two paid all of their premiums themselves.

If every minister who was endowed before September, 1955, will write us and give us the name and address of his chairman of board of deacons, we will do our best to get his church to match his half of the yearly premium on his policy. Some of the ministers are including this in their churches' yearly budgets. This is a good plan, and if more of them would do this, it would save us from having to write every year to remind the churches about their obligations.

The next question is, how much insurance can a minister get through this board? The National Superannuation Board agreed in a meeting last February not to exceed $2000 for the present time. The board hopes that in time to come it will be able to offer more.

What will it mean to have a $2000 endowment? It means that if the minister should die before he reaches the age of 65 or 70, his widow would get $2000 plus accumulated dividends. If he has the disability rider, and should get disable to preach before he reaches the age of 56, he would draw $10 per month per $1000 insurance, and at his death his widow would still get the face value of the policy, plus accumulated dividends. Should the minister live to be 65 or 70 he could draw the full face value of the policy, or he could draw it in monthly installments. If he is still able to preach when he reaches the age that the policy matures, he may leave it with the company to draw dividends until such a time that he would need it.

What about the old men who need help now? The National Board of Superannuation urges every state to set up a state board to raise money as they see fit and can, and that all the state money for this cause be channeled through the state board; the board is to keep 75 per cent of the funds raised in order to be able to have something to give the aged ministers who need help now. This should be done on a merit basis. The other 25 per cent should be sent to the national board to help operate an office and pay half of the ministers' premiums on endowments.

We will be happy to send to your state superannuation board the bylaws and rules regarding superannuation, if you will write for them.

Some of you may be wondering why I accepted a pastorate and moved the office from Nashville, Tennessee, to Thomaston, Georgia. The reason is that there were so many closed doors in states, associations and churches, and because so many of our ministers have shown no interest in this program. I do not believe in the law of force in religious matters. We will carry this work on principally by correspondence. I will visit as many associations as possible, and will make an itinerary along as we can.

I hope you will join us in prayer that our people will be awakened to the need of such a program as this, and that we will become concerned for those who have worn themselves out in the ministry.

Remember that October is designated as Superannuation Month by our national association. Let us make it the greatest month ever in doing something for the aged ministers who blazed the trail ahead of us, and to help endow the younger man so that when he is old he will have an income.

Is the minister not as worthy as one who has served in the armed forces of our country? Is he not as worthy as the one who has worked at some occupation, and today is drawing Social Security, or will be in the future? Jesus said, "He that is of the gospel should live by the gospel, and the laborer is worthy of his hire."

Superannuation Month In North Carolina

Rev. Wilbert Everton, Chairman-Treasurer of North Carolina Superannuation

I AM happy that it is now my privilege to be working with the North Carolina Board of Superannuation. Since it is my desire and prayer that I may be able to carry on the administrative work of this board as efficiently as it has been done heretofore, I am extremely anxious that all North Carolina Free Will Baptist churches make liberal offerings during the month of October to the cause of superannuation. As you may be reminded, October is the month set aside by the state convention as superannuation month.

We have seen the work grow slowly in the past. However, may we remind ourselves that it has grown as much and as fast as we, the Free Will Baptists of North Carolina, have permitted it to grow.

I am sure that the twenty-three retired ministers and the twenty-three ministers' widows would join me in expressing their genuine gratitude for what has been done in the months and years gone by; but let us do more. Read the challenge of God to His people when He said to Moses, "... speak unto the children of Israel, that they go forward" (Exodus 15:15). This has been the marching order of the children of God down through the ages. May these words ring out in our hearts and minds as we move on in this great work for the Lord Jesus Christ.

The monthly checks of the ministers and widows are very small, but yet these people are depending upon them. There was a time when our church was depending upon these dear old servants of God. They did not fail. Will you now fail them?

Let us renew in our minds the truth of God's Word which teaches us that we are our brother's keeper. Can you really say, "I have done what I could?" I am afraid your answer would be, "No." Then may I urge you to come to the rescue of these who so much need your help.

I plead with the leaders of our church that they bring this very worthy cause to bear upon the mind of everyone during this month. Please send a liberal contribution this month, and regular gifts throughout the year, to Reverend Wilbert Everton, Route 3, Wilson, North Carolina. We must hasten to these places while the invitation is open.

Last Report from Secretary

Since this is my last report as state missionary, I would like to express my appreciation for the cooperation shown me since

I came to the state of North Carolina. These six months have been really days of activity. The Lord has blessed our efforts, and your prayers have been our strength. This state is open to us; we must go and start churches while we can. And let me add that it can be done. Please pray for me as I go to Nashville, Tennessee, to take the work as promotional secretary and treasurer of the National Home Mission Board.

I should like to particularly express my appreciation to the Rev. Rashie Kennedy, chairman of the North Carolina Mission Board, and to Rev. N. B. Barrow, treasurer, together with the other members of the board—Rev. J. W. Alford, Rev. James A. Evans, and Rev. David W. Hansley—for the work they have done for the cause. This work must go on! Pray as the board decides whom to call for the work. The Lord bless you all!

Report on Mount Olive Junior College

(Editor's note: This is a part of the annual report of Mount Olive Junior College made by President W. Burkette Raper to the North Carolina State Convention of Free Will Baptists on September 12, 1956.)

MOUNT Olive College was chartered by, and is owned and operated by, the North Carolina State Convention of Free Will Baptists. It is to this convention that the college is responsible; it is also to this convention that the college must look for its support. This convention must assume financial responsibility to the college to the same degree that it exercises control over its operation.

The Objective of the College

Mount Olive Junior College was established because this convention realized that our denomination could not make progress, or even survive, without a sound program of Christian higher education. "The objective of the college is to train and educate young men and women for Christian life and service, thus preparing them for useful vocations and successful living in the home, the church, the school, the community and the world."

We believe that if we are to have an educational institution that can adequately serve our young people, it must be an accredited college. An accredited college is one that is approved by an association of other colleges. An accredited college is absolutely essential for an educational program that helps to train teachers, doctors, nurses, chaplains, lawyers, social workers, engineers and foreign missionaries. Our entire denominational program of foreign missions is in serious jeopardy unless we develop an accredited program of higher education.

Accreditation does not mean that our college would be controlled from the outside. We continue to choose our own faculty members, include whatever courses of study we desire, and regulate student life as we think best. Accreditation simply means that we measure up to certain required standards such as an adequate library, properly equipped science laboratory, sufficient income, a trained faculty, etc.

Mount Olive Junior College expects to have met all requirements for accreditation by the North Carolina College Conference during the current school year. We have already had a preliminary visit from the State Department of Education and we are looking forward to a full-scale investigation this fall.

Questions and Answers

ON THE BIBLE

Conducted by J. F. BARROW

3824 Richland Avenue, Nashville 5, Tennessee

Question: I would like for you to explain the ninth chapter of Romans, especially Verses 11-14 so as to give a correct view on predestination.—Mrs. Aurie Hayes, Arapahoe, North Carolina.

Answer: 3. The apostle turns our attention to the difference between the natural descendants of Abraham and the Christian Jews who are also his spiritual descendants (Romans 9:6, 7). In Romans 9:6 the Holy Spirit wants His readers to understand that even though Israel as a nation does not appear to be in the limelight of God's special blessing and watchcare, as she was at times in the past, yet the word of God to Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, David, etc., will bring forth its fruit. God has promised Palestine to Abraham's descendants as an eternal heritage. See Genesis 12:2, 3; 17:21; 21:10-12; 28:13-22. He has promised to bless them that bless Abraham and his descendants and to curse them that curse Abraham or his descendants, and now as Paul pens the words of this text the Romans are making it almost unbearable for Israel. Furthermore, Israel as a nation is hostile to Christ and His followers. Rome acted as the agent in authority as Christ was condemned and was crucified at the persuasive demands of the Jews. How may the Holy Spirit explain all this through Paul? It is simple because all the natural descendants of Abraham are not included in the true heirs of Abraham, that is, spiritual heirs or heirs of the promise, God's promise to Abraham. All of the national Israel are not to be the recipients of God's promise and of His grace because all that Israel herself regards as Israel are not thus regarded by God.

In Romans 9:7 an ancient truth is brought into the forefront to remind Israel that God Himself has the right to point out the chosen heirs of the covenant or promise and that He has from the beginning exercised that right for He did not even include all the natural descendants of Abraham in the covenant, but only Isaac and his descendants. "And Abraham gave all that he had unto Isaac. But unto the sons of the concubines, which Abraham had, Abraham gave gifts, and sent them away from Isaac his son, while he yet lived, eastward, unto the east country" (Genesis 25:5, 6).

"Nevertheless what saith the scripture? Cast out the bondwoman and her son: for the son of the bondwoman shall not be heir with the son of the free woman" (Galatians 4:30).

In Genesis Chapters 12—21 God makes it clear that Isaac, the son of Sarai, the heir that God promised Abraham and Sarai for over 25 years before his birth, is the one and only one of Abraham's sons through whom the special blessing must come. Abraham and Sarai expressed their impatience in waiting for the fulfillment of God's promise when Sarai gave Abraham her maid as a second wife as was the common practice among heathen at that time, but God did not honor the fruit of this unholy union with the promise. Neither does He honor the descendants of Katurah, a later wife, in the covenant. There is no human reason given for God's making such a choice. So far as we can see or so far as we might know, either of Abraham's other sons could have been chosen of God as heirs of His special promise, but this was not according to God's sovereign will. Knowing this should be sufficient for us. No more questions should be asked while we are in the flesh and only see through, as it were, a glass darkly; as spiritual values are brought before us. I knew of a father who, while weeding his flower garden was asked many more questions than he could answer by his three-year-old daughter, as to the reason for pulling out the healthy rag weeds and leaving the much smaller and uglier flower plants. The more answers that the father gave, that to me were reasonable, the more puzzled this little girl was and the more impossible were her questions. That would about fit our case were we to sit down and try to fathom the depths of God's wisdom; "O the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God! how unsearchable are his judgments, and his ways past finding out!" (Romans 11:33).

God's reasons are sufficient in each choice He has made. We are not called upon to understand everything in God's Word, but rather to accept by faith and obey. See 1 Samuel 15:22, 23. That is what Abraham did. There is no doubt in my mind but that God's foreknowledge of Abraham's attitude in this choice influenced God in the choice of Abraham rather than Lot or some one else that He knew would act differently. If you are a Christian you were chosen in Christ before the world was made. God chose you because He wanted to. That's reason enough; nevertheless, God tells us that it is according to foreknowledge that He chooses each of us. We might foolishly quiz God for the reason of His choice of Jacob rather than Esau, who was according to custom in line for the blessing and inheritance. The first answer in God's Word tells us that God did not will to do so. Again God tells us that Esau was a vain person and that he despised the birthright.

Man's reasoning would have never brought out the latter fact, but God's foreknowledge was sufficient for Him to tell Rebecca before the children were born which would be accepted and which rejected. In our case now in this the church age, God chooses or has chosen all the "whosoever will" and rejected all the "whosoever will not." John 3:16, 36; Mark 16:16; Matthew 11:28-30; Romans 10:9-11 and Revelation 3:20 bear out this fact unquestionably. Both God's sovereign will and His immutable nature have designed it thus.

All the affairs in our experiences upon the earth, our relations to God, to each other, and to the destructive forces of both soul and body are so minutely covered in God's plan for us, both in the future and at the present time that He now knows every thought of our hearts, every plan in our purpose and when each physical, mental and spiritual change shall take place. See Matthew 10:28-30; 1 Corinthians 3:19, 20; 1 Chronicles 28:9. This being true God knows how and is able to make wise choices and advantageous plans that for the time being may seem unreasonable to the puny foresight of man's comprehensive ability. God's choices or elections are all made according to His unlimited knowledge or omniscient grasp of the past, present and future. The wise head of a successful business does not limit his plans for that business to its present status in the business world of the present, but he cautiously considers the history of that business, the world conditions including social, economic, political, etc., and expands or curtails according to his judgment. He is limited because he has to guess about the future on the basis of the present and past. God knows the end from the beginning so He can make every single choice advantageous to His great purpose of saving the most possible souls in the time allotted to evangelize the world.

The Lighted Pathway

Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path
(PSALM 119:105).

REV. WILLET L. MORETZ
SWANNAHOA, N. C.

As we begin the last article in our thinking on the subject of "Heavenly Recognition," let us read again two of the passages which we have been considering, namely 1 Corinthians 13:12 and 2 Samuel 12:23.

Yes, I believe we shall all know each other in heaven and shall look into each other's faces and see the joy beaming there and shall all break forth into the glad eternal hallelujahs!

And now what practical lessons may we find from all the foregoing? They are many, but we will confine ourselves to three as follows:

First—This hope should make our earthly lives holier and better in the service of God. Friends are waiting for us in heaven; such a thought should lift us above the beggarly elements of the world; it should restrain us from sin. The benediction of such a hope should kindle in our breasts a strong desire for holy things and an impulse to better living.

The story is told of a pastor who called at the home of one of his parishioners and found, seated in the doorway, a little boy with both hands extended upward, holding to a string. "What are you doing here, my little friend?" inquired the minister. "Flying my kite, sir," was the prompt reply. "Flying your kite!" exclaimed the pastor; "I can see no kite; you can see none?" "I know it, sir," responded the lad, "I cannot see it, but I know it is there, for I feel it pull." Then the story continues with an explanation to the illustration just given: "A few years back, the angels came and bore far above us, out of our sight, one that was very dear to us. The attachment of our hearts was not broken—the connecting ties were lengthened, not broken. We loved her while here; we love her still. She loved us while in the flesh; we are sure that she loves us none the less in her new condition. Rising higher and still higher in the heaven of heavens, we feel her influence. She is with Christ and, attracted by gentle influences, we are tending towards her peaceful home with the prospect of the same glorious companionship."

Second—This truth should make us true and tender friends to each other in this life. I know that it is not possible to be friends with all people, for there are those who will not let you be their friend, but the Bible teaches, "If it be possible, as much as lieth in you, live peaceably with all men" (Romans 12:18). If you thought that you should never know or love the friends of earth after this life, you would number them with temporal things, and it would cramp and chill all earthly affections. But how deeply, how tenderly, we may love each other here when we know that the separations of life are but brief, and that heaven shall view the renewal of them in an unending union. How gentle our words, how tender our dealing with others, how patient and forbearing shall our lives be, holding our friends in such light as this!

Third—This truth appeals to the unconverted, too. They have sainted friends and loved ones in heaven they want to meet, perhaps they promised that they would meet them as they bade them farewell here, and yet they cannot meet them unless they turn from sin unto God through Christ.

The following lines by an unknown poet are worthy and appropriate, I think, to close these devotional thoughts on this subject:

"As one who travel-worn and weary—
Weary of wandering thro' many scenes—
At length returning homeward, sees afar off
The white cliffs of his father-land; and ere
The laboring ship touches its sacred soil
Leaps on the pier where around him press
His children, kith and friends, who in a breath

Ask of his welfare, and with joyous tongues
Pour all their love into his thirsting ear."

Christian Living In the Early Church

Examples of Christian life for the believer

1. They were grounded in Christian doctrine (Acts 2:42).
Correct teaching essential to successful living (John 8:31, 32; 1 John 3:1-3).

Showing a willingness to continue searching (Acts 10:33; 2 Timothy 2:15).

One thing that they knew—they prayed—He answered (Acts 4:24, 25, 31; Hebrews 13:8).
4. They were faithful in their worship (Acts 2:42).
They realized where to find strength (Acts 20:32; James 4:8).

NOTES — AND — QUOTES

By J. C. Griffin

THE HOLY SPIRIT

The personality and deity of the Holy Spirit are set forth in the attributes which are given to Him. They are also set forth in His works. He was with the Father in the creation of the world. "And the earth was without form, and void; and darkness was upon the face of the deep. And the Spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters" (Genesis 1:2). Job says, "By his spirit he hath garnished the heavens; . . ." (Job 26:13). "The spirit of God hath made me, and the breath of the Almighty hath given me life" (Job 33:4). "Thou sendest forth thy spirit, they are created: and thou renewest the face of the earth" (Psalm 104:30).

He Is Omnipresent

In Verses 7-9 of Psalm 139 it is declared that one cannot get away from the presence of the Holy Spirit. "Whither shall I go from thy spirit? or whither shall I flee from thy presence? If I ascend up into heaven, thou art there: if I make my bed in hell, behold, thou art there" (Vv. 7, 8). No, there is no way to hide from the presence of the Holy Spirit. Hell cannot hide one from the presence of the Holy Spirit. This is one thing that makes hell so terrible. The Holy Spirit keeps reminding the lost soul of his lost estate. Some people here on earth are miserable in the presence of a Spirit-filled believer. I heard a worldly-minded church member say, in speaking of a certain Spirit-filled lady, "She makes me miserable; I just cannot stand her."

The Holy Spirit makes the lost soul miserable, whether that soul is on earth or hell. That is one reason lost people stay away from the worship of the Lord in the house of prayer. But, my lost friend, when you lift up your eyes in a demon's hell, you will be under condemnation, and you will pray as the rich man did who is described in Chapter 16 of Luke's Gospel.

He Is Omnipotent

Not only is the Holy Spirit omnipresent (everywhere), but He is omnipotent. He has all power as an associate of the Father and the Son. He is equal in power. He gave physical strength to David as a shepherd boy to kill a lion and a bear in order to protect the sheep he was guarding.

He Is Omniscient

The Holy Spirit is not only omnipresent and omnipotent, but He is omniscient. That is, He knows everything. From the foundation of the world He has known of every event in the creation of the universe—what was, is and what is to be to the end and through eternity. The Scripture ascribes to the Holy Spirit the acts and attributes of an intelligent being. He guides, knows, moves, gives information, commands, forbids, sends forth and reproves. He can be sinned against: namely by grief, by being quenched in the life of a Christian, by being treated spitefully, by being rejected by sinners, and by being blasphemed by spiteful unbelievers. There are many Scriptures that substantiate the fact that the Holy Spirit is a Person and a spiritual Personality. Read the following Scriptures: John 16:18; 1 Corinthians 2:11; Genesis 1:2; Acts 10:9; Acts 8:39; Acts 10:19; 1 Corinthians 2:13; Acts 21:11; John 14:26; Acts 13:2; Acts 16:6; Acts 13:4; John 16:8; Genesis 6:3; Mark 3:39; Isaiah 63:10; Acts 7:51; Ephesians 4:30.

Impartation of the Holy Spirit

There are many theories concerning the impartation of the Holy Spirit to the life of man. In the days before the coming of Christ, He seemingly came upon whomsoever He would to impart physical strength, as has already been mentioned in the life of David. He gave wisdom to those whom God was sending forth for special service. While Christ was here in the flesh on the earth, He taught that the Holy Ghost might be received by asking the Father through prayer. "If ye then, being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children: how much more shall your heavenly Father give the Holy Spirit to them that ask him?" (Luke 11:13).

At the close of His ministry Christ promised to pray the Father; and that in answer to His prayer the Comforter would come (John 14:14; 16:26). In the evening of the day of His resurrection, Christ presented Himself in the midst of His disciples, breathed on them and said, ". . . Receive ye the Holy Ghost" (John 20:22). Christ told His disciples to wait or tarry at Jerusalem until they were endued with power. (Read Luke 24:49.)

On the day of Pentecost the Holy Ghost came upon the whole body of believers and the prophecy of Joel and the promise of Christ were fulfilled. After Pentecost the Holy Ghost was imparted to the Jews by the laying on of hands by the apostles, until the gospel reached the household of Cornelius; then, without the use of man's hands, the Holy Ghost fell on the household and they were saved and baptized with the Holy Ghost. "While Peter yet spake these words, the Holy Ghost fell on all them which heard the Word. And they of the circumcision which believed were astonished, as many as came with Peter, because that on the Gentiles also was poured out the gift of the Holy Ghost. For they heard them speak with tongues, and magnify God. Then answered Peter, Can any man forbid water, that these should not be baptized, which have received the Holy Ghost as well as we? And he commanded them to be baptized in the name of the Lord. Then prayed they him to tarry certain days" (Acts 10:44-48). Here we learn that a person can be saved before water baptism. Baptismal regeneration was not manifested here. They had received the gift of the Holy Ghost, and then they were baptized with water.

Peter was taken up before the Church for preaching to the gentiles. It was then that he said, "And the spirit bade me go with them nothing doubting. Moreover these six brethren accompanied me, and we entered into the man's house: and he (Cornelius) showed us how he had seen an angel in his house, which stood and said unto him, Send men to Joppa, and call for Simon, whose surname is Peter; Who shall tell thee words, whereby thou and all thy house shall be saved. And as I began to speak, the Holy Ghost fell on them, as on us at the beginning (Pentecost). Then remembered I the word of the Lord, how that he said, John indeed baptized with water; but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost. Forasmuch then as God gave them the like gift as he did unto us, who believed on the Lord Jesus Christ; what was I, that I could withstand God?" (Acts 11:12-17).

According to this Scripture, the gentiles received the same gift that came to all believers on Pentecost. These gentiles were to receive words whereby thy should be saved (Vs. 14). Peter remembered that the Lord had said that He would baptize with the Holy Ghost (Vs. 16). From then until now, the way of Christ has been to baptize into His body all believers upon faith in the Lord Jesus as the Saviour of their soul.

"Know ye not, that so many of us were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death?" (Romans 6:3). "For by one Spirit are we all baptized into one body, whether we be Jews or Gentiles, whether we be bond or free; and have been all made to drink into one Spirit" (1 Corinthians 12:13). "For in him dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily. . . . Buried with him in baptism, wherein also ye are risen with him through the faith of the operation of God, who hath raised him from the dead" (Colossians 2:9-12).

STORIES

FOR OUR

BOYS and GIRLS

The Story of Bamba

Hilda V. Richardson

BAMBA was a little boy of the Bokongo tribe in Belgian Congo, Africa. He lived with Nyunga, his mother's eldest brother who was the chief of the tribe and the witch doctor. Bamba spent most of his time hunting wild game with other Bokongo boys. One day while hunting in the jungle they spied a little monkey frisking about among the trees. Carefully they followed the little creature until they had surrounded it to prevent its escape. The boys danced around the monkey gleefully. "Ai!" exclaimed one boy. "It will make good eating!"

"No!" protested Bamba. "I will keep it for a pet."

The boys at once began to fight to settle the argument. Bamba came out on top of the other boy, so according to the rule he got to keep the monkey for a pet.

Bamba took the monkey back to his hut and tied him to the porch post. The monkey soon became tame and friendly.

There was great excitement in the village one day. The favorite wife of the chief had died. It was believed that no person died a natural death, but someone was responsible for each death and must be punished.

"The accused person will have to drink of the poison cup," Nyunga said to Bamba. "You will be my successor. You must learn to assist me."

The village drum was sounded to call everyone from forest and plain together to hear the bad news.

"The person who destroyed my wife must be punished!" Nyunga exclaimed to the people. After he had danced around he ordered, "Let the guilty one tremble and die!"

Everyone began to shake his head and say, "I'm not guilty! I'm not guilty!"

"Let him drink the poison cup. If he is innocent he will not die." A little of the contents of the cup was sufficient to kill a man.

An aged man began to tremble. Immediately the throng was sure that he was the one responsible for Nyunga's wife's death. The poison cup was brought forth and the man made to drink. The mob stood by waving their arms and crying, "The guilty one must die! The guilty one must die!"

It was not long before the writhing body lay still.

An epidemic broke out in the village following the chief's wife's death. Bamba was among the many stricken with the illness. As he lay in bed the little monkey tied to the porch post went hungry because there was nobody to care for it.

The village drum again was sounded. This time Nyunga was calling the people together to go to the burial ground to get a message from their ancestors regarding what to do about the illness that had struck the village. The witch doctor danced and called upon the spirits of the ancestors over and over again. At last he told the people that he had received the message. Their ancestors had told the witch doctor that the site of the village was unlucky and that evil spirits would destroy them unless they departed. All the people believed what Nyunga said. They hurried to prepare to leave the village.

In a nearby village Doctor Blaine, an American medical missionary and his native assistant, Nagoma, were conducting a clinic. A message reached Doctor Blaine that there was much sickness through the forest. "We will go and see what we can do," he answered.

As he and Nagoma came near the village of Nabou they met people hurrying toward the forest loaded down with as many earthly possessions as they could carry. When Doctor Blaine asked why they were fleeing, the reply was, "Evil spirits will destroy us if we stay here."

Doctor Blaine did not see a living creature in the village except Bamba's little monkey running back and forth on his leash beside the hut door. Inside the hut they found Bamba lying on his mat, unconscious to what was going on around him. Doctor Blaine examined him. "Many will die of sleeping sickness," he told Nagoma. "Take him back to your hut and take care of him and his pet monkey. He will recover. If you do not find his parents when I come again, we will decide what to do with him."

Months passed before Bamba was well again. He lived in Nagoma's hut. Nagoma had been unable to find the boy's relatives. Bamba attended the village school which Nagoma taught, as well as preaching and caring for the sick. Bamba listened to Nagoma's words. He heard about the Lord Jesus for the first time in his life. He learned to write in the sand and to read from the Bible, their only text book. Between sessions Bamba helped in the dispensary assisting Nagoma wherever he could be of help.

Bamba showed great promise in his work in the dispensary. One day he begged Doctor Blaine upon his visit to the village, "May I learn to cure people as Nagoma does? I have courage. I will study long and hard. My uncle tried to cure people. I will do much better."

Bamba spent the next six years at the mission school. A converted native chief was his teacher. Bamba, too, became a Christian. Three years followed at the mission hospital helping with operations, working in the laboratory. Before every operation they never forgot to pray. Two year's schooling followed his hospital training. He completed his foundation work and passed government examinations for dispensary work.

"How would you like to work under Nagoma?" asked Doctor Blaine to Bamba's delight.

"There is a need in your native village where Nagoma and I found you. People are living there again. Sickness has struck the village. I had planned to go myself but the chief would not welcome me. There is no fellowship between light and darkness. Nagoma is working further away."

"Could I go there to begin my work?" asked Bamba.

"It will be hard for you and dangerous," Doctor Blaine reminded him.

"I am not afraid. The medicine that I will take is stronger than their evil spirits," replied Bamba.

Bamba, with his assistant, went to Nabou. He was in the midst of a crowd of the village natives showing them his pills and medicine and the wonders of the microscope, explaining to them that God used simple means to do His work, when Nyunga came toward them. The crowd was sure that he had come to curse the stranger, and many of them ran away.

"I am Bamba who you thought dead," Bamba told his uncle who did not recognize the young man or believe what he said.

"Do you not know the markings of your tribe?" asked Bamba as he leaned forward for Nyunga to examine the welts on his cheeks. "A white doctor saved me with his medicine and I have brought His medicine to my people."

Nyunga tried to discourage Bamba but he did not forbid him to use his medicine in the village. Bamba cared for many that were sick and soon they recovered.

One day Bamba's assistant came running to Bamba, "Nyunga is ill," he cried. Bamba hurried to the chief's hut and found him lying on the floor of his hut. Bamba examined him and gave him a shot in his arm. Soon Nyunga opened his eyes and began to get well, but it was many days before he was able to leave his hut.

Besides treating the sick, Bamba organized a village church and read his Bible and preached. As Nyunga became stronger he sat in the doorway of his hut and listened. A few days later, while Bamba was preaching, he left his hut and approached the circle of people carrying all his fetishes. The natives thought that he was coming to curse Bamba for certain this time, but instead, he interrupted the meeting to say, "My nephew has turned to white man's ways. His medicine proved more powerful than my fetishes. Henceforth, his God shall be my God." He threw down his fetishes and went back to his hut while Bamba, his heart nearly bursting with joy, bowed his head to thank God for what they had all witnessed.—Gospel Herald.

William Guy Ferrell

Mr. William Guy Ferrell of Lucama, North Carolina, departed this life to be with his Lord on August 12, 1956. He leaves to mourn his passing, not only his loved ones but a host of friends and the members of his church which he served faithfully throughout many years.

Mr. Ferrell was born April 17, 1889. On December 5, 1915, he was joined in matrimony to Miss Montie Raper. He united with the Little Rock Free Will Baptist Church on March 18, 1944.

He spent his entire life in Wilson County, North Carolina, except for the years which he spent attending Oak Ridge Military Institute in western North Carolina.

Those who knew him best affirm that he was faithful to his Lord and his church in the things which he did. His manner was quiet and unassuming to the point that he was well loved by his friends and neighbors. He exhibited an excellent spirit of devotion to his family and friends, and was thorough in accomplishing the tasks which he undertook. The good qualities which he portrayed might well be emulated by those who are left behind.

The Calverys Write

Just a note to let you know that we have arrived safely in our new home (September 9, 1956) and we are busy trying to get settled back down to normal living.

We managed to rent a very good cement block house and at very reasonable rent so we are thankful for that.

We are trying to get ready for winter. They say it is quite severe here. A jacket feels quite comfortable even now.

The town has forty-two thousand people with really no witnesses. There is a Catholic church and an Episcopal church. None of the towns around have any witnesses of any kind. This morning we attended the Episcopal church. The church has been here forty years and there were only ten people in attendance. There was very little gospel presented in the service. It seemed almost to be a mockery of the true gospel. But the pastor is very friendly and speaks English. He studied in Philadelphia.

There is really a great harvest field here for us to work in. Please pray that the Lord will give us strength to do the job well. Also, please pray that He will raise up workers and helpers for us.

Our first impressions of this town are fine. I'm sure we are going to be happy here. I'm sorry but our address is different from what it was before. It is: 19 Shin Machi, Abashiri Shi, Hokkaido, Japan.

A Letter from Germany

I received a letter today from Rev. Raymond Riggs in regard to a church over here, and I was very glad to get it. I had just received one from Rev. George W. McLain from Campbell, California.

We have the Youth For Christ group started here; in fact, it has been going two years now, but we are working with it and have been since we have been here in Germany. There are several such groups in this part of Germany and we are seeing many souls saved through them. We have been allowed the opportunity to preach to the different groups and find that there is a lot of the young people here who have an earnest desire to find the Lord and to worship Him in the Spirit.

As to the beginning of a Free Will Baptist church here, there is nothing that I would enjoy more because I believe that

NATIONAL FOREIGN, Rev. Raymond Riggs, Secretary
3801 Richland Avenue, Nashville, Tennessee
NATIONAL HOME, Rev. Damon C. Dodd, Secretary

we must work while it is day and help all we can to win the lost to the Lord. There are several denominations here, among them Southern Baptists and the Church of Christ. Then, of course, there is the Lutheran church which is the most prominent one here.

I do not know how we could go about trying to establish a church here, but I am sure that it could be done, and I am willing, in fact, I would be pleased, to do anything that I can to help this work because I have been called into the ministry, and I must do all that I can to promote the gospel and win lost souls to Him.

There is one way that might gain an entrance for us to work in and that is this: We have retreats here that are held every week and these are conducted through the Chaplain Corp, by mostly civilian ministers. If we could get one of our ministers from the states here to preach one of the retreats, then we might be able to find out if we can organize a church and how. I will be glad to do all that I can to help. I will endeavor to find out any information I can about the retreats and just how the ministers are selected and if I can get any information I will send it to Mr. Riggs. I am interested in getting the tracts "The Free Will Baptist Church History, Doctrine, and Information" that the home missions board put out. Can anyone give me information on them?

Slocumb, Alabama, Church Nearing Completion

The Rev. Rufus Hyman, pastor of the Slocumb Free Will Baptist Church, Slocumb, Alabama, reports marked progress of the congregation toward the completion of its house of worship. The church, organized in November, 1955, under the leadership of Mr. Hyman, has a plant valued at approximately $10,000 which is located on a lot consisting of almost one acre of ground.

The pastor reports that materials are on hand and work will be started soon on finishing the interior of the church auditorium. The woodwork will be varnished and the exposed block will receive an application of finishing material.

God's Command To Teach

(Lesson for October 21)

Lesson: Deuteronomy 6:1-25.

Golden Text: Deuteronomy 6:6, 7.

I. INTRODUCTION

The children of Israel, upon reaching Mount Sinai shortly after they had crossed the Red Sea out of reach of their Egyptian overlords, saw the mighty manifestation of God's presence on the mountain and were sore afraid. Consequently they asked Moses to talk with God for them and relay His message to them. After God gave Moses the commandments, Moses came down from the mountain and presented them to the people. The people had already promised Moses that they would do whatever God should direct. Moses said, "Now these are the commandments, the statutes, and the judgments, which the LORD your God commanded to teach you, that ye might do them in the land whither ye go to possess it" (Vs. 1). During the forty-day period of Moses' stay with the Lord, he received not only the Ten Commandments but also a detailed interpretation of them which would apply to every phase of living.

God commanded that the people be taught the law. One cannot expect people to be obedient to that of which they are not informed. The Israelites were a people who for more than four hundred years had been slaves in Egypt. Their only concern had been to do the will of their masters. Now, as a free and Godly people, they had to be taught how to live. It is even so with every person who is translated from the kingdom of darkness to the light of Christ by the Holy Spirit. We shall have strong, devout Christians in our congregations in proportion to the strength and thoroughness of our teaching program in the church. Babies in Christ are made to grow in grace as they feed upon spiritual truth administered by the church program. Weak and anemic Christians are the product, many times, of an ineffective teaching program in the church—The Bible Student (F. W. B.).

II. HELPFUL HINTS

1. The commandments of the Lord are intended for all, yesterday, today and for the days to come (Vv. 1, 2).

2. The blessings that are promised in the Word of God belong to all who obey the Lord (Vs. 3).

3. Since the LORD our God is the one and only God, there is no room for a divided love (Vv. 4, 5).

4. Only those who have God's Word in their hearts will think to talk about them to their children every day (Vv. 6, 7).

5. Wherever God's Word is honored and obeyed, signs of faith in it will be displayed (Vv. 8, 9).

6. The demands of the Lord are best explained by those who have witnessed the power of His Word (Vv. 20-22).

7. It is both for His glory and for His people's good that the Lord demands obedience to His Word (Vv. 23, 24).

8. Whatever God commands His people to do will add to the righteousness of those who obey (Vs. 25).—The Bible Teacher (F. W. B.).

III. ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

1. The law God gave through Moses consisted of three parts: (1) Commandments, ten in number, which express the spiritual standards of God (Exodus 20:1-17); (2) judgments, which governed the social life of the Israelites (21:1—24:11); (3) ordinances, which governed the religious life of the people (24:12—31:11). Our present lesson is a command to teach the whole law of God (Deuteronomy 6:1-3). We as Christians may apply that to the teaching of the whole Word of God.

2. The nation of Israel stood at the threshold of an illustrious future. The prospects were bright. The potentialities were unlimited. God was now ready to fulfill all the promises made to the patriarchs. The land Abram had trod in faith, was about to be possessed by his seed. From obscurity and bondage, Israel was to rise to the heights of conquest and dominion.

However, with the coming of prosperity and the acquisition of wealth, there would come the inevitable snares and temptations. While they possessed great military might, morally they were weak and vacillating. All throughout the wilderness experiences, they left a shameful record of rebellion, murmuring, unbelief and ingratitude. Nor was it reasonable to expect that prosperity and ease would strengthen the moral fiber of their character.—The Bible Illustrator.

3. Moody said that once a woman in Chicago came to him nearly out of her mind. He remarked that some people mock at religious meetings and say that religion drives people mad, whereas it is sin that drives people mad. This woman told her story. A neighbor lady had died leaving a little child. The distressed woman's husband had brought her the child, and in spite of her protests had said, "You must take it and look after it." The woman thought she had enough to do in caring for her own family. She tried to starve the child, but it lingered on. Once it cried all night, probably because it was hungry. At last the woman took the bed clothes and threw them over the child and smothered it. No one knew anything about it, and the child was buried. Years had passed, but she said, "I hear the voice of that child day and night. It has nearly driven me mad." God had seen what had taken place and this retribution followed.

This was a cruel thing to do, but millions of parents are murdering the souls of their children (Vs. 7).

4. My mother reared ten children. She had no household appliances. She baked the bread and cooked on an old-fashioned coal range. She used a hand washer and an old flat iron which had to be heated on the top of the kitchen stove. She sewed and mended our clothes. Yet she had time to read the Bible to us and listen to our prayers. She taught us to learn Bible verses "by heart." She insisted upon us learning entire chapters. Modern mothers with one or two children and every kind of modern appliances, are too busy to teach God's Word diligently unto their children. There is no time to set up the family altar in the home. This is the true secret of juvenile delinquency.—C. W. Miller

5. And thou shalt love the Lord . . . with all thine heart. Love for God presupposes love for man. We cannot love God and hate anyone at the same time. Love and hate cannot exist in the same heart at the same time. Said John, "If a man say, I love God, and hateth his brother, he is a liar: for he that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, how can he love God whom he hath not seen?" (1 John 4:20).

This verse is all important. The Jewish leaders of Christ's day knew the Scriptures well. Then why did they crucify Him? A head full of knowledge can be a dangerous thing if it is not associated with a heart full of love.

There are two places where truth may be stored. One is the mind, or the intellectual depository. The other is the heart, or the depository of conviction. There is a vast difference between these two. Really every person needs both depositories. Head knowledge can be a great blessing if coupled with heart knowledge, otherwise it may be a curse.

for both laymen and ministers. We are adequately prepared to offer the first two years of college work that are basic to almost all of the leading vocations, including teaching, the Christian ministry, social work and business education.

Credits earned at Mount Olive Junior College can be transferred without loss to the senior colleges of eastern North Carolina.

Improvement of facilities

When the college opened in September, 1954, we were ill-equipped for the task ahead of us. We had no library, dining hall, auditorium seats, heating unit or science laboratory. Our classroom and office furniture was inadequate.

Today we have a beautiful, well-equipped building. Our science laboratory is well furnished. Our library contains 4,000 volumes and is administered by a full-time professionally trained librarian; and, due to the generosity of the Reverend J. C. Moye of Snow Hill, North Carolina, it has an endowment of $12,500. Our cafeteria has maintained a sanitation grade of "A" since it was opened. On every hand we are adequately prepared to carry on our work for the current school year.

Enrollment

The following figures tell the story of growth in the student body:

Fall of 1954—22

Fall of 1955—40

Fall of 1956—61

These are figures for full-time college students. Night and special students would increase these enrollment figures considerably. The total enrollment for the current term is 87.

Financial

Our total income for the year ending August 31, 1956, was more than $80,000.

In addition to the above amount we have received the following in endowments:

1. Endowment in the amount of $5,000 in stock in the Mount Olive Pickle Company, donated by Dr. C. C. Henderson of Mount Olive, North Carolina.

2. Endowment of a $12,500 trust fund for the college library given by the Rev. J. C. Moye Sr. of Snow Hill, North Carolina.

3. A $10,000 endowment by the Mount Olive Pickle Company to be paid at the rate of $2,000 per year.

4. An endowment of $600 by the First Union Meeting of the North Carolina Western Conference with plans to add $100 each quarter.

5. Endowment of a $1,000 life insurance policy by W. Burkette Raper (Policy to be paid up in 15 years).

6. Endowment of $1,000 life insurance policy by S. A. Smith (Policy to be paid up in 10 years).

These endowment funds total more than $30,000; the capital of these funds is invested, and only the interest is spent. But while we have made tremendous progress during the past year, we have hardly begun to reach our goal. We need, during the next year, to increase our permanent endowment funds to at least $100,000. I hope to live to see Mount Olive Junior College with an endowment fund of one million dollars. Let us remember the words of the Lord to the children of Israel, "Thou shalt remember the LORD thy God, for it is he that giveth thee power to get wealth. . . ." (Deuteronomy 8:18).

A Message to Ministers

It has been some time since you had a personal letter from me. Perhaps the last one was when I told you of the needs of the Bible College to purchase Richland Hall, a 60-room apartment building. There has never been, in the history of modern-day Free Will Baptist work, such a response to any appeal as you and hundreds of others gave to the college on that occasion. Personally, my heart was overwhelmed with rejoicing when I realized that so many of my brethren were interested in Free Will Baptist Bible College.

The Bible College has continued to grow. We now face the biggest need and challenge we have faced. There are at this time on the architect's drawing board two buildings that are urgently needed in order for the college to cope with a growing enrollment. These two buildings will include an extension to our auditorium which will provide a dining hall, a kitchen and a student center. The other buildings will include classrooms, library and administrative and teachers' offices. These will be units of an over-all improvement program which the board of trustees and the National Association have approved. The first cost will be at least $200,000. The executive committee of the board of trustees in a recent meeting felt that we would be justified in beginning these buildings when as much as $50,000 was on hand.

In order to get started at the quickest possible time, Brother James F. Miller has been employed to devote his full time to working with the pastors and churches of our denomination in making this improvement program a success. Brother Miller will begin his duties October 1. No doubt he will be contacting you and others in your area in behalf of this program. I have told Brother Miller that I felt sure you would lend him every assistance possible to get this building program under way. I too shall be working with Brother Miller in promoting these goals. Any way you can help us will be personally appreciated by me and every member of the board of trustees. Any suggestions you might have to offer us will be deeply appreciated. Above all, pray for us.

We hope to have $15,000 in special gifts on hand by November 10 to pay for a recently purchased building. Any help you can give us toward this goal will be appreciated.

Yours in Christ,

L. C. Johnson, President

Free Will Baptist Bible College

MORE LAND FOR MOUNT OLIVE COLLEGE

Jesse Martin transfers the deed of 48 acres of land near the elementary school to W. Burkett Raper, president of Mount Olive Junior College, Mount Olive, North Carolina, as Mrs. Martin, R. N. Hinnant, M. L. Johnson and David Hansley, members of the college Board of Directors, left to right, watch. The property will be used to expand the college's campus.

Mount Olive Junior College has taken its first step toward its expansion program in the purchase of 50 acres of land located four-tenths of one mile from its present campus site on U. S. 117 in Mount Olive. The present campus consists of three acres in the center of a residential section, and after careful study the Board of Directors of the college decided to plan future expansion on a new site.

An architectural firm has been retained by the college to draw a master plan for expansion, and after these plans are presented, the college will then make plans for the erection of specific buildings.

President W. Burkette Raper this week said he expects the master plans to be completed around January 1, 1957. The master plans are to include the location of buildings for an enrollment of five hundred boarding students but will not include plans for the individual buildings.

"Individual plans will be drawn as the demand for them and the funds to finance their construction are available. The first building planned as of now for the new campus is a girls' dormitory," Raper said.

"As for the present campus," Raper said, "the college has no plans to abandon it in the foreseeable future."

EDITORIAL

HUMAN IMPERFECTIONS

All who read the last issue of The Free Will Baptist will be reminded that the editor is subject to making mistakes. We have made many since we have been in our present position, but we have never before attached the last part of the article of one writer who was resigning his position to the end of an article of a person who was making his first report in a new position. Let us explain what happened:

The Reverend Wilbert Everton, newly elected chairman-treasurer of North Carolina superannuation, made the announcement that he had assumed the duties of his new position, and made an appeal to the churches of that state to respond with offerings for superannuation during the month of October. In the same issue, the Reverend H. E. Willis, promotional secretary for North Carolina state missions, made his last report of activities in that position, and was announcing his resignation to become promotional secretary for the National Home Missions Board.

After we had edited both articles, the last page of Mr. Willis' manuscript, somehow, became attached to Mr. Everton's article, and the type was set accordingly. The error continued throughout the process of publishing the issue without being detected. Now we are faced with the responsibility of trying to make amends for this regrettable error. Elsewhere in this issue we shall correct the error made on Page 5 of the last issue.

This is another instance of the imperfections and limitations which plague us while we are still in this tabernacle of flesh. No matter how earnestly we try for perfection, we are constantly reminded that we are subject to commit error and to miss the mark in our daily living. Such experiences make us better able to appreciate the words of the apostle, Paul, "For we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. For in this we groan, earnestly desiring to be clothed upon with our house which is from heaven: If so be that being clothed we shall not be found naked. For we that are in this tabernacle do groan, being burdened: not for that we would be unclothed, but clothed upon, that mortality might be swallowed up of life" (2 Corinthians 5:1-4).

In contemplation of the errors, mistakes and sins which people commit in this life because of human limitations and imperfections, we are faced with certain pertinent facts:

(1) Damage is done to others and the cause of Christ by our failures. No matter how insignificant we may consider ourselves or our position in society, we cannot escape the responsibility for our words and deeds. If we are not loyal to the church to which we belong, someone will follow our example and the church will suffer. If we fail to show forth the fruits of a saving faith in our lives, someone else will be prone to look with lack of interest or unconcern upon the invitation of Christ for them to be saved. And if we unconsciously or unknowingly err, the result may be disastrous sometimes to even a dear friend or loved one. Reason dictates that we should strive every minute of every day to prevent costly errors; and Jesus says, "Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect" (Matthew 5:48).

(2) Jesus died to atone for our imperfections. This is a glorious thought when we understand it as God has revealed it in His Word. He teaches us that we are altogether imperfect and sinful in our unregenerate state. When we are regenerated by faith in Christ as our Saviour, we come into possession of the divine nature in the person of Christ who dwells within us; however, we are still possessed of the fleshly nature which we had before Christ came in. Furthermore, we are still inhabiting an unredeemed body of earthly flesh. Therefore, we are still subject to err by virtue of the imperfect nature which is still with us. But the same Christ who has regenerated our soul has made provision in His death and resurrection for the ultimate destruction of our sinful nature and the redemption of our body. This will come with our physical death and the resurrection of our body when Christ comes back for us. In the meantime, we must lean heavily upon the Holy Spirit who "... also helpeth our infirmities: ..." (Romans 8:26), to strengthen us against sin and error.

On the other hand, it is a fact of life that, because of our imperfection of faith and obedience, we find ourselves sometimes overcome by sin and guilty of error. Moreover, Jesus, being conscious of our frailty and weakness, has made a plan whereby we may be forgiven and justified in the eyes of the Father. John says, "My little children, these things write I unto you, that ye sin not. And if any man sin, we have an advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous: And he is the propitiation for our sins: and not for ours only, but also for the sins of the whole world" (1 John 2:1, 2). In Christ we are able to maintain God's standard in this life, and by Him we shall ultimately be delivered from all imperfections. But we should be careful not to presume upon His mercy in that we fail to maintain diligence in all godliness.

(3) These reminders of his dependence upon Christ should make the Christian humble. The great apostle, Paul, said, "... there was given to me a thorn in the flesh, the messenger of Satan to buffet me, lest I should be exalted above measure" (2 Corinthians 12:7). Here is a blessing that God brings out of tragedy. It is marvelous how God can take the tattered ends of a tragic experience, tie them together, and cause them to become a blessing to those who trust Him. Even in such experience God fulfills the promise of His Word, "... that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose" (Romans 8:28).

If everything we did were perfect, and every undertaking altogether successful, we would become puffed up with pride; we would become intolerant of others even in their least failure or error; indeed, we would become exalted above measure. But when we are constantly reminded that we are dependent creatures by our errors, we are driven to prostrate ourselves before God for strength to do His will; and we are also conditioned to work with other imperfect servants such as we.

While we are in this life, we can but look forward anxiously to that day when, through the unspeakable gift of Christ, we shall throw off all earthly limitations and rejoice that we are clothed upon, that mortality might be swallowed up of life.

A Leading Lady

(Given at the North Carolina Woman's Auxiliary Convention by Mrs. D. W. Hancock)

I AM sure that as Christian Free Will Baptists, we all have a keen desire to know more about our missionaries that we might be inspired to a greater mission work. If we were to visit Miss Barnard in person this morning, I am sure that she would not say about herself the things that I am going to say, because she is much too humble and modest. I would like to bring you a few facts concerning a "lady who took the lead" in missions in our denomination, our veteran missionary, Miss Laura Belle Barnard. One who has truly placed her all on the altar for our Lord and Saviour, one who has put self and selfish desires completely out of the way, and the writer of the great book that has been such an inspiration to us, His Name Among All Nations.

Miss Barnard was born in Glennville, Georgia, and received her early education there. She is a graduate of Columbia Bible College, Columbia, South Carolina. She is about fifty years of age. Her father is dead, but her mother, Mrs. Cora Hagen, is living in Glennville. Our missionary has two brothers, one half brother, and three half sisters, all living. We are told that when she was just a little girl she would go out into the fields and work with the Negroes, trying to win them to the Lord. So we feel that she received her call to be a missionary in the dark land to a dark people even in her earliest childhood.

As you know, at the time Miss Barnard went into mission work, our denomination was not well organized, hence the absence of so many facts that would be of great interest to us.

The Free Will Baptist denomination, as we know it today, has been somewhat slow in getting the real vision for foreign mission work.

In 1935 when the Eastern Conference and the Western Conference of the Free Will Baptist Churches of America were contemplating merging into a national body, it seems that a meeting was being held in the Black Jack Free Will Baptist Church in North Carolina. There were a great number of delegates from the various states where Free Will Baptist work was known.

In those days the local church served as the host and entertained all the delegates. Many homes would care for as many as twenty and twenty-five people. Some would find sleeping quarters in the barn, while others doubled up in the homes. The fellowship that existed in those days, however, was something unexcelled. I'm sure there are still some in this audience who remember that eventful convention and how the Lord honored with His intimate presence. A bombshell was dropped in this convention, because it was then that a very attractive, well-educated, neat young lady challenged the denomination to send her to India. This young lady was well qualified to assume any position as private secretary to any executive in this country. Instead, the Lord had laid upon her heart the dark people of India and the burden of going there as a missionary. That person was Laura Belle Barnard.

At that time the denomination had no work in India. Of course, we had had work there, but in the merger of 1910, the work was swallowed up by the Northern Baptist Convention. The Spirit of the Lord was in the meeting as Miss Barnard offered herself to take the lead in spearheading our foreign mission work in this heathen land. Until that time the Free Will Baptist denomination was rather dormant here in the states. It was very difficult for local congregations to exist. We had very few, if any, full-time pastors. We had no educational program, and the spiritual life of the church as a whole was at a rather low ebb. When this dear lady helped us to catch a vision for missions, however, we began to move uphill as a denomination.

Miss Barnard did go to India, and after studying the language, having fellowship with other Christian missionaries, and getting her feet on the ground, she began a work of our own. Her heart and life have been dedicated to the Lord and the people of India for approximately twenty-two years. Since she went to India, she has had two furloughs. When she came home in 1940, she was not privileged to return to India as soon as she had planned because of the war. During that time she taught in our Bible school, held institutes and stayed very busy for the cause of missions.

The work started in a small way in the form of a school in Kotagiri, Southern India. We are told that Miss Barnard worked with her hands in the actual building, taking her place as a carpenter. During these years the Lord has greatly blessed the efforts of this leading lady, and God has given us a real work in India. From a one-room school twenty-two years ago, the work has grown to a Christian day school, a new church in India with a full-time national pastor, and property valued between twelve and fifteen thousand dollars. From this work in South India, we have expanded to a new field in North India where there are four missionaries: Rev. and Mrs. Daniel R. Cronk and Rev. and Mrs. Carlisle Hanna. We feel these are results of sacrifice, prayer and the dedicated life of Laura Belle Barnard.

The people of the Free Will Baptist denomination are indebted to Miss Barnard for having been the first Free Will Baptist to go into this area with the gospel. From that day until this, our denomination has been growing. We believe that much of this is due to the fact that this wonderful lady challenged us to obey the Lord and lift up our eyes and look on the fields.

Miss Barnard has asked that her duties as a missionary be relieved after this year. This request, of course, will be granted contingent upon someone to fill her place in India. This is a very definite matter of prayer as the Indian government has rejected so many visas for new missionaries. Pray that it will be possible to get a young couple in as a replacement for Miss Barnard.

In addition to the work in Kotagiri, and, as a result of this missionary's activity, many of the surrounding villages have been reached with the message of salvation.

Miss Barnard is no longer that young lady she was in 1935 when she offered herself to the Lord in the mission field. Her hair is now a halo of gray, but she is still a wonderful person; and even though father time has caused the years to creep up, we know that there are many more useful years of Christian service in her life. Her health is not too good—let's make that an object of prayer.

As a result of this spearhead led by Miss Barnard, our denomination has been challenged time and time again to our responsibility of carrying the gospel to those who have never heard. No doubt much credit is due her for the missionary revival that has been sweeping our denomination within the last several years. Today we have four missionaries in Japan and seven American missionaries in Cuba along with fifty or more nationals, who are representing the Lord Jesus Christ and the Free Will Baptist denomination. There are over 2,000 members of the Free Will Baptist church in Cuba, and of course the work in Northern India. Truly, as a denomination, we are indebted to this beloved missionary.

When my eyes rest upon a portrait of this dear lady, I do not see gray hair, a spent life, wrinkled face and hands, but rather, I see a mind through which Christ thinks; I see lips through which Christ speaks; I see

Speak the Truth

NAAMAN BORDERS
Waverly, Ohio

WHEN we look around us these days and see how carelessly the people handle the truth, it brings a pall of gloom over us. Sometimes these people are professed Christians. One can tell a lie by his silence as well as by his tongue. When another is being persecuted and vilified and you remain mum, acting as though you believe the false reports, you have made the impression that you do believe them. According to our Bible and our treatise we are to protect our brother and help hold him up when we believe him to be innocent. If we fail to do this, we break our covenant with God and man. Even if the brother has been overtaken in a fault, the Bible says let those which are spiritual restore such an one. We must go the Bible way if we expect to enter the pearly gates.

Another way we make a gross mistake is to talk about our pastor before our children. Be very careful about criticizing anyone who is trying to serve God. If we are not careful we will do irreparable damage to our own children. The plastic mind is very responsive to every evil word parents say. You could make an unbeliever out of your child. The child thinks that Dad knows and that he is telling the truth, when maybe he is coloring it up to suit his whims and grossly exaggerating about someone he dislikes. I have seen this very thing happen more than once. When you turn your child against the minister, how in the world do you expect him to lead the child to Christ? When someone prominent in the church flies the track and backslides, I keep it from my children as long as I can. I don't want them to lose confidence for their own sakes.

Another place you can hear people who have little regard for the truth is on the radio. One surely can hear high-powered salesmanship then and there. I wish I had space to tell you how many times I've been skinned by ordering things that were advertised over the radio. I've bought razor blades, seat covers, tulip bulbs, Christmas goods and medicines, and I can truthfully say I've always got beat. No matter what kind of cigarettes, face powders, soaps and automobiles they are, they're always better than the rest. Since it is against the law to send false statements through the mail, why not through the air? Some day they'll pass that law.

If one's word is no good, his religion and his character are no good. You can hear a lot of misstatements when you listen to the office seekers. You hear so many contradictory remarks you hardly know whom to believe. So we have to sift the facts out as best we can and make our cross mark where we think it should be. But by all means, one should vote.

The Bible says, "... Speak ye every man the truth to his neighbour; ..." (Zechariah 8:16). Sometimes we feel like Isaiah when he said, "... judgment is turned away backward, and justice standeth afar off: for truth is fallen in the street, ..." (Isaiah 59:14). David said, "LORD, who shall abide in thy tabernacle? who shall dwell in thy holy hill?" And he answers the question by saying, "He that walketh uprightly, and worketh righteousness, and speaketh the truth in his heart" (Psalm 15:1, 2).

Some folk excuse themselves by saying they are telling a little white lie or by giving it the fancy name, a fib. There is no such thing as a white lie, and Webster says that a fib is a falsehood. The Bible says that all liars shall have their part in the lake of fire. Ananias and his wife, Sapphira, were stricken dead for telling a lie, and where are their souls today?

A liar is almost always a coward for he fears to tell the truth. Abraham Lincoln said that no man can be a successful liar because his memory is too short. He'll tell his story in so many different ways. And when one is telling the truth there is no way of fouling up your story. Someone has said that the truth will live forever and a lie will die amid its worshipers. The truth will stand the test of the ages because it is of God, while a lie will ultimately fall because the devil is the father of lies. There is a saying, "The truth itself is not believed by one who often has deceived." This quotation is found in the old McGuffey readers, and it's a pity we don't still have it taught in our schools.

You've often heard it said of a certain individual that his word is as good as his bond. A man of that type can stand up with his shoulders thrown back and look you in the eye while you talk to him. We have lie detectors now, but they are not always accurate in every case. But we have a great Judge who sits in the heavens who is always accurate and will render to every man according to his works. "... Speak ye every man the truth to his neighbour; ..." (Zechariah 8:16).

SUPERANNUATION

MRS. WALTER RHODES
Board Member

August 13, 1956, the Superannuation Board of North Carolina, met in session at Mount Olive Junior College, Mount Olive, North Carolina.

The former board chairman, Rev. M. L. Johnson, resigned due to responsibilities at Mount Olive College, and the Rev. Wilbert Everton was elected to fill the unexpired term. We feel sure that Mr. Everton will perform his duties in a gracious manner. He is a fine young minister, a graduate of the Free Will Baptist Bible College, Nashville, Tennessee, and joins the board members in asking for support for the aged ministers of North Carolina and their widows.

David said in Psalm 71:18 "... when I am old and greyheaded, O God, forsake me not; ..." God remembers His servants through His church. In fact that is the only plan Free Will Baptists have to give systematically to the support of the superannuation treasury. The board of superannuation is asking all church members to give only twenty-five cents per member to this cause. By giving this small amount the board will be in position to continue sending the monthly checks which are so small that it leaves room for an increase in our giving. With the high cost of living let us resolve by the grace of God to increase our giving to one of the most worthy phases of our work.

October has been designated as superannuation month. Let us give out of a heart of love and appreciation for the service rendered by the retired ministers and the widows. Ministers receive monthly checks and widows quarterly checks.

We trust and pray that some day Free Will Baptists will have a superannuation program sufficient to pay all retired ministers and widows monthly checks large enough to justify comfortable living.

Send all offerings to Rev. Wilbert Everton, Route 3, Wilson, North Carolina.

Free Union Honors Mr. and Mrs. Luther Heath

Sunday morning, October 7, Mr. and Mrs. Luther H. Heath were honored in special services at the Free Union Free Will Baptist Church, Greene County, North Carolina. The preceding day had marked the fiftieth anniversary of Mr. Heath's serving continually as a deacon of the church. Using as his text Romans 13:7, "Tribute whom tribute is due," his pastor, the Rev. C. L. Patrick, reviewed briefly Mr. Heath's years of service not only as a deacon, but also as a great soul-winning Sunday school teacher. Tribute was also paid to his great courage in always standing firmly for whatever he believed to be right. The pastor pointed out that the respect, admiration and love of his neighbors pay a higher tribute than anything that could be expressed in words.

Then the pastor reminded his congregation that by the side of Mr. Heath stood a good woman; that Mrs. Heath's understanding, cooperation and encouragement had helped tremendously in making Mr. Heath's accomplishments possible. The pastor concluded his formal tribute with these words: "You may be Mr. and Mrs. Luther H. Heath to others, but to your pastor's family and host of friends you are 'Mammy and Pa.'"

Lovely white carnations were presented to Mr. and Mrs. Heath by Mr. and Mrs.

Rev. J. A. Alexander Accepts Plymouth, N. C., Pastorate

The Rev. J. A. Alexander has recently accepted a call to the Free Will Baptist Church of Plymouth, North Carolina, and will begin full-time services there the first of November. Rev. Alexander's resignation as the pastor of the First Free Will Baptist Church of Portsmouth, Virginia, will be effective October 28, 1956. The Rev. Eugene Waddell of South Carolina has been called to succeed Mr. Alexander.

Mr. Alexander began his ministry with the First Free Will Baptist Church of Portsmouth in November, 1949, on a part-time basis, but in June, 1950, he began full-time services with the church. At the beginning of his pastorate the church was holding services in the Dale Homes Community Hall, with a membership of forty-eight. The church had already purchased a lot in Printis Park on the corner of Randolph Street and Des Moines Avenue.

In April, 1950, they began putting material on the lot for the proposed building. The church was completed so as to hold services the first Sunday in February, 1951. The church was built with free labor of the church members and others. This building consisted of four Sunday school rooms and an auditorium with a seating capacity of three hundred. In a short time the Sunday school had grown so that it was necessary to have more room. In June, 1953, a new educational building was begun. This building was completed in December of the same year and consisted of nine Sunday school rooms and a new heating plant for the church and educational building. During these years of growth under the leadership of Rev. Alexander the church increased to two hundred and seven in number.

Mr. Rice has served as moderator of the Eastern Conference of North Carolina, is a member of the board of trustees, the examining board and chairman of the mission board of the conference. # Questions and Answers ON THE BIBLE

Conducted by J. F. BARROW

3824 Richland Avenue, Nashville 5, Tennessee

Question: I would like for you to explain the ninth chapter of Romans, especially Verses 11-14 so as to give a correct view on predestination.—Mrs. Aurie Hayes, Arapahoe, North Carolina.

Answer: In Verses 8-13 we have the difference between Abraham's natural descendants and spiritual children emphasized in concrete examples from history. "That is, They which are the children of the flesh, these are not the children of God: but the children of the promise are counted for the seed" (Romans 9:8). Here we see a definite and distinct contrast, one that is kept before us throughout the Bible and is illustrated many times from Genesis to Revelation, They which are the children of the flesh, these are not the children of God. See Genesis 4:3-15. Compare Hebrews 11:4. In these Scriptures Cain and Abel are used to illustrate this truth. Some commentators say that because Abel offered an innocent animal whose blood typified Jesus' blood shed on Calvary, his offering was accepted. That if Cain had offered such an offering his would have been accepted of God. That is only a part of the truth. That an innocent victim should have been slain and offered by him is easily seen by a careful reader of the Scriptures, but since Cain did not have faith, faith in God's Word or commandment, a sacrifice of the right type would not have availed any thing. See Malachi 1:6—2:17. Had Cain possessed saving faith he would have been obedient and therefore would have chosen the right kind of sacrifice and since he was the elder he would have been in a position of authority over Abel. See Genesis 4:6, 7. Another illustration of this truth, as seen in the Bible, is the choice of David rather than one of his older brothers. See 1 Samuel 16:1-13. From the very beginning God has instilled in the minds and directed in the affairs of men a principle through which the elder of a family or tribe rules those who are younger unless some legitimate reason intercepts that eldership. In each of these examples a good reason was foreseen of God. A similar illustration may be seen in the act of God's choosing of Samuel as prophet, priest, judge and king maker or king anointer. Eli was serving the position of high priest and judge and was eligible for that place according to the Levitical traditional requirements, so were his sons, Hophni and Phinehas, as his descendants in line for their place of service, also which ever was the elder would have been high priest at their father's death, but all three of these were disobedient to God so God rejected them and placed Samuel in their stead. Samuel, so far as custom of that day was concerned, had no right to succeed Eli or his sons. God did not tell either of them about their coming disaster, but spoke to the boy Samuel telling him so he could prophesy about it. For the story read the third and fourth chapters of 1 Samuel. God asks us to choose between Him and all other persons and things and He provides for us in the future according to how He knows we are going to choose. He also deals with us at this present according to our heart's desires and personal choices. We can't fool God and God is not trying to fool us. The wages of sin is, always has been and always will be death. God warns us of this in His word so that we ourselves may not be deceived telling us that sowing to the flesh will assure us of reaping corruption. See Galatians 6:7-9. If only Christians could realize this fact selfishness among them would be greatly curtailed.

Who are "... the children of the promise ..." (Romans 9:8)? A. T. Robertson in "Word Pictures in the New Testament," Volume 4, Page 381, says of this passage: "Only the children of the promise are 'children of God' ... in the full sense. He is not speaking of Christians here, but simply showing that the privileges of the Jews were not due to their physical descent from Abraham. cf. Luke 3:8."

W. R. Newell in "Romans, Verse by Verse," Page 362, says of this same passage: "It is most necessary that we perceive that Paul is speaking here, not of man's believing a promise and therefore being written down as one of God's children; but on the contrary, of the promise (of God to Christ) that characterizes the existence and calling of all the real children of God. He expounds this in the next verse."

I think that both Newell and Robertson are right for all the good to both Jew and gentile come through Christ; on the other hand Christ came to us through the Jews.

"For this is the word of promise, At this time will I come, and Sarah shall have a son" (Romans 9:9); "And he said, I will certainly return unto thee according to the time of life, and lo, Sarah thy wife shall have a son. . . ." (Genesis 18:10). Read and carefully compare these verses. Isaac did not have to believe this promise in order for it to be fulfilled because he had not yet been conceived. Here God promised Isaac to Abraham as He had done on a previous occasion. It would take a miracle to give him to Abraham, but this was no object in the way of God's plans for as He had through a miracle made both Adam and the earth in which He placed him, He could again resort to His miraculous activities and bring this promised son into being. So this He did and gave him to Abraham. It may take this unusual method of God's in order for Him to fulfill many of His promises concerning the future, yet we can be absolutely certain of their accomplishment.

"And not only this; but when Rebecca also had conceived by one, even by our father Isaac; (For the children being not yet born, neither having done any good or evil, that the purpose of God according to election might stand, not of works, but of him that calleth;) It was said unto her, The elder shall serve the younger" (Romans 9:10-12). In Verse 9 we have our attention called to the fact that Isaac was a child of promise; one, the conception and birth of whom required a special miraculous act on God's part. In Verses 10-12 God points out how He has exercised His divine sovereignty as He accomplishes His purpose according to election. He did this as He made His choice of Jacob known to Rebecca their mother before the birth of either son saying, "... the elder shall serve the younger" (Genesis 25:23). As has been indicated in the discussion of a verse appearing earlier in the chapter may we note that God simply chooses whom He will for what He wishes without having to consult anyone. On Page 384, Volume 4 in his "Word Pictures," Robertson says "... The potter takes the clay as he finds it, but he uses it as he wishes."

We say here that to deny God the right to choose whom He wishes and for what place and purpose He desires them for would be limiting Him into more restricted bounds than those in which a potter operates as he shapes his vessels of clay so as to adapt each to its own realm of service. The ancient potter carefully shaped one vessel in size and design for a garbage container, another for a water picher and a third for an ornamental flower vase etc. The potter knew before he began working with his clay the size, shape and design each needed to be planned and

Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path
(PSALM 119:105).

REV. WILLET L. MORETZ
SWANNANOA, N. C.

"And, ye fathers, provoke not your children to wrath: but bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord" (Ephesians 6:4).

Two words in this verse need to be understood in order to know how this important command may be obeyed. The first one is nurture. The dictionary gives, "To bring or train up," as the definition most applicable in the Biblical sense. The other word we need to understand is admonition. Here again the dictionary says, "The act of admonishing; gentle reproof." And the definition of admonish is, "To advise of a fault, caution, exhort, warn." Now, with these definitions in mind let us go back to the text, "But bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord."

The matter of bringing up children in the right way has become a major question of discussion in this age. You will get just about as many different ideas on the subject as to how many different people you talk with about it. They all have different ways of dealing with children. And, strange as it may seem, very few approach it from the Bible standpoint. "That is old-fashioned," they say.

I recently read an article written by J. Edgar Hoover, head of the F. B. I., answering the question, "Should I force my child to go to Sunday school?" which is very good. And while it does not treat the whole subject of child training, it does deal with this part of the question admirably, and certainly is a start in the right direction. It follows:

"Shall I make my child go to Sunday school and church? Yes! And with no further discussion about the matter. Startled? Why? How do you answer Junior when he comes to breakfast on Monday morning and announces to you that he is not going to school anymore. You know! Junior goes. How do you answer when Junior comes in very much besmudged and says, 'I'm not going to take a bath?' Junior bathes, doesn't he?

"Why all this timidity then, in the realm of his spiritual guidance and growth? Going to let him wait and decide what church he'll go to when he's old enough? Quit your kidding! You didn't wait until you were old enough! You don't wait until he's old enough to decide whether he wants to go to school or not—to start his education. You don't wait until he's old enough to decide whether he wishes to be clean or dirty do you? You don't wait until he's old enough to decide if he wants to take his medicine when he is sick? Do you?

"What shall we say when Junior announces he doesn't like to go to Sunday school and church? That's an easy one to answer. Just be consistent. Tell him, 'Junior, in our house we all go to church and Sunday school and that includes you.' Your firmness and example will furnish a bridge over which youthful rebellion may travel into rich and satisfying experience in personal Christian living.

"The parents of America can strike a telling blow against the forces which contribute to our juvenile delinquency, if our mothers and fathers will take their children to Sunday school and church regularly."—Selected.

If our parents will train their children right it will not be necessary for judges to sentence them to go to church as was the case in Waldo, Wisconsin, recently. A news story tells of a tavern operator of that city who violated the liquor laws, and who was sentenced to go to church every Sunday for one year. Circuit Judge, F. H. Schlichting, placed the tavern owner, Sam Zolph, on probation, and said that if he fails to attend church as prescribed he will have to spend his probationary period in jail. Parents, would it not be better for you to take your children to church and Sunday school than to have some judge send them in later years? Think it over!

6. Penalty of sin (1 Chronicles 10:13; Romans 6:23).
7. Only Christ can save us (John 14:6; 1 John 1:7).

When Andrew Murray was led to write on "the temple of the Holy Spirit," he said with reverential awe: "I will meditate and be still, until something of the overwhelming glory of the truth falls upon me, and faith begins to realize it: I am His temple, and in the secret place He sits upon the throne." Then, when he had written, this prayer rises like incense: "I do now tremblingly accept the blessed truth: God, the Spirit; the Holy Spirit; who is God Almighty, dwells in me. O, Father, reveal within me what it means, lest I sin against Thee by saying it and not living it."—Selected.

THE SPIRIT-FILLED LIFE

We have been writing about the Holy Ghost for some time, stating His attributes and His personality. The reason that we have written so much is due to the fact that there are so many unbiblical opinions concerning the Holy Ghost or the Holy Spirit. The Holy Ghost and the Holy Spirit are the same Person. However, I have found people who thought they knew a great deal about the Holy Spirit but yet claimed He was not the same as the Holy Ghost. Of course, this is not the conception of any intelligent, well-informed Bible student, because he would know better. The Holy Spirit is not a Spirit jutting out from the Father and His Son, but, as has been proven in former writings, the Holy Spirit is equal with God the Father and His Son, Jesus Christ, having the same attributes as plainly set forth by the Scriptures. Now we will leave the personality and attributes of the Holy Spirit and talk about the Spirit-filled life of the believer.

Recently we have shown that the household of Cornelius was saved and baptized with the Holy Spirit when Peter began to speak to them. They had been waiting for Peter to tell them what to do to be saved. (Read Acts 11:13, 14). But their faith in the gospel of Christ did the work. They believed that Christ was the Son of God and the Saviour of believers. From that day until now, it has been so and unto the end, that will be the way, the only way, to be born again. One must be baptized and filled with the Holy Spirit, having unfeigned faith in the Lord Jesus Christ.

You can weep, say prayers, confess your sins, shake the preacher's hand, be received into some church organization, be baptized, commune and wash the saints' feet, all of which one ought to do, but it is the faith in Christ that does the work.

Faith Does the Work

When the eunuch asked for baptism at the hands of Philip, the answer was, "... If thou believest with all thine heart, thou mayest. ..." (Acts 8:37). We believe in a believers' baptism. That is what Philip believed. He wanted to be sure the eunuch was fit to be baptized. We want to be sure; however, there are times when we are fooled. Paul, the writer of Romans, said, "... The word is nigh thee, even in thy mouth, and in thy heart: that is, the word of faith, which we preach; That if thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved" (Romans 10:8, 9). So, to receive salvation, one must have a temple fit for the indwelling of the Holy Spirit.

Special Fillings

There is only one baptism, but many fillings. "There is one body, and one Spirit, even as ye are called in one hope of your calling; One Lord, one faith, one baptism" (Ephesians 4:4, 5). "And when they had prayed, the place was shaken where they were assembled together; and they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and they spake the word of God with boldness" (Acts 4:31). Now, it is well established that these disciples were all baptized at Pentecost as described in Chapter 2 of Acts; but now they were filled again with the Holy Ghost. It was necessary for a new filling for them to meet the opposition that was in their way. God supplied their need by filling them again. To be filled again we must be saved, baptized into Christ, ready for God's will to be done, and ready to meet the opposition of Satan and his host of followers. When we are ready and when we get down to real business, the Lord will fill our cup to overflowing. Is it only necessary to be spirit-filled when trial, temptation, persecution and disappointments come? The answer is no; we need to be filled every day, even while the sun is shining, that we might not slip or skid on the narrow way that leads to life. Some of our greatest sins are committed when all seems to be going well.

A Command

It is a commandment that we should be filled. I used to think that it was a prerogative or just a privilege. But Paul did not say, "You may be filled," or "It is your privilege to be filled." He said, "... be filled. ..." Let us notice the whole verse: "And be not drunk with wine, wherein is excess; but be filled with the Spirit" (Ephesians 5:18).

One of the requirements of the first deacons was that they were to be filled with the Holy Spirit. "Wherefore, brethren, look ye out among you seven men of honest report, full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom, whom we may appoint over this business" (Acts 6:3). I have seen men with the authority as set forth in this chapter of Acts who would take bread and wine around the Lord's Table, but they were filled with spirits—the kind that make men kill their wives, shoot to death their own little children, commit rape and be used by Satan for destruction, finally landing in hell fire.

The Spirit-Filled Life

"But the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, Meekness, temperance: against such there is no law" (Galatians 5:22, 23). Don't tell me that you are sanctified, baptized and filled with the Holy Ghost when there are hatred, malice, destructive criticisms and manifestation of carnality in your life. The church at Corinth claimed to be holy, but they were fussing over preachers. They had preacher religion. They had the worst kind of adultery, but they claimed that they were baptized with the Holy Ghost and had the gift of tongues as the evidence. But Paul said they were carnal. He told them to stop their confusion, and he condemned the church because of their carnal activities. They were all confused in their idea of what they called worship services. Let us notice Paul's words:

"Let the prophets speak two or three, and let the other judge. If any thing be revealed to another that sitteth by, let the first hold his peace. For ye may all prophecy one by one, that all may learn, and all may be comforted. And the spirits of the prophets are subject to the prophets. For God is not the author of confusion, but of peace, as in all churches of the saints" (1 Corinthians 14:29-33).

So people can confess spirituality, as did the church at Corinth, and be full of confusion and always stirring up strife.

The Fruits of the Flesh

"Now the works of the flesh are manifest, which are these; Adultery, fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness, Idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulations, wrath, strife, seditions, heresies, Envyings, murders, drunkenness, revellings, and such like: of the which I tell you before, as I have also told you in time past, that they which do such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God." (Galatians 5:19-21).

A LEADING LADY

a heart through which Christ loves; and I see hands through which Christ helps.

May we at this time stand and bow our heads in a moment of silent prayer, in humility and thanksgiving for this wonderful Christian lady who had a vision and challenged our denomination; and because of that vision and challenge many souls shall not perish.

ROY'S TEST

JOSEPHINE SLOAN

ROY Brown drove the last nail in the bookcase he had made, and throwing his hammer was about to carry his bit of carpenter work into the house, when something bright and glistening in a pile of shavings caught his eye.

"Why, it's a half dollar!" He said to himself picking up the coin. "I wonder how it came to be down there?" And Roy stirred the shavings to make sure there were no more silver pieces lying there.

As the boy held the coin in his hand, he was trying to recall who had been in the summer house that morning. "Uncle Mell fastened his ax handle here before going to the woods. I wonder if it belongs to him!"

"Roy, come on. We've only five minutes left to get to the corner. You know the driver does not like to wait on any one," called Effie from the porch.

"Go on. I'll catch up with you in a jiffy," returned Roy as he slipped the coin into his tool box and turned the key.

"I found the very book we want for our library, if we've got the money," said Effie as her brother whistling a merry tune caught up with her near the Willow Creek Bridge.

"What's the name of it?" Roy jerked out almost breathless from running.

"I forget the title, but it's all about Africa and costs eighty cents," explained Effie. "It's the very book we want to finish our set. I paid for the last one with the money I got for gathering herbs for old Mrs. Sims. I thought we'd buy this one together."

"I know we'd like the book and I'd be willing to pay my part, Effie, if I had the money."

"Why, Roy, what have you done with all of that change you had? You sold your share of the popcorn and chestnuts and had a lot of dimes and nickels. Hurry up and tell me what you did with it. Myra Shaw is running to catch up with us."

"Honestly, Effie, I can't promise to pay my part, I tell you I haven't got the money," protested Roy. "That change has all disappeared for there were so many things I wanted for myself." Roy started to speak as he thought of the half dollar in his tool box, but checked himself.

"Let me tell you there were a lot of things I wanted myself," declared Effie, "but I didn't spend my share of the corn and chestnut money to buy them. I think you should take some pride in buying books and not spend so much on yourself. Boys just like to think of themselves," she grumbled.

"Now don't get cranky, Effie Brown," retorted Roy. "I didn't say I wouldn't pay for that book if I could get the money. How much did you expect me to give?"

"Why half, of course."

"That would be forty cents," mused Roy. "I'll tell you before long," he promised in an undertone as Myra Shaw caught step with Effie.

That morning while Roy was looking at a map of the Western states and trying to locate different cities he was thinking, "If that fifty cents were mine I could help buy that book. I wish now I'd asked Uncle Mell as we passed the woods if it belonged to him." The boy took his tablet and wrote down the amount of money he had the previous Saturday evening. "Let me see, how did I spend it?" he mused. "Twenty cents for candy and peanuts. Then there was that fountain pen I had to have, one dollar and a quarter more, and twenty-five cents for a knife I've broken already. That makes one dollar and seventy cents. I had two dollars and ten cents. Hurrah!" he chuckled to himself, "I have just enough left to pay my share toward that book about Africa. Guess Effie can't growl any more about my spending every cent I get."

That evening when Roy reached home he went upstairs and looked eagerly into the little purse reposing in the upper bureau drawer. He emptied the contents and found to his joy there were two dimes and four nickels.

He slipped downstairs and handed the money to Effie, saying as he did so, "This is my share in paying for the book."

"Oh, good!" exclaimed Effie. "You found that you hadn't spent all of your money. Papa promised that I could go to town with him next Saturday, but I'll just telephone to the store this evening and have the book laid aside."

"But how about this half dollar?" Roy was asking himself as he went back upstairs to change his school suit for overalls. "I don't see but what I have a right to spend it since no one has asked for it. I saw just what I want at the store last Saturday and it was marked fifty cents. I remember now that I counted my money and lacked ten cents of having enough to pay for it."

On Saturday when Roy was in town he went directly to look. It was still there. He took it in his hands and thought how much he would enjoy owning one.

"Do you want it?" asked the proprietor seeing the pleased look on the boy's face.

"I couldn't pay for it today," declared Roy looking around guiltily. He put his hand in his pocket and fingered the purse in which reposed the half dollar. Still holding the mitt, he was trying to decide whether the money really belonged to him.

The proprietor moved away impatiently.

"Just put it away for me," and Roy handed it over. "I'll be down next Saturday."

All the way home he was thinking, "Did I do right?" Even after he went to bed that night he was still asking himself the question. "I've got to take it now," he finally decided, "for the merchant may have lost a sale by holding it for me."

Roy put in a miserable Sunday. Mother was quite sure that he was not feeling well and urged him to go upstairs and lie down. But an afternoon alone did not ease the boy's conscience.

When the family arose from the supper table that evening Uncle Mell announced his intention of going to the neighbors. Roy longed to follow him into the living room to ask if the half dollar belonged to him. But something seemed to say, "He will ask why you kept it so long." This thought made Roy feel very unpleasant. He walked uneasily about the room, but hearing his uncle pass out of the house he followed him into the orchard, calling.

"Uncle Mell, I have something to ask before you go away." Then lowering his voice he went on, "Did you drop a half dollar in the summer house? I found one there. I ought to—have said something about it—before," he finished lamely.

Uncle Mell took off his hat. He saw that the boy was ashamed of what he had done. Placing his hands on the lad's shoulders he said, "I missed the coin and when I came back to search, I saw you pick it up and put it into your tool chest. I thought it strange that you did not ask if any one had lost a piece of money."

Now there was a different expression on the man's face as he held the coin in his hand. "Your confession has been a relief to me. I have a better opinion of you. I was planning to ask Harry Turner to look after my sheep in the south pasture during the summer but I have changed my mind. If you care to do this, I will pay you Friday evening when I come home."

"I'll be glad to do it," returned the boy as he walked down the lane with his uncle.

Roy was happier that evening than he had been at any time since he had found the coin. "Now I can pay for that mitt Saturday, with a clear conscience," he was saying to himself.—Our Boys and Girls.

STATE MISSION NEWS INCLUDED AS SUBMITTED FROM THE FIELD

North Carolina State Missions

Rev. H. E. Willis, Promotional Secretary

(Editor's note: This is the complete article written by the Reverend H. E. Willis, the latter part of which was tacked on to the superannuation article written by the Reverend Wilbert Everton and published in the last issue. We offer our sincere apology for the error in the last issue.)

I hereby submit my six months' report of work done for the North Carolina State Mission Board:

Greensboro Church Organized

The Greensboro Free Will Baptist Church was organized on Sunday night, September 30, with 21 charter members. The Rev. James A. Evans, vice-chairman of the North Carolina State Board of Missions and moderator of the Western Conference, was chairman of the meeting. Among the charter members was Dr. W. W. Harvey, one of the leading physicians of Greensboro. Other male members were Wilbur Martin, George Branning, H. E. Willis, Paul Willis, Charles Martin Sr., Gray Critcher and Douglas Critcher. Two young ladies from the Greensboro Womans College also became members. Other ministers taking part in the organizational meeting were H. E. Willis under whose direction the work was started, Norman Adams, George Branning, James M. Evans, J. R. Fuller, W. Green and Garley Teasley.

Thomasville Church Organized

A Free Will Baptist church was recently organized at Thomasville, North Carolina. Rev. Honeycutt is pastor. They meet for regular services at 110 Sunrise Street. This church has become a member of the Yadkin Valley Association.

Winston-Salem Opportunity

Free Will Baptist families in Winston-Salem, North Carolina, are anxious for a church to be started there. Please pray that the Lord may lead someone to help in this overripe city.

Burlington Mission

The work in Burlington, North Carolina, is going forward in a real way. The Lord is using Rev. Garland Teasley to build up that mission, and it now seems that it will only be a few weeks until that work can be organized into a church. This mission is located on U. S. Highway 70A east of town.

Other Opportunities

Other cities in the state that are interested in having a Free Will Baptist church are Jamestown, High Point, Chapel Hill, Sanford, Statesville and Laurinburg. We must hasten to these places while the invitation is open.

Last Report from Secretary

Since this is my last report as state missionary, I would like to express my appreciation for the cooperation shown me since I came to the state of North Carolina. These six months have been really days of activity. The Lord has blessed our efforts, and your prayers have been our strength. This state is open to us; we must go and start churches while we can. And let me add that it can be done. Please pray for me as I go to Nashville, Tennessee, to take the work as promotional secretary and treasurer of the National Home Mission Board.

I should like to particularly express my appreciation to the Rev. Rashie Kennedy, chairman of the North Carolina Mission Board, and to Rev. N. B. Barrow, treasurer, together with the other members of the board—Rev. J. W. Alford, Rev. James A. Evans, and Rev. David W. Hansley—for the work they have done for the cause. This work must go on! Pray as the board decides whom to call for the work. The Lord bless you all!

Prayer and Praise Letter

October 1, 1956

Dear Christian Friend,

I wonder if you noticed the missionary impact of our Sunday school lesson on Sunday, September 30? I am speaking especially of Revelation 22:17; "And the Spirit and the bride say, Come. And let him that heareth say, Come. And let him that is athirst come. And whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely." These are the closing words of the Bible and they are certainly challenging words to those who compose the bride of Christ and who hear His words. We are to say, Come! There are so many who are thirsting after the Water of Life and it is our responsibility to invite them. The invitations of course, are extended through your intercessory prayers, your gifts, your Christian life and the gospel message. We praise the Lord for you who are making it possible for the invitation to be extended into the regions beyond.

LEST WE FORGET—Rev. and Mrs. Wesley Calvery have been in Japan almost two years. The first year was spent in language study. They are now settled at 19 Shin Machi; Abashiri Shi, Hokkaido, Japan. Wesley states that they are in a town of 42,000 people with really no gospel witness. He further states, "This morning we attended the Episcopal Church. The church has been there forty years and there were only ten people in attendance. This is really a great harvest field. Please pray that the Lord will give strength to do the job well."

WATCH THIS!

1. The church that gives is the church that lives.
2. The church that bestows is the church that grows.
3. The church that releases is the church that increases.
4. The church that spends is the church that wins.
5. The church that keeps is the church that weeps.
6. The church that holds is the church that molds.
7. The church that squeezes is the church that wheezes.
8. The church that grasps is the church that gasps.

ON THE MOVE! As usual the month of September has been a very busy month for the foreign mission department. Misses Wischart and Wilson, home on furlough, have been engaged in rather extensive itinerant work. We are most grateful for the response you have given them. Please pray for them as they continue to promote the cause of missions.

We are also thankful for the fellowship and response we enjoyed in revival meetings with the Sandy City Free Will Baptist Church in Ashland, Kentucky; the Jacksonville Free Will Baptist Church, Jacksonville, North Carolina; the Auxiliary Convention of the Eastern Conference in North Carolina, and in the missionary conferences in Norfolk, Warwick, Portsmouth and Richmond, Virginia. Wherever we go we find our people are warmhearted toward our foreign mission program. For this we are humbly grateful.

OCTOBER will also be filled with activity (continued on page fourteen)

MRS. ALICE E. LUPTON (NOTE: Please send all news items direct to 108 Pollock Street Editor The Free Will Baptist Press, Ayden, N. C.) NEW BERN, N. C.

Portsmouth, Virginia—The Woman's Auxiliary of the First Free Will Baptist Church submits an offering of $10 to be used as half support of a missionary student in Cuba. Mrs. E. V. Welton, president of the auxiliary, reports that the women have voted to take as a project the half support of a missionary student in Cuba. The auxiliary is praying that the Lord will bless the student as he uses this money to help win lost souls. It also solicits the prayers of all Christians in this matter.

Maple Hill, S. C.—The Woman's Auxiliary of the Haws Run Free Will Baptist Church held its regular monthly meeting for October at the home of Mrs. Harman Parker. The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. Histon Parker. The group then sang the hymn, "Sweet Hour of Prayer." Those participating in the program were Mrs. Dannie Jenkins, Mrs. Ralph Parker and Mrs. Herbert Sanders. The Scripture reading was taken from the book of Esther. The business session was held following the program. Afterwards the ladies were served refreshments by the hostess, Mrs. Parker.

ties. There will be the Missionary Conference in Nashville, Tennessee. Then, we hope to attend home-coming services October 14 at Highland Park Free Will Baptist Church, staying over in Michigan for services with the Ten Mile Free Will Baptist Church from Sunday night, October 14 through, Friday, October 19. Then beginning October 23 through October 31, we hope to attend the Oklahoma and Texas State Conventions with missionary meetings in Tulsa, Ada, Tecumseh and Oklahoma City. We would appreciate your prayers as we endeavor to keep this strenuous schedule. Also please pray for the missionary conferences scheduled with Calvary, Shady Grove and Edgemont Free Will Baptist Churches of Durham, North Carolina. These meetings will begin October 28 and run through November 11.

CARLISLE HANNA WRITES—"We are planning our church dedication for September 30. We praise the Lord for it, and feel it is another token of His love for India and her people whom we long to serve and lead to Christ. May His richest blessings be upon the work there is our prayer."

CONGRATULATIONS to all those in North Carolina who have made it possible for your state to be the first to meet your foreign mission quota for 1956. Actually the state is $515.07 over the suggested quota with three months yet to go. Of course we all know that suggested quotas are minimum figures and should never be used as a ceiling—so watch North Carolina as she takes the lead in foreign mission gifts.

WILL YOUR STATE MAKE IT?—With three months to go in this calendar year, we are closer to the overall annual budget than any previous year. As yet, we have never had a single year when every state made their quota. Let's make this year an exception! Put your state over her quota by December 31. And all the people said, "Amen."

Respectfully submitted,
RAYMOND RIGGS
Promotional Secretary-Treasurer

The Shepherd Psalm

(Lesson for October 28)

LESSON: Psalm 23

GOLDEN TEXT: Psalm 23:1

I. INTRODUCTION

From the presentation of God's law to His people which we studied in last Sunday's lesson, we consider God's loving care of those who are His in this lesson. It is of extreme importance that we have a clear understanding as to whom the psalmist is referring in our Printed Text. There is little doubt that anyone might mistake the identity of the Shepherd in the Psalm. The Scriptures definitely point in this passage to God. In the tenth chapter of John, Jesus represents Himself as the Good Shepherd. Since He is God incarnate, He is in position to assume this role among men. The student should read John 10 in connection with his study of this lesson.—The Bible Student (F. W. B.).

This Psalm is a song of great beauty, describing, as it does, the peace and calm delight which one possesses whose trust is wholly in God. No one denies that David is the author; but we cannot say at which period of his life it was produced. We can only say it was after he was old enough to have enemies. Let us study this very familiar, revered and loved poem in order to gain a clearer and richer knowledge of God's loving care.—The Advanced Quarterly (F. W. B.).

II. HELPFUL HINTS

1. Only those who can say, The LORD is my shepherd, have security that supplies their every need (Vs. 1).
2. Even in the midst of a desert land the Good Shepherd provides green pastures for His sheep (Vs. 2).
3. Not only does the Lord provide pasture for His sheep, but He gives them rest beside the still waters' edge (Vs. 2).
4. Restoration and guidance are constant needs of the sheep as they journey through the wilderness of sin (Vs. 3).
5. Even when the dangers of death beset their way, the sheep are safe in the Good Shepherd's care (Vs. 4).
6. Though often unseen and its bounty untouched, before the Lord's people He keeps a table spread (Vs. 5).
7. However unworthy we might have been, His goodness and mercy have followed us all (Vs. 6).

8. The ultimate hope of every trusting soul is to dwell in the Lord's house when this life is o'er (Vs. 6).

—The Bible Teacher (F. W. B.).

III. ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

1. It has been customary to interpret the whole Psalm after the simile of the shepherd and the sheep. But a closer study will reveal that there are two similes used. In Psalm 23:1-4 the simile of the shepherd and the sheep is followed; in Verses 5, 6 the simile is that of a father and a son. Sheep do not sit at tables or have their heads anointed with oil; but sons do.

The Psalm is in two clearly divided parts. Both parts travel the same route of a life of trust in God. But there is a difference. The second part is on a higher plane of knowledge, experience and expectation. The two parts mirror the experiences of a believer under the two covenants of Moses and Christ respectively.—Robert Clark, D. D.

2. He leadeth me. As it "... is not in man that walketh to direct his steps" (Jeremiah 10:23), how comforting it is to know that "... the Lord shall guide thee (us) continually, ..." (Isaiah 58:11). Warningly the Bible says, "Be ye not as the horse, or as the mule (balky and stubborn), which have no understanding: whose mouth must be held in with bit and bridle, ..." (Psalm 32:9).

A guide was taking some tourists through Mammoth Cave. When they reached, The Cathedral, he mounted a rock called, The Pulpit. He said, "I will now preach you a sermon." It was short. All he said was, "Keep close to your guide!" The tourists found it was a good sermon, for if they did not keep close to the guide they would be lost in the midst of pits, precipices and defiles. It is hard to find one's way through Mammoth Cave without a guide. It is harder to find one's way through this world without the guidance of the Lord, our Shepherd!—The Bible Expositor.

3. Jeremy Taylor pays this great tribute to the Psalm we are studying:

"This is an ode which for beauty and sentiment is not to be matched in the circuit of all literature. In its way down three thousand years or more this Psalm has penetrated to the depths of millions of hearts; it has gladdened homes of destitution and discomfort; it has whispered hope and joy amid tears to the utterly solitary and forsaken, whose only refuge was in heaven. Beyond all range of probable calculation have these dozen lines imparted a power of endurance under suffering, and strength in feebleness, and have kept alive the flickering flame of religious feeling in hearts that were nigh to despair."

4. He Knew the Shepherd. An English actor was once asked, at a social gathering, to recite for those present. He responded by asking if there was anything special anyone present wanted him to recite. An aged clergyman asked if he would mind reciting the twenty-third Psalm. It was said that a strange look passed over the actor's face as he answered, "I will, upon one condition, and that is, after I have recited it, that you, my friend, will do the same."

"I?" replied the clergyman. "But I am not an elocutionist. However if you wish it, I will do so."

The actor's intonation was perfect. His voice held the audience and when he finished there was great applause. After the applause had ended the old clergyman began. He did not have the perfect intonation of the actor and when he had finished there was no burst of applause. But every head was bowed and the eyes of his listeners were moist with tears.

Then the actor put his hand on the old gentleman's shoulder and said, "I reached your eyes and ears, my friends; he reached your hearts. The difference is just this—I know the twenty-third Psalm, but he knows the Shepherd."—Selected.

5. He restoreth my soul. A good commentary on these words is found in Luke 15:4-7. It would be a good time to read, or sing, the much-loved song, "The Ninety and Nine." The Lord still loves the sheep that have wandered away.

His Yoke Is Easy

A man was carrying a heavy basket. His son asked to help him. The father cut a stick and placed it through the handle of the basket so that the end toward himself was very short, while the end toward the boy was three or four times longer. Each took hold of his end of the stick, and the basket was lifted and easily carried. The son was bearing the burden with the father, but he found his work easy and light because his father assumed the heavy end of the stick. Just so it is when we bear the yoke with Christ; He sees to it that the burden laid on us is light; He carries the heavy end.—John T. Farris

Questions and Answers

worked every detail toward that end. God has known before the earth was brought into existence what capacity, aptitude, temperament, size and ability He wanted each of us so when He made Adam of clay He knew just how much to use, how to shape it, fit and temper it to contain the breath of life so He did every thing in the best possible way, then breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, making him to become the living soul He wished of him. He has done just that to each of us. When we read the history of Esau and his descendants we learn that they were outstanding as a people in the sinful practices of Baal worship, one of the worst forms of heathenism. In contrast to this evil Jacob first and then his descendants were faithful in honoring and worshiping Jehovah for several centuries. Works, on the part of the one called, follow the call, therefore it could not be said of Jacob nor of Isaac nor of any one that God called him because of the works that he had performed. God called each person just simply because He wanted to call him and that's all the reason that is necessary. Surely God knew that Jacob would speak up for Him as he dealt with Laban in Syria and that when he wrestled with the angel and the angel broke his thigh he would yield in obedience and thereafter honor Him, but God called Jacob because it was His sovereign will to do so.

"As it is written, Jacob have I loved, but Esau have I hated" (Romans 9:13). This verse, as translated here, is a little hard to understand in the light of such passages as John 3:16 and 2 Peter 3:9. Some folk prefer William's translation of this verse which is: "As it is written, to Jacob I was drawn, but Esau I repudiated."

Robertson's "Word Pictures," Volume 4, Page 382, says: "Paul quotes Malachi 1:2f. But Esau I hated (ton de Esau emisesa). This language sounds a bit harsh to us. It is possible that the word miseo did not always carry the full force of what we mean by 'hate.' See Matthew 6:24 where these very verbs (miseo and agapo) are contrasted. So also in Luke 14:26 about 'hating' (miseo) one's father and mother if coming between one and Christ. So in John 12:25 about 'hating' one's life. There is no doubt about God's preference for Jacob and rejection of Esau, but in spite of Sanday and Headlam one hesitates to read into these words here the intense hatred that has always existed between the descendants of Jacob and Esau."

Surely God does not hate anyone in the sense we ordinarily use the word hate, neither does Jesus expect one to hate his father or mother in such a sense when He uses a form of the same word in Luke 14:26.

TEACH THEM

On Wednesday evening, September 12, we had the honor and privilege of speaking to the ministers, delegates and visitors at the North Carolina State Convention of Free Will Baptists. Since this evening service was under the direction of the board of education of the convention, we chose to speak upon that phase of the denominational program of Christian education in which we are particularly engaged in our present position—Christian education in the local church. Believing that this work is so vital to our existence, growth and witness for Christ, we challenge you to join with us in a renewed effort to carry out the commandment of our Lord to teach the people of our church communities the Word of the Lord.

What we say here is in no wise an effort to minimize the importance of our program of Christian education as it is administered through our institutions of higher learning. We must, by all means, make the necessary sacrifices and put forth great effort to maintain and expand this work. Neither do we believe that people can be educated into the Kingdom of God. Regeneration is the work of the Holy Spirit upon the heart of the soul that hears the gospel, repents of sin and believes in Jesus as Saviour and Lord. However, we cannot afford to fail to give teaching of the Word the place in our churches which God ordained that it should have.

From the very beginning of man's existence, the heritage of man's faith in God has been transmitted from one generation to the next. From Adam's fall to God's giving the law on Mount Sinai, the story was handed down by word of mouth. Then, when God gave Moses the Ten Commandments, Moses came down from the mountain and addressed the people as follows:

"Now these are the commandments, the statutes, and the judgments, which the LORD your God commanded to teach you, that we might do them in the land whither ye go to possess it: That thou mightest fear the LORD thy God, to keep all his statutes and his commandments, which I command thee, thou, and thy son, and thy son's son, all the days of thy life; and that thy days may be prolonged. Hear, O Israel, and observe to do it; that it may be well with thee, and that ye may increase mightily, as the LORD God of thy fathers hath promised thee, in the land that floweth with milk and honey" (Deuteronomy 6:1-3).

During His earthly ministry, Jesus taught God's eternal truth in word and deed. He was particularly concerned with establishing His disciples firmly in the truth that they might communicate it to others. Then, when He was about to leave them, He said, "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world. Amen" (Matthew 28:19, 20).

The very life and prosperity of the Israelites lay in their teaching the Word of God that their people might be obedient to the will of God. When they ceased teaching the Word, their people became disobedient and the nation declined. Finally, through abandonment of the Word of God, this nation collapsed and ceased to exist. And the Jewish people would have lost their identity long ago, but for their diligence in teaching the tenets of their faith wherever small groups have gathered in the nations of the world. Because they have been faithful in the matter of teaching their faith, they have been held together as a unit throughout the centuries and have now gone back to live in their homeland as a nation again.

Furthermore, we cannot fail to observe that the denominations and church groups in the Christian era which have given more emphasis to programs of teaching have made the more rapid progress and have enjoyed a wider ministry of the Word, while those groups which have neglected such programs have either failed to grow or have withered and died. It is because Free Will Baptists have failed to plan and administer a well-rounded teaching program that they have seen denominations much younger than they grow to be many times their size? Have we not been guilty of sitting down and passively consoling ourselves that other church groups were in error in interpreting the Word, doing nothing but criticising them while they were actively promoting their beliefs? Of course, we should be interested in growth and expansion only as such growth enlarges our sphere of service to Christ. But we must realize that enlarged service is inseparable from enlarged support which can come only from larger numbers and greater wealth.

A sound teaching program must of necessity be built upon sound, adequate literature. Free Will Baptist literature, although having gradually experienced growth throughout the years, has not been extensive enough to cover the need for every age group of our people. However, during recent years we have seen renewed interest and concerted effort to increase our literature offering to the point of filling the gaps which existed and making internal improvements in that which was already being offered. Now, the denomination is on the eve of its greatest victory in its history with reference to its Sunday school and league literature, together with the fact that daily vacation Bible school literature written and prepared by our own people is about to be offered to our churches for the first time.

Free Will Baptists are now offering Sunday school literature for every age group as these classifications are recommended by leading educators of the day. With the completion of our curriculum materials we shall have Sunday school literature which will minister to all our people. The only publications which we still lack are teachers' quarterlies for some of the age groups.

When we shall have implemented a directive which we are ready to have to provide story hour and adult league publications together with additional league manuals, we shall have practically doubled the literature offering for the leagues. We plan to offer these additional publications not later than January 1, 1958.

In conclusion, let us say that we know all our publications will have to be continually revised and improved internally. You can help by writing us giving your suggestions. However, let it be known that Free Will Baptists are in the most favorable position now that they have ever been with respect to expansion of their literature program.

THE FREE WILL BAPTIST

Is Pioneering Finished in the Ivory Coast?

G. C. TIMYAN

(Editor's note: Mr. G. C. Timyan directed the tour of this area recently made by Rev. and Mrs. Harold Stevens on behalf of the Free Will Baptist Foreign Mission Board. We are most grateful for this service and especially for this article.)

A MONTH ago my reply would doubtless have been negative, but now I would insist, "No! pioneering has not even begun in the northeastern Ivory Coast!" A 2100 kilometer survey trip into the Bondoukou Circle has convinced me that the days of pioneering in French West Africa are far from finished.

Leaving Bouake where the first pioneers came into the Baouli tribe 25 years ago, we crossed the river Nzi an hour later into what is known as Dioula country. The races are so mixed here that the long-robed Mohammedan colporteurs (Dioulas), who trade by day and preach by night have given their names to the area. Here no gospel work of any kind is being done and the visits of the missionary are very occasional. I had personally traveled the area to reach an isolated group of Baouli believers, and missionaries from the Djimini region 75 kilometers north pass through on their shopping trips to Bouake. However, no one is reaching the Dyamana people nor kindred tribes with the Lord.

Three hours later we crossed the river Comoë, traditional boundary of the Baouli people and the eastern limit of any missionary work in this corner of the vineyard. We touched the northern edge of the Andos people just before reaching the dugout canoe ferry. As part of our Mbahiakro district responsibility, the Andos are receiving a witness to the south. Here began the area of rare visits by gospel witnesses. We passed successively through villages of the Bariba, Bini, Koulango and Abron tribes. Three hundred kilometers of dense spiritual darkness with scarcely a flicker of light. Several times we stopped to enquire if the Word had ever been preached in the many villages along the way and invariably the reply was: "No, we have never heard, but we will listen if you would stop and tell us."

We found modern buildings, well-built highways and prosperous people, but no gospel in the city of Bondoukou. The town's few nominal protestants coming from liturgical churches on the coast must cross into the Gold Coast, 10 miles away, to attend church. They welcomed us with delight and listened intently as we preached the Word in their homes and on the street. Since all of them were far from their homelands and most of them unconverted church members, there was no Christian witness among them. Here a new kind of pioneering was needed—the preaching of personal salvation to professing Christians who had never heard the simple gospel. We rejoiced when two of these prayed the penitent's prayer during the informal meetings.

Moving northward toward the Upper Volta border we traveled 300 kilometers through the Bouna subdivision where no missionary work has ever been attempted. Another 300 kilometers of road through absolutely untouched territory were impossible because of rainy season. Four years ago while passing through Bondoukou on a mission business trip I met the French commander from Bouna whom I had previously known, and he asked me: "Why don't you come up into my country? There are neither Catholic priests nor Mohammedan teachers who are doing anything to help the people. We want you to open a mission station." But these statements were no longer true in August, 1956. Rome was building a cement church in Bouna town and evidences of Islam penetration were seen everywhere. We couldn't help wishing that the church of Christ had been able to answer the Macedonian call years before.

The Kulango tribe numbering approximately 125,000 comprise the main language group in the central part of the Bondoukou circle. Probably over half of them live in the area south and east of a large uninhabited forest reserve in the Bouna region. They were doubtless driven back, dispossessed of much of their land by the aggressive Abrons who conquered many of them. However through intermarriage the Kulanga language and culture has remained predominant over a large section. The tragedy is that the gospel has never been preached in this tongue. The Lord of the harvest still awaits linguistic pioneers who can reduce this language to writing, preach and teach this people the way of life for the first time.

To the north, the restless Lobi people are making inroads in Kulango country, coming down from the Upper Volta colony. Ambitious cultivators of the soil, these handy workmen have made themselves virtually indispensable to the Bondoukou economy. Yet they are untamed and warlike masters of the poison arrow and feared by Europeans and African tribes alike. Their life is very primitive, each family dwelling in a walled enclosure of mud grouped together agglomerations resembling villages, but without the authority of a chief. Most of the family life seems to take place in the security of their roof tops. Their filed teeth and plugged upper and lower lips present a grotesque appearance. Yet those we photographed and contacted through a few greetings in the trade language were winsome in manner and we coveted the gift of the Lobi tongue.

Animism of the most degraded kind keeps them in abject bondage to the evil spirits. All children who are sickly are killed before they change into hyenas. Twins of one boy and one girl are sacrificed on ant hills to appease the spirits. Their initiation rights are among the worst in Africa involving death by drowning of sacrificial victims in the Volta. To these pagan people in the extreme northeastern corner of the Ivory Coast no one has ever taken the Word of life. In their tribal life, the man and woman are naked except for leap aprons, and this best describes them spiritually naked before God with only the withered leaves of fetishism.

About 100 kilometers further north in the adjacent colony, the WEC of England are pioneering courageously among the Lobis, but with a pitifully small force. The language has been reduced and work on the New Testament is in progress. However inadequate their work of evangelization among the plain's Lobis, they had been burdened for the mountain Lobis of the Ivory Coast, some 35,000 people without a witness that we had just visited. So interested were they in advance work that one of number accompanied us back south to survey the language and help choose a site for a new mission station.

The object of our trek was to introduce a new mission in this territory and select bases for pioneer operation. But where? The Baribas, the Binas, the Abrons, the Kulangos and the Lobis each presented a wide open door.

Yet in the extreme south portion of the area the need seemed to be even more urgent. Here among the Bounda Agni people we found the remnants of the work opened by an Alliance pioneer of two decades ago. It was to this section that the Rev. George Powell came in 1935 in response to the pleas of a man who had walked 250 miles to his station to ask for a missionary to come. A strong church at Koun became established, outstations were opened and the prospects looked bright. Then came the transfer of the region to the English

Yes, your North Carolina Board of Superannuation needs the above amount so it can pay the monthly pension checks to our retired ministers and quarterly checks to the ministers' widows who have been left behind.

I'm sure you are aware of the rising cost of everything we have to buy in this fast and rushing world that we find ourselves living in. Everything keeps going up, and no one seems to know what tomorrow will bring.

At present we have 24 ministers and 23 ministers' widows who are receiving checks. There are others who ought to be on the list but funds are not available to place them there. Small monthly checks are mailed each month to the retired and superannuated ministers and quarterly checks to ministers' widows. We say many thanks to you as a denomination for what you have done toward the support of this worthy cause.

I am wondering if you as a group or an individual are satisfied with the past support you have given to superannuation?

October is superannuation month in our united program. Let's catch up or pay up this year for our neglect in the past, and send in an offering to superannuation. I'm sure God will be pleased with and we will be proud of you.

Many thanks to Rev. M. L. Johnson for his services as chairman-treasurer for the past several years. We don't like the idea of giving him up, but other duties called him to service. As a board we were very fortunate indeed to secure the services of Rev. Wilbert Everton, Route 3, Wilson, North Carolina, to fill the place of chairman-treasurer of the board of superannuation. All funds should be sent to him at the above address.

Methodists in exchange for a portion of the Dimbroko district. During the lean war years that followed the coastal missionaries, 400 kilometers away, found themselves too occupied to man the territory. Unfortunately the Roman church seized the opportunity and took over some of the untaught, illiterate believers and even the property in one village.

The challenge of these scattered sheep touched our hearts. They stood in front of their little chapel obviously overjoyed at the prospects of a missionary stopping in their village. As we entered the church chief's yard they asked us to sing a song for him. When we replied with a familiar hymn, they clapped their hands and feet for joy. Now they knew we were one with them and they opened the best house in the village to us. During our three day stay we were able to feed the hungry and pray with the wandering. The transfer was made according to mission comity by an official of the British mission and we now faced the problem of where to locate the center of operations in the Bounda Agni tribe. The four missionaries in the party, Mr. and Mrs. Stevens, Mrs. Timyan and I, felt unanimously led to accept the offer of the Koun Christians for any site we would select in the vicinity of their little village. A 150 meter-square plot on a beautiful hill-top overlooking the town was chosen and granted by the chief to the delight of the believers. As in Acts 16 we "confidently concluded that God had called" this new mission to this particular area at this particular time.

It will be at least a year before the first Free Will Baptist missionaries will finish their language study in France and proceed to the African language study in the Ivory Coast. Tehini or Varale in the north among the Lobis, and a north central site somewhere in the Nassian area among the Kulangos are under consideration as possible stations. A rural concession at Goumère, 30 kilometers south of the city of Bondoukou has been applied for with the consent of the Abron local and paramount chiefs in addition to the Koun site. During the next twelve months a volume of pioneering prayer should be offered by members of the Alliance as the sponsoring mission that men of pioneer mold might occupy the land for Christ.

Two Lobi young men came to Bondoukou to work for white man's money in the coffee and cocoa harvest. They had become dissatisfied with their own country and the tribal medium of exchange, cowrie shells. One of them had been educated in the Catholic school at Kampti and understood French. They heard the gospel for the first time in the market place as Mr. Stevens and I preached through interpreters. After the meeting they were in the crowd that pressed us for French tracts and seemed very interested. Learning that they were Lobis, I asked if they had understood and the school boy said he had translated everything I had said for his companion. It was my privilege to tell these money-seeking Lobis lads of the spiritual riches of eternal life in Christ. As we knelt and prayed together, our party rejoiced in the firstfruits from among the mountain Lobis, and claimed them as the earnest of many souls in the neglected tribes of north-eastern Ivory Coast who await the coming of the pioneers.

My Testimony

Mrs. Etta Eatman, Durham, North Carolina

In His heart to be loved I always shall be,
In His hand to be kept, 'tis sufficient for me.
Each morning I sit at His feet to be taught,
Guidance He gives in word, deed and thought.

The Lord is my Shepherd, I never shall want,
Though friends may deride and Satan may taunt;
My Shepherd has drawn me deep in His fold

I know that my life He securely will hold.

What gift can I offer? so much I owe,
Can mere gifts of money my gratitude show?
Can church going only, or reading God's Word,
Even slightly repay what I owe to my Lord?

Ah, no! Nothing, lest surrender complete,
My heart, my hands, my mind and my feet.
My Lord paid my debt, He died on the tree,
Now ascended in heaven He's pleading for me.

This Shepherd of mine knows each trial,
each snare,
At just the right moment my Lord will be there;
On His shoulders He carries each burden for me,
Yes, the Lord is my Shepherd and always shall be.

In His heart to be loved, in His hand, at His feet,
He has carried me through to surrender complete;
Transformed by His power God's Word makes it plain,
I shall see Him, be like Him, when He comes again.

Questions and Answers ON THE BIBLE

Conducted by J. F. BARROW
3824 Richland Avenue, Nashville 5, Tennessee

Question: I would like for you to explain the ninth chapter of Romans, especially Verses 11-14 so as to give a correct view on predestination.—Mrs. Aurie Hayes, Arapahoe, North Carolina.

Answer: 4. The mercy of God is distributed and controlled according to God's own sovereign will (Romans 9:14-24). The Holy Spirit directs Paul, the penman, in developing a new phase to this vital subject as he asks this question (Romans 9:14), which is most likely to be asked by man in his depraved nature or mind. "... Is there unrighteousness with God? ..." Then without any pause or break he gives the emphatic and pertinent answer, "God forbid." In other words, "This is impossible." We who are saved and have a fair knowledge of the Scripture quickly and without question recognize this fact for does not the Scripture teach that God is good, Matthew 19:17; Mark 10:18; Luke 18:19; that He is true and the only true God, John 17:3; Romans 3:4; the God of patience, Romans 15:5; the God of love and peace, 2 Corinthians 13:11; that He is light and in Him is no darkness, 1 John 1:5; as well as that He cannot lie, Titus 1:2; Hebrews 6:18.

In His plan and purpose God is progressing toward the end where He will bring to naught all sadness, sorrow and tears together with him that causes such (Revelation 21:4). In other words, it would be an impossible paradox to suppose that God, who is the essence of righteousness as well as the Author of holiness, to be unrighteous in any act or to practice unrighteousness in any form. If any one who reads the Bible does not comprehend the truth of God's teaching on predestination, foreordination and election, etc., and weigh it in the light of the Bible's teaching on the freedom of the will, God is not responsible. He has promised in many passages of His word to give understanding to those who read, feel the need of it and ask for it. See James 1:5; 1 John 5:14, 15; Ephesians 1:17; Colossians 1:9; 2 Chronicles 1:7-12; Proverbs 2:1-5. The word of God, itself when properly applied and rightly used, enables an obedient reader to understand and appropriate it to his own use and spiritual advancement. See Psalms 119:11, 105; 1:2; Hebrews 4:12; Job 28:28. There is nothing other than man's own lack of righteousness that would cause him to accuse God of being unrighteous. The devil with all his followers does this because they have refused God's righteousness and have gone about to establish their own righteousness which of necessity is unrighteousness since all righteousness is in God and they have by-passed Him.

In Verse 15 the Holy Spirit again directs Paul to quote an Old Testament passage, "... I will ... shew mercy on whom I will shew mercy" (Exodus 33:19). Webster's Collegiate Dictionary gives us a definition of mercy, "Forebearance from inflicting harm, esp. in punishment; compassionate clemency."

Every single soul that has been born is in line for or due punishment unto eternal death because he is a descendant of sinful Adam. When speaking to Adam and Eve about the tree of the knowledge of good and evil God said, "... In the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die" (Genesis 2:17). We have just as emphatic statements found in other Scriptures, such as the following: "... the soul that sinneth, it shall die" (Ezekiel 18:4); "For whosoever shall keep the whole law, and yet offend in one point, he is guilty of all" (James 2:10). In Romans 5:12 we are told that "... death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned." See Romans 3:23; Isaiah 53:6. This all adds up to the fact that every son or descendant of Adam comes into this world under the racial curse which came with Adam's sin and that only by divine intervention or mercy may even one single soul be saved, therefore instead of God's being unrighteous when He chooses to save some, He is expressing Himself in that attribute of His nature that the Bible calls mercy. As has been indicated in an earlier discussion He is not arbitrary to the degree of disparagement of the other attributes of His nature, for He has a logical arrangement by which He exercises Himself as He shows mercy to some. This is determined upon whom His special love and mercy are bestowed.

As we meditate on Romans 9:15 and other passages of Scripture that teach that God is the sovereign ruler as well as the sustainer of all things, we may be sure that He will not violate any other of His principles or promises revealed in Scripture. For He still is not willing that any should perish and His invitation is still to all who will come. Also His wrath is always revealed from heaven against any who regard His truth as unrighteousness. Therefore the 16th verse logically follows 15 for it is not the running nor the willing on man's part for all self-willed are to miss heaven. In 17 we have the Pharaoh of the exodus brought before us for an illustration. He seemed to give Moses and Aaron and therefore God a great deal of trouble when God gave Moses orders to lead Israel away from Egypt. Why did God ever allow him to grow into manhood since He foreknew that that was to come as a result of his being on the throne of Egypt when God through Moses was to deliver the children of Israel from the Egyptian bondage? The answer is that God raised him up for His own glory, that His power might be shown against this type of heathenism which claimed the devotion and adoration of so many of God's human creatures. Don't forget that after God magnified Himself through the twelve signs, including the ten plagues, that He did not only deliver all the Israelites, but that a great multitude of heathens accompanied Moses in his march from Egypt to Canaan. See Exodus 12:38; Numbers 11:4. "... all things worked together for good to them that love God ..." (Romans 8:28), but for the condemnation of those who do not, see Romans 6:23; John 3:36, etc. So Pharaoh and his people, those that refused to hearken unto God's revelation, were lost and in the lost state were used to encourage all who were obedient both of the Jews and of the gentiles. Often God uses the death of a desperate sinner to sober the careless mind of people that are good, moral citizens, but lost. God could, knowing the future as He does, bring all sinners that are just around the corner from a terrible life of sin that to end in a shameful disaster to a premature grave and have them saved from such ends as might bring reproach upon neighborhood family, church, etc., but that is just not God's way. He is wise enough to let cases like that of Pharaoh, Herod and King Saul, as well as all the people destroyed in the flood, those killed in the destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah go their own course in the exercise of their wills to meet their own shameful end and then He holds them up to all future generations as to disgust them with the ways and results of a wicked life.

In Verse 18 He repeats what has been said in Verse 15 so as to keep the reader's attention called to the fact that mercy extended to some in a special way in which it does not come to all is God's privilege and not only His privilege, but His practice.

The Lighted Pathway

Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path
(PSALM 119:105).

REV. WILLET L. MORETZ
SWANNANOA, N. C.

"For this child I prayed; and the LORD hath given me my petition which I asked of him: Therefore also I have lent him to the LORD; as long as he liveth he shall be lent to the LORD. . . ." (1 Samuel 1:27, 28).

A few days ago a friend asked me what I thought was our greatest resource as a nation. I did not have to take time to study the many things that go to make up the great potential of our fair land. I unhesitatingly pointed to a child and said, "This child, and the millions of others, make up the greatest resource of this or any other nation." But the burning question is, what are we doing with children whom God has entrusted to us?

The words of the text, and the connecting verses, give a beautiful picture of parental responsibility. Here was a woman who was childless, but who prayed for a child. When God gave her her petition she did what every father and mother should do. She immediately dedicated him to the service of God. How did she know that he would give his life in service to God? There was no way to know, but Hannah was a woman of faith, and her faith was her assurance that God would use that which she gave to Him to glorify His name. There are millions of new-born babies among us who should be lent to the LORD. I believe that if this should become the practice of Christian parents the world would be greatly different beginning with this present generation. Many fathers' and mothers' hearts would not be broken because of wayward sons and daughters. Many crimes would not be committed. Penal institutions would begin to empty out. Hell would be robbed of many precious souls. And heaven would be filled with more families without the circle being broken.

A child is one of the most precious things in the world. It is so innocent and pure so far as it itself is concerned. Christ attested this truth by His actions and words, "And Jesus called a little child unto him, and set him in the midst of them, And said, Verily I say unto you, Except ye be converted, and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven. Whosoever therefore shall humble himself as this little child, the same is greatest in the kingdom of heaven. And who-so shall receive one such little child in my name receiveth me. But whoso shall offend one of these little ones which believe in me, it were better for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck, and that he were drowned in the depth of the sea" (Matthew 18:2-6).

I have read many tributes to children. Many of them were great tributes, but the greatest of all is the one from the lips of Jesus quoted in the paragraph above. It shows without doubt the divine attitude toward children. It does away forever with the holier than thou attitude some of us are so prone to get of ourselves. It also cuts out the big I's and little you's we have to contend with. Let's read again, "Who soever therefore shall humble himself as this little child, the same is greatest in the kingdom of heaven. Humility is greatness."

It is found in every converted, born-again, consecrated and dedicated Christian. When I see one who is puffed up I fear that one of three things is wrong: First—Has he been converted? Second—Has he learned humility? Third—Has he let himself come between himself and God? Let us all, preachers and laymen, take heed to ourselves.

This story of Hannah and Samuel is a most beautiful one. I commend it to all parents. Next week I will quote one of the saddest articles I have read in many years. It tells of the awful cost of neglecting a boy. I want every parent of little children and those who will become parents to be sure to read it—then don't neglect your child spiritually!

. . . as long as he liveth he shall be lent to the LORD."

CHANGE OF ADDRESS

"I would like to notify the public of my new address since changing pastorates."—Rev. Wayne Smith, Box 281, Swannanoa, North Carolina.

MUSICAL PROGRAM FOR CHURCHES

"I have experienced with a novel idea for a musical program in our churches. The experiment is being carried on in the First Free Will Baptist Church of Tarboro, North Carolina. I am convinced that it is one of the most unique plans to train singers and accompanists that I have ever heard of. Our churches are in dire need of musicians and I think this plan will help tremendously. Here is how it works:

"A church desiring such training program will offer their church facilities consisting of a warm room with an instrument (organ or piano) and other necessary equipment. The pastor will announce that those desiring to have lessons in piano, voice, organ or choir training meet at the church at a suitable time. He should be glad to meet with them and discuss the program, price, etc. and enroll them for private thirty-minute periods and make a schedule for a week day suitable to them. In Tarboro my private periods begin at 2:00 p. m. and last until 10:30 p. m. The thirty-minute periods apply to all private students. A period of one hour could be arranged for the choir on the same night of the schedule.

"I would like to offer my help to our churches through this training program which I am now experimenting with at the Tarboro church."—R. P. Harris, 1200 Tarboro Street, Rocky Mount, North Carolina.

THIS IS MY BODY

"God's message to man is found in the book we call the Bible. The record of Genesis through Revelation is the inspired Word of God and is without error, without mistake, and without contradiction in its original context. (See 2 Timothy 3:16.) In speaking to men, God the Holy Spirit has used language in several different ways and forms. In order to convey thoughts to the minds of men, God has spoken at times in figurative language, as in such expressions as harden not your hearts. (Read Hebrews 3:8.) Often He has used symbolic language as used in the book of Daniel where the image represents the various Gentile nations, etc. Unless the context indicates otherwise, the language of the Bible is always to be taken literally, and is to be interpreted to mean exactly what it says.

"Let us notice Verse 26 of Chapter 26 in the book of Matthew. The expression This is my body is a figure metaphor; and the figure lies in the verb is, which can be also interpreted as represents. Here is an illustration of this truth:

"The field is (represents) the world; the good seed are (represent) the children of the kingdom; but the tares are (represent) the children of the wicked one (Matthew 13:38). '... odours, which are (represent) the prayers of saints' (Revelation 5:8). '... The seven heads are (represent) seven mountains, . . .' (Revelation 17:9).

"In like manner when our Lord said This is my body and This is my blood, the word is could actually mean the word represents.

"Furthermore, it is a fundamental law in Greek grammar, without exception, that the article, pronoun and adjective must agree in gender with the noun to which they refer. This being true; the pronoun, which is neuter, cannot agree with the word Artos (Bread) because the word for bread (Artos) in this verse is masculine. It must refer to that which is neuter, and in this case it refers to the act of breaking the bread, or implies the word represents.

"Also when He said This is my blood, the sentence construction is the same and should be translated to read 'This cup represents my blood.' It is unscriptural and unreasonable to say that our Lord was speaking of His actual body of flesh and blood . . . and there is no ground whatever for teaching or believing as the Roman Catholics do, that the bread, made from wheat actually becomes the real, literal flesh of the Lord Jesus when it is eaten at the mass. If this is true, then those who so eat, are guilty of eating human flesh and drinking human blood. This would be cannibalism, for our Lord was in a body of flesh, although He Himself was divine.

"The breaking of the bread or communion is not a sacrament—that is to say not a means of grace. It has nothing to do with one's salvation. . . . It is a memorial and the bread represents the body of Christ. We as Christians, receive our spiritual sustenance from the Lord Jesus, even as the body is sustained from the eating of bread, etc. The memorial according to 1 Corinthians 11:16, points us back to the finished work of Christ on the Cross, and we look forward to His coming again."—The Western Voice, By Dr. Henry Grube.

We, as Free Will Baptists, have always believed that the bread and the cup, as used by us, represent the body and blood of Jesus Christ. After the Lord had blessed the bread and the cup, He said these words: "Verily I say unto you, I will drink no more of the fruit of the vine, until that day that I drink it new in the kingdom of God" (Mark 14:25). So Jesus called the contents of the cup the fruit of the vine. Why should we call it anything else?

We do not believe that any man or set of men can change bread to actual flesh, nor that there is any power in earth that can take fruit juice and make it actual blood. Neither, do we believe that the Bible teaches the doctrine of many other things that are set forth by the word of man. We believe that where the Bible speaks, we should speak. And when the Bible is silent, we must be silent. We are instructed by the Lord Himself not to add to or take from the Book. We stand on this doctrine.

The Institution of the Lord's Supper

"And as they did eat, Jesus took bread, and blessed, and brake it, and gave to them, and said, Take eat: this is my body" (Mark 14:22). Notice that Mark says as they did eat. Matthew says, "And as they were eating, Jesus took bread, and blessed it, and brake it, . . ." (Matthew 26:26). Both Matthew and Mark say that they were eating. Eating what? It was the feast of the Passover. This was an annual feast observed in memory of their deliverance from Egyptian bondage. It was kept on the 14 Nisan, April, in our reckoning. So when they were eating, Jesus transferred this custom of the annual feast in memory of their deliverance from Egypt to the deliverance from the bondage of sin. Eating or partaking of the new Passover does not save us anymore than the observance of the Passover in memory of the deliverance from Egypt. When they were out of Egypt, free from the bondage of the Egyptians, they instituted the Passover. In Christ Jesus we are made free from the bondage of sin. "If the Son therefore shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed" (John 8:36). We observe the Lord's Supper as a memorial of that freedom made possible by His shed blood.

The children of Israel were covered by the blood of the sacrifice and they left Egypt immediately. And as said before, they instituted the Passover outside of Egypt. Christ instituted the supper and gave the orders for its observance. Paul says, "For I have received of the Lord that which also I delivered unto you, That the Lord Jesus the same night in which he was betrayed took bread: And when he had given thanks, he brake it, and said, Take, eat: this is my body, which is broken for you: this do in remembrance of me. After the same manner also he took the cup, when he had supped, saying, This cup is the new testament in my blood: this do ye, as oft as ye drink it, in remembrance of me. For as often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do shew the Lord's death till he come" (1 Corinthians 11:23-26).

Paul says I received of the Lord. He said it was to be done in remembrance of Christ. The old Passover was in remembrance of their freedom from Egypt. The new Passover is observed in remembrance of the Lord Jesus who freed us by His own shed blood. "Neither by the blood of goats and calves, but by his own blood he entered in once into the holy place, having obtained eternal redemption for us" (Hebrews 9:12). We, being free, enter in.

OBITUARIES

Obituaries, 150 words long, are inserted free of charge. When they exceed this number, one cent for each additional word should be enclosed in Postage Stamps in the letter with the obituary.

Obituaries and in memoriams of persons who have been dead a year or longer are not wanted for publication in THE FREE WILL BAPTIST.

William Farnell Norris

On July 25, 1956, the Lord called another of His children to be at home with Him. William Norris was born August 22, 1887, and in his early years accepted Christ and became a member of the Free Will Baptist church. To all his friends around Colquitt, Georgia, he was known to be faithful to his church and to his wife, Maggie, and their eight children. His passing should help all of the family and many friends to better understand and to know that Brother Norris would say, "Live for Jesus and meet me when the Lord takes you away."

"We are not responsible for all the things that happen to us, but we are responsible for the way we act when they do happen." —Selected.

BOYS and GIRLS

Robbie's Tithe Box

ROBBBIE had been saving his earnings all summer to buy a football. He had raked leaves, carried out ashes, and mowed lawns until he had almost the needed amount. There was one in the window of a store downtown marked five dollars, and every night Robbie counted his money to see just how much he lacked.

When he came home with a dime he almost hated to put one penny in his Lord's money box, so badly he wanted the football. Father and mother had tithed for a long time, but when Robbie started to earn money of his own, doing little chores for the neighbors, Father had said he must begin to give to the Lord. So Robbie had fixed a tithe box of his own, and placed it beside Father's. All summer he had faithfully counted out the Lord's share every time he was paid. When it was only a nickel, he put in one cent of that, so as not to cheat God. But his own money seemed to increase so slowly that after a time he stood and wondered about paying the Lord His tenth.

One day he came running home greatly excited. "What do you think, Mother, that football in the window is marked down to only three dollars and a half till Saturday! I have only three dollars and twenty cents in my bank; but if you will let me take the thirty cents out of my tithe box, I will have enough."

"Do you mean you just want to borrow it from the Lord's money, and to pay it back—or what?" asked his mother.

"Well—you see, I have all the yards around here cleaned, so I won't have a chance to earn much from now on, and soon school will begin, so—it would take a long time to pay it back,"—stammered Robbie.

"I see," said Mother; "but we had better talk it over before you make your decision. A wrong move now will make a difference in your whole life. Let me tell you a true story.

"I knew a farmer whose wife loved the Lord, and longed to be a tither. At last her husband agreed to give her one of twin calves, and when it was old enough to be sold or give milk, she could either sell it and give all the money to the Lord, or give what it produced. The woman was much pleased and faithfully cared for the little bossies.

"One night during a hard storm, one of the calves was killed by a stroke of lightning. The next morning the farmer said, 'Well, the Lord's calf is dead.'

"'Why, John, you never had decided just which one was the Lord's so how do you know but it is yours that was killed?' said his wife.

"But he stubbornly held to it that the dead calf belonged to the Lord.

"As time went on, that man lost a number of horses, cattle, and sheep by sickness and other causes, and at last had to place a mortgage on his farm. When I last heard of him, he had lost nearly everything. Now son, what do you think about his case?"

"I think he was a thief. He did not really want God to have the calf," answered Robbie.

Mother opened his Bible to Malachi 3:8-11, and read, "Will a man rob God? Yet ye have robbed me. But ye say, Wherein have we robbed thee? In tithes and offerings . . . Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the LORD of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it. And I will rebuke the devourer for your sakes, and he shall not destroy the fruits of your ground; neither shall your vine cast her fruit before the time in the field, saith the LORD of hosts."

"Now, Robbie, if that man had not robbed God, according to God's own promise He would have blessed him with temporal blessings."

"Did God ever bless you much for tithing, Mother?" asked Robbie.

"Yes, indeed, in every way. I had a real temptation once to use some of my tithe money just as you are having now, and God so wonderfully blessed me for being true to Him, that the enemy cannot bother me along that line any more."

"Tell me about it. I love to hear about such things," said Robbie.

"I was a long time ago, and we were very poor then. I loved to read and longed to own more good books. We subscribed to only one paper, and when our time was up we did not feel able to spare the money to renew. I chanced to open our tithe box, and there was just one dollar in it, exactly what I needed to take our paper. All at once a voice said to me, 'What good will one dollar do the Lord? Better take it and send for your paper.' That was Satan, Robbie, tempting me to steal from God. Well, I took that dollar and sent it right away to the treasurer of our missionary society, to use for missions.

"Now listen how God blessed me for being faithful in just a little money matter. A few months afterward I received a large bundle of books and papers from a lady in California of whom I had never heard, and she did not remember where she had seen our name and address. From then on, the mails brought me reading from many different places, and from people I did not know. There were books on Bible study, and on the Lord's second coming, and the very best religious papers. I never knew how the people who sent them heard of me, but I gave God the glory, for He put it into their hearts to do it. So you see it paid to be honest with God."

Robbie turned and went into the bedroom and came back with his tithe box. "You keep my money, and give it to our Junior Missionary Band. I don't ever intend to rob God, if I never get a football. I don't want to be a thief and a liar like that farmer."

Before the week ended, while coming home from town, Robbie found a half dollar in a gutter. Rushing into the house, he cried, "Oh, Mother, I've found fifty cents, and I have enough to buy the football, and twenty cents over, and I am going to give all the twenty cents to the Lord for a thank offering."—Publisher Unknown.

Not Clocks Only

A good story is told of old Thomas K. Beecher, who could not bear deceit in any form. Finding that a clock in his church was habitually too fast or too slow he hung a placard on the wall above it, reading in large letters: "Don't blame my hands—the trouble lies deeper." That is where the trouble lies with us when our hands do wrong, or our feet, or our lips, or even our thoughts. The trouble lies so deep that only God's miracle power can deal with it. Sin indeed goes deep; but Christ goes deeper.—The Elim Evangel.

In creation God shows us His hand, but in redemption He has given us His heart.—Highland Park, Michigan, Church Bulletin.

Questions and Answers

Again, in Romans 9:19 the Holy Spirit discloses man's depraved thinking for this is the way the unregenerated mind rationalizes. "Thou wilt say then unto me, Why doth he yet find fault? For who hath resisted his will?"

Charles R. Erdman in "The Epistle of Paul to the Romans" says, on Pages 108, 109, "If, however, God is sovereign and carries out His purpose through or in spite of the will of man, how can God blame men for disobedience or unbelief? Does not divine sovereignty abolish all human responsibility? Would not God be unjust if He punished those who rejected Christ?"

"Paul replies by another appeal to the Old Testament Scriptures. He cites the familiar parable of the potter. If the relation of God to men is that of the potter to the vessels he forms from the clay, how can man, the creature, find fault with the Creator? The potter has a right to make of the same clay one vessel for an honorable use, another for a dishonorable; can man, therefore, charge God with injustice if He chooses to show His severity towards those who merit His displeasure, and His mercy toward chosen objects of His grace?"

"Indeed, as creatures of God, men could hardly sit in judgment upon God and accuse Him of injustice if He had been arbitrary and capricious and severe; but how can anyone accuse God of injustice in view of the way He actually has dealt with men? He has been patient and longsuffering toward His impenitent people, Israel, and has purposed to show all the wealth of His glory toward the objects of His mercy, chosen not only from among the Jews, His covenant people, but even from among the gentiles? The sovereignty of God is absolute; yet it is never exercised in condemning men who ought to be saved, but rather it has resulted in the salvation of men who deserved to be lost. Surely no one can regard God as unjust if He is rejecting impenitent and unbelieving Israelites and is saving gentiles who turn to Him in penitence and faith."

The Church

The Church of the living Christ is the greatest Institution on earth; nothing else can take its place and fill its mission in the world. In it the wayfaring man finds shelter from the raging storms of life; forlorn and weary travellers find a haven of rest; in it souls dejected and despised by the world find safety and quiet peace. There is only one Door that opens into it. Jesus said, I am the door: by me if any man enter in, he shall be saved, and shall go in and out, and find pasture (John 10:9).

From the Field

Arcadia, S. C.—Rev. James Raper sends a check to the foreign mission board to be applied to the Lonnie Sparks' account. We quote Mr. Raper as follows:
"The Sparks visited our church on October 4, and they were a blessing to our people. Such a contribution to missions is unheard of in this area. My people respond to that which I lead them. I'm convinced that if pastors were for missions the people would be.

"I would recommend the Sparks to any church desiring their services."

Manchester, Tenn.—The Manchester Free Will Baptist Church, in observation of Foreign Missions Sunday, received an offering for the work and sent the amount to the foreign mission board.

Willie B. Rodgers states: "We pray that the Lord may crown the work with great success for His glory."

Mount Hope, W. Va.—Rev. Galen F. Dunbar, pastor of the Price Hill Free Will Baptist Church, states: "We have decided to set aside the first Sunday of each month as Foreign Missions Sunday. We are thankful that our people are becoming interested in missions.

"In the September Prayer and Praise Letter we noted that the account of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Phenicie was very low, therefore we want our checks to be applied to their account."

The Suffering Servant

(Lesson for November 4)

Lesson: Isaiah 53:1-12.

Golden Text: Isaiah 53:5.

I. INTRODUCTION

This chapter contains the greatest prophecy of Christ's sufferings as our Saviour, together with His later victories and exaltations, to be found in the entire Old Testament. One could also call this chapter the center of Isaiah's great book of consolation. It sounds like a passage from the New Testament. So far as we are concerned as Christians, it is the deepest, sweetest and loftiest portion of prophecy in the Bible. It brings one to the person, love, sufferings and triumphs of Christ with clearness and force which rivals Matthew, Mark, Luke and John. As we read its words, we seem to enter the Holy of Holies.—Advanced Quarterly (F. W. B.).

II. HELPFUL HINTS

1. Though the Lord Jesus Christ was not a handsome man, no one was ever so beautiful as He (Vv. 1, 2).
2. The holy life that the Lord Jesus lived made Him very unpopular with sinful men (Vs. 3).
3. Though Jesus was free from the guilt of sin, He was smitten of God for the sins of lost men (Vv. 4, 5).
4. The thing that made Christ's burden so great was the sins of the world that were laid upon Him (Vs. 6).
5. The afflictions of the Cross were thrust upon the Lord, yet He willingly accepted them without complaint (Vs. 7).
6. The innocence of Christ only served to aggravate the wrath of those who put Him to death (Vv. 8, 9).
7. The Lord was pleased with the death of His Son only because of its accomplishments (Vv. 10, 11).
8. The greatest burden that was ever borne won the greatest victory that was ever known (Vs. 12).—The Bible Teacher (F. W. B.).

III. ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

1. When we read this Scripture for the first time, we are prompted to ask the question that the eunuch asked Philip of this same Scripture: "Of whom speaketh the Prophet this? of himself, or of some other man?"

The Scriptural answer is found in Acts 8:26-35. A companion Scripture is Psalm 22.

2. It was Alexander Whyte who said: "The right way is to read this great Scripture as if it were written for and addressed to, each one of us separately and alone, as if there were no other sinful man for Christ to die for in the whole world but ourselves."

As we read the chapter we are aware that the subject it covers actually begins at Isaiah 52:13, so we do well to include Verses 13 to 15 of that chapter, which gives a sort of introductory summary of the whole matter as it presents the Servant of Jehovah in both—Moody Monthly.

3. These two verses give the reason for the terrible unbelief by the Jews. They were looking for the coming of a glorious Messiah to reign, and He came in humiliation and therefore, they would not believe in Him.

Prophecy concerning Christ presents the twofold aspect of Him as the suffering One and the victorious One, a double reference which had confused unbelieving Hebrews who were quite willing to accept the exalted and victorious Messiah but rejected the suffering Servant.

Children especially should understand why Jesus was cruelly treated by those whom He came to help and save. Serious and harmful results are often produced by misunderstanding the Scriptures. Isaiah 53: 2, 3 is just one example.

4. The prophet was permitted to see beyond the grim death of Jesus to His resurrection and its blessed hope for men. "He was taken from prison and from judgment: and who shall declare his generation? . . ." (Vs. 8). Joseph's new tomb, though lined with solid rock and sealed with a heavy stone, could not hold the body of the Son of God for long. At God's own time an angel rolled the stone away, and the Christ came forth in possession of the keys of death and hell. He robbed death of its sting, and brought life and immortality to light through the gospel.

Furthermore, the prophet could see that God would not permit His Son to be buried in a criminal's grave, "And he made his grave with the wicked, and with the rich in his death; because he had done no violence, neither was any deceit in his mouth" (Vs. 9). When His crucifiers had done their worst, they planned to further humiliate Him by burying His body in the cemetery with criminals; but God's hand intervened as if to say, "You can go no farther." The rich Joseph of Arimathea took the body and placed it in his new tomb.—The Bible Student (F. W. B.).

5. A young converted Jewess, daughter of a New York rabbi, said, "My father taught me to read the Bible in Hebrew when I was a young child. We began at Genesis. When we came to Isaiah, he skipped the fifty-third chapter. I asked him why. He said it was not necessary for Jews to read that chapter. I became curious. I asked him whom it was for, and he said that it was for Christians. I asked him what the Christian Bible was doing in our Bible. He became very angry and told me to keep quiet. He said again it was not necessary to read it. I wondered why God would put unnecessary things in the Bible. I copied the fifty-third chapter on paper and carried it in my stocking for two years until I came to America—the free country. I took better care of that paper than people do of money. Through reading this wonderful chapter, I was led to accept Christ as my Saviour!"—The Bible Expositor.

6. One time a group of Hebrew Christians were riding down in an elevator; riding beside them were a group of their unbelieving brethren who had been in the courts trying to block their securing a permit to build a Hebrew Christian church in their neighborhood in Detroit. One Jewess who was spokesman on a regular Yiddish broadcast remarked to one of our Hebrew Christians: "How could Jesus be the Messiah? He was rejected and killed." Our Hebrew Christian sister replied, "That is the very thing that proved that He was the Messiah, for Isaiah predicted that the Messiah would be rejected by His own people." Had Jesus been accepted by the Jewish people, He would not have filled the qualifications predicted of the coming One of Israel.—Selected.

Long ago some little children
Gathered close at Jesus' knee,
For His kindly smile said gently:

Death crowns a Christian.

So let our lips and lives express
The Holy Gospel we profess;
So let our works and virtues shine
To prove the doctrine all divine.

EDITORIAL

CONGREGATIONAL GOVERNMENT

In answer to a number of requests coming to us for information concerning the government of Free Will Baptist churches, we dedicate this editorial to a brief discussion of congregational government, that particular form of church government to which we, as a denomination, subscribe. Since we have had the privilege and honor of serving in several states, we have had opportunity to observe our churches in action in more than one area of the nation.

One fact which has been apparent in all areas is that we are in need of study course books in church government so that our people may become better informed as to how congregational government should work. We are looking forward anxiously to the time when our people will have ample information on the subject. We firmly believe that our people want to know how to administer the affairs of our churches, and that they will abide by proper procedure if they know what that procedure is. We judge this because of the many earnest inquiries which have come to us from many areas of the denomination.

Our national treatise says, "The local church is an independent body, so far as relates to its own government, the transaction of its business, the choice of its officers, and the discipline of its members." This we interpret to mean that the local congregation, by majority vote of the members present in any regular conference of the church, calls its pastor, elects its own officers, plans its own program of operation, disciplines its members and otherwise administers the work of the Lord.

Concerning the officers of the church, the national treatise says, "The church . . . proceeds to elect its officers, which are a clerk, a treasurer, a pastor who acts as moderator in all church meetings, and a board of deacons, who, with the pastor, clerk and treasurer, constitute a committee to promote order, activity, attendance on the means of grace, and efficient discipline of the church. Deacons should possess sound piety, good business capacity and large benevolence; they should be ordained by prayer and the laying on of hands by the presbytery; they hold office at the pleasure of the church during maintenance of Christian character, faithful service and sound doctrine; they assist at baptism and the Lord's Supper, have care of the poor, and conduct religious meetings in the absence of the pastor."

In addition to the officers named above, the constitution of the local church usually calls for the election of a board of trustees whose duty it is to hold the deed to the church property and to have general oversight of needed repairs, maintenance and enlargement of the church holdings. Furthermore, the constitution may call for the selection of a finance committee and other committees which the congregation may deem necessary to the administration of its affairs.

The pastor, the boards and the committees of the local church should be reminded that their decisions are not the final authority in the congregational church. Their authority is limited to that of formulating policies and making recommendations to the church in conference. Their duty is to offer leadership to the congregation, remaining alert at all times to the needs, conditions and desires of the members; but they are authorized to take no important action without having first submitted the proposition to the church in conference to ascertain the will of the congregation by a majority vote of the members present in either a regular conference or a special conference which has been duly announced and publicized so that every member may have opportunity to attend the conference if he so desires.

Much embarrassment, confusion and unrest might never occur in our churches if our leaders would abide by this procedure. Misunderstandings will be eliminated among those members who are earnestly desiring to administer the program of the church according to the will of the congregation which, in turn, is seeking through prayer to find and do the will of Christ who is the Head of the church.

The boards and committees of the local church should hold regular meetings prior to the regular conferences of the church. The pastor should be present in these meetings of the boards and committees, since he is an ex-officio member of all boards and committees. When these groups meet, they should pray earnestly for the guidance of the Holy Spirit in their discussions and in the recommendations which will be drafted for presentation to the church in conference. Their recommendations should be reduced to writing and should be read and approved by the group before adjournment. Then these recommendations should be given to the pastor or secretary to be read to the church in its conference. When the church adopts or rejects these recommendations, it has given the voice of final authority which must be accepted by all.

Furthermore, let it be remembered that any member of the church has the right to introduce any matter of business in the church conference, whether it has been introduced by recommendation of any board or committee or not. This safeguard of democracy in the church should never be violated. However, if the pastor, the board members and committee members are alert to the feelings and desires of the people, not many items of business will come from the floor. If the members are desirous of doing what is best for the church, and if they have confidence in their leaders, they will submit their proposals to these leaders so that proper prayer, consideration and counsel may be given to the proposal before it is presented to the church.

Up to this point we have confined our discussion to the action and operation of congregational government to that of the local congregation. However, let us be reminded that Free Will Baptist churches are not altogether independent units in the absolute sense of the word. Congregational government admits affiliation of the local church with groups of other churches in larger organizations for the mutual benefit of all. In these larger organizations the churches combine their strength and efforts in accomplishment of endeavors for Christ which would be impossible for the local church to undertake alone. And by virtue of these affiliations the local church assumes certain responsibilities to the group which obligate the church to abide by the regulations of the larger organizations. A discussion of affiliation with these larger organizations will be discussed in a later issue.

Watch

NAAMAN BORDERS, Waverly, Ohio

NOT too long ago my son took my wife and me to Oklahoma City, and we went by a route we had never traveled before. Being on the road for three days and nights, we became tired and weary. When the last evening came, we became a little careless about watching the route that we were on. About dusk we came to the forks of the road and, not watching the road signs, we took the wrong road. We traveled a few miles and found the road was getting rougher and narrower. We got into the deep woods and muddy roads. We finally got stalled in a large mudhole, so we got out of the car. We had no flashlight, but we heard the rippling of a river in front of us. Then we saw over and beyond us the big bridge that spanned the river. We then saw our great mistake in not consulting our road map more closely. We finally got the car out of the mudhole and started back to the main highway. We then began to watch the road map more closely.

Then this thought came to my mind. We were like some Christians I've known who have fought a good fight and when they are nearing that home of the soul; they become careless in reading their road map (the Bible). They cease to pray and attend church. They drift farther and farther away until they are finally bogged down and find they are on the wrong road. Then, when they hear the rippling of the turbid river of death just in front of them, they become horrified and they have a hard time turning around and getting on the right road again. That's the reason Jesus said for us to watch and pray lest we enter into temptation. It is easier to stay on the right road than it is to get back on it once you get off.

Some people treat the Lord as we use a spare tire. They just carry Him along in case of an emergency. But we have to treat our God more like a gentleman than that. He is too high and holy to be trifled with. Remember we will all reap what we sow.

A Christian boy and a sinner boy were walking down the street together one night. The sinner said to the Christian, "Let's stop and get us a drink of liquor," and the Christian said, "I have a Friend who is with me and He won't go in." "Then leave Him on the outside until you go in and come out," said the sinner. The Christian returned, "If I do that He will go on and I won't be able to find Him when I come out." Of course the Christian boy's Friend was none other than Jesus Christ. So, a Christian can't afford to stop along the road and play with the devil awhile, and then expect God to hear his prayers as soon as he gets into trouble. You just can't get by that way.

The Christian's road map is the Bible, and as we near our eternal home we must watch and consult it lest we take a bypath. Sometimes it is much easier to take a bypath while we are on the upward grade than it is to press on on the narrow road. But the side roads will eventually lead us to some very bitter experiences. Sometimes the Christian has to travel through some long and dry desert places where it is hard to get a prayer through to God, but if he will press on and on, he will come through to some mighty good pasture land that flows with milk and honey. Then he can thank God that he has stood the test.

Sometimes we are made to wonder why the road is so rough and stony, while the wicked seem to have it easy. Sometimes we are tempted to give up. Then we should let God step in and give us a lift. He will give you such blessings that you will shout for joy. Then you are ready to buckle your armor on and give the devil another battle. So God gives us enough blessings to keep us pressing on, and enough hard slips to keep us humble. There is so much chaff in all of us that He has to keep threshing us to separate the wheat from the chaff. He is steadily getting us ready for His garner, and He wants clean wheat when we are called to go.

The Christian, in his upward march, has no place to stop for "... No man, having put his hand to the plow, and looking back, is fit for the kingdom of God" (Luke 9:62). It's just like riding a bicycle, when one stops pumping he falls. John Bunyan gives us a picture of this in his book, Pilgrim's Progress. It seems that Christian had become weary when climbing a steep mountain on his way to the Celestial City. He found a good place to rest, so he lay down to take a much needed rest. While he was resting, he fell asleep, and while he slept night overtook him and the roll (road map) fell out of his bosom and rolled down the hill. Not being able to find it, he was obliged to wait until morning, thus delaying his journey, to his sorrow.

So there is no place for Christians to stop and take a rest until they get through the pearly gates. And never forget as you travel, the devil will follow up every faithful Christian and throw bombshells at him until the gates close behind him. "And the ransomed of the LORD shall return, and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads: they shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away" (Isaiah 35:10).

SIGNS AND WONDERS

ESSIE HEARRON, Surphur, Oklahoma

ACCORDING to the days of thy coming out of the land of Egypt will I shew unto him marvellous things" (Micah 7:15). Judges 5:6 says, "... the children of Israel walked forty years in the wilderness, ..." "He brought them out, after he had shewed wonders and signs in the land of Egypt, and in the Red Sea, and in the wilderness forty years" (Acts 7:36). In Hebrews 3:9 we find, "When your fathers tempted me, proved me, and saw my works forty years." What were some of these signs and wonders which the people of Israel experienced and saw during these forty years and during their previous years in the land of Egypt?

One of the first miracles was wrought through Moses and Aaron before Pharaoh when the waters were turned to blood. Then came the plagues of the frogs, the lice, the flies, the boils, the locusts, darkness and the death of the first born. Many miracles were also wrought by God through Moses such as the crossing of the Red Sea on dry land. "... the waters were gathered together, the floods stood upright as an heap, and the depths were congealed in the heart of the sea" (Exodus 15:8). Congealed means frozen, so the waters stood upright or frozen by God's mighty power. Many marvelous things were wrought in behalf of God's chosen people. But after Christ came and lived among men, He told His followers He would give signs to confirm the Word, which He did for forty years after He left this world. Signs followed the disciples wherever they went. "And it shall come to pass afterward, that I will pour out my spirit upon all flesh; and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, your old men shall dream dreams, your young men shall see visions: And also upon the servants and upon the handmaids in those days will I pour out my spirit. And I will shew wonders in the heavens and in the earth, blood, and fire, and pillars of smoke" (Joel 2:28-30). In the second

Spiritual Rest

MRS. S. T. DUNNING
Jakin, Georgia

THE world is full of unrest today. Why? Because the world is full of sin. People of all walks of life are burdened because of the weight of sin that they are carrying. Jesus came into the world to save sinners, relieve them of the weight of sin and give them spiritual rest. Paul says, "For when we were yet without strength, in due time Christ died for the ungodly" (Romans 5:6).

There are so many invitation words in our Bible, and if heeded or accepted all people would be saved, and have spiritual rest which is had only when we accept Jesus as our Lord and Saviour. He gave us that rest when He died on the Cross for our sins. Look, behold and see are familiar words, and are found in both the Old and New Testaments. "Look unto me, and be ye saved, all the ends of the earth: for I am God, and there is none else" (Isaiah 45:22). "... Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sins of the world" (John 1:29). "And Jesus said, for judgment I am come into the world, that they which see not might see; and that they which see might be made blind" (John 9:39). We only have to take our eyes off everything else and look, behold and see the crucified, risen and living Christ to have salvation, which gives us rest, peace and happiness.

Such invitation words as hear and fear are frequently found in our Bible. The prophet Isaiah tells us in his prophecy, "Incline your ear, and come unto me: hear, and your soul shall live; ..." (Isaiah 55:3). Salvation is not promised to all who merely hear the gospel, but unto those who hear and respond with obedient faith. Here are two instances where we find the word fear. "The fear of the LORD is a fountain of life, to depart from the snares of death" (Proverbs 14:27). "The fear of the LORD is the beginning of wisdom: ..." (Psalm 111:10). Let us notice the Bible word, fear, here means reverence and honor. To begin to fear God is to begin the life of faith.

We are also invited to call on the Lord. "And it shall come to pass that whosoever shall call on the name of the Lord shall be saved" (Acts 2:21). So we are to call on Him with trusting faith believing, and He will save us.

Jesus said many times while on earth among men, "Follow Me." This is another invitation to come and have that spiritual rest, for as we follow Jesus we accept Him as our Saviour and new Master, and He assures us His yoke is easy and His burden is light.

We are invited to enter the door as Jesus said, "I am the door: by me if any man enter in, he shall be saved, and shall go in and out, and find pasture" (John 10:9). In John 7:37 Jesus gives us an invitation to drink a drink of living water: "... If any man thirst, let him come unto me, and drink." If we trust Christ as our Saviour we will never thirst spiritually. Christ not only invites, but commands all men to repent. "... Except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish" (Luke 13:3). So we must change our minds about ourselves, about sin and about God. We must repent of our sins, realize that we are a sinner and believe in Christ, trust Him as our Saviour and Lord, and we will be blessed. "... Blessed are all they that put their trust in Him" (Psalm 2:12).

If we will receive the Christ of Calvary, salvation will come to us, bringing that rest with joy unspeakable and full of glory, as it did to Zacchaeus of old.

"Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart: and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light" (Matthew 11:20-30). Jesus spoke these words to His apostles, and all of His obedient children down through the ages have found them to be true.

To some the Christian life seems to be hard, and they can't understand these words of Jesus: My yoke is easy and my burden is light. Some have tried to follow Jesus, and it seemed so hard to do. What was the trouble? They were not yoked to the Lord; they do not allow Him to have a burden that is light, then we must be willing to walk in the way that He has marked off for us to follow. Those believers who are submissive and meek will find that the heavy half of the burden is drawn by the One under the yoke with them. It is then that the yoke is easy and the burden is light.

Obedient believers will certainly experience suffering along the Christian way.

Paul said, "... I reckon that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us" (Romans 8:18).

When Christ was on earth He often gave the gospel invitation of inviting men to come unto Him; this is the simplest and clearest of all the Bible invitations to be saved and have spiritual rest. Jesus used this form of invitation when dealing with little children, and He taught that their simple response sets a pattern of faith for adults. "But Jesus calls them unto him, and said, Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not: for of such is the kingdom of God. Verily I say unto you, Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child shall in no wise enter therein" (Luke 18:16, 17). As we come unto Him, leave our burdens, and find rest, we will believe. The great promise that we find in John 3:16, "For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, and whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life," will be ours.

So we are to look to the Christ of Calvary for salvation, as the children of Israel looked to the serpent on the pole to be healed from the serpents' poison. And we are to hear the gospel with a responsive and obedient ear, and to fear God with reverence and trust. We are to call on the Lord, as a child calls on or depends upon his parents for everything. We are to follow Christ, entering the door of salvation which is Christ. That is we are to open our heart's door and let Christ come in. We are also to receive Christ as the fountain of life, and repent by changing our mind from unbelief to belief in Christ and trust Him alone for salvation. Then, and then alone, will we have this spiritual rest.

Christ is the solution of all our problems, though they be great or small. He bore all our sorrows and troubles at Calvary, yet we sometime try to carry our burdens alone, instead of coming to the Cross and leaving them there. On one occasion Jesus told His disciples to "... Come ye yourselves apart into a desert place, and rest a while: ..." (Mark 6:31). They had been on a missionary tour and needed rest at the feet of Jesus. All Christians or workers in Christ's vineyard today need that rest and spiritual strength that Jesus alone can give. To rest both spiritually and physically is to sit down, relax and feast on the Word of God.

Even if you are on the right track, you will get run over if you just sit there.

One machine can do the work of fifty ordinary men. No machine can do the work of one extraordinary man.—Elbert Hubbard

A Charge to Christians

REV. SELDON BULLARD

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This message was carried by the Kannapolis Daily Independent on Sunday, September 2, 1956. The Rev. Seldon Bullard is pastor of the Mabel Avenue Free Will Baptist Church of Kannapolis, North Carolina.)

"Watch ye, stand fast in the faith, quit you like men, be strong" (1 Corinthians 16:13).

THE language of this text is a marshal description. We should at once presume it to be the address of the General to His troops as if He was saying to them: "Don't neglect guard; see that the sentinels do their duty. Be firm and unyielding as valiant men, and bring all your united energies to bear against the common enemies. Be strong." Believers are soldiers. Soldiers of the Christ of the Cross; and it is to them that the text is directed. So let us look at the charge given here. It consists of four parts.

The first part is vigilance, and oh, how we as Christians need to consider the charge "Watch Ye." It is the very opposite of apathy and sloth, the opposite of indifference and slumber, a duty often enjoined and of essential importance. This will be both our duty and interest when we reflect upon the subtlety of our adversaries, especially Satan of whose devices we are not ignorant.

Our position in this life is critical. We're passing through the country of the enemy of our souls. He is called the god of this world. Here he has his seat, here he goes about seeking whom he may devour.

Our hearts are deceitful. The strongest have been overcome, the wisest deceived, the holiest ensnared, the boldest intimidated. I am thinking of Samson. When temptation presented itself many times, he had been able to shake himself loose from it, but still his heart deceived him. He wist not that God had departed from Him and was carried away captive. David was a man after God's own heart who yielded to Satan and paid a dear price for sin. Solomon, the wisest man of all ages, and impulsive Peter failed to stand true to God because their hearts were deceived. Yes, our hearts are deceitful, and oh, how necessary that we be vigilant.

The next part of the charge is constancy. Stand fast in the faith. Your post in the work of the Kingdom of God is one of honor and of dignity. Stand fast on Christ, the very foundation of faith. "For other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ" (1 Corinthians 3:11). All else is yielding sand; here only is there found firm foothold. We should stand fast by the standards of faith which is the holy Scriptures. Paul in his letter to the church at Colosse, a city of Asia Minor, says, "Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom; teaching and admonishing one another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing with grace in your hearts to the Lord" (Colossians 3:16). Isaiah commanded Israel to law and to testimony.

The Christian is to stand fast in the exercise of faith. The eye of the spiritual mind must ever be directed to the Cross—looking unto Jesus Christ who is the Author and Finisher of our salvation. The hand of the soul must hold fast to the horn of salvation, and it must distinguish all our reading, hearing, praising, praying, fighting. Yes, we must live by faith in the Son of God.

This charge includes manliness. Quit you like men. Avoid all that is childish, trifling and fanciful. Oh, how we need to be men and women in the cause of righteousness. We need to be prudent as men in understanding and knowledge. Wisdom is essential in the Christian life. We need to be decided as men—not wavering, not changing and fickle as a child; but resolved and determined as men. Then as men we are to be courageous, not timid and fearful as children, but full of holy boldness and resolution.

This charge includes strength. Be strong, not in yourselves, but in the grace which is in the Lord Jesus Christ—strong in the Lord and in the power of His might. The Christian sufficiency is found only in Christ, so we should be increasingly strong. Grow in grace and knowledge from babes to men and use all the means there are to obtain strength for they are many. Then we need to use that strength in overcoming difficulties and in duty toward God and His Church, and go on from strength to strength, from conquering to conquering till the alarm of war be exchanged for the shout of victory and triumph.

Now, may we press the charge upon the reader as a Christian, because your cause is good. It is the cause of truth, of righteousness, of salvation and of God. No tyranny nor despotism is associated with it and no misgivings on account of its oppressive character.

Your Captain is great. Jesus is the Captain of salvation; He is the Conqueror and the Spoiler of hell, Satan and death. Invincibility is engraved on His shield, and immortality on His banners.

Your armor is perfect. Every weapon, both offensive and defensive, is provided for you. Every part of the Christian person is protected, except the back, and therefore it cannot sustain injury unless it be in retreating.

Your provision is abundant. You are not called to go out on a warfare at your own charge. Paul said, My God shall supply all your needs.

The victory is certain. This is more than any earthly warrior can say, but here it may be confidently said that fighting is conquest and conflict is triumph. "Nay in all these things we are more than conquerors . . ." (Romans 8:37).

The reward of those who receive the admonition of the text will be glorious. Paul says in 1 Timothy 6:12, "Fight the good fight of faith, lay hold on eternal life, whereunto thou art also called, and hast professed a good profession before many witnesses." Revelation 2:10 says, ". . . be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life." Revelation 3:21 says, "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame, and am set down with my Father in his throne." Christians, press forward; your reward awaits you in yonder's world.

Christianity Not At Fault

"How is it," asked a man of a minister of the gospel, "that your religion has been going for nearly two thousand years, and has not influenced more people than it has done?"

For reply, the minister answered by asking another question: "How is it that water has been flowing for six thousand years, and many people are still dirty?"

It is not the fault of Christianity that people go on without the remedy for human ills and sin—but the loss is theirs, just the same. Christianity is not a failure. The gospel is not a failure. Wherever it is preached in fidelity, it wins! But there are some who "put it from them."—Unknown.

"It is only when we are still that we can see the working of our exalted Lord."—Selected.

The only good luck many great men ever had was being born with the ability and determination to overcome bad luck.—Channing Pollock

We are expecting even greater blessings from God as a result of these services."

Often, the best way to answer a bad argument is to let it go on.

Don't worry about an occasional mistake. Life without errors would be exceedingly dull.

True bravery is shown by performing without witnesses what one might be capable of doing before all the world.

Every moment of your life is a brand new beginning. Yes, this very moment!

It isn't the load that weighs us down—it's the way we carry it.

What you are born is God's gift to you. What you make of yourself is your gift to God.

A wise man once said, "If someone has wronged you and you get revenge, you will be happy for an instant. If you forgive him, you will be happy forever."

Solomon had a thousand wives. He probably kept trying until he found one who could sew on a button.

Recommended Hymns and Gospel Songs

A joint committee from the Board of Directors of The Free Will Baptist Press and the Board of Publications and Literature of the National Association of Free Will Baptists is beginning its work of selecting songs and other materials for a proposed church hymnal to be published by the two boards. What are some of the numbers that you would like to be included in the hymnal?

The editor of The Free Will Baptist is asking that you fill in the blanks below with five selections which you would recommend to the committee. When you have filled in the blanks, cut out the entire article and send it to J. O. Fort, Box 507, Ayden, North Carolina. If you have copies of the words and music of the songs which you select, please include them in the letter. The editor will present your selections to the committee for consideration.

Questions and Answers ON THE BIBLE

Conducted by J. F. BARROW

3824 Richland Avenue, Nashville 5, Tennessee

Question: Please explain, "And if he shall come in the second watch, or come in the third watch, and find them so, blessed are those servants" (Luke 12:38). What is meant by the second watch and the third watch?—Mrs. L. Fordham, Woodbine, Tennessee.

Answer: The second watch at the time Jesus was here on earth compared quite favorably with our time from 9 to 12 p. m., and the third watch covered the time from 12 midnight until 3 a. m. The following information may be found on Page 140 in William Smith's latest publication of Smith's Bible Dictionary:

"Before the captivity the Jews divided the night into three watches, Psalms 63:6; 90:4, namely, the first watch, lasting till midnight, Lamentations 2:19; the middle watch, lasting till cockcrow, Judges 7:19; and the morning watch, lasting till sunrise, Exodus 14:24. In the New Testament we have allusions to four watches, a division borrowed from the Greeks and Romans. These were: 1. From twilight till 9 o'clock, Mark 11:11; John 20:19. 2. Midnight, from 9 till 12 o'clock, Mark 13:35. 3. Till 3 in the morning, Mark 13:35. 4. Till daybreak, John 18:28. The word held to mean hour is first found in Daniel 3:6, 15; 5:5. Perhaps the Jews, like the Greeks, learned from the Babylonians the division of the day into twelve parts. In our Lord's time the division was common. John 11:9."

John D. Davis, in his Dictionary of the Bible, Pages 540, 541, says, Night. The period of darkness (Genesis i. 5). It was divided into three watches: sunset to midnight, midnight to cockcrow, cockcrow to sunrise (Lamentations ii. 19; Judges vii. 19; Exodus xiv. 24). The Greek and Roman division into four watches was in use in New Testament times (Luke xii. 38; Mark vi. 48). At this period the night from sunset to sunrise, was divided into twelve hours (cf. Acts xxiii. 23)."

The whole 12th chapter of Luke consists of a series of discourses to several different groups. For a general exposition on the Verse I like what R. C. H. Lenski has to say in his Interpretation of St. Luke's Gospel on page 704. It is both quite simple and yet sufficient.

"The beatitude is so great that Jesus repeats it together with the point that is essential for us: 'if he shall come and shall find it thus,' i. e., that we are watching; for all depends on that. It is true faith that keeps disciples watching, faith in the Lord and in his promise of return; when the watching ceases, faith will be gone, and the blessedness will be lost. But Jesus adds: 'if in the second, and if in the third watch' and regards the night of twelve hours as being divided into four three-hour periods. Jesus does not intend to say that He will not come in the first or in the fourth watch. For that matter, He could have named the first and fourth watch just as well as the other two. As far as the reality is concerned, the imagery of the watches intimates only one thing, the complete uncertainty regarding the actual time of the Lord's return. And that is the point in regard to watching and preparedness; He may come at any moment and our readiness must be constant."

SIGNS AND WONDERS

chapter of Acts this prophecy was fulfilled. In Mark 16:20 we read, "And they went forth, and preached every where, the Lord working with them, and confirming the word with signs following. . . ."

The apostle, Paul, also wrought many signs and wonders through God. (Read 2 Corinthians 12:12). But finally this power of performing signs and wonders by healing the sick and raising the dead ceased. The time of signs and wonders was over, and no more do we need signs to confirm the Word. But today some are still trying to work miracles. In the last days we find that Satan will do this, "And he doeth great wonders, so that he maketh fire come down from heaven on the earth in the sight of men" (Revelation 13:13). A host of people claim to perform miracles now. In Revelation 16:14 we read of the devil's working miracles: "For they are the spirits of devils, working miracles, which go forth unto the kings of the earth and of the whole world, to gather them to the battle of that great day of God Almighty."

We may wonder what will happen to false prophets who try to perform miracles. Let us read Revelation 19:20: "And the beast was taken, and with him the false prophet that wrought miracles before him with which he deceived them that had received the mark of the beast, and them that worshipped his image. These both were cast alive into the lake of fire burning with brimstone."

Let us remember that Jesus said, ". . . An evil and adulterous generation seeketh after a sign; and there shall no sign be given to it, but the sign of the prophet Jonas" (Matthew 12:39). Let us beware of the modern-day signs and wonders of this world for we can be lost following after them.

When Two Fell Out

Dr. M. D. Hoge, of Richmond, Va., told of two Christian men who fell out. One heard that the other was talking about him, and he went to him.

"Will you be kind enough to tell me my faults to my face, that I may profit by your Christian candor, and try to get rid of them?"

"Yes, sir," replied the other, "I will do it."

They went aside and the former said, "Before you commence telling what you think wrong in me, will you please bow down with me, and let us pray over it, that my eyes may be opened to see my faults as you will tell them?"

It was done, and when the prayer was over, the man who had sought the interview said, "Now proceed with what you

But the other replied, "After praying over it, it looks so little that it is not worth talking about. The truth is I feel now that in going around talking against you, I have been serving the devil, and I have need that you pray for me."—Religious Herald.

SECRET OF SUCCESS

Until you have learned to be tolerant with those who do not always agree with you—until you have cultivated the habit of saying some kind word of those who you do not admire—until you have formed the habit of looking for the good instead of the bad there is in others, you will be neither successful nor happy.

The Lighted Pathway

Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path
(PSALM 119:105).

REV. WILLET L. MORETZ
SWANNAHOA, N. C.

"He that spareth his rod hateth his son: but he that loveth him chasteneth him beatimes" (Proverbs 13:24).

"Chasten thy son while there is hope, and let not thy soul spare for his crying" (Proverbs 19:18).

The following articles which I promised you last week has already been published in three magazines, therefore some of you may have read it. But it is of such importance that I believe it should have as wide circulation as possible:

THE COST OF NEGLECTING ONE BOY

Ex-Governor Dickinson, of the state of Michigan, told the following story. We heard him relate it to a thousand people.

A young lad, the son of a businessman, walked up to his busy father and said, "Father, if you do not send me off to a state institution today, I am going to commit suicide tonight." This was startling to a father who had been busy making money, looking after public interests, but neglecting his own offspring. The young lad went on to relate that he was socially diseased. And it is appalling when we learn that millions of our American youth are in this same condition today.

Mr. Dickinson said that the businessman's son was sent off to a state institution for treatment. In a year he came back home thinking he was cured. But God says that the sins of the father are visited upon the children to the third and fourth generation of them that hate Him. Whatever a boy sows in his early life, he shall reap in his later years.

This lad married a beautiful young girl. Their first and only child was a son. The mother died in childbirth. The young diseased father went over and looked at a half-blind, mentally-weak baby. He exclaimed, "It is more than I can bear." He picked up a revolver, went outside the bedroom and took his own life. The baby lived. In later years he stood in a long line in Buffalo, N. Y., to shake the hand of President William McKinley. When his turn came, he stretched out one hand to the President, drew a revolver with the other hand, and out went the life of William McKinley.

It was not long until this young man was brought to justice. He was sentenced to die.

The ex-governor said that five tragedies resulted from the failure of the family, church and state to save one boy!

First, there was the premature death of a young mother. She paid the penalty of the sins of another by losing her life.

Second, there was the birth of a baby, born with criminal tendencies.

Third, there was the suicide of the young father.

Fourth, there was the tragic death of President William McKinley, a Christian statesman.

Fifth, there was the execution of a young man who had been neglected in his formative years.

It was a costly business to fail to save Leon Czolgosz. Five tragedies came out of his father's and his grandfather's sin. And it may be that the boy at your door, or just around the corner from your home or church, will commit a crime which will shock the state and nation, if he is not brought to the Sunday school and won to Christ.

You say that it costs money to erect Sunday school rooms, buy literature, and carry on the work of Christian education. I agree that it does. But, it is ten thousand times costlier not to do it. We may take our choice in the matter—more Sunday schools, or more penitentiaries—which? And, of course, the Eternal Harvest involved is infinitely more important.—Selected.

"Train up a child in the way he should go: and when he is old, he will not depart from it" (Proverbs 22:6).

David Encouraged Himself in the Lord His God

How we may encourage ourselves today.

1. By reading and studying God's Word (Psalm 119:105; Romans 10:17; Psalm 119:130).
2. By communicating with God in prayer (Acts 12:5; 4:18, 31; Matthew 7:7).
3. By seeking the fellowship of God's people (Acts 4:23; 1 Kings 19:9-19; Acts 14:21, 22).
4. By attending the seasons of divine worship (Acts 2:42; Hebrews 10:25; Acts 9:31).
5. By gathering about the Lord's table (Acts 20:7; Joshua 4:6, 7; 1 Corinthians 11:23-30).
6. By ministering to those who are in need (Acts 9:36, 39; 3:6; Galatians 6:1-9).
7. By looking for the coming of the Lord (Hebrews 6:19; 10:37; Philemon 3:20, 21).

DOUBLE DRIVE BY VISITATION

MANY visitation experts insist on uniform calling procedure. They say that a standard plan prevents unfortunate occurrences. Let's make our visitation effective so that we will reach our double goal. Here is one suggested formula. It may help you in visitation.

1. Before reaching the door, pray. No formula will work without prayer.

2. Introduce yourself as soon as householder comes to door. Do not enter at the call of a child.

3. Find a point of contact. Be kind to their children. Compliment home or furnishings. Don't overdo talk about the weather.

4. Get to your reason for calling as soon as possible—to lead to Christ and direct to your church. Don't let time drag.

5. Avoid controversial subjects. Avoid criticism of church or persons. Keep confidential information sacred. Don't gossip.

6. Be alert for additional information about the family or the mention of names of other prospects.

7. Be enthusiastic and wholehearted in speaking of your pastor and work of the church.

8. Don't be afraid to give a testimony if opportunity arises. But give it briefly, sincerely.

9. Mention special features of your Sunday school nursery for babies, cradle roll, adult classes, home department. Invite their participation.

10. Make arrangements for transportation to church if the family lives at a distance.

11. Leave some literature, if possible, giving more information on church and Sunday school. This will serve as a reminder.

12. Leave before the conversation lags or the people get tired of you.

13. As soon as possible after leaving, jot down acquired information on visitation card.

14. Return card to the proper person.

15. Keep in contact with those you have visited.

16. Continue to pray earnestly concerning the effectiveness of your visits.

According to business firms which have tested response, a personal call is the most effective way to get response.

They say that a card is ten per cent effective, a letter is 25 per cent effective, a phone call is 40 per cent effective, but a personal call is 80 per cent effective.

But visitation must be a continuous program to be effective.

It is the continual caller who gets response.—Edgemont F. W. B. Church Challenger, Durham, N. C.

It requires a strong constitution to withstand repeated attacks of prosperity.

The only sure thing about luck is that it will change.

Enthusiasm is the vibrant thrill in your voice that sways the will of another into harmony with your own.

You have to get behind your work to get ahead, and use your head to keep from getting behind.

The fellow who worries about what people will think of him wouldn't worry so much if he only knew how seldom they do.

FIRE DESTROYS HOME

"Our house and furnishings were burned October 10, 1956. All was a complete loss, but we had only $2,000 worth of insurance when the real value was approximately $6,000. God knows best. All my records as clerk of the Midway Association were burned, along with my wife's records as state auxiliary secretary-treasurer.

"All churches are asked to check up on checks and money orders written in the month of October and issue new ones. All others were deposited before the fire unless they came during the last few days of September. Please look into this matter if you think yours may have been part of the loss.

NOTES — A N D — QUOTES

By J. C. Griffin

SOME OF GOD'S WARNINGS TO THE TRANSGRESSOR

"Good understanding giveth favour: but the way of transgressors is hard" (Proverbs 13:15). So many times I have witnessed suffering and remorse, heard groans and cries of orphans, seen tears, barefooted children and the beauty of the young woman fade to a demon-like appearance all because of transgression of God's holy law. "You cannot sin and get by" has been an adage of the past which is true, but God says the way is hard. Some time ago I sat in the county court and viewed the faces of transgressors. I saw tears on the faces of those who had transgressed both the laws of God and the laws of state. I saw tears stream down the faces of loved ones. Transgression was causing separation—wives left, children left, friends left—a penalty for transgression. I saw men ushered back to the prison only to remain for a little while and then they would be off to begin a term of months or years while the loved ones had to go back to their homes feeling downcast because of the transgressor.

I go along the road and see men, often young men or boys who ought to be somewhere in school, slinging the pick and shovel. Sometimes they have on prison clothing that distinguishes them as hard criminals, and I think of the harness of the transgressor. I go in the hospitals and see faces that once beamed with brightness and showed a happy countenance, and there I find tears and heart-searching confession from one who has become an alcoholic. Both men and women are found in this category, yet our nation destroyed the laws that curbed drinking to some degree. Sinful transgressors have put wine, beer and hard liquor in every section that the devil can prescribe. Some of the most prominent corners are decked with whiskey bottles on display. They fix the displays so as to make it more enticing to the youth and to the old sot. They want to sell all they can. The more they sell, the more money they have to carry on the business of making the way hard to the transgressor. Notwithstanding the warning of God that no drunkard shall enter into the Kingdom of heaven, we endorse drunkenness every time we vote for a wet politician. You say, "How can that be, preacher?" Because moderate drinking leads to the gutter. Men and women are made alcoholics because they took the first drink. Drunkards are bound for hell.

Transgression Brings Death

"... the wages of sin is death; ..." (Romans 6:23). Whiskey drinking, together with wine and beer, causes wrecks on the highways that take the lives of the drunkard and also the innocent. Transgression of God's laws does these things. Not only is death caused by drunkards, but little children suffer malnutrition. I have seen children so undernourished that their little bodies were dying gradually for the lack of proper food, while the parents could find money to buy beer and whiskey. I have helped put shoes on little cold feet when the earnings of a drunken father had gone for intoxicating drinks. Mr. Bar Keeper, you are dispensing stuff that wrecks lives, destroys peace and prosperity of the home, takes food out of the mouths of little children and heartbroken mothers, causes premature death to mothers, drunkards and children, and sends souls to an eternal hell. I say to you, how can you sleep at night after handing that damnable stuff over the counter to the man who you know is on his way to ruin and hell. How can you take the money and place it in the coffers of the state when it should be used in the home? How can you feel at ease when you know that little children are hungry for bread? Can you take that money and say, "God bless you, friend"? Mr. Politician are you voting to make more drunkards by displaying more liquor and building more liquor stores, thus making it easier for our youth to get the damnable stuff? I say, how do you feel? Would you like to meet God who has said no drunkard shall enter into the Kingdom of heaven? When the question of a referendum comes up in the legislature do you vote to keep the people from voting on the question, or do you by your keenness slip the measure by and keep it off the floor? How do you feel about it? Do you think that God is pleased?

Another Warning from God

"Behold, all souls are mine; as the soul of the father, so also the soul of the son is mine: the soul that sinneth, it shall die" (Ezekiel 18:4). It is a sin to do anything that hurts the lives of others, or that transgresses the law of God. Sin is a transgression of God's law. God says, "Woe unto him that giveth his neighbour drink, that putteth thy bottle to him, and maketh him drunken also, ..." (Habakkuk 2:15).

You who encourage drinking are helping the bottle to the mouth of both young and old. God says, "Woe unto you." You may say, "My business is my business. If a man wants to drink himself to death it is none of my business." There are many who argue this. You may think you are doing right, but listen: "There is a way which seemeth right unto a man, but the end thereof are the ways of death" (Proverbs 14:12). Honest men know that it is wrong to drink unto drunkenness. So when we vote for liquor we encourage the drunkard. We also help to make him worse. We help him to make his family suffer. We help make criminals. We help send men to the gas chamber or the electric chair. We help to populate hell. The way of the transgressor is hard.

"The sacrifice of the wicked is an abomination unto the LORD: ... The way of the wicked is an abomination unto the LORD: ... Hell and destruction are before the LORD: how much more then the hearts of the children of men" (Proverbs 15:8-11). "The way of life is above to the wise, that he may depart from hell beneath" (Proverbs 15:24). "Correction is grievous unto him that forsaketh the way: and he that hateth reproof shall die" (Proverbs 15:10). "Wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging: and whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise" (Proverbs 20:1). "He that being often reproveth hardeneth his neck, shall suddenly be destroyed, and that without remedy" (Proverbs 29:1).

"Then shall he say also unto them on the left hand, Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels" (Matthew 25:41). "And death and hell were cast into the lake of fire. This is the second death. And whosoever was not found written in the book of life was cast into the lake of fire" (Revelation 20:14, 15). (Read Chapter 20 of Revelation.) "But the fearful, and unbelieving, and the abominable, and murderers, and whoremongers, and sorcerers, and idolaters, and all liars, shall have their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone: which is the second death" (Revelation 21:8). Someone may say, "I don't believe in that hell fire stuff." Well, the people didn't believe Noah, but the flood came just the same.

A smile is worth nothing until it is given away.

Be not like the man who will not cast bread upon the waters until he is sure it will come back a seven-layer cake.

Merely to silence a man is not to persuade him.

He who neglects the present moment throws away all he has. Remember, time is the most valuable thing that a man can spend. It costs nothing because it is priceless!

You have not converted a man because you have silenced him.

The heart has reasons that reason does not understand.

SAYING IT WITH CHICKENS

Edgar L. Vincent

I DON'T believe they have got much to keep house with, Father. I haven't seen even a single chicken over there yet, and they have been here a month. Seems as if they would have some by this time if they ever were going to."

It pleased Father to hear the note of anxiety in Bennie's voice. If the new folks just across the road had been his own kith and kin he could not have been more solicitous that they should get a good start on the farm to which they had only recently come from the city.

"Well, of course it will take them some time to get so they really know what they want and what they don't. We'll have to just wait and see."

"We know now that they want eggs, Father. Mrs. Blake was over only yesterday morning and got a few off Mother. But, do you know, I don't believe they have much money to buy with, eggs or chicks or anything else. She only got half a dozen, and that is only one egg apiece for them. My! wouldn't we think we fared pretty slim if we had to come down to one egg for each of us!"

The very idea of it brought the situation more acutely to Ben's mind. He wished the new folks had at least a few chickens. But Father did not see how it was going to be done unless they set about it themselves.

"They probably will hatch some out themselves when they get around to it. So let's not worry about it. Give them a chance to do some of the worrying."

But Bennie did feel a bit sorry after all.

"Well, I don't believe they have any way to hatch chicks, Father. They haven't got a single old hen nor an incubator such as we have. Wish—"

What Ben's wish way down deep in his heart was he did not say. He did wish, however, that Father had a little bit more sympathy with the new folks. He went out to the long house which sheltered the flock which he cared for every day, opened the door and went in. There was a great fluttering as the beautiful birds came running, flying and fluttering toward him, for they expected when Bennie came he would bring them something good to eat.

The boy reached down and picked up old

Brownie. She made no effort to escape from him, but just gave a soft, contented caw, as if she and Bennie were on pretty good terms and she wanted him to know it. Two or three other hens flew up to Bennie's shoulders and for a moment he quite forgot the neighbors across the road. Of all the creatures of the farm none were more loved by the boy than these birds of the feather. For some time Bennie visited with them till he thought it was nearly time to go to breakfast, then he backed away toward the door saying quite to himself:

"I should hate to see you go, but if I had my way I would give some of you to the new folks over there!"

On the way back to the house a good thought came to Bennie. For a moment he felt like kicking up his heels. He hurried on to the farmhouse, but not toward the back door as he had intended at first, but he took a straight line for the outside cellar door.

Pushing that open he went in. Down there was where he and his father had their big egg-hatching machine. For the first time Bennie had a share in that incubator and its many dozen of eggs that were now in it. Father was proud of his boy's care for the poultry kept on the farm. He was so faithful and watched the chicks so carefully that he trusted him to do everything that needed to be done when he happened to be away.

And that spring he had said to his boy:

"Bennie, I'd like to have you a partner with me in the chick business this year. Wouldn't you care to have some eggs in the incubator of your own this time? We will put the eggs in one corner by themselves, so that we can tell which are yours and the chicks they hatch out shall be your own. What do you say?"

"That would be awfully fine, Father!" Bennie's face was all lighted up with smiles now. To be a partner with Father! That surely would be a joy. "But I'll tell you what I would like, Father, if you don't care. I'd like to get some of Mr. Lane's eggs, instead of our own. You know his are just as purebred as they can be. If I could have just a dozen of those eggs to put in the incubator, I tell you I would feel great. Because I know we could get some hens that would do better if we really went at it that way."

So Bennie got his twelve eggs from the fine flock of the neighbor. Father placed them in one corner of the machine, and every day when the eggs were turned, Bennie was on hand to watch and to listen for the first faint peep, showing that the little birds were beginning to think of breaking out of their shells. And now the time was almost up. It would be three weeks tomorrow since the incubator was started. Then Bennie would see his beautiful new chickens. But the fine thought which had come to him while on the way to the house had changed all his plans.

"If Father doesn't care, I'll give those chicks to the folks across the road!" he said to himself. "I don't believe he really would mind it. If he is down there turning the eggs, I'll ask him now."

And Father was in the cellar. The light had been turned on and Father was turning the eggs. He heard the outside door creak on its hinges and looked up to see who was coming.

"Is that you, Bennie? Got something to tell you. I think I heard a peep this morning. I'm not just sure, but they're coming! Come over and see if you don't hear the chicks in their shells."

So it took Bennie but a minute to get over where Father was. Bending down over the eggs in his corner of the big machine he listened carefully. Then up he jumped.

"You sure did hear them, Father! Right in my corner, too. It will be great to see the first one, won't it?"

The moment Father was ready to look at the eggs the next morning Bennie was on hand to see the little chicks he and Father were sure would be there. Father was only a half minute ahead of him. They could hear the chicks now plainly enough.

"They're out, Bennie!"

"I hear them, Father!"

Carefully Father opened the machine. Bennie could hardly wait till his own chickens came to view. There they were, twelve fluffy beauties, all Bennie's own! While Father was looking them over, Bennie put his arm up around his neck.

"Would you care so very much, Father, if I gave my part to the folks across the road? They have none, and I would like to let them have mine. It would help them to get a start. I think the boys and girls over there would just love them! I know I would if I hadn't any!"

Father picked up two of the soft birds and looked at them, but the smile on his face was not altogether because they were so pretty.

"I think that would be fine, Bennie. Get a basket and we will put them right into it. And you can carry them over and tell them how to take care of them."

Bennie quickly brought the basket.

"Oh, thank you, thank you, Father!" His voice was full of the joy that was in his heart. "I'll go over every day and tell them all I know."

Father gently took the little chicks out and put them into the basket. But he did not stop then. He kept on taking out chicks until he had three dozen of them.

"But, Father, you've got more than my twelve. Don't you remember, there were only a dozen of my eggs?"

"All right, Bennie. If twelve will give them a start, three dozen will give them a better beginning. We'll start the incubator again in a few days; and I've been thinking, Bennie, that we'll get all the better eggs, such as you had, and we'll all be partners, you and I and the boys and girls across the road."—Gospel Herald.

Tidewater Woman's Auxiliary Convention

The Tidewater Woman's Auxiliary Convention of Virginia convened at the Warwick Free Will Baptist Church, Warwick, Virginia, on October 13. The theme for the convention was "The Chief Aim of the Woman's Auxiliary." The two speakers for the day were Mrs. J. B. Chism and Mrs. M. E. Howard.

Special music was rendered by The Born Again Trio. Miss Ann Howard conducted a very interesting installation service. Officers elected for the 1957-1958 term were as follows: Mrs. Billy Melvin, president; Mrs. J. B. Chism, vice-president; Mrs. D. V. Pittman, recording secretary; Mrs. Hadley Overman, assistant recording secretary; Mrs. Walter Croom, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Gertrude Whitehurst, treasurer; Mrs. D. S. Talton, youth auxiliary chairman; Mrs. G. A. Forehand, study course chairman; Mrs. William Deuell, stewardship-prayer chairman; Mrs. J. K. Bryan, Jr., personal service chairman; Mrs. Wilton Dail, field secretary; Miss Jaunita Deuell, pianist.

A workshop for these officers will be held on November 10, at 10:00 a.m., at the Warwick Church. All officers are urged to be present at this workshop.

Albany, Ga.—The Woman's Auxiliary of the Albany Church held an installation service recently with Mrs. Malissa Conger in charge. As each officer was installed she received a miniature symbol of her responsibility. The officers installed were as follows: Mrs. A. B. Paul, president; Mrs. K. C. Hancock, vice-president; Mrs. Jess White, youth chairman; Mrs. E. H. Sheffield, study course chairman; Mrs. Gene Catrett, program-prayer chairman; Mrs. Aaron Lovett, secretary; Mrs. O. L. The Woman's Auxiliary of the Albany Church was organized five years ago with seven members. It has now grown into four circles. At the last general meeting they enjoyed an informal birthday celebration marking the fifth anniversary of the auxiliary. The out-going president, Mrs. O. L. Houston, gave a brief history of the auxiliary. Later the group assembled in the dining room of the church where the birthday motiff was carried out in the decoration and refreshments.

Louisburg, N. C.—The Woman's Auxiliary of the Saints' Delight Free Will Baptist Church held its regular monthly meeting Thursday night, October 18, 1956, in the home of Mrs. Suel Bartholomew. The meeting was opened by the president, Mrs. Bertha Ann Phelps. Mrs. Johnnie Shearon led the group in prayer.

An interesting program was conducted by Mrs. Julius Layton. Those participating in the program were Mrs. Willie Conn, Mrs. Suel Bartholomew and Mrs. Junior Stone. Special prayer was held for the coming revival at the church. The 19 members and 3 visitors present were then served refreshments.

Manning, S. C.—The Woman's Auxiliary of the Manning Free Will Baptist Church held its regular monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. Herbert Ardis. The meeting was called to order by the president, Miss Blanche Bryant. The group was led in prayer by Mrs. M. L. Hicks. Those participating in the program were Miss Olympiah Bryant, Mrs. J. W. Bryant and Mrs. M. L. Hicks.

The business session was held following the program. The group then joined in the singing of a hymn and was dismissed with

MISSIONS Mission Plane Shot Down In Mexico

A Protestant mission airplane was shot down in Mexico on September 21. Pilot Ancel Allen died in the crash. He was an American citizen affiliated with the Air Mail From God Mission, whose United States headquarters is located in Los Angeles, California.

Alone in the plane, Mr. Allen was flying at a low altitude dropping Scripture portions and gospel literature. As he flew over the township of San Bartolo Morelos (in the state of Mexico) the plane was fired upon and so badly damaged that it crashed a little later, near the town of San Sebastian. Hours later the body was recovered by the Red Cross headquarters in Toluca.

It has been noted that in past years there have been a number of martyrdoms among the Protestant minority in that particular section of Mexico.

Lucasville, Ohio—The Rev. Forest Chamberlain, pastor of the Long Run Free Will Baptist Church submits the following:

"This money I am sending to you is from a youth group in our church. They have been saving their pennies, nickels and dimes to send to a missionary. They range in age from seven to twelve. They are happy to send this amount.

"At the national convention I was much impressed by Brother and Sister Lonnie Sparks. The Lord laid them upon my heart and this group of boys and girls have approved sending this money to them in their work for the Lord. We hope to send

Report of Free Will Baptist Bible College

The Free Will Baptist Bible College, Nashville, Tennessee, reports that its total enrollment for the year 1955-1956 was 182. Twenty-two states and two foreign countries were represented in this number. Included also in this number were 144 high school graduates, 13 non-high school graduates and 25 who took the general education development test after enrolling.

There is one phase of the enrollment report that should be discussed and understood by all Free Will Baptists. That has to do with the non-high school graduates. Out of the total enrollment of 182, 38 had not finished high school. This gives an enrollment of non-high school students of 20.9 per cent. The highest per cent that any accrediting agency will even tolerate is 5 per cent of non-high school graduates. Even that small per cent is frowned upon by accrediting agencies. This fact has been little understood by many who have wondered why Free Will Baptist Bible College has not been accredited.

The easiest and simplest solution to this problem would be for Free Will Baptist Bible College to adopt a policy of not accepting non-high school students. Such a policy having been followed in the past would have denied training to some of the finest Christian workers that have gone out from the college. It has been the policy of Free Will Baptist Bible College to be of service to the youth of our denomination before accreditation. If these non-high school students who are called of the

OFFICIALS CONFIDENT OF ACCREDITATION

Mount Olive College president, W. Burkette Raper, appeared confident this week that the college made a favorable impression Friday, October 19, 1956, before a two man subcommittee examining the institution for possible state accreditation.

Findings of the committee will not be made public until the North Carolina College Conference acts upon the college request for accreditation in a meeting on November 8 and 9.

The only phase on the college curriculum singled out by the examiners as below standards required of an approved institution was the lack of certain books in the library.

About 1,000 specific volumes are needed, Dr. W. C. Pressly, chairman of the Standards Committee, and Dr. James E. Hillman, representative of the State Department of Education, pointed out.

Raper said many of the volumes have been ordered and the remaining books will be purchased this year. Cost of the books needed to fulfill requirements is expected to run as high as $5,000.

Hillman and Pressly commended the college for purchasing a new site for future expansion rather than keying its building program around the present small site in the heart of the Mount Olive residential section.

The committee strongly recommended that the college begin to build on the new site immediately, possibly next year.

If accreditation is sanctioned by the college conference, the college will operate on a probationary status of accreditation for one year before full accreditation is granted.

Accreditation is viewed as tremendously important to the college's immediate growth, particularly with respect to veterans wanting to go to school under the GI Bill of Rights.

College officials said that some 15 or 20 veterans have expressed interest in entering the school when the institution becomes veteran approved.

Veteran approval is based upon the action of the North Carolina College Conference.

While the college has not yet been accredited, credits there are transferrable to Atlantic Christian College, East Carolina College and Free Will Baptist Bible College.

What Does the Lord Require?

(Lesson for November 11)

Lesson: Micah 4:1-5; 6:6-8.

Golden Text: Micah 6:8.

I. INTRODUCTION

The two passages selected from the book of Micah for our lesson have to do with two very different phases of the prophet's message to the Lord's people. In the first passage from the fourth chapter of his book, the prophet speaks of the establishment of the mountain of the house of the LORD, and of its influence upon the people of the whole world. In the second passage from the sixth chapter of this book, Micah speaks of what the Lord approved in the worship and service of Israel, and especially concerning the sacrificial offerings of the people. But the things which the Lord pointed out as good for the people of Israel apply to His people everywhere, and at all times, whether they are Jews or gentiles.

II. HELPFUL HINTS

1. No matter where the mountain of the house of the Lord is established, it will be above the hills of doubt and fear (Vs. 1).

2. The Lord will anywhere teach His ways to those who are willing to walk in His paths (Vs. 2).

3. The Lord alone can cause warring nations to beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruninghooks (Vs. 3).

4. The time will come when faithful men will peacefully rest and not be disturbed by the forces of evil (Vs. 4).

5. Only those who turn from the gods of the world can join those who walk with the Lord forever (Vs. 5).

6. Whether men can come before the Lord acceptably depends upon how and why they come before Him (6:6).

7. Unless our hearts are right in the sight of the Lord, it is useless to bring our great offerings to Him (Vs. 7).

8. Before one can do justly, love mercy and walk humbly with the Lord, he must come to know Him as Lord and Saviour through faith in the Lord Jesus Christ and become a new creature in Him.—The Bible Teacher (F. W. B.).

III. ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

1. The closing verse of the third chapter of Micah is a prediction concerning the desolation of Zion: "Therefore shall Zion for your sake be plowed as a field, and Jerusalem shall become heaps, and the mountain of the house as the high places of the forest." When this prophecy was delivered it must have seemed a most daring utterance. At that time this hill was densely crowded with the best and strongest edifices in Jerusalem. It was a prophecy foretelling the destruction of Jerusalem, and it was fulfilled A. D. 70 in the siege of Titus, the Roman general. It makes no difference how impossible of fulfillment a thing may seem to be when announced by God's Prophet, it will surely be fulfilled. God's Word never fails of fulfillment.—W. S. Hottel, D. D.

2. There are three verses in the book of Micah which every believer should know by heart: "... nation shall not lift up a sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more" (4:3). "But thou, Bethlehem Ephratah, though thou be little among the thousands of Judah, yet out of thee shall he come forth unto me that is to be ruler in Israel; ..." (5:2). And 6:8: "... what doth the LORD require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God."

3. The Lord on the throne of this Kingdom will have power over the nations of the world. The word that will characterize His reign of justice will be peace. It will be enforced by the power of the Lord. Isaiah rejoiced at the same vision as he said, "And there shall come forth a rod out of the stem of Jesse, and a Branch shall grow out of his roots: And the spirit of the LORD shall rest upon him, and the spirit of wisdom and understanding, ... with righteousness shall he judge the poor, and reprove with equity for the meek of the earth: and he shall smite the earth with the rod of his mouth, and with the breath of his lips shall he slay the wicked" (Isaiah 11:1-4).

Isaiah describes this peace as extending to the animal kingdom, "The wolf also shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid; and the calf and young lion and the fatlings together; and a little child shall lead them. And the cow and the bear shall feed; their young ones shall lie down together: and the lion shall eat straw like an ox. And the sucking child shall play on the hole of the asp, and the weaned child shall put his hand on the cockatrice' den. They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain: for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the LORD, as the waters cover the sea" (Isaiah 11:6-9). —The Bible Student (F. W. B.).

4. It is unfortunate that our lesson passes over Micah 5, where we have the beautiful prophecy of the coming of Christ as Saviour and King. Read it.

The portion in Chapter 6 presents the essence of true worship of God as being found not in formalities or sacrifices or outward ceremonies, but in a holy walk before God. This is obviously not something man can attain by culture or character development, but only by the new birth which results from faith in Jesus Christ.

Justice, mercy, humility—these are found in our Lord Jesus Christ. And as men come to know Him by faith they find peace for their own hearts—and are ready to live at peace with other men. While we wait for the coming of Christ as the Prince of Peace, we should diligently present this message of redemption as the way of personal peace in a wicked world.—Moody Monthly.

5. Jenny Lind, the famous Swedish singer, was in Stockholm on one occasion. The king was going to have a musical festival at his palace on the Sabbath day. He sent an invitation to the great singer to come and take part in the exercises. But she declined the invitation. Then the king waited on her in person, and commanded her to come to his entertainment. This was a very high honor for a king to show to one of his subjects. Most persons would have gone under these circumstances. But Jenny Lind still begged to be excused. And when the king asked for her objections, she said, "Please, your majesty, I have a greater King in heaven to whom I must be faithful. I cannot do what your majesty desires without breaking the commandment of my heavenly King, and offending him. So please excuse me for declining to do what your majesty wishes."

This is what God demands of every child of His, that He be given first place in each heart.—Selected.

to others as God permits us; not only money but our prayers.

"I hope I will not be considered rude in asking this, but would you send to this group a recognition of this gift? They have planned and worked to send this money in and it would encourage them so much to hear from you. I am sure you understand my request.

"May God richly bless you all and especially the Sparks as this gift goes to them."

Lord into Christian service cannot receive training at the only Bible training center their denomination maintains, then they must be turned away from our door to look elsewhere for their training or either enter into Christian service untrained. Free Will Baptist Bible College has felt that the lack of a high school diploma should not bar a dedicated young man or woman from the field of Christian usefulness.

Another possible solution would be to set up a separate school for non-high school students with separate records and classes. This could be done if facilities and teaching personnel were available. To do this would practically double our teaching load and demand many more classrooms than we have available. Under present conditions this cannot be done. Our present teaching staff is now overloaded and could not take on added responsibilities. Had we the teaching personnel, the lack of classroom facilities would prohibit the establishment of a separate school for these students.

The approach the Bible college has made to reducing this problem to its minimum has been to have the non-high school students to take general education development tests. This test is given at Vanderbilt University at a nominal cost and anyone 21 years of age is eligible to take it. The State Department of Education of Tennessee has agreed that any student passing this test is considered to have high school equivalency and is eligible to enter any state owned institution as a high school graduate. Some, if not all, accrediting agencies also consider the passing of this test the equivalent to high school graduation. By having students take this test we have reduced our percentage of non-high school students from 20.9 per cent to 7 per cent this past year. The coming year we believe this per cent can be reduced to a point where at least the first two years of our work will be accepted by the University of Tennessee. Also this will enable us to become more nearly eligible for admission into the Accrediting Association of Bible Institutes and Bible Colleges.

While on this point of accreditation we are happy to inform you that the State Department of Georgia has recently certified one of our students for a two year provisional teachers' certificate for that state. The student attended Free Will Baptist

Bible College for three years and our very fine relationship with Peabody College enabled us to gain certification for this former student. Also one of our students is entering the University of Tennessee and receiving credit for his work taken at Free Will Baptist Bible College. Also one of our former students is attending a fine teachers' college in the state of Mississippi and received junior college classification on the basis of her two years study at Free Will Baptist Bible College. Of course Peabody College has been accepting two years or more of our work for a number of years. In this connection I quote from a letter received from Dr. Thomason, dean of records and admissions from the University of Tennessee:

"I regret very much that it has been impossible for me to get a committee together to visit Free Will Baptist Bible College this spring. . . . We will schedule a visit to your institution early in the fall. I will communicate with you around the first of October about a suitable date."

Dr. Thomason has been most helpful to us in working toward university approval of our institution. Free Will Baptist Bible College is on its way toward overcoming many of the problems that has beset it all along the way without sacrificing service to the youth of our denomination. The road is not an easy one but the educational practices of the institution have been declared sound by many educational experts, and the technicalities that we have not been able to overcome in every instance have not greatly hindered in attaining our educational objectives.

The report on the library is brief but important. The number of books acquired during the last year is substantial when we consider that the average cost is above $3 per volume. However, again we face an accreditation problem from the standpoint of number of volumes in our library. We must acquire an additional 3,000 volumes before accreditation by an accrediting agency. However, I do believe we can meet the state's requirement for approval on the junior college level. In the matter of building a library, we have followed a policy of taking only those volumes which were standard and would be an asset to our institution. We might have made a general appeal and have occupied our space with hundreds of volumes of no value to the institution. The policy the school has followed is slower, but sounder. I believe there are hundreds of worthwhile volumes on the shelves of our private libraries that could be given to the school, which would greatly aid in attaining our library goal.

Don't attend prayer meeting. Let him pray; that's his business.
Don't attend Sunday evening services. Stay home and watch television.

THANKFUL HEARTS

We plow the fields and scatter
The good seed on the land,
But it is fed and watered
By God's almighty hand;
He sends the snow in winter,
The warmth to swell the grain,
The breezes and the sunshine,
And soft refreshing rain.

He only in the Maker
Of all things near and far;
He paints the wayside flower,
He lights the evening star;
The winds and waves obey Him,
By Him the birds are fed;
Much more to us, His children,
He gives our daily bread.

We thank Thee, then, O Father,
For all things bright and good,
The seed-time and the harvest,
Our life, our health, our food;
Accept the gifts we offer
For all Thy love impart,
And, what Thou most desirest,
Our humble, thankful hearts.

THE FREE WILL BAPTIST PRESS

The Free Will Baptist Press of Ayden, North Carolina, is a nonprofit corporation dedicated to the proposition of magnifying Christ through the printed page. It does not engage in secular printing of any nature, but devotes its entire time and facilities to the printing of Christian literature. And truly God's blessings have been upon this institution from its very beginning.

The institution received its initial finances from the sale of stock to individuals, churches, union meetings, conferences, associations and conventions. These farsighted individuals and organizations, realizing the supreme importance of a denominational publishing house, invested their money without promise of dividends or interest that Free Will Baptists might have a publishing house to furnish literature which was true to the doctrine they believed.

The institution has continued to operate throughout the years, constantly improving and expanding its literature offering for the denomination. Today, in cooperation with the National Sunday School Board and the National League Board of Free Will Baptists, we are rendering a much wider service than ever before.

Sunday School

We now have literature for all ages in Sunday school according to classifications by generally accepted authorities, as follows:

(1) Complete cradle roll materials for children from birth to their second birthday. (This material will be off the press within a few weeks.)

(2) Nursery department literature for Ages 2 and 3. In addition to a teacher's guide which contains definite instructions for the conduct of each Sunday's class period, there is a pupil packet containing a Bible picture and a Bible story, together with a present-day picture and a present-day story dealing with the lesson for each Sunday in the quarter.

(3) Beginners' department literature for Ages 4 and 5. This material contains a teacher's guide and pupil packets which follow the same order as those for the nursery department, except that this material is graded for the older age group. The literature for both these departments provides for activities which will keep the classes busy in constructive work throughout the class periods.

(4) The Little Folk's Quarterly for primaries, Ages 6-8.

(5) The Junior Quarterly for Ages 9-11.

(6) The Intermediate Quarterly for Ages 12-14.

(7) The Senior Quarterly for Ages 15-17.

(8) The Bible Student for Ages 18-24.

(9) The Advanced Quarterly for Ages 25 and above.

(10) The Bible Teacher for teachers of all young people's and adult classes.

(11) Visitors' Single Lesson Leaflets for visitors in young people's and adult classes.

Free Will Baptist League

At the present time we are publishing league quarterlies, as follows:

(1) The Junior League Quarterly.

(2) The Intermediate League Quarterly.

(3) The Senior-Adult League Quarterly.

In response to a resolution of the National League Board in a recent meeting, and upon approval by the Board of Directors of the Free Will Baptist Press, we shall offer two additional league publications, beginning January 1, 1958: a story hour publication for children below junior age, and a separate quarterly for adults. The authorization also calls for revision of existing league manuals and the publishing of a junior league manual.

Daily Vacation Bible School

For the first time in the history of our denomination, we shall offer to our people daily vacation Bible school materials written and prepared by Free Will Baptists. For use during the summer of 1957 we shall offer materials of which we are extremely proud. These materials will serve five departments in daily vacation Bible school, as follows: nursery, beginners, primaries, juniors and intermediates. We urge all our churches to order and use these materials.

The Free Will Baptist

Our denominational weekly publication, The Free Will Baptist, has a circulation of approximately four thousand copies per week. We are proud of this circulation, but realize that we are far from the goal which we have set—every Free Will Baptist family a subscriber.

This periodical should be in every home of the denomination, for it is designed to serve every home and church. The feature articles which it carries, as often as our people write them, are submitted by our people who are directed of the Holy Spirit to write them. The editorials deal with denominational problems. The news items publicize the news of all our churches, as the news is submitted to us. Publicity is given to every department of church and denominational work. Every issue contains reading matter which should be interesting to every member of the family, including the small children. The circulation knows no state or national boundary lines; we print the news from our people everywhere, as they submit it to us, and we send the paper to every subscriber, wherever he lives.

Youth Banner

Beginning April 1, 1957, we shall make a revision of Youth Banner, with the hope of enabling that publication to fill a greater need in the lives of our people and our churches. The nature of this revision is under consideration at the present time. Pray with us that we may be directed to God's plan for this publication.

In conclusion, let us pledge The Free Will Baptist Press anew to the task of spreading the gospel of Christ through the printed page. We shall continue to improve and expand our literature offering as the Lord may direct and as funds are available to finance our expanded operation.

When God is going to do a wonderful thing, He begins with a difficulty. When He is going to do a very wonderful thing, He begins with an impossibility!

Dissension

Within the Ranks

William Rutledge III,
Hollywood, California

I HAVE never heard the church so reviled and abused as by those who, at one time or another in their lives, had enjoyed considerable prestige and distinction within it.

The Bible recounts the realistic truth that the faith, at no time, enjoyed a truly smooth and unruffled development. Even on the occasion of the birth of the Christ Child, there were those who were violently stirred and fiendishly aroused, as the wanton killing of the babies in Bethlehem was carried out by soldier under Herod's orders.

Few churches, if any, can function very long without a serious disturbance or upheaval taking place within its ranks. And, ironically, those who should be most grateful for benefits and blessings from the church, are so often the protagonists or instigators or outright schemers of the means that tear asunder the fundamental harmony and accord that should prevail and which must flourish if the church is to produce the fruits that its constituents depend upon the faith to yield in their lives.

Surely, there are occasions when serious differences are justifiable; and likewise situations in which a believer has been trapped upon or quite badly treated. There are times when members are offended or subjected to harsh and incompetent judgments or the victims or erroneous and even downright libelous conclusions. This, in the obvious defiance of the warning from Christ Himself against sitting in judgment.

These sequences are to be found in the annals of every church, rural or metropolitan, rich or poor, large or small, vigorous or feeble—regardless of denomination and regardless of any factor that might be mentioned.

These disturbances, which arise whenever and wherever people are gathered, do not involve adults alone. They can arise in regards to or within the youth and children's groups.

We cannot expect that dissension can be eliminated from church life. Elements of it are with us always, in varying degrees and with varying consequences.

However, the cultivation of a sound and wholesome Christian attitude towards these situations is an essential phase of churchmanship. This is particularly vital in the development of the faith of growing boys and girls. They may experience hurts and discriminations and harsh blows and false accusations and bitter resentments in church as well as any where in their lives.

The significant fact is that what the church stands for and the faith that endows the church with its meaning and vitality are always present; in spite of any words or actions of any or all of the constituency of any church.

Certainly growing boys and girls need to understand that the church is made up of human beings, with all of their individual ideas and concepts and backgrounds—and with all of the shortcomings that the human race is heir to.

Not even being a high ranking official of the church exempts him from serious and faulty judgment, if judgments he must hand down. Jesus, in His infinite wisdom, assures the people of His day that He came not to judge any person; unless it be those who specialized in handing out judgments. Jesus found and set Himself against the highest officials of the Jewish religion because of the wickedness He knew and understood in them. He befriended and solaced even the lowliest and most scorned because of the virtue He knew and understood in them.

A fair weather faith is not the rock-girded belief that Jesus called men to build upon. When the winds of falsehood and the storms of calculated schemes break, the believer should have the strength and insight to ride them out. That is simply prudent and enlightened churchmanship.

Nothing Left But Triumph

Many years ago there lived a minister upon whom in a very brief period of time, there came calamity almost too onerous for him to bear. His happiness was swept away. Apparently there was nothing left to live for.

Yet this same man sat down and wrote a beautiful hymn. Here is the first verse.
"When peace, like a river, attendeth my way,

When sorrows, like sea billows roll:
Whatever my lot, Thou hast taught me to say,

It is well, it is well with my soul."

We are told that there is no agitation whatever in the eye of hurricane. At the center of the great storm is peace. Everybody encounters trouble at times, and it usually has a devastating effect upon the soul. But a few people can rise above it, using it, in fact, as a stepping stone to something higher. They go into a clinch with trouble and wrestle with it until day-break. They hold the narrow pass against the assault of the invader. They will not let any trouble make them bitter. They will face the rigors of death rather than be sorry for themselves. They will face nothing but the possibility of triumph. In the end their hearts are filled with peace.

"It is well with my soul, with my soul,
It is well, it is well with my soul."

Controls

You cannot control the length of your life, but you can control its width and depth. You cannot control the contour of your countenance, but you can control its expression.

You cannot control the other fellow's opportunities, but you can grasp your own.

You cannot control the weather, but you can control the moral atmosphere which surrounds you.

You cannot control the distance that your head shall be above the ground, but you can control the height of the contents of your head.

You cannot control the other fellow's faults, but you can see to it that you yourself do not develop or harbor provoking propensities.

Why worry about things you cannot control? Why not get busy controlling the things that depend on you?—Highway of Happiness.

Repentance

Rev. Edward E. Morris
Richland, California

(Editor's Note: This article is an adaptation of Chapter 5 in the Handbook of Free Will Baptist Doctrine, written by the Rev. Edward E. Morris. This book may be purchased for $1 from The Free Will Baptist Press, Ayden, North Carolina.)

REPENTANCE is an essential doctrine; without it a man cannot be saved. Our hope is to teach you the word of God concerning repentance—what it is, what it will do and how it is done.

In Mark 1:15 we read, “. . . the time is fulfilled, and the kingdom of God is at hand: repent ye and believe the gospel.” In Acts 3:19 we find, “Repent ye therefore, and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out, when the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord.” Matthew's Gospel says, “And saying Repent ye: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand” (Matthew 3:2). You can see by these Scriptures that repentance is commanded. It is a command of the Lord. It is a part of God's plan of redemption. Preaching of the Word is necessary. Faith comes by hearing the Word of God, but it takes more than faith to save. Godly sorrow leadeth men to repentance, but godly sorrow doesn't save. The order is godly sorrow, repentance, faith, confession.

Repentance Is Necessary

“I tell ye, Nay: but, except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish” (Luke 13:3). There were present at this season some that told him of the Galileans, whose blood Pilate had mingled with their sacrifices and Jesus was explaining here that they were not chief of sinners, or even the eighteen upon whom the tower of Siloam fell and slew; but He was explaining the necessity of repentance regardless of what kind of sinner you may be.

“And the times of this ignorance God winked at; but now commandeth all men every where to repent” (Acts 17:30). It is ignorant to think that you can become a child of God without repentance. This doctrine is not preached as much as it should be. Folk join the church now without repentance. Preachers pastor a church for months, or even years, and never preach a message on old-time repentance. God's message is repent or perish, whether you like it or not. It is an essential part of coming to God.

“Remember therefore from whence thou art fallen, and repent, and do the first works; or else I will come unto thee quickly, and will remove thy candlestick out of his place, except thou repent” (Revelation 2:5).

This message was to a church, and he plainly states that, “I know thy works.” He still knows the work of churches today; sometimes I wonder if the message today to some churches who do not preach repentance would not be to the pastor. It might be worded the very same way: I tell ye, Nay: but, except ye repent ye shall all likewise perish. The light has gone out and the candle stick removed from a church that does not practice repentance. There needs to be a great turning to God, and repentance is the gateway to a brighter and happier life.

Repentance Defined Scripturally

“The men of Nineveh shall rise in judgment with this generation, and shall condemn it: because they repented at the preaching of Jonas: and, behold, a greater man than Jonas is here” (Matthew 12:41). This is the language of the Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ. He plainly states that the men of Nineveh repented. They came down off their thrones and cried out mightily to God. God heard and answered their prayer and spared their city. Jesus called this repentance. Let the scoffer mock and the critic criticize and the unbeliever doubt; but after they had had their say, Jesus still says we must repent. I accept it, and I hope you do too.

“Submit yourselves therefore to God. Resist the devil, and he will flee from you. Draw nigh to God, and he will draw nigh to you. Cleanse your hands, ye sinners; and purify your hearts, ye double minded. Be afflicted, and mourn, and weep: let your laughter be turned to mourning and your joy to heaviness” (James 4:7-9).

James is preaching repentance. Notice, draw nigh to God and he will draw nigh to you. John says if we confess our sins he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins and cleanse us from all unrighteousness. Be afflicted and mourn and weep.

“Or despiseth thou the riches of his goodness and forbearance and longsuffering; nor knowing that the goodness leadeth thee to repentance?” (Romans 2:4). When a sinner begins to meditate on the goodness of God, he remembers God had spared his life and love him so much that He gave His only Son to die on Calvary that he might have life—these are the things that lead a man to repentance.

“For godly sorrow worketh repentance to salvation not to be repented of: but the sorrow of the world worketh death” (2 Corinthians 7:10). It directs us toward God. “Testifying both to the Jews, and also to the Greeks, repentance toward God, and faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ” (Acts 20:21). The penitent must believe that God for Christ's sake will forgive his sins when he makes his confession.

“But without faith it is impossible to please him: for he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him” (Hebrews 11:6). Here reconciliation is made.

“Therefore if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature: old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new. And all things are of God, who hath reconciled us to himself by Jesus Christ, and hath given to us the ministry of reconciliation” (2 Corinthians 5:17-19). “Jesus saith unto him, I am the way, the truth, and the life: no man cometh unto the Father, but by me” (John 14:6).

The only way home to God is through the Lord Jesus Christ. The approach is through repentance. A man can repent and still be lost. You must repent and believe.

“For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Greek. For therein is the righteousness of God revealed from faith to faith: as it is written, The just shall live by faith” (Romans 1:16, 17).

Sorrow is one of the phases of repentance like in Psalm 22:1, “My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me? why art thou so far from helping me, and from the words of my roaring?” Psalm 51:1 says, “Have mercy upon me, O God, according to thy lovingkindness: according unto the multitude of thy tender mercies blot out my transgressions.” In Psalm 51:17 we read, “The sacrifices of God are a broken spirit: a broken and contrite heart, O God, thou wilt not despise.”

David, in these passages of Scripture, is repenting. If you don't believe in a sinner praying, what do you think of this prayer found in Psalm 51:1-12: “Have mercy upon me, O God, according to thy lovingkindness: according unto the multitude of thy tender mercies, blot out my transgressions. Wash me thoroughly from mine iniquity and cleanse me from my sin. For I acknowledge my transgressions: and my sin is ever before me. Against thee, thee only have I sinned, and done this evil in th-sight: that thou mightest be justified when thou speakest, and be clear when thou judgest. Behold I was shapen in iniquity; and in sin did my mother conceive me. Behold, thou desirest truth in the inward parts: and in the hidden part thou shalt make me to know wisdom. Purge me with hyssop, and I shall be clean: wash me, and I shall be whiter than snow. Make me to hear joy and gladness; that the bones which thou hast broken may rejoice. Hide thy face from my sins, and blot out all mine iniquities. Create in me a clean heart, O God; and renew a right spirit within me. Cast me not away from thy presence; and take not the holy spirit from me. Restore unto me the joy of thy salvation; and uphold me with thy free spirit."

Notice that David said, Hide thy face from my sins and blot out my iniquity. Then he said, I shall be washed whiter than snow. David was making confession to God. This is repentance and godly sorrow. Later on, David thanked God for hearing his cry.

"I love the LORD, because he hath heard my voice and supplications. Because he hath inclined his ear unto me, therefore will I call upon him as long as I live. The sorrows of death compassed me, and the pains of hell gat hold upon me: I found trouble and sorrow. Then called I upon the name of the LORD; O LORD, I beseech thee, deliver my soul" (Psalm 116:1-4).

I love the Lord, too, because He heard my supplications. He inclined His ear when I called upon Him; He heard and answered my prayer. Surely the sorrows of death compassed me, too, and the pains of hell had hold upon me. I was in trouble and sorrow; then I came to the Lord and called upon His name. He heard and answered and set me free from the law of sin and death. I had all I wanted. I was tired and was looking for something better when I repented. If you are tired of sin, if you will come to the Lord Jesus Christ and believe in your heart, you, too, can be washed whiter than snow and you will love the Lord.

Repentance Precedes Faith

You repent, and then believe to the saving of your soul. Mark 1:15 says, "And saying, The time is fulfilled and the kingdom of God is at hand: repent ye, and believe the gospel." In Matthew 21:32 we read, "For John came unto you in the way of righteousness, and ye believed him not: but the publicans and the harlots believed him: and ye, when ye had seen it, repented not afterward, that ye might believe him." Let us now notice Acts 17:30, which says, "And the times of this ignorance God winked at; but now commandeth all men every where to repent."

If you have never repented of your sins, then you have never been saved from them. God commanded it. Jesus says that it is necessary, and it needs to ring out from the pulpits everywhere. Repent or perish!

Better Than Hell!

Raymond L. Cox, Covallis, Oregon

ABE MULKY sat silently with his wife, Mandy, beneath a tree on the edge of his Texas farm. Through his mind there reeled the memories of events which led him into the Christian life and later were to launch him on an evangelistic ministry.

He recalled the crucial night when he stomped home from a revival meeting, weighted down under heavy conviction of sin. His wife had a late snack ready, and as he ate he confided to Mandy the inner turmoil of his soul.

"Mandy, I don't know what to do. I'm a sinner! I'm lost! I should get salvation. But I can't afford to. You know that everything I own has been obtained crookedly. If I do get salvation, I should make restitution to all the folks I've cheated. Think what that would mean, Mandy! This house, the farm, the stock—everything would have to go. We'll lose it all if I get salvation. But if I don't get salvation, I'll go to hell for sure! Mandy, what can I do?"

Mandy didn't hesitate to give her answer. She looked into the bewildered, troubled eyes of her husband and spoke quietly, "Abe, get salvation."

Abe did! He returned to the revival meeting the following night and confessed Christ publicly as his Saviour. The next few weeks he devoted to selling his possessions and making restitution to the people whom he had defrauded. Finally, the last one had been paid. And the Mulky's had nothing left but a few dollars.

Now the time had come to vacate his farm. Abe had strolled with his wife down the driveway toward the gate. They sat down beneath the shade of a tree there to eat the last meal on their old place.

And Abe had begun to waver. "What a heel I am, making my wife go through this!" he thought. Then he looked at Mandy. She seemed content and happy as she munched on her sandwich. Mulky could contain himself no longer. From his lips poured a torrent of words, "What about this, Mandy? We've lost everything! I've made you give up too much. Is it worth it?"

Again his wife had the right answer.

In a tone similar to that in which she had advised, "Abe, get salvation," Mandy replied, "Worth it? Of course, it's worth it. It beats hell, doesn't it, Abe? It's a whole lot better than hell!"

I Voted To Close The Church

Last Sunday I voted to close the church—not intentionally, nor maliciously—but carelessly, thoughtlessly, lazily, indifferently, I voted. I voted to close its doors that its witness and its testimony might be stopped. I voted to close the open Bible—the Bible that had been given us by years of struggle and by blood of martyrs who died that we might have it to read. I voted for our minister to stop preaching the glorious truths of the Gospel. I voted that the children of the Sunday school no longer be taught the stories of the Bible and no longer lift their tiny voices in singing.

I voted for the voice of the choir and the congregation to be stilled, and that they no longer sing in united praise.

I voted for every missionary of the church to be called home, every native worker supported by the church to stop preaching, every hospital, every school, and every dispensary in its foreign missionary fields to close. I voted that every home missionary project be abandoned, every influence for good and right and for truth in our community to be curtailed and finally stopped. I voted for the darkness of superstition, the degrading influence of sin, the blight of ignorance and the curse of selfish greed once again to settle their damning load on the shoulders of an already over-burdened world.

I voted for all this. For you see, I could have gone and I should have gone, but I didn't. I stayed away from church last Sunday.—Selected.

Self-respect

Author Unknown

I have to live with myself, and so
I want to be fit for myself to know;
I want to be able, as days go by,
Always to look myself in the eye;
I don't want to stand with the setting sun
And hate myself for the things I've done.
I want to go out with my head erect;
I want to deserve all men's respect;
I want to be able to like myself;
But here in the struggle for fame and pelf
I don't want to look at myself and know
That I'm bluster and bluff and empty show.
I never can hide myself from me;
I see what others may never see,
I know what others may never know—
I never can fool myself, and so,
Whatever happens, I want to be Self-respecting and conscience-free.

Recommended Hymns and Gospel Songs

A joint committee from the Board of Directors of The Free Will Baptist Press and the Board of Publications and Literature of the National Association of Free Will Baptists is beginning its work of selecting songs and other materials for a proposed church hymnal to be published by the two boards. What are some of the numbers that you would like to be included in the hymnal?

The editor of The Free Will Baptist is asking that you fill in the blanks below with five selections which you would recommend to the committee. When you have filled in the blanks, cut out the entire article and send it to J. O. Fort, Box 507, Ayden, North Carolina. If you have copies of the words and music of the songs which you select, please include them in the letter. The editor will present your selections to the committee for consideration.

Questions and Answers ON THE BIBLE

Conducted by J. F. BARROW

3824 Richland Avenue, Nashville 5, Tennessee

Question: I had a discussion with a man who claims that no titles of distinction nor special honors should be given by the church to Christian leaders, teachers or ministers nor any other creatures including angels. He also said that to call a man Reverend is ascribing to him one of God's names and therefore is sacriligious. How may I answer this man? What do Free Will Baptists believe and teach on this subject? He gave the following Scripture references: Psalm 111:9; Revelation 22:8, 9.—G. Thompson, 2108 Sadler Avenue, Nashville, Tennessee.

Answer: I believe that your friend is quite right for the whole teaching of the Scripture on the subject of titles suggests that we be conservative in their use and that we are to use with caution any name of God. The Jews, though not so well informed as we, even wrote the name of God with almost a superstitious caution. The scribe who wrote sacred manuscripts washed his pen each time before copying God's name. We are told to not take it in vain. One of the ways to take the name of God in vain would be to include it in a person or class of persons designating title.

In 1952, Mrs. Delsiel Waters of Pine-town, North Carolina, asked a similar question which was answered in this column, May 28, 1952; and again in 1953, another such question was asked by Earl C. Adcock of Mount Vernon, Illinois, and was answered in this column, December 16, 1953, and reads as follows:

For years this subject was a means of much controversy in our church, but apparently those who opposed this as being the title by which to designate ministers have ceased in their opposition. Of course this does not prove that it is either correct or incorrect when used as a prefix to a minister's name.

About the year 1910, a number of Free Will Baptist ministers in eastern North Carolina commenced using the title Reverend quite freely. This use provoked a lot of criticism in that locality during which time several articles appeared in The Free Will Baptist, some denouncing this use of God's name and some upholding its use as proper. During this debate one or more conferences debated the question and voted to not adopt this title but to retain the former title of ministerial distinction which was Elder.

The late Mr. C. E. Putnam, an extension worker of the Moody Bible Institute, author, Bible scholar, teacher and preacher, who worked extensively in our denomination for over twenty-five years had the following to say on this subject: "Our ministers and Bible teachers of today are not lagging far behind the Pharisees, Sadducees and Herodians of Jesus' day when it comes to seeking honors in position and honorary titles to give them distinction. Jesus pronounced woes on their hypocrisy. I wonder what He might do were He here in the midst of such a group, who today seek at almost any price titles of Doctor, Reverend and Bishop. Even though years ago the Roman Catholic church stood alone in its greed for an exalted and distinct hierarchy of ministers and other personnel of the church, the Protestant church has now gotten in line for a high second place. Our Lord, while here, taught that we should tack the title of Father or Rabbi on to no person because he held a particular position. The Bible also teaches that we are all brethren and that one seeking a high place will be humbled to the lowest of all positions. I am glad that the Moody Bible Institute does not give degrees. If it did some worthless person of today like Simon of Acts 8:18-20 might, instead of trying to buy the gift of the Holy Ghost for show or prestige, offer to buy of the Moody Bible Institute an honorary doctorate."

I myself fear that the seeking of such titles as Father, Reverend, Rabbi, Doctor, Bishop, Pope, and many other titles are unscriptural, and . . . one is not entitled to prefix his own name with that of God's and certainly Psalm 111:9 indicates that Reverend is one of God's names.

The following quotation from the Pulpit Commentary, Volume 3, Page 41, by Rev. Tuck, B. A., seems worthwhile here:

"Psalm 111:9—Reverence for the name. 'Holy and reverend is His name.' 'Reverend' here means 'worthy of reverence.' Horace Bushnell has a striking sentence: 'This age is at the point of apogee from all the robuster notions of deity.' And therefore this age is an irreverent age. Even in the shaping of religious beliefs there are signs of undue familiarity with God. And that undue familiarity explains much of the weakness of Christian living, and lightness of Christian worship. The nineteenth century lacks awe of God.

"Jewish reverence for the name. Explain that in older times a name was supposed to gather up, and suggestively express, the attributes of a person. Moses asked for a name which would express God—stand for God—to the people. And though the word given him was, properly, a declaration of fact rather than a name, it came to be treated as God's name, and such a superstitious reverence for it grew up, that the Jewish people persisted in altering the vowels of it, so that never, by any accident, should they pronounce the hallowed name. There was at least the danger of their coming to reverence the name, rather than the Divine Being who was represented by the name. If they did, their honoring of God was but a helpless and degrading formalism. A proper reverence for the sacred name was enjoined in the third commandment (Exodus 20:7); and such reverence was characteristic of all loyal and saintly souls. See Abraham (Genesis 18:22, 23); Jacob (Genesis 32:29); Moses (Exodus 3:13, 14); Joshua (Joshua 7:9); and also the psalmists and prophets. It may be said that reverence for the sacred name was the keynote of the Jewish system. Of nothing were they more jealous. And if in this they were sometimes wrong, they were mostly right; for 'holy and reverend is His name.'"

The Power of the Minority

Wrong in the church and the world are not to go unchallenged. You and I are to dare to be a minority of one, if necessary. We are to search out the truth for ourselves, and then to cling fast to it. We are to stand by goodness and righteousness wherever we see it.

The full tale of human folly and ignorance and lust—if it could be told—would leave most of us with a feeling of helplessness. We should feel tempted to regard ourselves as mad to struggle against it. But let us be of good cheer. There is a power behind us, greater than the forces within the world. "Ye are of God, little children. . . . Greater is he that is in you, than that is in the world" (1 John 4:4). We march in the train of a triumphant and triumphing Lord.—The Free Methodist.

"O, a trouble's a ton, or a trouble's an ounce,

Or a trouble is what you make it,
And it isn't the fact that you're hurt that counts,

But only how did you take it."

—E. Vance Cooke.

The Lighted Pathway

Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path
(PSALM 119:105).

REV. WILLET L. MORETZ
SWANNANOVA, N. C.

"... What manner of child shall this be!..." (Luke 1:66).

Some years ago I was asked to preach in one of our larger city churches on the work of the orphanage. When the time for the message came I quoted the text as given above, and stated that I was going to talk that night on the most important part of the orphanage—the children. What is more important in our homes or in our institutions than the children? We lose sight of their importance and potentials in our high values placed on ourselves. We only have to read the Bible to learn the mind of God concerning them.

But what of the destiny of the child—any child? That to a large extent is the responsibility of those to whom the child is entrusted. Along this line I have recently read three articles which I believe are worth sharing with you, my readers. With these articles I will pass on to other subjects. They follow in order:

Do you pray for your child?

A boy in his early teens was given a task by his father and instructed to perform it promptly. But just as he began, a group of boys from his neighborhood came by and influenced the boy to go with them for a swim. The work went undone.

That evening the father inquired: "Bobby, did you do the work that I gave you?"

"Yes, sir," said Bobby. Of course, he was not truthful and his father knew it, but he took the part of wisdom and refrained from expressing himself. It disturbed the boy, but he went to sleep as usual that night. The next morning his mother said to him, "Your father did not sleep at all last night."

"Why didn't he sleep?" asked Bobby.

His mother's simple reply: "He spent the whole night praying for you."—Rev. A. Purnell Bailey.

A consecrated child.—A young man was about to enter the foreign missionary work. A gentleman said to the young man's father, "It's hard to give up the boy." "Yes," replied the father, "but it's just what we've been expecting." "How so?" inquired the friend. "When he was a little baby," answered the father, "his mother and I went to a missionary meeting. An appeal, most earnest and touching, was made for men to become missionaries. We ourselves could not go. When we returned home the baby lay asleep in his crib. His mother stood on one side, I on the other. We together laid our hands on his forehead, and prayed that it might be God's will for him to become a foreign missionary. We never spoke to him of what we did. But through these twenty-five years we have believed that our prayer about him would be answered, and answered it now is. Yes, it is hard to give up the boy, but it's what we've been expecting."—Selected.

"A FATHER'S PRAYER"

"Build me a son, O Lord, who will be strong enough to know when he is weak and brave enough to face himself when he is afraid; one who will be proud and unbending in honest defeat, but humble and gentle in victory. Build me a son whose wishes will not replace his actions—a son who will know Thee, and that to know himself is the foundation stone of knowledge.

"Send him, I pray, not in the path of ease and comfort but the stress and spur of difficulties and challenge; here let him learn compassion for all who fail.

"Build me a son whose heart will be clear, whose goal will be high; a son who will master himself before he seeks to master others; one who will learn to laugh, yet never forget how to weep; one who will reach into the future, yet never forget the past, and after all those things are his, this I pray, enough sense of humor that he may always be serious yet never take himself too

William Guy Ferrell

(Editor's Note: This is a reprint of an obituary which appeared in The Free Will Baptist on October 10, 1956, in which an error was detected. We are running this article again in correction and apology for the error which was made.)

Mr. William Guy Ferrell of Lucama, North Carolina, departed this life to be with his Lord on August 12, 1956. He leaves to mourn his passing, not only his loved ones but a host of friends and the members of his church which he served faithfully throughout many years.

Mr. Ferrell was born April 17, 1889. On December 5, 1915, he was joined in matrimony to Miss Montie Raper. He united with the Little Rock Free Will Baptist Church of Lucama, North Carolina, on October 16, 1927, and was made a deacon of that church on March 18, 1944.

He spent his entire life in Wilson County, North Carolina, except for the years which he spent attending Oak Ridge Military Institute in western North Carolina.

Those who knew him best affirm that he was faithful to his Lord and his church in the things which he did. His manner was quiet and unassuming to the point that he was well loved by his friends and neighbors. He exhibited an excellent spirit of devotion to his family and friends, and was thorough in accomplishing the tasks which he undertook. The good qualities which he portrayed might well be emulated by those who are left behind. His pastor confirms the fact that Mr. Ferrell was always a good co-laborer in the work of the Kingdom.

6. New law (John 13:34; 15:12; Galatians 6:2). By His mercy.
7. New vision (John 9:25; Colossians 3:1-3). By a miracle.
8. New relations (Ephesians 2:10-13; Romans 8:15). By Christ's righteousness (Hebrews 2:11; 1 Corinthians 1:30).

PRAISE THE LORD

1. For He is great (2 Chronicles 2:5; Psalm 145:5).
2. For He is merciful (Psalms 136:1, 23; 86:5).
3. For His wonderful works (Psalms 86:10; 139:14).
4. Praise Him in song (Psalm 100:1, 2; Hebrews 13:15).
5. Praise Him in your life and deeds (Matthew 5:16; John 15:8).
6. For we are His people (1 Peter 2:9; Psalms 95:7; 100:3).
7. We will praise Him in Heaven forevermore (Revelation 4:9; 5:11-13).

Prayer is a privilege and a responsibility. We sometimes think that God must "jump to our tone" because we pray. No! He answers for His own glory because we have taken advantage of a privilege and obeyed a command.

"And whatsoever we ask, we receive of Him, because we keep His commandments, and do those things that are pleasing in His sight" 1 John 3:22).

It is not the number of words or the physical exertions we put into our prayers, but the quality of faith.

Longfellow could take a worthless sheet of paper, write a poem on it, and make it worth $6,000—that is genius.

Rockefeller could sign his name to a piece of paper and make it worth millions—that is capital.

Uncle Sam can take gold, stamp an eagle on it, and make it worth $20—that is money.

A mechanic can take material worth $5 and make an article worth $50—that is skill.

An artist can take a five-dollar piece of canvas, paint a picture on it, and make it worth $1,000—that is art.

God can take a worthless, sinful life, wash it in the blood of Christ, put his Spirit in it, and make it a blessing to humanity—that is salvation.—The Preacher's Magazine.

NOTES — AND — QUOTES

By J. C. Griffin

WHAT IS REPENTANCE?

Gypsy Smith says, "Repentance is the moral response of an awakened soul to the call of God. Repentance is turning from sin to God. If there is a person who has been trying to live a Christian life and has no joy in it, no victory in it, and no song in it, I know the reason. It is that he has never repented. He has started wrong."

Mr. Smith continues, "Repentance is the most neglected doctrine in the New Testament and the most unpopular. People do not like to be called to repentance, and you do not often hear it preached. And yet, the Bible is a handbook of repentance. It enforces it, and so demands it that no substitute can be accepted for it."

These assertions of Gypsy Smith are in line with what I have been preaching for a long time. Thousands try to believe on the Lord Jesus as their Saviour and, at the same time, never repent for their sins. Thus they go through life posing as Christians, unhappy, ignorant and miserable. They have no real testimony. I think that thousands join some denominational church under conviction of sin, but not with true repentance.

Conviction Is Not Repentance

I have seen people under conviction. People who would go to an altar of prayer in revival meetings and pray, or seemingly pray, while their friends, the evangelist or the pastor would get down beside them and pray. But after some time, the persons under conviction would arise and leave the church just as burdened as when they went to the altar.

I remember distinctly the story of a man who has long since gone to his reward in the life beyond. During every revival meeting that was conducted in his community, he would go to the altar and weep and cry out for salvation. After one of the revival meetings was closed, this man was taken suddenly ill and died. Seemingly, no one knew the cause of his death, but I remembered that I saw blood issuing out of his mouth. Then I talked to this man's brother who was a devout Christian. I said, "I certainly hate that your brother was not saved before he died." Then the brother said to me, "He had a secret sin—he was living in adultery with a certain woman that lives on one of his farms." He was not willing to give up this woman. He was convicted of his sin, but was not willing to repent of his sin. Repentance would have turned this man from the woman to Christ. No man can really trust Jesus Christ for salvation as long as he holds to his pet sins. All sin must be renounced and Jesus Christ accepted, before a man can be saved.

Godly Sorrow Is Not Repentance

There are people who think that godly sorrow is repentance, but it is not. I have seen men who were very sorry that their sin had overtaken them. In other words, they were sorry because their sin had come to light, sorry for being caught. But deep down in their heart, they didn't repent. Men can go on sorrowing and weeping over their sins and still die and go to hell.

The apostle, Paul, says in speaking to the Corinthians, "Now I rejoice, not that ye were made sorry, but that ye sorrowed to repentance: for ye were made sorry after a godly manner, that ye might receive damage by us in nothing. For godly sorrow worketh repentance to salvation not to be repented of: but the sorrow of the world worketh death" (2 Corinthians 7:9, 10). Thus we learn that sorrow is not repentance. It worketh to repentance. A man will not repent as long as he is satisfied to live in sin. He lives in sin and is not sorrowful at all concerning his sins. When this sorrow deepens so much that the sinner repents, turns away from that sin, turns to the Lord Jesus Christ, confessing his sin to Christ and calling on Him for forgiveness, then salvation is wrought; but only if the sin is confessed to Christ with absolute faith in the forgiveness of the sin by the Lord.

The man who does not want to go back to the old life of sin has truly repented. He has found so much pleasure in the salvation he received as God's free gift, that he does not want to go back to that old life of sin and death. His relationship is so precious with the Father and the Lord Jesus Christ that he does not want to put himself back under the bondage of sin and condemnation. But if there is one bit of love for sin left in his heart, he needs to stay before God, praying fervently, and confessing until the light doth shine. My father used to say, "It is not sin that condemns us; it is the love of sin."

Let us notice what John said about the love of sin: "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him. For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life, is not of the Father, but is of the world. And the world passeth away, and the lust thereof: but he that doeth the will of God abideth for ever" (1 John 2:15-17).

Often I pass moving picture advertisements and see young children, men and sometimes women, standing and admiring the picture of some very nearly nude woman. This is an example of the lust of the eye. If David had been blind, it would have been better for him; but the lust of the eye caused him to commit adultery and murder. The lust of the flesh and lust of the eye caused him great sorrow afterward. The wages of sin is death. Get your Bible, search it and find the death David's sin caused him and his family.

May God have mercy on the sin-soaked nations for the lust of the eyes and the lust of the flesh, the lust after Hollywood's rottenness, the rottenness of sin that is seen on television. The lust of the eyes and the lust of the flesh run Hollywood and television. Now there are some good things that come to the home by way of television, but there is so much that is making harlots, murderers, beer drinkers, etc. Everything that comes from Hollywood is bad—I never saw anything good come out of Hollywood. It is the cesspool of hell.

We have some preachers who spend more time for the lust of their flesh than they do in the study of the Bible. We have deacons who follow in the footprints of these preachers. I believe out of the depth on my heart that we need an old-fashioned altar service with preachers, deacons, Sunday school superintendents and teachers confessing and repenting their sins until there would be an old-fashioned wet-eyed Holy Ghost revival. This is not popular preaching, but it will stand at the judgment bar of God.

ONE OF JESUS' LAMBS

By Pearl Parks

THE sun shone underneath the drawn shade making a shiny stripe on the polished floor near Bernice's bed. When she awoke, she rubbed her eyes and tried to get up, but the pain in her ankle made her lay back quickly. At first she could not think what it meant, then she remembered.

Yesterday she had fallen and broken her ankle, a bad break, the doctor said. And now here she was in a small white bed in a ward in the Children's Hospital.

Bernice frowned when she thought all this over. Why did she have to fall anyway? Then why did the doctor make her come to this old hospital? You could not call your mother any minute you wanted to, here. The nurses could not sit and read to you by the hour either, nor be changing your books for you every little while. She was not at all happy and she was not going to be any pleasanter than she felt, even if Mother had said for her to be "a little lady."

Bernice looked at the other beds in the room. There were three others. Two of the girls were younger than Bernice and one was about twelve, her age. They were waking up and speaking to each other. When Bernice looked at them, they smiled, but she closed her eyes and turned her head. She did not feel like smiling and talking and they could just leave her alone she thought.

Just then a trim little nurse came into the room with a pitcher of water and put some into a basin for each child. She spoke to them pleasantly and the others chattered away merrily. But not Bernice.

"How's our new girl this fine morning?" Miss Lane asked Bernice as she poured her water. "Have you learned the names of your little friends yet? This one on your right is Ruth, and that one is Linda, and the other is Georgia. I hope you have a good time telling each other about the things you like to do." Miss Lane pretended not to notice Bernice's unfriendliness as she hustled through her work and left the ward.

All morning the little girls tried to get Bernice to talk to them and join in their games but she would only shake her head or answer crossly. At last they gave up and left her alone. When visiting hours came in the afternoon, Bernice's mother came to see her.

"I thought you might like to write to some of your friends so I brought you a tablet and pencil." Mrs. Thompson gave Bernice the parcel but it failed to cheer her much.

After her mother had gone, Bernice tried to write some letters but she did not feel happy enough for that so she spent her time drawing pictures.

The next morning when Miss Lane came to get them ready for breakfast, small Linda was in pain and was crying softly.

"Here, here, this won't do," the nurse said, "Why, look here, what is this?" She reached over to Bernice's bed and picked up some pictures, and handed them to Linda. "Well, now, would you just look at that, isn't that sweet!" she said pointing out a picture of a little girl hugging a doll.

"Oh, oh," Linda took the picture and her pain was forgotten. "Did you draw these, Bernice?" How can you do it?" As Linda exclaimed over them, the other girls wanted to see them, too.

Bernice felt less cross when she saw how the children, and even the nurse, liked her pictures. She managed a smile as she said, "I always liked to draw. When Mother found out I was pretty good at drawing, she let me take special drawing lessons."

"If you like pictures, maybe you would like to see my scrapbook," Ruth said, and she tossed the book to Bernice's bed.

The scrapbook was full of pictures of the life of Jesus. Bernice liked their bright colors. She looked at it a long time. Then she asked, "Where did you get your book, Ruth?"

"My Sunday school class made it for me," Ruth told her.

"Sunday school? Do you go to Sunday school?" Bernice wanted to know.

"Yes. I never miss when I'm well. Don't you go?"

"I've been a few times. My folks say they have to rest on Sunday. If we don't stay at home, we go on a picnic or to see somebody. We nearly always have company when we're home."

"Draw me one of those pictures, Bernice," Linda begged, breaking into the girls' conversation.

"Me, too," chimed in Georgia. "Won't you please, Bernice?"

"All right," Bernice said. "I'll draw all of you one."

So Bernice began to copy the pictures in the scrapbook for the girls. There were three that she liked best. They were the pictures of "Jesus Blessing the Children," "The Good Shepherd," and "The Lost Sheep."

"What are these pictures about?" she asked Ruth as she worked on her drawings.

"Oh, they're all about Jesus. But Miss White, my Sunday school teacher, is coming to see me soon and I'll have her tell you what they mean. She can tell better than I can."

The more Bernice looked at the pictures and read the Scriptures below them, the more she wished the Sunday school teacher would come. Then one day she came. Bernice liked her for her cheery smile and the understanding look in her eyes. She spoke to all the girls and learned their names. After she was seated, Ruth said,

"Miss White, we want you to tell us the stories that these pictures are about," and she showed her Bernice's drawings.

"These are nice drawings," Miss White said as she took the pictures. "Who did the work?"

"Bernice did," Ruth told her.

"And she would like to know what they mean."

Miss White looked at Bernice with great interest, and with a prayer in her heart she tried to explain the pictures.

Picking up the picture of Jesus carrying the lamb, Miss White told the girls that Jesus called Himself a shepherd, and His people, sheep. And as a shepherd takes the best care of his sheep, so Jesus cares for His people and watches over them so that no harm comes to them. "A good shepherd will give his life for his sheep," she said. "And that is just what Jesus did. He died that we might be saved."

She next picked up the copy of "The Lost Sheep." "Here is a sheep in trouble. I imagine it was a disobedient sheep who would not feed where the shepherd led it but thought it knew better where the good pasture was. It ran away from the flock and got lost, and caused the shepherd a great deal of trouble hunting for it. I expect there are a lot of people just like that sheep, don't you?" Miss White smiled at the girls as she took up the last picture.

"Now here is one of the nicest stories in Jesus life, I think," she continued. "You remember how the mothers were bringing the children to Jesus for Him to bless them and His disciples told them to leave them alone. But when Jesus learned about it, He told them to let little children come unto Him, and forbid them not, for of such was the Kingdom of heaven. He loves the children and wants to bless every one. You will be happy anywhere if you come to Him and let Him bless you."

As Miss White told the girls good-by, Bernice reached for her hand. "You make me want to come to Sunday school," she said.

"And we want you to come," Miss White covered Bernice's hand with her own. "Jesus wants to make you one of His lambs. Tell Him you're sorry for every wrong and ask Him to give you a new heart. I'll be back to see you again, soon," she said as she left the room.

Bernice kept thinking of the teacher's words. She looked at the pictures over and over and studied their Scripture verses. The wrong things she had done, the falsehoods, disobeying her father and mother, cross words she had spoken and many other things came to her mind and made a heavy load on her breast.

One night she dreamed of sheep, lots of them, running and bleating. Some of them were following a shepherd but some were hurrying another direction toward a dangerous path. One of these sheep started to slip down the steep hillside. The sheep became herself and she was falling, falling—She cried out for help and awoke. Her heart was pounding and her hands were cold and damp. She began to pray, remembering what Miss White had told her.

After confessing everything that came before her, Bernice asked the Lord for a new heart and though she did not know what to expect, He was faithful, and lifted the heavy load and gave her such happiness that she was satisfied.

The next day, Miss White, who had felt she must visit Bernice, came to the hospital.

"I'm one of Jesus' lambs, now!" Bernice cried as soon as she saw the teacher.

"I believe it," Miss White smiled understandingly. "I knew it when I saw you. Your happy face told me so."—The Junior Class Paper.

worthy students obtain their education in a Christian college.

The second thing you and your auxiliary can do for the college is to help us on our library. We are building a college that will be recognized by other colleges throughout the state and to do this we must maintain a standard junior college library. The accrediting committee visited us last week and advised us that we needed 1,200 additional volumes in our library. These are specific volumes which we must buy. They will cost an average of $5.00 each. We are putting name plates in each new book to acknowledge the donor. I am sure your auxiliary will want to send $5.00 for a book, and perhaps a number of individuals would like to give the price of a book, also.

We are here to provide a Christian college for our sons and daughters. Your prayers, gifts of food and money for new books are very important at this time. We shall be looking forward to hearing from you soon.

Sincerely yours,
W. Burkette Raper

An Open Letter to the Woman's Auxiliaries

There are two projects that you and the members of your woman's auxiliary can sponsor that will greatly help us here at Mount Olive Junior College, Mount Olive, North Carolina.

First, you can have a pounding for our cafeteria. In order to permit as many of our young people as possible to attend college, we put our student charges as low as possible. We only charge our regular students $1.00 per day for three good meals. A large number of our students work at the college to earn even this amount. The only way we can keep our food cost down for our students is for you to help us.

We can use any food items in our cafeteria you use at home: canned goods (fruits and vegetables), flour, meal, sugar, lard, potatoes, meats (cured or frozen). Ask all the members of your church and Sunday school to share in your pounding for the college. The bringing of these food items to the college will give you an excellent opportunity to visit us. Through your gifts of food, you will be helping many

Washington Church, Host to N. C. Albemarle District Convention

The Albemarle District Woman's Auxiliary Convention of North Carolina met with the Washington, North Carolina, Free Will Baptist Church on October 18, 1956. The theme for the day was "Profitable Inspiration." It was truly a day of inspiration and visitation as well as one of the business for the Lord.

There were thirteen auxiliaries represented at the convention. The Rev. J. C. Giffin brought the morning message on "Inspirational Doctrine." Miss Juanita Dunn conducted a special survey of missionary needs and opportunities of our day in the field of French West Africa.

The next convention will meet with the Belhaven, North Carolina, Church in the spring.

Mrs. Cecil J. Waters, Secretary

Plymouth, N. ## Camp Mount Bethel, Ashburn, Georgia Summer Sessions of 1956

Bebe Orvin—Camp Mount Bethel is a very inspiration place for young people to go during the summer for their vacation. At camp you study the Bible and teachings of Christ. We study music and learn many new songs. We meet many new friends and learn how to get along with other people.

The meals at camp are nourishing and are no different from the meals your own mother cooks. The cooks at camp design a well-balanced diet to do our health the most good.

Thursday night at camp is the most inspirational night of all. Some of the camp students and advisors put on a play and give every person the chance to accept Christ as their personal Saviour.

If you have never taken part in doing something for Jesus, I'm sure you will before leaving the camp, or either you will be burdened by your conscience.

Betty Walters—For the past five years I have spent my vacations at Camp Mount Bethel. And to me there is no other place half so wonderful. The opportunity to get acquainted with other Christian young people should be and is very inspirational and encouraging to other Christians. Truly Camp Mount Bethel is the right place for such communications.

We have a place at the camp called the Rock. I feel that the Rock is one of the most spirit-filled and heart-warming spots on the campus. Many times, I've gone there to pray and left so many burdens behind. There on the Rock so many young people have yielded their hearts and lives to Christ, and still more have rededicated their lives to Him.

I know that I, as well as others who have spent some time at the camp, can say, "Truly Camp Mount Bethel has been a real blessing to me."

Glenda Etheridge—I think Camp Mount Bethel is a wonderful place for young and old people. We have separate sessions for young people and the last session is for the young and old people combined. It is called the old camp meeting.

We had two weeks of music taught by Rev. I. J. Blackwelder of Ayden, North Carolina. To me he is a great teacher and a blessing to our camp. All the young people enjoyed Rev. S. T. Shutes as the playground director. He made sure that everyone enjoyed playing tennis, volley ball, horse shoe and softball. We learned how to play with other people better.

To me the most inspirational services were the vesper services which we had on the hill above the camp. The sun set we saw there was so beautiful. At vesper services we testified for the Lord and told of our experiences as Christians.

We had many to accept Christ while we were there. We had charge of the program on Thursday. All the campers rededicated their lives during an altar call. Seven were saved during the altar call.

This is just a sketch of what the camp is and what it means to me. I have had wonderful experiences there each year.

Janice Harrell—Six years ago a young girl eleven years old went to Camp Mount Bethel for her very first time. This girl was quite carried away with the camp and so each year since then she has returned to spend a glorious week with other Christian boys and girls. You may wonder why I know this. Well, it is because I am that girl.

This past year at camp I felt closer to the Lord than I have ever felt before. There was one part about camp that I enjoyed best of all and that I thought was most profitable to the other young people. This part were the worship services that we had each day. There were three main worship services. The first one was at 8:30 in the morning at the Tabernacle. The second one was at 7:00 p. m. in the afternoon, following supper, and was held at the Rock. The third service was the preaching hour at 8:00 o'clock each night. The young people conducted the services on Sundays and Thursday nights. Just before we went to bed each night we held separate devotions in each dormitory.

One of the highlights of the worship service that week was that one night after the services a young girl requested to go back to the Rock to pray. Permission was granted and several girls went with her to the Rock. That night on the Rock she gloriously gave her life to Christ. This made us all very happy.

Camp Mount Bethel holds a blessing for everyone who goes there, whether it is for a week or a day. If you have an opportunity to go or to send your children or to help someone else to go, by all means do it.

The young Christian today usually at sometime in his life says, "Well, am I the only young Christian in the world today? Aren't there any more young Christians left besides me?" At Camp Mount Bethel you have the opportunity of meeting other Christian boys and girls. There you help each other become better Christians for Christ. If we had more Christian camps in the world today where we could learn about Christ and His work, then we as Christians could turn this world upside down for Christ.

I thank the Lord for such a wonderful place as Camp Mount Bethel. Won't you give your support in making the Camp a larger place so that more young people will be able to attend each year.

Mt. Olive College Launches 'Dollars for Books' Drive

A "dollars for books" drive has been launched by Mount Olive College, Mount Olive, North Carolina, as it moves at a fast pace toward accreditation.

Contributions of $5 are asked from each donor to add 1,200 more volumes to the school library.

The volumes will bring the library total to 4,000 approved books, the number required of an accredited school.

The volumes now needed by the college are those acting as student reference books in specific fields.

College Librarian, Mildred Councill, says the type of book required could not be supplied through an all-book drive such as the one conducted by the college a year ago.

A book will be purchased with each $5 contribution to the drive and the name of the donor will be placed in the book his money bought.

A complete listing of all books purchased from contributions will be kept, so a donor can locate the book he placed on the shelves of the library.

When North Carolina College Conference examiners surveyed the college two weeks ago, they said if the college was to be accredited 4,000 approved books would have to be on the library shelves "within a short period of time." And the college is launching the drive immediately as it hopes to get probationary acceptance from the college conference during the conference's November meeting.

Accreditation is viewed as tremendously important to the college's immediate growth, particularly with respect to veterans (continued on page sixteen)

The Beatitudes

(Lesson for November 18)

Lesson: Matthew 5:1-12.

Golden Text: Matthew 5:6.

I. INTRODUCTION

In today's lesson Jesus answers more fully the question which Micah proposed, "Wherewith shall I come before the LORD, . . ." (Micah 6:6). The Beatitudes, although the introductory words to Jesus' Sermon on the Mount, are statements of profound Christian truth. They follow one another in logical sequence, giving distinct but connecting attributes of Christian attitude and conduct.

Jesus says that those who possess the qualities which He enumerates are blessed. By this He means that they are highly favored, blissful, joyful and in possession of spiritual happiness.—The Bible Student (F. W. B.).

II. HELPFUL HINTS

1. The Lord always has something to tell His disciples that He does not want the world to hear (Vv. 1, 2).

2. Material riches, as Jesus puts it, have nothing to do with the happiness of those who are poor in spirit (Vs. 3).

3. There is no comfort like that which comes to those who mourn because of their sins (Vs. 4).

4. The greatest inheritance ever promised to man is bequeathed by the Lord to those who are meek (Vs. 5).

5. Nothing will turn a sinner to the Lord like an intense hunger and thirst for righteousness (Vs. 6).

6. Were it not for God's mercy we would all be damned, and unless we show mercy we will be damned (Vs. 7).

7. It is easy for those who are pure in heart to see the Lord revealed in His blessed Word (Vs. 8).

8. Because they are like the great Peace-maker, the children of God are called peace-makers too (Vs. 9).

8. Many who suffer have no hope of heaven, for they do not suffer for the sake of righteousness (Vv. 10-12).—The Bible Teacher (F. W. B.).

III. ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

1. The Beatitudes have a twofold message. First of all they give us a picture of the character of Christ. Did you ever see such an individual as is here described? Of course not; but could you even imagine a human being with all these qualities? The world has seen Him only once, and that was when Christ was on earth. In Him every one of these qualities was present in perfection. He is the Blessed Man of the first Psalm, and He fits this description perfectly. In the next place the Beatitudes are supposed to find a partial fulfillment in the character of the Christian of the present day.—The Bible Expositor.

2. Every child of God wants to be God's blessed man but few are willing to pay the price.

Being God's blessed one indicates a yield- edness to a life of separation. God's great men have always been rather lonely men. Enoch walked with God alone. Abram was called to leave his kindred and his father's house. Noah alone, was found righteous, and shared the divine confidence. Daniel did not seem to have much companionship. The three Hebrew children stood alone in defiance before the king's idol. Yet, all these were God's blessed men. And their fellowship with God was worth infinitely more than the human fellowship they lost.

God's blessed ones have certain standards to uphold. They walk not in the counsel of the ungodly, nor stand in the way (with) sinners, nor do they sit in the seat of the scornful.

3. "Blessed are the poor in spirit; for theirs is the kingdom of heaven."

The word here rendered "blessed," Greek students tell us, points to what is inward, and so might be rendered "happy" in a lofty sense. It refers to happiness which is not governed by what takes place without; that is, by what happens. It is a happiness that comes from being, from an inward attitude or spirit.

The word poor (ptochos) is the ordinary word expressing poverty. It is applied to Lazarus (Luke 16:20-22), and rendered beggar. It is evident that Jesus is not laying a premium upon the absence of spirituality, but rather upon a humble and honest recognition of one's spiritual impoverishment. For example, of the two men who went up to the temple to pray (Luke 18: 10), Jesus' favor was extended to the one who was without pretensions, rather than to the man who sought to gain favor by reciting his good deeds.—Selected.

4. Blessed are the merciful.—Mercy is one element in true goodness, but among the Pharisees it was almost entirely lacking because of their theory that all suffering was a punishment for special sins. This theory largely killed out sympathy and pity, as it does today among eastern peoples who accept it. Those who are sympathetic and perform deeds of mercy will be treated with consideration by their fellow men and will be rewarded by God.

Take time to read Luke 16:19-31: The rich man likely thought Lazarus was a great sinner and so deserved no mercy.

5. Christians should be different. (See the lesson topic.) A certain titled British gentleman was converted. He loved the Lord a great deal, but he was not well taught in the Scriptures. He thought that he could continue in some of his worldly engagements and still bear a good testimony.

On an occasion some weeks after he gave his heart to the Lord, this man accepted an invitation to a very worldly party. Upon his arrival, one of the guests greeted him with these words: "I'm so glad to see you and to know that it isn't true."

"I beg your pardon," he replied, "but I think I don't quite understand you."

"Why," said the other guest, "rumors were around that you had been converted a few weeks ago; I'm so glad you're here and to know, therefore, that the rumor was unfounded."

"But it is true!" the dumbfounded man ejaculated. Hesitating a moment, he added: "I see that you think this party is no place for a Christian. Apparently you are right. You will never again see me at such an affair, nor will anyone else." And, bidding his host and hostess adieu, he went home.—Selected.

6. Christ has words of special comfort and blessing for those who are persecuted for righteousness' sake. Though the disciples had not yet experienced persecution, Jesus well knew what was coming. At a later time he told James and John that they would indeed drink of his cup, and he gave Peter to understand that he would die a martyr's death. Now Jesus strives to prepare his followers for the opposition which awaits them. He says that those who are reviled and slandered for His sake have reason to rejoice greatly because of the reward which will be theirs. The principal recompense of which he speaks lay in the future. "Great is your reward in heaven," and that would compensate them a thousandfold for unjust sufferings here. But there is also a present reward. "Theirs is the kingdom of heaven," not only in the future, but here and now. Those who endured persecution would enjoy the favor of God, and would experience a development in their own souls.—Selected.

wanting to go to school under the GI Bill of Rights.

College officials said that some 15 or 20 veterans have expressed interest in entering the school when the institution becomes veteran approved.

Veteran approval is based upon the action of the North Carolina College Conference.

While the college has not yet been accredited, credits there are transferrable to Atlantic Christian College and East Carolina College.

Contributions should be mailed to Mount Olive Junior College, Mount Olive, North Carolina, and marked for the book fund.

Bible College Improvement Program

This is my first report to our people as your promotional agent for Free Will Baptist Bible College improvement program.

Before leaving my church in Kinston, North Carolina, I received $300 cash from different organizations in the church for the improvement program.

Since coming to Nashville to assume my duties in promoting the program, I have made a number of contacts and my heart has been happy to see our people eager to respond to the need of our Bible College. I have found our pastors and people ready to join with us in promoting the program, as is evidenced by the following.

My first meeting was with the Fellowship Church in Flat River, Missouri. There I met a number of pastors from that area, and as a result of that meeting more than $1,000 was promised by the pastors and churches to be paid by April 1, 1957.

My next meeting was with the Madison County Quarterly Meeting at Mill Creek, Missouri. There I found the churches and pastors very cooperative and $1,300 was pledged to be paid by April 1.

At the South Side Church in St. Louis, Missouri, we enjoyed another time of fellowship and have assurance that they will give no less than $1,000 to the improvement program. We had all the pastors from the St. Louis area at that meeting except Brother Rogers who was away in a revival meeting.

In northeast Missouri we held services at Kirksville, Martinstown, and New Harmony churches.

When we left Missouri we had in cash and pledges well over $4,000. We returned to Nashville Monday, October 22, and on Thursday went to Church Hill, Tennessee, to attend the Tennessee State Association and enjoy a time of fellowship. Again the pastors and churches were very cooperative and about $1,300 was promised on the program.

I have found nothing but the warmest of welcome, and the finest of cooperation from any of our people. The need is great, but I have no doubt that our people are going to meet the need. It is not too much to expect $44,000 in five months. I urge you to pray for continued success. Pastors, cooperate with me in getting this program before the people.

The special improvement program checks are now ready and are being sent out. If you fail to receive enough of the checks to meet your need, write me or just write to Free Will Baptist Bible College and checks will be sent to you by return mail. We are asking for $50,000 to be paid by April 1. This is the first goal as set by the board of trustees. Let's do our best to reach the first goal and then plan the next one in the will of the Lord.

I will be glad to help you in any way that I can, so feel free to write me.

Yours for a greater Bible College,
James F. Miller

WOMAN'S AUXILIARY

Thomaston, Ga.—The new officers of the First Free Will Baptist Church met in the home of the new president, Mrs. K. V. Shutes, on Tuesday, October 23, to discuss the plans for the coming year. The president discussed the duties of each officer and brought out many other inspirational truths. The officers moved the date of the auxiliary's next regular meeting up one week since it had previously been planned on the same date of the state auxiliary meeting at Camp Bethel. Refreshments were served by the hostess, and the ladies present enjoyed a fellowship period.

Pharisee and Publican

Pliny A. Wiley

Wichita, Kansas

Two men went into the temple to pray
In the Holy City on Sabbath Day.

They were much alike in forum and mart,
In heart and spirit, poles apart.

A Pharisee one, of the strictest clan.
The other, naught but a publican.

The Pharisee stood erect as a rod;
Disdainful of men, presumptuous to God.

Proudly he stood, with head unbowed;
His prayer legalistic, long and loud.

"Twice in every week I fast.
I strictly tithe my income vast."

"God, I thank Thee," he said and then,
"That I am not like other men."

A murmur through the temple swept.
The fire on the altar smoldered and slept.

The Pharisee left with countenance grim.
An evil phantom kept step with him.

The publican stood among the rest
And smote his hands upon his breast.

Contrite and humble, deeply bowed;
His prayer was neither long nor loud.

With faltering voice they heard him begin,
"God, be merciful of my sin."

Brightly glowed the altar fire.
Men seemed to hear an angel choir.

The publican's face was all serene
As one who sees a hallowed scene.

The publican left, and the peace of God
Illumined the pathway that he trod.

—The Church Advocate.

COME, YE THANKFUL PEOPLE, COME

Come, ye thankful people come,
Raise the song of harvest home!
All is safely gathered in,
Ere the winter storms begin:
God, our Maker, doth provide,
For our wants to be supplied:
Come to God's own temple, come,
Raise the song of harvest home.

We ourselves are God's own field
Fruit unto His praise to yield;
Wheat and tares together sown
Unto joy or sorrow grown;
First the blade, and then the ear,
Then the full corn shall appear;
Lord of harvest! grant that we Wholesome grain and pure may be.

For the Lord our God shall come,
And shall take His harvest home;
From His fields shall purge away
All that doth offend that day;
Give His angels charge at last
In the fire the tares to cast;
But the fruitful ears to store
In His garner evermore.

EDITORIAL

ASSOCIATIONAL AFFILIATIONS

In our last editorial we discussed congregation government as it should operate in our local churches. Although confining ourselves principally to the administration of local matters in that article, we inferred that our churches also affiliate themselves with other churches to form union meetings, conferences, associations and conventions.

By virtue of these affiliations in larger bodies, the churches derive benefits which would be denied them if they remained independent of others. They also accept responsibilities to the larger groups which call upon them to circumscribe their operations to conform to the basic principles of the larger groups if they wish to be members of the larger organizations.

Union Meetings: A church affiliates itself with a group of other churches of the same faith and order in a union meeting chiefly for the purpose of fellowship and inspiration. In these union meetings the delegates from the churches, together with ministers and visitors, make reports of the work done for Christ by their churches since the last union meeting—the unions usually convene quarterly. A program is arranged which allows not only for these reports and a discussion of projected plans for the future but also for a worship service conducted by some designated minister. The afternoon session of these union meetings is devoted to a discussion of some problems which are common to the churches.

As a general rule, the union meetings are not legislative bodies. They transact no business except that which pertains to their particular organization, such as election of officers and disbursement of funds which come to the union. However, they may pass resolutions which will go to the annual associations or conferences as recommendations.

District Meetings: Churches within a particular area of a state affiliate themselves in a district organization for legislative purposes. These organizations usually meet once a year at a specified time. Churches in some areas designate that the district meeting convene quarterly with elimination of union meetings. In such cases the quarterly session is legislative. These district organizations are called associations, conferences, quarterly meetings or yearly meetings.

The delegates elected by the local churches and sent to the district organization, together with the ministers belonging to the body, transact business within the authority granted in their constitution. This district body reviews the work of its member churches, exercises authority over its ministers as to qualifications, conduct and soundness of doctrine, and passes resolutions which it believes will further the cause that it expounds if adopted and administered by the churches.

The review of the work of the churches is made through a study of the report from each church, the report being made on a form furnished by the district body to the churches.

The district body has definite plans for supervising its ministers. If any member of a church makes known the fact that he is called of God to preach the gospel, his church takes the first action in his behalf. In some areas the local church grants the person a certificate of license to preach by majority vote of the number present in a regular church conference; in other areas the church votes endorsement of his call and recommends that he be examined for license by the ordaining council of the district body. Ministers are regularly ordained only by an ordaining council from the district body.

The district body usually has some educational qualifications which the ministers must meet before ordination. These qualications vary in different areas from no education at all to designate years of college work plus certain courses in Bible training. In every area with which we are acquainted, the candidate for ordination must pass an examination, oral or written, which is administered by the ordaining council of the district body.

Should reports of departure from the faith or of unchristian conduct on the part of an ordained minister be made, the ordaining council of the district body investigates the reports and makes recommendation to the district body concerning action which should be taken. If the minister's guilt is established, the district body will authorize cancellation of the minister's credentials to preach; if reports cannot be validated by sufficient evidence the charges against the minister are dropped.

The district body should offer constructive leadership to its affiliated churches by way of a planned program of activity and support. The program should consist in part, of the items recommended by the state and national organizations. The district body should interpret its program to the churches and recommend support, perhaps by setting forth a definite plan.

On the other hand, let it be remembered that the district body has no authority to interfere in the internal affairs of a church. If a church has a problem which seems to defy solution by its members, the church may call for a council from the district body to sit in its conference, as an advisory group, while a solution is sought. However, if a church takes action contrary to the will of the district officials, the only recourse which the district body has is to withdraw fellowship from the church. It cannot overrule the decision of the church, for the vote of the church is the voice of final authority regarding its affairs.

CRAGMONT NEEDS

While we were at Cragmont we had opportunity to see not only the service rendered by the institution but also the need for money to improve the buildings and facilities. We urge all the churches to give liberally to the institution.

Cragmont can reach and serve every department of North Carolina church work, it can also minister to every segment of our people in the state. In fact, it is reaching practically every department of the work: Sunday school, league, woman's auxiliary, youth in general, the ministers, families and individuals. However, not enough people are patronizing and supporting it. The possibilities there are almost unlimited if our people want to develop it.

The Word which was Sent

Rev. A. B. Bryan, Benson, North Carolina

THE entire seventeenth chapter of John is a prayer Christ prayed. He prayed for Himself, for His disciples and for the Church of the future. I know of no other prayer that one can trust more than this one. Here the Son of God prayed for us all. He said, "Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their word" (John 17:20).

In this chapter Christ prayer for safekeeping when He said, "... Holy Father, keep through thine own name those whom thou hast given me" (Vs. 11). He prayed for our joy when He said, "... that they might have my joy fulfilled in themselves" (Vs. 13). Christ also prayed for sanctification. "Sanctify them through thy truth: thy word is truth" (Vs. 17). This sanctification was twofold, meaning to devote or dedicate to His service and to make hold or pure. Christ prayed for the combined efforts of all Christians when He prayed these words: "... that they may be one, even as we are one" (Vs. 22).

Is such preaching popular today as Jesus did then? It was not popular then. It met with opposition then, and will be sure to meet the same today; however, He preached it. Such preaching is not popular today, but it is good for the soul and will bring results. When Christians awake to the truth that it is the Word in the strictest sense that gets the devil on the move, we will be able to get things done for the Lord. Then you can have a house clearing or a house filling, or maybe both. People will come to see what you are doing when you stop shopping with the devil. One of the greatest handicaps of the church today is that we have failed to take a stand. We have soft-peddled the gospel too long.

God gave the message He wanted the world to have. It needs nothing else. When we, as Christians, back up and take things for granted, the world does not get the message. I say this humbly, but it is really true. If every pulpit had the full gospel preached in it, there would be some poor compromising preachers without a job. When ministers fail to administer the Word, men go to hell every day because of their neglect. Why do we have so many church members on our church rolls who remain untouched. Hell is going to be decorated with church members who have only been baptized into church membership.

Christ gave to the sinner the very words He wanted him to have. His message was not to the Christian alone. He delivered a message of condemnation to the unsaved. John 3:18 says, "He that believeth on him is not condemned: but he that believeth not is condemned already, because he hath not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God." "... he that believeth not the Son shall not see life; but the wrath of God abideth on him" (John 3:36).

"Ye are of your father the devil, and the lusts of your father ye will do. ..." (John 8:44). Yes, destruction is ahead for the unsaved, for "The wicked shall be turned into hell, and all the nations that forget God" (Psalm 9:17). "Let God arise, let his enemies be scattered: let them also that hate him flee before him. As smoke is driven away, so drive them away: as wax melteth before the fire, so let the wicked perish at the presence of God" (Psalm 68:1, 2). "The LORD preserveth all them that love him: but all the wicked will he destroy" (Psalm 145:20). "... I will punish the world for their evil, and the wicked for their iniquity; and I will cause the arrogance of the proud to cease, and will lay low the haughtiness of the terrible" (Isaiah 13:11).

The place of destruction for the wicked will not be the luxurious gas chamber, the quick discharging of fire arms, or even the shattering of highpowered roadway and air machines. But it will be in hell, the place of fire and brimstone. "Let death seize upon them, and let them go down quick into hell: for wickedness is in their dwellings, and among them" (Psalm 55:15). "Ye serpents, ye generation of vipers, how can ye escape the damnation of hell?" (Matthew 23:33). Yet, some did not heed the fore, behold, I send unto you prophets, and wise men, and scribes: and some of them ye shall kill and crucify; and some of them warning, even though Jesus said, "Where shall ye scourge in your synagogues, and persecute them from city to city" (Matthew 23:34).

Persecuting, scourging and speaking evil of God's messengers happens time after time. After they do the best they can with what they have, they must change from place to place because of persecution and unnecessary gossip among carnal-minded church members. Well, we must let the Word speak for itself: "Hell from beneath is moved for thee to meet thee at thy coming: it stirreth up the dead for thee, even all the chief ones of the earth; ..." (Isaiah 14:9).

If you are an unsaved person, God's message is to you. If you are a Christian, God is going to weigh you by His Word and not by some little book which you think God might pull out of the pigeonhole of heaven and judge you by a few favors you have given to His church and to those on whose shoulders rest the greater responsibility of the progress of His Kingdom work upon earth.

WARNING!

Mrs. Edwin Roper
Belhaven, North Carolina

To the human race under heaven's sun,
I write this warning, God's will be done.
Beware of Satan! he's working fast,
To take the world in his own grasp.

It is not in dance halls, barrooms or like
He sticks around to stage a fight;
For they are his, he owns them all,
So he seeks better places to make his calls.

Most foremost in his cunning craft,
He goes to church to stir up strife;
Where he accuses the brethren, so to speak
Till gossip has discouraged the weak.

Then among the stronger children he goes,
With persecution, temptations and woes.
He deceives with little effort, I surmise,
The hearts of men to pay God's tithes.

Out in the world, he does the most
With false deception to the saved and lost.
Through false religion he's gaining sway,
Among the best of people here today.

He uses the Bible with question marks,
To hurl at people cutting darts.
With blinded eyes they think God's Word,
Only a myth, or partially inspired.

Dear God in heaven, I fervently pray,
Help man to walk the narrow way;
That leads to a heaven of peace and love
Directed by Thy infallible Word.

Peter, A Rock

Mrs. S. T. Dunning
Jakin, Georgia

THERE was a man whose name stands first in every list of the apostles: "Now the names of the twelve apostles are these: The first, Simon, who is called Peter, and Andrew his brother: James the son of Zebedee, and John his brother: Philip, and Bartholomew: Thomas, and Matthew the publican: James the son of Alphaeus, and Lebbaeus whose surname was Thaddaeus: Simon the Canaanite, and Judas Iscariot, who also betrayed him" (Matthew 10:2-4).

His name stood always at the head of the column. He was a man of impulse, a rushing energetic type of man. He was made up in such a way that the connections between his feelings and his will were close. The moment he felt an impulse he was on his feet acting. He moved first and thought it over later.

Let us notice the strength of such a nature, its weakness, and what the Lord can make of that sort of a man.

First, let us consider the strength of the man, Peter. The man who can make up his mind and act promptly in religious matters, in business, in political affairs, in the presence of danger, while other men are still thinking it over and talking about it, has a certain advantage. He strikes while the iron is hot.

Jesus, while here on earth, saw this man with a net in his hand fishing. He said to him, "Follow me and I will make you fishers of men" (Matthew 4:19). Peter had been taking fish for the market; now he was summoned to take men for the service of God. The man of impulse did not say, "I will be glad to think it over: I will consider your offer and let you know my decision in a few days." He decided then and there that he would do it. He forsook his net, leaving it there in the water, and followed Christ.

When Jesus was at Caesarea Philippi, He wondered how men were regarding His preaching; so He asked His disciples, "Whom do men say that I am?" The disciples answered that there was a wide difference of opinion on that point. They said, "Some say Elias, and others say one of the prophets." But Jesus said to them, "Whom say ye that I am?" Maybe all of the disciples had not fully decided yet just who this man whom they loved and followed was. But this man of impulse, Peter, burst out with these words of truth, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." He knew what he believed, and why he believed it. Flesh and blood had not revealed it unto him, but an inward experience of divine help. He was ready then and there to stake his all upon the claim that Jesus was the Saviour of the world. His mind was quite made up, and he stood ready to act.

"And Jesus answered and said unto him, Blessed art thou Simon Bar-jona: for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father which is in heaven. And I say also unto thee, That thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it. And I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven: and whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth shall be bound in heaven: and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven" (Matthew 16:17-19).

Many times the great teacher, Jesus Christ, spoke about forgiveness: "For if ye forgive men their trespasses, your heavenly Father will also forgive you: But if ye forgive men not their trespasses, neither will your father forgive your trespasses" (Matthew 6:14, 15).

On another occasion Jesus saw fit to go further in his teaching concerning forgiveness: "Moreover if thy brother shall trespass against thee, go and tell him his fault between thee and him alone: if he shall hear, thou hast gained thy brother" (Matthew 18:15). When Jesus had finished this teaching, Peter burst forth with these words, "... Lord, how oft shall my brother sin against me, and I forgive him? till seven times?" (Matthew 18:21). This to Peter seemed to be a liberal offer, as the number seven in the Bible is symbolic of completeness. But Jesus knew Peter and suggested a still higher standard of forgiveness, "... I say not unto thee, Until seven times but, Until seventy times seven" (Matthew 18:22). No doubt Peter accepted this teaching and would have at that moment forgiven any man who had wronged him seventy times seven if the man had asked him to do so.

Peter was the speaker for the twelve. As Jesus told of His approaching death and resurrection, Peter did not want to believe this could happen to this man whom he loved so much. As Jesus asked the twelve once when many of His disciples forsook

Him, "Will ye also go away," Peter answered Him, "Lord to whom shall we go? thou hast the words of eternal life."

On the Mount of Transfiguration, as the glorious Christ was revealed to Peter, James and John, Peter was so happy and overjoyed that he said unto Jesus, "... Lord, it is good for us to be here: if thou wilt, let us make here three tabernacles; one for thee, and one for Moses, and one for Elias" (Matthew 17:4). As these two great Bible characters appeared, beholding the transfiguration of Jesus, Moses representing the law while Elias represented the prophets, Peter just wanted to stay there with the glorified Christ.

In the second place, notice the weakness of the man, Peter. When one is carrying a pan of water and it slops over on one side, his hasty action in changing the level usually causes it to spill out on the other side. So is the man of impulse, he speaks and acts one way, and then a moment later in a hasty reaction, he changes to the opposite direction.

Here was Peter when he first met the Master, saying to Him, "... Depart from me: for I am a sinful man, O Lord" (Luke 5:8). He felt that he was not good enough to be in the same boat where Christ was. Then a little later we find him clinging closer than all the rest of the apostles when Jesus ate the Last Supper with His disciples. As He took a towel and a basin of water and washed their feet, Peter drew back and said, "Thou shalt never wash my feet." Then at a word from Christ, he melted into a desire for a still closer intimacy, "Lord no my feet only, but my hands and my head also." He wanted a regular bath.

Just before Christ was crucified, He told Peter that he would deny Him; and Peter said unto Jesus, "Though I should die with thee, yet will I not deny thee. ..." (Matthew 26:35). But Jesus told him just when he would deny Him: "... Verily I say unto thee, That this night, before the cock crow thou shalt deny me thrice" (Matthew 26:34). And we find in the Scriptures that Peter did just that.

What a strange combination of courage and cowardice, or rugged strength and instability. All of this goes with the impulsive temperament, such as was Peter's.

In the third place what use did the Lord make of such a man? He did not make light of his limitations, He knew what was in the man. He knew Peter and He did not refuse to enroll him as an apostle because he was of this kind of a nature. He set before him an open door into the storehouse from which he could secure the qualities which he lacked. He gave him a new name to live up to. His name had been Simon, but Jesus said, "Thou shalt be called Peter." When Jesus gave Peter that name, He was thinking not what the man had been, but of what he could be.

There is a rock of strength in fickle, impulsive nature; send for the Saviour that He may bring it out. Send for the supreme Artist who can change us all into His own likeness and image.

It takes the hand that was pierced to carve the divine image upon any life, but His grace is sufficient if men will only have it so. When the sun shines through a stained glass window, it does not make all the colors exactly alike. It brings out more fully the loveliness of each one of the various shades. So divine grace brings out a finer way the personal traits in every life. God deals with all men not in terms of what they are, but in terms of that which He sees is possible for them to become.

When the trials came, Peter showed himself a coward and a quitter. But let us read on, we have not come to the end of the chapter of his life story yet. Now when the day of Pentecost was fully come, Peter became a new Peter, he was filled with the Holy Spirit and he could really fill the mission that Jesus had had for him when He said, "Follow me." This great Pentecostal sermon that Peter preached touched many people, and three thousand souls were saved.

Some days later, when the people saw the boldness of Peter and John, they took knowledge of them that had been with Jesus. Somehow these two men had caught the spirit of that matchless life. There was a certain quality in them that was Christ-like. And when the Jewish officials urged them not to speak any further in the name of Christ, Peter flatly refused to be bound by their command. Then Peter and the other apostles said, "We ought to obey God rather than men." Peter was carrying on; he was showing himself indeed: "Peter, a rock."

FIBBING TO THE LORD

C. Alexander Dolph

ILL go where You want me to go—I'll say what You want me to say—I'll be what You want me to be."

A friend of mine tells me of once being in a prayer meeting where the words of this hymn were sung very heartily. He so entered into the spirit of the song that he made the words of it his very own. He was so inspired by them that he fairly walked on air on his homeward journey.

When he had covered about half the distance he noticed by the street light an unsaved neighbor standing by his gate as if waiting for someone to meet him there. God's voice came to my friend, "Speak to that man concerning his soul. Now is your chance to make good the sentiment of the hymn which so inspired you." But his reaction was a cowardly shrinking and a feeling that he could not do it. Said he:

"I was greatly humbled by my failure to make good the resolution made in the church while under strong spiritual influence. I passed by with only the usual greeting of a neighbor. I afterward learned that this neighbor had been thinking about his need of a Saviour as I was coming down the street, and he had been prepared to at least discuss the matter with any Christian in whom he had confidence."

I was relating this incident to a field secretary of the Christian organization and he told me of a somewhat similar incident, though with a different ending. He said:

"Before I became a minister I was building a new home. Looking out the window I saw an unsaved neighbor driving his team as he walked behind them. God spoke to me, telling me that I should go out and speak to that neighbor concerning his soul's salvation. I hesitated till he had gone by, but the urge was so strong that I put on my hat and coat and followed him to his home a few blocks away. He was just unhitching his team when I came along. When I told him of the urge I had experienced, tears came into his eyes and he said, 'As I passed your home I was thinking that, as you were a Christian man I wished you would happen out and talk to me about how to become a Christian.'

"'Well, I'm here,' I said, 'and will do the best I can at it.' Whereupon I got out my little Testament and pointed him to a few plain passages of Scripture. The result was that he accepted Christ by faith and remained a Christian as long as I knew him."

The third experience is one of my own. It was in the state of Michigan and the blue clay of that section was at a stage that made travel well-nigh impossible. As I sat in my home an urge came upon me to visit a home two miles out in the country and talk to a young man of that home, seeking to win him for the Lord. I knew that it would be a trying trip and that the only way I could get there with safety would be on horse back, but feeling sure that it was the Lord's will I secured a strong saddle pony and set out.

The family composed the stepmother and two stepsons, and all were home when I arrived. As the stepmother was a Christian woman I felt free to talk about becoming a Christian to the young man. He was in a receptive mood and acted as if it was just a natural thing for me to be interested in his soul's welfare. I knew that his own mother had been a devout Christian woman and so, after pressing the claims of Christ upon him, I said that not only would Christ be pleased but his mother would have rejoiced in his salvation and their final meeting in heaven.

He broke into tears as he answered:

"I know she would have been pleased and I do accept her Saviour as mine." After prayer I went home feeling that it had paid well to heed the promptings of the Spirit. The young man joined the church at the first opportunity and was still serving the Lord Jesus Christ the last time I heard of him.

In each of the cases I have recounted the Lord had spoken to the unsaved one before He had sent the messenger. It was the same principle on which He dealt with Philip and the eunuch. The same principle He will use with men today if they will heed His voice.

It is said that a certain man asked a Christian worker if he believed that God still speaks to men. The answer was, "Yes, but men keep up such a materialistic din that they can't hear Him." While this statement contains truth it is likewise and equally true that many do hear Him above the materialistic din, but deliberately ignore His call as did the man who passed up his opportunity with the man at the gate, even though he had said in the hymn, "I'll go where You want me to go, and say what You want me to say." They fib to the Lord.—Gospel Herald.

Church Conference

Freedom of conscience depends on the amount of true freedom exercised in the government of the church. And freedom of church government depends on how well the membership guards this freedom. If Christians had always guarded the freedom and independence of the church there never would have been any other kind of church government but congregational like that of your church.

The business of the church belongs to you the congregation, therefore you should be in your church conferences, and take an active part, and teach your children this great truth of freedom of conscience.—The Announcer, Trinity F. W. B. Church, Fort Worth, Texas.

A man who boasts about his ancestors confesses that he belongs to a family that is better dead than alive.

The mind is like the stomach. It's not how much you put into it that counts, but how much it digests.

Pleasant Acres Mission Organized Into Church

Pleasant Acres Free Will Baptist Mission located near Morehead City, North Carolina, became the Pleasant Acres Free Will Baptist Church on a recent night when members met at the home of Mr. and Mrs.

E. B. Hill with members of the Executive Committee of the Eastern Conference of North Carolina. The Rev. J. C. Griffin presided over the meeting, and the Rev. David Hansley, chairman of the committee, conducted the business session. The Rev. J. W. Alford, also a member of the committee, read the resolutions compiled by the state board of missions.

The following officers were elected for the church: Joseph Smith, E. B. Hill and Ashford P. Dennis, trustees; James E. Davidson, clerk; William F. Griffin, treasurer; L. H. Wetherington and the Rev. Earl Hansen, deacons; Mr. Smith, Mrs. Hill and Mr. Wetherington, finance committee.

The Rev. Mr. Griffin was elected as temporary pastor and the name of Pleasant Acres was accepted by the committee as the permanent name for the church. Mr. Griffin, as pastor, presented a Bible to the church, urging the members to consult, read and study the Bible in all phases of the church work and use it as a guide to Christian service.

The statements of the Free Will Baptist doctrine and Articles of Faith were read by the Rev. Mr. Hassley; and the Rev. Mr. Lloyd Vernon, another member of the committee, read and discussed the covenant as adopted by the Free Will Baptists of North Carolina.

The committee voted to accept Pleasant Acres Church as a member of the Eastern Conference and the Fifth Eastern District of the Free Will Baptists. The members pledged their support to the work of the local, district, state and national organizations and the Rev. Mr. Alford gave the prayer of dedication.

The hymn, "Blest Be The Tie That Binds," was sung by the 30 members present and Mr. Davidson gave the closing prayer.

New Church at Sacramento, California

On October 4, 1956, a new church was organized at Sacramento, California. Attending the organizational meeting from the Modesto, California, Free Will Baptist Church were Joe Mooneyham, O. H. Doss and J. A. Roberts. It is reported that these attendants were quite impressed with the fact that the 26 charter members of the new church are all loyal, consistent tithers.

Sunday School Training Course Conducted

Christian Home Free Will Baptist Church of Blountstown, Florida, was privileged to have Rev. William J. Mishler, promotional secretary for the National Sunday School Board, conduct a Sunday School Training Course during the week of October 22-26.

The following churches of the Salem Association were represented: Abes Springs, Traveler's Rest, Cottdale and Christian Home. There was an average attendance of 35 during this class of instruction, which was enjoyed by everyone who attended.

The church reports: "It was indeed a blessing to be able to attend these meetings and everyone present enjoyed the messages, which were very instructive and inspirational.

"Again, we realize the great importance of the work of our Sunday school in not only the training of our youth, but the adults as well."

A Meeting in the Air

Philip B. Marquart, M. D.

SINCE he became a pilot, Bob had made a practice of speaking to each new co-pilot about his soul. On this flight, however, Bob knew that Jerry, his co-pilot, was already saved. That had been a recent experience which was fresh in their minds. So, as they zoomed along over their commercial route, they fell to talking of the wonderful Friend they had in Jesus. Both boys recalled the time, eight months ago, when they had flown together for the first time. Bob had spoken to Jerry about the Lord Jesus. Jerry, a bit discomfited, had listened respectfully, but would not accept the Saviour. Bob wondered about his failure with Jerry, and forthwith put him on his prayer list.

Six months later, when Jerry was transferred to New York, he was thinking more and more seriously about his salvation. As it happened, another Christian pilot in New York invited Jerry to go to church one Sunday. Jerry went with him for two successive Sundays. On the third Sunday, Jerry had to attend church alone, because the other pilot was away. He answered the invitation to accept and confess Christ and was filled with the joy of salvation so that he had a good testimony when his friend returned. Following another transfer, Bob and Jerry were flying together again.

They had prayer together as they flew along—asking that the Lord might use them to lead some soul to Christ. The "amen" was barely over before the stewardess opened the door.

"There's a passenger out here who would like to borrow a Bible," she said to Bob, "I knew you would have one."

Bob handed her his much worn Bible, with a questioning look. "Come back and tell us about it," he said.

After an interval, the stewardess returned. It seemed, she informed the pilot, that one passenger was attempting to explain the way of salvation to another passenger who was very much interested.

"Here," said Jerry, "Let's send them a message."

He tore off a blank sheet of the ship's log and wrote down: "We're both of us saved. Are you? Signed—Pilot and Co-Pilot."

The stewardess took the note to the passengers, and shortly she returned.

"He's having trouble explaining salvation to the passengers," she declared. "He wants one of you to come back and help him."

Jerry went back, showed the passenger how to be saved, and led him to Christ. His prayer and Bob's of a few moments before was already answered. This man had met the Lord in the air before the time.—Gospel Herald.

Questions and Answers ON THE BIBLE

Conducted by J. F. BARROW
3824 Richland Avenue, Nashville 5, Tennessee

Question: Please explain, "And the LORD God said, Behold, the man is become as one of us, to know good and evil: and now, lest he put forth his hand, and take also of the tree of life, and eat, and live forever" (Genesis 3:22); in the light of, "And God said, Let us make man in our image, after our likeness: and let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth, and over every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth" (Genesis 1:26). How does being made in the image and likeness of God (1:26) differ from "... the man is become as one of us, to know good and evil" (3:22)?—Rev. G. Thompson, 2108 Saddler Avenue, Nashville, Tennessee.

Answer: There are several views held by prominent commentators on this subject. H. C. Leupold, D. D., in Barnes' Notes on Genesis, Page 180, makes the following comment on Verse 22:

"Whereas in Vv. 8-21 we had the substance of what God spoke to man in mercy and in judgment, we have in Vs. 22 the persons of the Holy Trinity in divine counsel among themselves. As might well be expected, from the divine point of view man's act is not only trivial but sad. Man achieved in a relative sense a kind of parody of godlikeness. A divine and holy irony takes note of this. True, there is nothing in these remarks of God that could for a moment make it appear as though the Lord found fallen man a fit object for venting His amusement. Perhaps, since human terms but imperfectly describe the deity, words such as sarcasm or irony—over the relative propriety of which a vigorous debate is still being waged in reference to this passage—had better both be avoided, lest we create a conflict with the pure pity that, without a doubt, stamps his mercy as truly divine. We might, then, substitute the word 'sadness' as descriptive of God's attitude. At the same time, the turn of the narrative practically requires that attention be drawn to the equivocal sense in which the promise was made: 'Ye shall be as gods.' What a sorry godlikeness, if we may use the paradox, and what a pitiable achievement on man's part!"

Charles Simeon, in his Expository Outlines on the Whole Bible, Volume 1, Pages

43, 44, says:

"The ironical and sarcastic expressions which purport to be the reason of this dispensation, are certainly strong indications of his heavy displeasure. The flattering hope of 'becoming as gods,' had led Adam and his wife to transgress the divine command. Now therefore God casts it, as it were, in their teeth, with holy indignation, in order that they might see what they had gained by their folly and presumption. And whereas they had hitherto enjoyed the liberty of eating all the fruits of Paradise, and especially that which was a pledge and earnest to them of God's eternal favor, he drives them out from the garden, to live in a far different manner by the sweat of their brow, and to feel that they were cut off from that life, which, had they maintained their innocence, would have been consummated in glory.

"Thus we behold them driven as outcasts from God and happiness, and doomed to a life of labor and sorrow which should issue in a painful death, and (if repentance intervened not) in everlasting misery."

As we note these quotations quite well agree in that both indicate that God's words in 3:22 are ironical, calling attention to Satan's promise, "For God doth know that in the day ye eat thereof, then your eyes shall be as gods, knowing good and evil" (Genesis 3:5). In other words these believe that God the Father in effect is saying to Christ and the Holy Ghost in the presence of Adam and Eve, these have followed Satan's advice in disobeying us and having gained the wisdom he promised, they would gain, they now being as wise as one of us, they must be driven from this garden lest they eat of the tree of life and live in this state of wisdom as rivals to us forever. Gray and Adams do not agree with this view as seen from the following quotation taken from Volume 1, Page 21 in their Bible Commentary: "Man . . . evil, not an ironical expression as some would say, but inasmuch as we cannot believe God to be using this sarcasm, it is better to hold that man had attempted it; it was his object and wish. And now . . . ever, eating it now with wrong motive; i. e. to counteract the sentence."

Jamieson, Fausset and Brown, in their one volume, Commentary on the Whole Bible, Page 20, say of Genesis 3:22, "Not spoken in irony as is generally supposed, but in deep compassion. The words should be rendered, 'Behold, what has become (by sin) of the man who was as one of us: formed at first, in our image to know good and evil—How sad his condition now.'"

Regardless to what view we may take I think we should read the whole of the first three chapters of Genesis, giving special attention to 1:26; 3:5 and 3:22. This will help up to view the contents of the three verses in order and in their relation to each other. In whatever way we may look at a man's predicament as seen here, it is pitiful and has been ever since he wilfully and voluntarily disobeyed and transgressed God's law thereby cast his lot or took his stand with Satan and against God. Satan has nothing to offer him except that which he has won in his transgression and that is an eternal existence in outer darkness separated from God and all that is good and pleasant and in a place of eternal punishment "where the fire is never quenched and the worm never dies." "Then shall he also unto them on the left hand, Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire prepared for the devil and his angels" (Matthew 25:41). See Genesis 3:1; Revelation 21:8; 1 Peter 5:8; 2 Corinthians 11:13-14; John 8:44; Matthew 25:30.

Man, under the justice and holiness of God, could hope for nothing better since he was free to choose and in this state of freedom made his choice on the side of Satan. Had he chosen to eat of the tree of life the fruit of which God had offered him freely, telling him that this would bring him eternal life, he would have never died. God had also told him what a disobedient act eating of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil would bring him. God wanted him to eat of the tree of life and be happy forever. Satan wanted him to do just what he did and incur thereby eternal death. It is only since God's mercy intervened that man has been given an opportunity to turn to favor and standing with God through our blessed Lord Jesus Christ. The latter calls for our greatest concern and to understand what the Bible requires of us now, in the achievement of such a state of bliss. This is what is most essential and requires that everyone who knows the saving grace of God make it known to others.

The flying rumors gathered as they roll
Scarce any tale was sooner heard than to
And all who told it added something new
And all who heard it made enlargements too;

In every ear it spread, on every tongue grew.

Obstacles are those frightful things you see when you take your eyes off the goal.

The Lighted Pathway

Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path
(PSALM 119:105).

REV. WILLET L. MORETZ
SWANNAHOA, N. C.

"Let him know, that he which converteth the sinner from the error of his way shall save a soul from death, and shall hide a multitude of sins" (James 5:20).

Someone has said, "The supreme need of the church today is soul saving. Some think the greatest need is a pipe organ; a better choir; a better building, or a better preacher, but the greatest need is a passion to save souls. Only one fourth of our population are professed Christians. Think of the men and women every day going down to ruin. Think of the indifference on the part of the Christians.

"The church that has the best prospects for future usefulness, is the soul-winning church. Hundreds of churches have been blotted out of existence because they forgot their heavenly mission."

The text under consideration sets forth the responsibility of the individual Christian in the matter of bringing those who are lost to Christ, Let him know, that he which converteth the sinner. . . The Christian should ever be aware of the fact that he has enlisted in the mighty army of God whose only purpose is to wage war on sin and fight to bring the whole world to Christ. A Christian who has never won a soul for Christ should be ashamed of his religious warfare, and yet there are hundreds in our churches who have never brought one person to Christ; and, more tragic, I fear, thousands have never tried to win one for Him.

"Must I go, and empty-handed?

Must I meet my Saviour so?

Not one soul with which to greet Him,

Must I empty-handed go?"

Those are serious questions. Questions to be faced now—or hereafter! What multitudes of professed Christians are going to the judgment empty-handed so far as the souls of their fellow man are concerned!

One of the greatest joys of the Christian life is the knowledge that we have been instrumental in leading others to Christ. The text again sets forth two things that bring joy to the soul winner. It says he shall save a soul from death, and shall hide a multitude of sins. By leading men and women to accept Christ and become new creatures in Him, ever living according to His example and teaching, think of the suffering that would be averted in the life and in eternity. Think of the souls who would not go into the presence of God all blackened with sin. Think of the multitudes of sins that would never be committed! Fewer would be in our penal institutions, and fewer, far fewer, would spend eternity in hell!

The soul winner must have a working knowledge of the Word of God to be effective. It is the sword of the Spirit. It is the revelation of God and His love and mercy. It is the instrument God uses to reveal Christ to the lost, to convict of sin, and to regenerate the sinner. In the nineteenth Psalm we read, "The law of the LORD is perfect, converting the soul."

But there are many things that will hinder in the matter of winning others to Christ. Dr. Charles G. Finney gave "Ten Rules for Converting Nobody" which follow:

1. Let your supreme motive be popularity rather than salvation.

2. Study to please your congregation and to make reputation rather than to please God.

3. Take up popular, passing and sensational themes to draw crowds and avoid essential doctrines of salvation.

4. Denounce sin in the abstract, but pass lightly over sins that prevail in your congregation.

5. If asked, "Is it wrong to dance, play cards, or attend the theater?" answer very pleasantly, "Oh, that is a matter for private judgment. It is not for me to say you shall or shall not."

THE BIBLE

Sometime ago a young pastor asked where he might be able to find safe, authentic information on the history of the Bible. We believe that the best possible sources for such information are the American Bible Society, 85 Walton Street, Atlanta, Georgia, and the American Tract Society, New York City. Both of these organizations publish pamphlets on the subject that may be relied upon for their information and their loyalty to God's Word. They are suitable for the pastor's personal use or for study groups in the church.

The American Bible Society is sponsoring world-wide Bible reading from Thanksgiving to Christmas, and Universal Bible Sunday on December 9. World-wide Bible reading is a concerted effort to get more people to read the Bible. It is observed throughout the United States and in more than forty other countries. It is publicized by magazines, newspapers, radio and television.

World-wide Bible reading started when a lonely marine on Guadalcanal wrote his mother asking that his parents join him in the daily reading of identical chapters in the New Testament. The mother shared her secret of the invisible bond of fellowship with her overseas son with the Philadelphia office of the American Bible Society. Thereafter throughout the war years thousands of service men and their families shared a similar experience. As

Three Colombian Protestants Murdered

Two evangelicals were killed and another seriously injured in a recent outburst of religious persecution in the village of Las Coloradas, Valle Department, Colombia.

Sr. Ramon Garcia was shot and killed on a mountain trail between Las Coloradas and Cartago. Two days later another evangelical, Sr. Gutierrez, was attacked and wounded as he was returning from the burial of Sr. Garcia. The third victim was Sr. Antonio Munoz, shot to death on October 7.

As a result of these murders all Protestants in the area abandoned their farms and fled. The Protestant community of Las Coloradas included some 25 families which made up a congregation of more than 150 persons. The church in Las Coloradas be-the movement spread, millions asked for and used the bookmarks published by the American Bible Society.

The American Bible Society will send free to any pastor requesting them a supply of book marks listing special selections of daily Bible readings to last from Thanksgiving to the end of the year. They will also send free a poster to place on the bulletin board of your church with a pamphlet entitled, "The Bible Speaks Today," to help you in the preparation of your sermon for December 9.

We have used these materials in our congregation and we heartily recommend them to all our pastors. If you have not already received your samples from the American Bible Society write them today so that you will have plenty of time to get your materials distributed before Thanksgiving.

MY PRAYER

Gertrude Jesser

Oh, God, forgive my selfishness,
And take away my sin.
Create in me a heart that's clean,
And give me peace within.

Oh, give me strength and courage, Lord;
Help me to start anew
To live my life for Jesus,
Each day, the whole year through.

longs to the Cumberland Presbyterian Church.

Meanwhile, in Buenavista, Caldas Department, Sr. Luis Arce was murdered on October 3. He was working on his farm with his brother and a hired man when several men dressed as police arrived. After questioning him about his religious beliefs they ordered him and his two companions to accompany them to the office of the Police Inspector. Later the three men were found on the trail, shot to death.

Sr. Arce was a Sunday school teacher and lay preacher of the Buenavista Protestant Church, which is affiliated with the Gospel Missionary Union. His brother and employee were "sympathizers"—that is, openly friendly and receptive to Protestantism—but not professing evangelicals. Theirs was the misfortune of being in the company of Sr. Arce when his persecutors sought him out.

AN APPEAL

"To all churches that were pastored by the late Rev. W. A. Dail, this is to state that his widow has purchased a monument for his grave.

"Since Mrs. Dail is the widow of a retired minister she would highly appreciate any donation from anyone to be applied on paying for this monument. Send all donations to Mrs. Hettie Dail, Winterville, North Carolina."—Written by a friend of the family.

CHURCH BUILDING PROGRAM

"I am writing on the behalf of the Free Will Baptist churches who are anticipating entering into building programs. I have a number of inquiries concerning new church buildings, Sunday school annexes, parsonages and recreation buildings for Free Will Baptists all over the state of North Carolina. Any building committee or pastor who desires consultation service concerning a building program may contact me at the address below and I will be glad to meet with them. The charge for this service by many engineers and architects is outrageous. The only thing I ask for in this service is to bear my expenses in traveling. If a church of the Free Will Baptist denomination desires complete plans and specifications for new buildings, I am equipped to furnish such at a very nominal fee. In most cases plans and specifications can be furnished with four sets of blue prints for less than a hundred dollars.

"I have a number of complete plans on hand that I will be glad to let any church use provided they pay for the blue prints."—Rev. Boyd L. Shook, Box 318, Kenly, N. C., Telephone 470-1.

NOTES — AND — QUOTES

By J. C. Griffin

REFORMATION DAY TO BE OBSERVED

In many places Protestants are arranging for reformation exercises. In some places the arrangements are made and exercises are presented by the ministerial association. Some ministers and churches have their own individual reformation services. Here in New Bern, North Carolina, services are conducted under the sponsorship of the New Bern Ministerial Association which is composed of Protestant ministers.

Since my writings are entitled "Notes and Quotes" and are for the enlightenment of those who read them, I often quote from various sources. My writings are not for show, or for self-gratification, but for the church that I love, the church that Christ is building, and for the denomination that I love better than all the rest.

The following is a quotation from the Converted Catholic Magazine, which appeared in an article entitled, "Incredible Tyranny," and was accredited to Martin Luther, before the Diet of Worms in 1521:

"The sufferings and complaints of all mankind are my witnesses, that through the laws of the pope and the doctrine of man, the consciences of the faithful have been insnared, tortured, and torn in pieces, while, at the same time, their property and substance have been devoured by an incredible tyranny and are still devoured without end by degrading means, and that too, most of all, in this noble nation of Germany. Yet it is with them a perpetual statute, that the laws and the doctrines of the pope be held erroneous and reprobate when they are contrary to the gospel and opinion of the fathers.

"If, then I shall retract these books, I shall do no other than add strength to tyranny and throw open doors to this great impiety, which will then stride forth more widely than it has dared hitherto; so that the reign of iniquity will proceed, with impunity, and notwithstanding its intolerable oppression upon the suffering vulgar, be still fortified and established; especially when it shall be proclaimed that I have been driven to this act by the authority of your serene majesty and the whole Roman Empire. What a cloak, blessed Lord, should I then become for wickedness and despotism!"

Whether all that is said in the former quotation accredited to Martin Luther is true or not, that is to be judged from history. But through all the ages there have come conditions in government and in religion when it was necessary for reformation. At this time, I certainly believe that it is time for a reformation in politics. We need reformers who will stick to facts and not try to destroy the character of the opponent. Whenever any man, whether he is a religionist or a politician, begins to sling mud and try to get to the top by destroying the reputation of his opponent because he has the protection and authority of free speech, I for one cannot trust that man. There is an old saying which states, "He who steals my purse, steals trash; but he who steals my good name robs me of that which he cannot restore and makes me the poorer while he is not enriched." I would much rather a man would steal my purse, for he would not get much in stealing it; because the man or the woman who would slander my name and cause me to lose is farther out of line with God's laws than the person who slipped my purse from my possession to his.

The Worst of Liars

A liar is more dangerous than a thief. Lying has been heard of from the days of Cain all down through the ages. Satan is a liar and the father of lies. When Satan speaks a lie, he speaks of himself. John 8: 41-44 says, "Ye do the deeds of your father. Then said they to him, We be not born of fornication; we have one Father, even God. Jesus said unto them, If God were your Father, ye would love me: for I proceeded forth and came from God; neither came I of myself, but he sent me. Why do ye not understand my speech? even because ye cannot hear my word. Ye are of your father the devil, and the lusts of your father ye will do. He was a murderer from the beginning, and abode not in the truth, because there is no truth in him. When he speaketh a lie, he speaketh of his own: for he is a liar, and the father of it."

Here we learn that the devil has children. Who are they? They are those who do not love Jesus and turn from the lust of the devil. They belong to Satan, and someday they will go to exist within the domains of their father. They will listen to him here, and someday in eternity they will have to associate with their father.

Making God a Liar

"He that believeth on the Son of God hath the witness in himself: he that believeth not God hath made him a liar; because he believeth not the record that God gave of his Son" (1 John 5:10). To deny that Jesus was the Son of God is to make God a liar. The worst liar on earth is the liar who makes God a liar. There are some people who call themselves Christians but say that Jesus was not the Son of God. There are people in high places who say that Jesus was not the Son of God. Many of these religionists are always seeking to tell you that there is no punishment for the sinner and the ungodly except what they get here on earth. They preach and teach that you will not go to a torment of hell fire. But against their word is the Word of God which says, "The wicked shall be turned into hell, and all the nations that forget God" (Psalm 9:17). To deny that is to say that God is a liar.

"But the fearful, and unbelieving, and the abominable, and murderers, and whoremongers, and sorcerers, and idolaters, and all liars, shall have their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone: which is the second death" (Revelation 21:8). To deny this Scripture is to call God a liar. What can be worse than a religious liar? Political liars can only fool the natural man, and cause him to lose prestige and friends, but a religious liar can cause people to lose their all and at last to lift up their eyes in hell.

You may wonder what you can do when some tract distributor comes to your door. Some of them will not stop unless you push them back, for often they have little respect for you and will push right on in without proper presentation. So, when one comes to your door, first ask him if he believes the Bible to be the inspired Word of God. If he says, "Yes," then ask him if he believes that Jesus Christ was born of a virgin named Mary, and that He was of the Holy Ghost. If he says, "No," then run him off, for he is a deceiver sent out by his father, the devil. But if he answers, "Yes," then ask him if he believes that the righteous will live with God eternally, and that the wicked will abide with the devil, their father, eternally. If he says, "No," or starts to explain why he believes there is not a hell for the wicked Christ-rejecting souls of man, then it is time for you to tell him to get going and mean it when you say it! Shoot him with one or two of God's destructive bombs prepared for the devil and his angels, and you will not be bothered with the devil's agents right away.

The Chief Thing

The greatest thing anyone can do for God and for man is to pray. It is not the only thing, but it is the chief thing. For if a man is to pray right, he must first be right in his motives and life. And if a man be right, and put the practice of praying in its right place, then his serving and giving and speaking will be fairly fragrant with the presence of God.

The great people of the earth today are the people who pray. I do not mean those who talk about prayer; nor those who say they believe in prayer; nor yet those who explain about prayer; but I mean those people who take time and pray.—S. D. Gordon.

SCRUB BRUSH BILL

Esther Miller Payler

BILL rapped on his sister's door, their special signal rap, two short taps, and one long. "Got a tough problem, Doris, thought maybe you could help me find an answer."

"I never was too good at arithmetic," grinned his sister, tossing her blond curls. "Have you prayed about it?"

"Yes, but I haven't the answer. This is harder'n arithmetic," frowned Bill. "Last night when I was doing my lessons, I overheard Pop and Mom talking on the porch."

"What did you hear?" asked Doris eagerly.

"Mom said your music teacher told her you should take two lessons a week. Pop answered: 'Doris is talented and I'd like her to have the extra lesson, but the expense!' Mom said she'd save extra and the Lord would provide. Pop reminded that high school next year would cost more for clothes and carfare."

Doris' smooth forehead wrinkled: "We've taken too much for granted."

"We must figure some way to help, and relieve Father and Mother of this."

"We're too young for working certificates, but let's study what to do and pray about it. We can talk it over tomorrow."

Bill smiled: "I knew I could count on you."

The next evening Doris reported: "I asked Mrs. Marcus, our neighbor, if I could give her baby airings on nice days, and she was pleased. Promised me two dollars a week if I'd take the baby out after school and on Saturday and double that for vacation. That takes care of my music lessons. Mrs. Smith is going to let me help with dishes and taking care of her children when she has company too."

"Did you tell Pop and Mom?"

"No, Bill, I want to wait for your plan, then we could surprise them together."

"Today in study period I listed things I could do."

"What did you list?"

"I can scrub porches and floors, clean basements and garages, run errands, cut grass, hoe and take care of gardens."

"Yes," interrupted Doris, "you made a good job of Father's car."

"Thanks, Doris! You use your head." Bill continued, "Saturday I'm going around the neighborhood and see how many odd jobs I can pick up where work laws won't interfere."

"You could print cards listing your work, showing your name, address and 'phone number and leave cards with customers so they could call you when they needed your kind of work."

"I'll dust off my printing stuff pronto!"

On Saturday morning when William started looking for work, he had a sinking feeling as he knocked on the first door. "Why should I do this?" he questioned. "I could pretend I didn't hear what Father said, but I can't let Doris down, after her effort." Finally, the door opened a crack.

"What you want?" a woman's voice shrilled.

"Do you have any odd jobs?" William made his voice sound deeper than usual.

"I do my own work!" Slam went the door!

William felt worse. He had to go on. He could not let his little sister earn money and he fail. He knocked at the next door, whistling. "Good morning," smiled Bill when the woman opened the door. "I'm looking for odd jobs. I live in the neighborhood."

"What can you do?"

"Scrub porches, floors, polish cars, cut grass or garden."

"How much to scrub this porch?"

"Thirty-five cents," promptly answered Bill.

"Go ahead. If you're good I'll find more for you to do."

Bill scrubbed thoroughly. When the customer inspected the work she said: "Good! Come every Saturday during the spring and summer and you can do it. Go next door, or wait, I'll call my neighbor. She needs help and hasn't any."

"Yes," replied the neighbor inspecting the scrubbed porch. "You may scrub my kitchen and polish the car."

At noon Bill had a dollar seventy-five cents and two satisfied customers. Doris was hanging on the gate waiting: "What success?" she grinned.

"Look at the money. The more doors I knocked on the more courage I got. Money you earn yourself is worth more 'cause you paid for it in brains and elbow grease."

"I'm anxious to get started this afternoon with the baby," replied Doris. "Let's tell Mother now, I'm bursting with our secret!"

During the following week, William felt proud and grown-up, and Doris was always humming happily. On the second Saturday, William was hard at work scrubbing the porch of his first customer, when Frank Bell, sauntered down the street.

Frank was a snob and loud-mouthed bully. He was bright but smart aleck too. Bill scrubbed, ducking his head, so Frank would not see him, but Frank jeered: "Don't try to hide, Cinderella!"

"Beat it," snapped Bill. He went to the side of the house for more water, but when he came back Frank was still standing giggling, so that his fat stomach moved up and down. Bill found it hard to ignore Frank and his wisecracks about "scrub ladies." Bill had to pray for control. At last Frank strolled on, munching a candy bar.

At school Monday, when Frank came in the room, he called loudly to Bill: "How's scrubbing?"

"What's that to you?" exploded Bill, forgetting that "a soft answer turneth away wrath." His eyes blazed.

Frank snickered: "Listen fellows, Bill's sore! He spends his spare time scrubbing. He don't want me to tell he has housemaid's knees!"

Even Bill's ears were red. He was praying to keep from fighting. Teacher came into the room and the bell rang which was a blessing for him, and for Frank too. All week Frank made life miserable for Bill at school. He no longer took pride in his cleaning business, and hated going to school listening to Frank's jeers and jokes, which the other boys laughed at.

"Final examinations are in a month," warned the teacher. "Some will have to improve in their work if they are going to high school and get honorable mention for grade-school work." Bill thought she looked at him and Frank, as she spoke so sternly.

Bill said nothing at home about the way the boys tormented him, but he was so quiet his mother thought he was working too hard. "I'm only studying hard, because teacher said some will have to improve. I thought she was looking at me and Frank," defended Bill.

The next evening as Bill walked through the school hall, he saw Frank come from the principal's office, and he was almost crying. He had his eyes on the ground and did not even jeer at Bill. Doris told Bill that night: "I heard Frank's failing in math. After he boasted he'd head the honor list, that would serve him right not to pass."

For a moment Bill felt glad, then he said slowly: "That would be tough!"

Frank was quiet at school the next day. Bill thought: "It's a relief to have him in trouble, so he can't call me 'Scrub Brush Bill.'" Then he was ashamed of such unchristian thoughts, as he remembered Matthew 5:44: "Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you, and persecute you."

After lunch Bill followed Frank from the lunchroom: "I don't want to butt in, Frank, but is it true you may 'flunk' math?"

Frank's lower lip was thrust out: "What of it?"

"Math's my favorite. I'd be glad to go over some of the tough problems with you."

Frank's face was brick red as he studied Bill to see if he was in earnest. "This is decent of you, after the way I've heckled you."

"Forget that," answered Bill.

"My father'll gladly pay you," volunteered Frank. "He said last night he was going to get me a coach, rather than let me fail. Mother's get her heart set on my being on the honor roll like my brothers were."

"I don't want pay. I got my cleaning business." Bill said it proudly, knowing he'd never be ashamed of honest work again. "We'll go over the lessons each night together and it'll help me too," planned Bill. "Each evening we'll take some review beside our daily work."

"Thanks," muttered Frank. "You're a real friend!"

On the way home, Doris passed Bill and Frank. When Bill came home she remarked: "Change of heart some place, I guess."

"Uh-hu," shrugged Bill, not letting on how pleased he was.

A few weeks later Doris teased William. "Look at my earnings, almost up to yours."

"Good," grinned Bill. "Our prayers have been answered."

"Frank's certainly a friend of yours now."

Bill winked: "We're both on the honor roll. Next year we're going to High together. But right now, I got to get busy. 'Scrub Brush Bill' and his trusty brush are due at one of my customers this minute."—Gospel Herald.

District W. A. Convention Organized

The Central Florida District Woman's Auxiliary Convention was organized at New Hope Church, Plant City, Florida, on November 3, 1956.

Mrs. Bertie Baxter of Chipley, Florida, vice-president of the Florida State Woman's Auxiliary Convention, was in charge of the organizational meeting. Assisting her were Mrs. Ruby Pelt, state stewardship-prayer chairman, of Marianna, Florida, and Miss Ada Holley, state secretary-treasurer, of Blountstown, Florida.

The officers for the new convention were elected as follows: Mrs. Jerry Wilfong, president; Mrs. Annie Mae Gibbs, vice-president and field worker; Mrs. Vita Mae Rice, recording and corresponding secretary; Mrs. Mamie Page, treasurer; Mrs. Patsy Guy, youth chairman; Mrs. Sadie Taylor, stewardship-prayer chairman; Mrs. Flora Guinn, personal service chairman; Mrs. Catherine Parrish, study course chairman.

The convention will announce the date of its annual meeting later.

Louisburg, N. C.—The Woman's Auxiliary of the Saints' Delight Free Will Baptist Church will hold its regular monthly meeting, Thursday night, November 15, 1956, in the home of Mrs. Curtis Davis.

The auxiliary urges each member to be present and states that it will welcome all visitors who attend.

Kenansville, N. C.—The Woman's Auxiliary of the Sarecta Free Will Baptist Church met at the church on November 5, 1956. The meeting was called to order by singing "I'm Not Ashamed." Mrs. Simon Jones led the group in prayer. Mrs. Rivers Winstead led in the devotional period with Scripture taken from Deuteronomy 6:4-9. The program was presented by several of the members. After a short business session, the ladies were dismissed with prayer.

A hundred men can make an encampment, but it requires one woman to make a home.

Two or Three

Note the order: "Two of you—agreed—in My name—It shall be done!" Who can challenge this without putting a question mark to the statements of the Lord Himself? What a link for husband and wife in claiming the promised blessing upon home and children! What a link for the young people in the home—if faithful, loyal and believing! What a link for two friends for procuring blessings for those they love!

What possibilities for the Church if, in "twos" of one mind and heart, the people could meet for prayer! We have seen this tested among young men in all night prayer meetings with such definite results as to intensify their faith.—Dr. T. C. Horton.

It isn't the original cost of ignorance that matters—it's the upkeep!

Mount Olive Responds To Visit of Standards Committee

The Standards Committee of the North Carolina College Conference recently made a visit to Mount Olive Junior College, Mount Olive, North Carolina. The following letters were written to the members of this committee. These letters express the sentiments of the people of Mount Olive and Wayne County toward Mount Olive Junior College.

The following letter was written by Vernon Lowe, President, Mount Olive Chamber of Commerce, Mount Olive, North Carolina:

"Please accept this letter as an expression of sincere appreciation to you for your recent visit to Mount Olive in the interest of accreditation for our junior college. When we realize the many calls upon your time we are even more appreciative for your visit.

"Our organization, and indeed, every individual in the Mount Olive area is very proud of our junior college and the amazing progress it has made in such a short time. The tremendous influence for good, not alone in the educational field, but morally and culturally as well, which Mount Olive Junior College has exerted, and will exert in the years to come, has already endeared the institution and all the persons connected with it to every citizen in this area.

"The response to the college's campaign for funds, conducted last spring, is, we believe, an excellent barometer for the acceptance which the college and its program has met in this community. The calibre of its faculty, and student body, has already meant much here and gives promise of meaning a great deal more in the years to come.

"You may gather from this letter that Mount Olive is proud of its junior college. We are! We want it, we need it, and already our citizens have shown their willingness to do those things necessary to assure its continual growth and development until it comes into its own as an institution of higher learning—fully accredited, equipped and filling the needs of our area.

"Again, accept our thanks for your interest and visit here the other day, and if there is any way our organization can be of help to you, please feel free to call upon us."

The following letter was written by Henry Belk, Editor, Goldsboro News-Argus, Goldsboro, North Carolina:

"I have been impressed with the vision and purpose which President W. Burkette Raper has for Mount Olive Junior College. I have been in conference with him on several occasions, both individually and in groups. I am convinced that he is able to lead Mount Olive College to a place of permanence, respect and responsibility.

"The Free Will Baptist churches have been aroused to support their institution.

"Mount Olive business men have formed their own organization to give continuing financial aid and cooperation with the college.

"Goldsboro business men and citizens generally see in Mount Olive College the immediate answer to this section's need for a community college. The school received pledges from Goldsboro of about $75,000 in a campaign held last spring.

"The interested support raised up from so many sources guarantees that Mount Olive College will grow and increase its service from year to year. In every contact I have had with President Raper, he has repeatedly emphasized that the college must be a quality institution and must measure up at the earliest possible moment with standards generally recognized."

The following letter was written by B. E. Bryan, Mayor, Mount Olive, North Carolina:

"I was very much disappointed that I had to be out of town on your recent visit to Mount Olive College. I hope that you were pleased with what you found.

"We, the people of Mount Olive and this area of North Carolina, feel that this college has made substantial progress and regard it as a permanent institution of higher learning in this area.

"We intend to support it in every respect including financial support which, of course, is most necessary. I felt that it would be in order to write you this brief letter so that you would realize our interest in this institution. I am sure you thoroughly realize the need for it in this area.

"I would appreciate any suggestions you might make to us in order to help our college become accredited and continue to grow."

STUDY

DORIS SHEFFIELD, Newton, Georgia

The world today with subtle force
Seeks minds of men to win,
By covering up with flowery words,
Its low degrading sin.

I want to study more each day,
God's words of truth and light.
So I may never be in doubt
About the path of right.

On life's great journey here below
I've stumbled many times;
Because I failed to search God's Word
His will and way to find.

Whatever my profession be
If honest in God's sight,
He longs to have my life to use
As His great shining light.

'Tis well to learn from books and men
To better serve mankind,
If deep inside God has control
Of heart and soul and mind.

I want to be a student of
The greatest Teacher known,
And sit each day at Jesus' feet
T'will be my hallowed throne.

If on my pilgrimage through life
I gained degrees untold,
And could not bear the Christian name
At death I'd lose my soul.

What is my profit, should I gain
The whole wide world and then,
When standing at God's judgment seat
I fail life's crown to win?

If I should study God's Word more
Each day so faithfully,
Then fail its lessons to apply
How empty that would be.

There's not a problem of mankind
Though great or infantile;
But that the love of Jesus Christ
Can take and minimize.

If I should live a thousand years
And sorrows, griefs be great;
God's Holy Spirit through His Word
Would comfort, soothe, abate.

The Forgiving Father

(Lesson for November 25)

Lesson: Luke 15:11-24.

Golden Text: Psalm 103:10, 11.

I. INTRODUCTION

The entire fifteenth chapter of Luke is devoted to Jesus' description of lost people with emphasis upon the rejoicing in heaven when a lost person is found and saved. To make these truths plain and indelible He used three illustrations from the life experiences of the people to whom He spoke. He explained the classes of lost people in terms of a sheep which became lost by straying from the flock, a coin which a woman lost in the house, and a son who rebelled against the restraints of his father and went into a far country.

Today we shall consider the account of the Prodigal Son with emphasis upon the virtues of the father. This is as it should be, for there is no virtue or noble example in the sinful rebellion and waste of the errant son. His only noble example is found in his resolve to come back to his father. On the other hand, the son's father is a true type of our heavenly Father throughout the story.—The Bible Student (F. W. B.).

II. HELPFUL HINTS

1. The prodigal son is a perfect illustration of Isaiah 53:6. He went in at the first "all" and came out at the last "all." The blood of Christ is the basis of forgiveness.

2. The quicker a prodigal spends his all, the better it will be for all concerned (Vs. 14).

3. Nothing will humble and tame a wild son so quickly and well as the pinch of real need (Vv. 15, 16).

4. It is only when a sinner sees himself as he is that he becomes conscious of his desperate need (Vs. 17).

5. Before a lost sinner can become God's son, he must be willing to be His slave (Vv. 18, 19).

6. When a sinner turns to God by faith in Christ, the Father will meet him with mercy and love (Vs. 20).

7. The sinner comes to Christ in filthy rags, but the Father has him clothed in a righteous robe (Vv. 21, 22).

8. When victory comes to the penitent soul, the next thing to follow is a joyous feast (Vs. 23, 24).—The Bible Teacher (F. W. B.).

III. ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

1. The Word itself says: "And he spake this parable unto them, saying." What we have here is known as a triptych. That is a picture painted on three panels; but forming one picture. So in this parable we have a threefold picture of the Godhead, seeking and bringing back the lost. The lost sheep gives us a picture of our Redeemer, the Lord Jesus Christ, in His work of redemption, going after the lost sheep until He finds it and bringing it back safe to the fold. There is intimated here His long and painful quest before He found and restored His sheep that was lost (comp. Luke 19:10). In the parable of the lost coin, we have a picture of the work of the Holy Spirit in illuminating the dark corners that was lost. In the parable of the Prodigal Son it is the Father that is pictured to us. We see him on the watch for the absent son, we see his readiness to meet and to receive him back into his place in the home. We see him rejoicing with nearly all of his household. We see the once erring son restored into the bosom of his family.—The Bible Expositor.

2. The young man of the parable did not become a prodigal after he left home and began to indulge in the life of a profligate. The label applied to him as soon as he availed himself of his legal privilege, and took his share of the estate out of his father's hand. Applying this spiritually, it is possible to have prodigals on the church roll or even in the choir. Even though they are still living moral lives, if they have not given their hearts and lives to God, they are prodigals. Take the elder son for an example. The younger son realized he was a sinner and repented, but the older son did not repent of his self-righteousness and unloving disposition.

3. The prodigal came from "want" to plenty and from misery to joy and happy fellowship. The prodigal, as previously indicated, is an illustration of the publicans and sinners of the people of the Jews, those who had gone away from God and down deep into open and known sin, with whom Christ associated and came to save. The envy with which the elder son regarded the return and welcome of the prodigal brother (Luke 15:25-32), represents the feeling of the Pharisees and scribes toward Christ for His association with the publicans and sinners. The self-righteous hypocrites despised these outcasts and shunned them as unfit for even association with them. They knew not the love and grace of God, and that these wretches among them could be saved and recovered. Neither did they know that Christ had come to save sinners.—W. S. Hottel, D. D.

4. In a home in Manchester, England, there was a wayward son and brother. The mother was dead. The father and the family were heart-stricken with grief over the son and brother. They had coaxed, reprimanded and threatened him, but to no avail. One Christmas morning, the boy came home after a dreadful night of debauchery. The brothers and sisters were shocked, and out of patience. They wanted the father to expel him from home. Turning to his liquor-drugged son, the father said, "Henry, your sisters and brothers say you should be put out of the home!" Then the father began to weep over his prodigal son. Going to him and putting his arms around him, he said, "My son, I shall never put you out of the home!" The loving words of his father woke up the son's slumbering soul. He was converted. He was gloriously delivered from drink's ruin and power. Who was this converted son? He was Henry Moorehouse, a famous English preacher, who helped D. L. Moody to realize that God really loved the sinner so deeply.

5. The repentance of the prodigal was no mere sentimental regret or momentary flash of sorrow because of his evil past. It was real in every detail. "I will arise and go to my father, and will say unto him, Father, I have sinned against heaven, and before thee" (Vs. 18). This verse tells us of a long journey which lay ahead of him; and when we recall the fact that he was reared in luxury, we know the journey without means was most weary and trying. He also faced the shame of confession before friends and relatives, but the crown of his bitterness lay in reaching the point where he could serve as a servant in the house where he was once an honored son. Yes, his repentance was genuine.—The Advanced Quarterly (F. W. B.).

6. One night a somnambulist, or sleep-walker, got out of his bed, walked down the stairs, onto the porch and then into the street. On he walked, with bare feet, until he started across a stream of water. As his feet touched the icy water, he suddenly awakened! What a picture of lost souls who do not awaken from the sleep of spiritual drowsiness until they come to the chilly waters of death! Then it is too late. Hell is paved with nameless remorse and gnawing regrets. True repentance is never too late, but seldom is late repentance true repentance.—Selected.

How They Prayed

George Whitefield, the famous English evangelist, said: "O Lord, give me souls, or take my soul."

Henry Martyn, missionary kneeling on India's coral strands, earnestly cried out: "Here let me burn out for God."

David Brainerd, missionary to the North American Indians, 1718-1747: "Lord, to Thee I dedicate myself. Oh, accept me and let me be Thine forever. Lord, I desire nothing else, I desire nothing more." The last words in his diary, seven days before he died, were: "O come, Lord Jesus, come quickly. Amen."

Thomas a' Kempis, 1379-1471: "Give what Thou wilt and how much Thou wilt, and when Thou wilt. Set me where Thou wilt and deal with me in all things just as Thou wilt."

Dwight L. Moody: "Use me then, my Saviour, for whatever purpose and in whatever way Thou mayest require. Here is my poor heart, an empty vessel; fill it with Thy grace."

The Lighted Pathway

6. Preach on the loveliness of virtue and the glory of heaven but not on the sinfulness of sin and the terrors of hell.

7. Reprove the sins of the absent, but make those who are present pleased with themselves, so that they will enjoy the sermon and not go away with their feelings hurt.

8. Make the impression on worldly church members that God is too good to send anyone to hell, even if there is a hell.

9. Preach the universal Fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man so as to show that no second birth is really needed.

10. Do not rebuke the worldliness of the church, but fall in with the amusement policy. Instead of meeting for prayer, let the people sit down and eat and drink and rise up to play! Selected.

Sharing on Thanksgiving

Thankful people who have the true concept of the ownership of wealth are reminded to share their blessings with others who are less fortunate. In the absolute sense, all material wealth and property belong to God. He has made them available to people for their sustenance and happiness in this life. Those who have material things in abundance have them only as a trust from God. We are true to this trust when we share these things with people who are in need.

In your community there may be aged people, sick ones and entire poor families who may be blessed if you share the abundance which you have with them. You should not forget, also, the millions of starving people in other nations of the world.

THANKSGIVING

During this season there will perhaps be more prayers of thanksgiving offered than at any time in the history of our nation, because more people appear to be conscious of God's providence; but we wonder if much of the thanksgiving will not be shallow to the point that it will fall short of the highest honor and glory which might be given to God. Since thanksgiving is at the root of man's very faith, we are afraid that the gratefulness of many will reflect their juvenile concept of God.

Of course material wealth and national prosperity are gifts from God; America should prostrate herself before Him in sincere thanks for the highest standard of living and greatest abundance of material goods that any nation has ever known in the history of the world. In recent years scientific research in the fields of medicine and engineering has discovered such hitherto hidden sources of blessing to mankind as to overwhelm the person who reflects soberly upon them.

It remains to be seen whether or not man, in his gratefulness for this sacred trust, will use this knowledge to bless humanity. As we thank God for this knowledge, let us pray that those responsible for handling these facts may be given both the will and the wisdom to use them as a blessing to humanity instead of a curse.

Let us know assuredly that God does not intend the material blessings which He gives us to be an end within themselves. We should receive them as a trust from Him and be thankful that we have the privilege of using them to glorify Him.

On the other hand, we should be reminded that it is possible for us to be selfish in our reaction toward the abundance of the material things which we receive. Even our prayers of thanksgiving may cause God to frown instead of rejoice, because He knows the very motives which inspire our every act. There is a danger of our looking upon God as a fairy godfather whose sole purpose for existence is to heap showers of blessings upon us that we may consume them upon our lusts.

The emphasis of our thanksgiving should be upon spiritual values rather than being altogether upon material things. We should thank God for material blessings which have been the means of our sustenance and which have provided opportunity for service in the Kingdom. In whatever measure we have failed to use the means which He has provided for us, we should make confession to God.

There are several experiences for which we should be thankful to God, but which we are prone to overlook, or in which we fail to recognize a blessing. However, Paul says, "And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose" (Romans 8:28). Therefore, if we are children of God, even unpleasant and apparently tragic occurrences bring with them a blessing from God. It is difficult for us to see the good which comes to us during a trying moment; but after the sharpness of the pain or disappointment has passed, we can usually see how the merciful hand of God was at work in our behalf. Furthermore, we may be sure that those life experiences in which we have never been able to see God's hand of blessing will be thoroughly understandable to us when we get beyond the sphere of earthly limitations and are permitted to see as God sees.

We must understand that God directly wills only good for His children; but because of our human frailties and because of the presence of sin in this world by which we are all affected, He permits suffering, sorrow, failure, disappointment and death to be our portion. In regeneration He does not promise us deliverance from these experiences except as such deliverances will bring greater glory to His cause than would be wrought by our passing through them. In these experiences the Christian should learn from his Lord how to pray, "... O my Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me: nevertheless not as I will, but as thou wilt" (Matthew 26:39).

When our lives are committed to the will of God, we may be assured that God will sanctify every pang of pain, every sup sorrow and every dampening of disappointment to our eternal good and His great glory. This is historically so in that it is borne out over and over again, in the pages of His Word. One has but to read the faith chapter of the Bible, Hebrews 11, to see the panorama of the suffering saints who won the victory and purchased for themselves a place of pre-eminence in the eternal habitation of God. Even Jesus, to whose agonizing death we have already referred, could not be spared that awful experience; but the Father sanctified His suffering by making His death our gateway to life eternal.

In the light of these facts, we should thank God for all distasteful and hurtful experiences which we have been permitted to undergo within the realm of His will for us. Again Paul says "Therefore I take pleasure in infirmities, in reproaches, in necessities, in persecutions, in distresses for Christ's sake: for when I am weak, then am I strong" (2 Corinthians 12:10). This was the conclusion to which this apostle came after he had prayed earnestly for the Lord to remove "... a thorn in the flesh, the messenger of Satan to buffet me, lest I should be exalted above measure" (1 Corinthians 12:7). The thorn was not removed, but Paul heard the voice of Jesus, saying, "... my grace is sufficient for thee: for my strength is made perfect in weakness. ..." (2 Corinthians 12:9).

In conclusion, let us say that, during this Thanksgiving season, we shall give thanks to God for all material wealth which He has provided that we might be enabled to serve Him. We shall plead His forgiveness for our failure to utilize His blessings to the fullest extent for His glory. We shall furthermore thank Him for experiences which seemed to be tragic or upsetting, petitioning Him to sanctify them to His glory. And we shall thank Him for the anticipation of challenges and opportunities during the next year. Will you join us?

Prayer meetings that include praise meetings are the ones with any chance of success.

A Different Thanksgiving

ERNEST, do you remember how we spent last Thanksgiving Day?" asked Grace at the breakfast table, a few days before Thanksgiving.

"I certainly remember," replied the young husband. "We invited the Vandors here and on Christmas we were entertained at their home. What do you intend to do this year, Grace?"

"Well, that's the question. I wish we could do something different this year. Do help me plan something new."

"Now, Grace, tell me honestly; are you planning to do something to help the poor, as the minister told us at church last Sunday? I thought he said something about not inviting rich neighbors to a feast."

"So he did. And that is from the Scripture, too. The Bible says, 'When thou makest a feast, call the poor, the maimed, the lame, the blind: and thou shalt be blessed.' Really, Ernest, if you do not care, I would like to find some very poor family, and invite them here on Thanksgiving."

At first it seemed to Ernest that it was not quite the proper thing to do—to ask any of those poor people in Factory Row to eat Thanksgiving dinner in their nice home. He thought they would not know how to appreciate it anyway. He had never been a want himself, and did not know how it would seem to live in a poor home and have very little food and other things to make life pleasant. But he would do as his wife wanted him to do, so he agreed to the plan. In a joking way he told her that he would invite every poor person he saw from then on until Thanksgiving to come to their house on that day.

But on the night before Thanksgiving no one had been invited. Ernest had not been where he had seen many of the poorer class who lived down in the Row, and so had not given his invitation.

But as he hurried home from his office that night, he made up his mind to find someone in need. The streets seemed filled with people. The band was playing in the square. Ernest's attention was drawn to a very small, poorly clad urchin standing near the curb, and gazing at the players in close attention.

"Ah, here's the little fellow I'm looking for," thought Ernest, as the band started to march away. He went up to the lad in a friendly way and asked, "Well, Johnny, what are you going to have for your Thanksgiving dinner?"

"My name's not Johnny; it's Paul. But I don't care what you call me," replied the little boy.

"Well, what about your Thanksgiving dinner?"

"Oh, we don't have any Thanksgiving dinners at our house."

"You don't? Well, that's too bad. Haven't you anything to be thankful for?"

"Oh, yes, lots; but we don't never have a good dinner just the same. But I don't care; I'm well and strong and when I get bigger, and can earn money, we're going to have Thanksgiving dinner every day."

"By your size I would think that it might be a long time before you will have such good dinners. How will you manage until then?"

"Same as I've been doin'."

"How many are there in your family, Johnny?"

"There are six of us counting Father."

"Why do you say, 'counting Father'?"

"'Cause there's just five of us most of the time. Father doesn't come home often, and when he does—oh, well—he just comes home, that's all."

"I suppose you are glad to see him when he comes?"

"Well, maybe, Mister."

"You're a queer little chap."

"Well, I suppose I am. Do you have Thanksgiving dinners often?"

"Oh, not oftener than once a year. Thanksgiving comes only once a year, you know."

"I should think one might have Thanksgiving oftener if he wanted to."

"Well, that's so; I suppose he might."

"We often have Thanksgiving at our house, all exceptin' the dinner."

"M'm! I wouldn't call it much of a Thanksgiving if I couldn't have a good dinner along with it. Are you so thankful for what you have that you have a Thanksgiving Day often? I can't imagine what you would be thankful for. You are shivering now in those thin clothes, and you look hungry."

"Oh, I don't feel cold! There's no place bare yet. It's chilly weather, that's all, but summer will soon come again. Besides, I've got lots more to be thankful for than the Pilgrims had."

"I'm glad you know about the Pilgrims; and you think you have more to be thankful for than they?"

"Oh, yes, much more! I most know they went hungry sometimes before they could plant things."

"Aren't you ever hungry, Johnny?"

"Not ever very hungry. The Pilgrims didn't have no food, did they, Mister?"

"No, I guess not. What do you do to have good times at home?"

"I tell stories to the others, and we play and have lots of fun. Oh, I just love that."

"Do you sing at your house?"

"Oh, yes; we have the nicest times singing. Mother has taught us lots of hymns. But, Mister, you ought to hear me whistle. I can just whistle any time a day. Can you whistle, Mister?"

"Oh, yes, when I feel like it. Johnny, how would you like to come to my house to dinner tomorrow?"

"My, but I'd like it. But I can't come. Mother would miss me and I have to mind the others. But perhaps Jimmy could go. He's smaller than me, and Mother don't need him so much. Ask him, Mister."

"Oh, I meant to invite you all. Do you think you can come?"

The lad's eyes grew very bright as he asked, "Really, Mister?"

"Yes, really. Take me home with you, Johnny, and I'll ask your mother what she thinks."

An hour later Ernest returned home where Grace was anxiously waiting.

"Well, Grace, we're going to have company sure enough. Going to send a cab after the whole family, and they will be here at ten o'clock. I invited the drunken father and all. When I saw him come staggering into that little hut, I thought of that verse that said 'the poor, lame, blind,' and I thought that the verse fitted him." Then Ernest told her all about the little boy with whom he had talked.

Thanksgiving Day dawned clear and bright and the people in Factory Row wondered as they saw the Dawson family ride away in a cab. And it was a very thankful, happy crowd that sat down to the well-filled dinner table. It was a meal such as that family had never seen before.

In the afternoon Ernest and Grace got out the song books and one after another of the old familiar songs was sung. Mrs. Dawson and the children joined heartily in the singing; but Mr. Dawson did not. Many years of sin had almost made him forget about love to God and to others. But songs which he sang when a child were now being sung and his stony heart was touched. In his mind he could see his mother who was now with the Lord.

When it was time to go home the cab came for them. They were soon back again into the little hovel which they called home, but into the father's heart had come a deep longing that he might break from his sinful habits and be a man again. But he knew that his own good resolutions would fail, as they had done before. So he gathered his family about him, and together they

Giving Thanks

A FULLER statement of the admonition from 1 Thessalonians 5:18 is found in Ephesians 5:20: “. . . giving thanks always for all things unto God and the Father in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ.” This gives us not only the admonition to “give thanks,” but specify when it should be given, the things for which we should give thanks, the One to whom our thanks should be presented, and the spirit in which it should be done.

I. GIVING THANKS

This should have a much bigger place than it occupies in the life of the average Christian. It occupies a very big place in Scripture. The prayers of the Bible are full of praise and thanksgiving. The songs of the Bible are likewise saturated with the spirit of thanksgiving.

The spirit of thanksgiving is the characteristic of the humble soul, the one who is conscious of his own unworthiness as the recipient of the abundant mercies of God.

It was David's thankful heart that made him “the man after God's own heart.” Though far from perfect in character, he nevertheless lived a life that was pleasing to God by recognizing that he owed everything he had and everything that he was to the goodness and mercy of God.

It is a striking thing that Paul's letters almost always begin in a spirit of thanksgiving. Even when he is writing to some church that needs correction and reproof, he finds some things for which he can truly thank God. Thanksgiving takes the first place; correction and admonition follow.

The same is true in the letters of our Lord to His churches in the book of Revelation. He has a most serious complaint to register with the church at Ephesus—the church which had left its first love. But first He commends the church for its good work, its strict discipline, its tolerance of evil men. Then He mentions the defect that grieves Him.

We should cultivate the thankful heart in our home life. How prone we are to take for granted all the things that are done for us by others in the home! Nothing lifts the drooping spirit of a tired housewife more than a genuine expression of thanks for her untiring labors in the home.

We should cultivate the thankful heart in our church life. Here, too, we take for granted the blessings that come from the faithful ministries of the pastor, Sunday school teachers and other workers.

We should abound in thanksgiving with respect to our country. Just to think about what life is like in most other countries should stimulate a spirit of thanksgiving.

II. GIVING THANKS—“ALWAYS”

Writing from his prison cell the apostle admonishes those to whom he is writing to give thanks always, at all times.

Is he asking his Christian friends to do that which is impossible? Is he asking them to do something that he cannot do himself?

Is Paul able to give thanks when he is shut up in a prison cell, unable to get out and preach the glorious gospel, unable to move from city to city to start one new church after another?

Yes, Paul means what he says when he admonishes us to give thanks always. Never was Paul more thankful and joyous, it seems, than those times when he was confined to a prison cell. The keynote of his Letter to the Philippians (a prison Epistle) is “Rejoice!” As a matter of fact, he seems to reach the highest point of Christian experience during those quiet years of meditation and prayer during the years of his imprisonment.

Giving thanks always means to be thankful when one is young, with most of his life ahead of him, with opportunities beckoning him from all sides, when everything looks bright and rosy, “with its illusions, aspirations, dreams.”

It also means to be thankful when one is full-grown and mature, when one reaches the zenith of his physical and intellectual powers and attains his maximum efficiency in his trade or profession; when life is full and rich and satisfying.

But it also means to be thankful when one is old, when the evil days come when we shall say, “I have no pleasure in them; . . . in the day when the keepers of the house shall tremble, and the strong men shall bow themselves, and the grinders cease because they are few, and those that look out of the windows be darkened.” How good if one can say then, with Browning, “Grow old along with me!

The best is yet to be,
The last of life, for which the first was made.”

Old age, too, has its compensations and special blessings that no other age has. Hence even the old saint should give thanks that he has come so close to his eternal home.

To give thanks always must mean to be thankful in times of depression as well as in times of prosperity.

It should be easier to be thankful in times of plenty, but I wonder if the grace of gratitude is not present more in times of want than in times of abundance? When everything comes our way, aren't we less inclined to look to God for our daily bread and more inclined to accept God's blessings as though we had earned them?

Times of depression do not affect the spirit of the truly thankful heart. One who has the grace of gratitude in his heart can sing with Habakkuk: “Although the fig tree shall not blossom, neither shall fruit be in the vines; the labour of the olive shall fail, and the fields shall yield no meat; the flock shall be cut off from the fold, and there shall be no herd in the stalls; yet I will rejoice in the Lord, I will joy in the God of my salvation.” Such a one will also be able to say with Job: “The Lord gave and the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord.”

To give thanks always is to be thankful in times of sickness as well as in health.

I think you will agree with me that some of the sweetest and humblest and most grateful souls are those who cannot thank God for abounding health. Again and again we have gone to the bedside of those who have been sick and have come away feeling that we have received more of a blessing than we imparted. In other words: the illness has brought some spiritual blessing that has enriched the life. In the absence of good health, the child of God has found other things for which to be truly grateful.

To give thanks always is to be thankful when one is in the valley of gloom and sorrow as well as when one is on the mountaintop of inspiration and joy.

The psalmist said, "Though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for thou art with me." Those who have experienced the very special presence of the Lord in the valley always testify to the fact that they would not have missed the valley experience for anything, just because of the nearness of the Lord that they experienced. They have thanked God sincerely for the valley.

III. THANKING GOD FOR "ALL THINGS"

My text not only answers the question of when to give thanks, but also for what we should give thanks. And the text answers in the same superlative way—"for all things."

It is pretty hard to classify and enumerate "all things." Perhaps most of the things the apostle had in mind when he admonished us to give thanks for all things would come under one of these headings: (1) temporal blessings; (2) spiritual blessings; (3) blessings in disguise.

How much do we thank God for those everyday things that sustain our life from day to day—the indispensable air and water and food? The air and water, of course, are free gifts of God so that we do not have to buy them; that is, if we are satisfied with the kind of air and water that is provided. But even if we do pay for the food, we must recognize it as a gift of God, for if God didn't cause the crops to grow, where would we be?

But God provides not only those things that sustain life, but the things which enrich and satisfy life.

There are the beauties in this our Father's world for which we ought to give thanks.

When a friend of Charles Lamb wrote to the great writer and complained that "the world seemed drained of all its sweetness," Lamb wrote back: "Drained of its sweetness? I don't know what you mean. Are there not roses and violets still in the earth, and the sun and moon still reigning in heaven?"

Maybe, not being poets, our hearts do not respond, as that of Wordsworth, to the beauty of nature, but our hearts can be cultivated, so that they will know what the poet means when he says:

"Thanks for the human heart by which we live;
Thanks for its tenderness, its joys and fears;
To me the meanest flower that blows
Can give thoughts that do often lie too deep for tears."

There is the enrichment of life through the family circle with its happy relationships. Do we give thanks for our happy homes? We can do without many things, but if there is love and happiness in the home, we have one of the greatest blessings in life.

Do you thank God for your friends?

Do you thank God for the good books that enrich your life—if you give them a chance to do so?

What a rich heritage is ours in the books that hold the accumulated wisdom of the ages! "All that mankind has done, thought, gained, or been—it is lying as in magic preservation in the pages of books."

But greater than all these temporal blessings are those things which caused the apostle, Paul, to exclaim, "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who hath blessed us with all spiritual blessings in heavenly places in Christ," and which prompted King David to sing, "Bless the Lord, O my soul: and all that is within me, bless His holy name. Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all His benefits."

Have you noticed that even this Old Testament saint, in enumerating his blessings, puts at the top of his list the things of the spirit rather than the things of the body? It is forgiveness of sin, spiritual healing, and redemption that top the list.

Paul's list of spiritual blessings is on a still higher spiritual level, according to Ephesians. List those in the first chapter only and you will have a list big enough to keep you busy thanking God.

But the admonition to give thanks for all things calls for a still higher, or deeper, Christian experience, namely, the ability to thank God for those things that do not look like blessing at all—the difficult and unpleasant things of life. In order to give thanks for such things, we must recognize them to be blessings in disguise.

There are the disappointments of life, for which it is not easy to give thanks unless we, by faith, are able to see that so many of these are His appointments for us, whereby we are enabled to learn some lessons that we needed to learn.

Testings and sorrows, too, can be blessings in disguise, driving us into the presence of the heavenly Comforter.

Summing up the "all things" for which we should give thanks, let me quote a song that is familiar to many (translated from the Swedish):

"Thanks to God for my Redeemer;
Thanks for all Thou dost provide;
Thanks for times now but a mem'ry;
Thanks for Jesus, by my side;
Thanks for pleasant, balmy springtime;
Thanks for dark and dreary fall,
Thanks for tears by now forgotten;
Thanks for peace within my soul.

"Thanks for prayers that Thou hast answered,

Thanks for what Thou dost deny!
Thanks for storms that I have weathered,
Thanks for all Thou dost supply!
Thanks for pain, and thanks for pleasure,
Thanks for comfort in despair,

Thanks for grace that none can measure,
Thanks for love beyond compare.

"Thanks for roses by the wayside,
Thanks for thorns their stems contain!
Thanks for home and thanks for fireside,
Thanks for hope, that sweet refrain.
Thanks for joy and thanks for sorrow,
Thanks for Heavenly peace with Thee,
Thanks for hope in the tomorrow,
Thanks through all eternity."
—The Evangelical Beacon and Evangelist.

Thankful to Serve

"Send portions unto them for whom nothing is prepared," is a word of exhortation that should not be forgotten at this Thanksgiving season. We are so inclined to thank God for what we have and for what we are privileged to enjoy, that we forget those who have nothing to enjoy, in comparison to what they would love to enjoy. We are thankful for the blessings we have received, but are we thankful that we may help someone else to enjoy blessings also? We are thankful for the wealth we are made to share, but are we just as thankful when we are asked to share that wealth with others who have none? Why not sit down and take time to think about those things?—

You are more likely to fail in your career from acquiring the habit of drinking liquor than from any of the other temptations likely to assail you. . . . From the insane thirst for liquor, escape is almost impossible.—Andrew Carnegie.

MINISTER AVAILABLE FOR SUPPLY WORK

"The Rev. J. R. Forest of New Bern, North Carolina, has retired from his pastoral work at Holly Springs and is available for supply or part-time pastoral work. Brother Forest is a good preacher of the Lord Jesus Christ and is qualified to hold revivals or serve in either supply or pastoral work.

"I have had Brother Forest to supply in my pulpit and can recommend him to God's people anywhere. He will bring the message of salvation by grace through faith to any people before whom he may speak. I know by experience that there are times when the pastor is called away and the big problem is to have a supply minister.

Edgemont Church Educational Director Resigns

The Edgemont Free Will Baptist Church of Durham, North Carolina, makes the following announcement concerning the resignation of its educational director:

"At the close of the Sunday evening service, November 11, 1956, Brother Dan Merkh, our educational director, resigned to become effective February 10, 1957, or as soon as someone is secured. Brother Dan has served the family church faithfully and untiringly for the past two years. His service and that of his family will be greatly missed. However, we as a church bow humbly to the will of Him who is sending them forth to foreign fields of labor."

The full text of Brother Merkh's letter of resignation to the church was as follows:

"For the past few years I have been praying earnestly that the Lord would allow me to go to the foreign mission field. In January of 1953, I made application to the Free Will Baptist Foreign Mission Board to go to Cuba, but the Lord closed the doors suddenly.

"For the past few months, I have been extremely burdened about the Lord's will for my life concerning the mission field. Many events have taken place in the past few weeks that have proven beyond any doubt, the Lord's leading.

"I have prayed earnestly concerning this matter. After much prayer, I have become certain that the Lord has called me to the mission field. I have applied to the Free Will Baptist Foreign Mission Board for service in the Bondoukou Circle, French West Africa.

"With this letter, I herewith tender my resignation as educational director of the Edgemont Free Will Baptist Church. I will serve until someone is secured to replace me, or until February 10, 1957.

"Brother Joe, it has been a great privilege and joy to serve with you here in Edgemont. My prayers shall be with you and your work here. The past two years have not been without heartaches for both of us, but they certainly have been enjoyable years as we served the Lord and the church together.

"This letter comes with the sincere request that you and the faithful saints of this church will remember my family in prayer as we prepare to go to those who have never heard the gospel of Jesus Christ.

"May God richly bless you."

The church states: "Let each one of us who knows the Lord faithfully pray for Brother Dan and his family as they prepare to take the wonderful gospel to the regions beyond. Let us encourage many others to pray also for them. God will richly reward for faithful praying."

Fourth Annual Missionary Conference

The Rev. Joseph G. Ange, pastor of the Edgemont Free Will Baptist Church, Durham, North Carolina, gave the following report of a recently held Missionary Conference at the church in "The Edgemont Free Will Baptist Challenger," the church paper:

"Our fourth annual missionary conference was one of the greatest events in the Christian experience of many of our people in the church. We thank the Lord for the faithfulness of those that regularly attended the conference.

"Brother Taylor, director of the New Tribes Mission in Brazil; Miss Lucy Wisheart, missionary to Cuba; and Miss Volena Wilson, missionary to India; each brought challenging messages that warmed our hearts, and gave us a new vision of the teeming millions without Christ.

"Wednesday evening, Brother and Sister Lonnie Sparks, recently commissioned missionaries to French West Africa spoke for us, and challenged our hearts with the information on the work they have before them in the Bondoukou Circle. There are 185,000 people without a witness for Christ. Pray much for the Sparks as they prepare to sail for Switzerland on December 22 for language study, and then to the Ivory Coast of Africa. May God richly bless their ministry.

"We praise the Lord for the moving of the Holy Spirit in our midst during these wonderful days. Two young ladies gave their hearts to Christ, accepting Him as their personal Saviour. In an impressive service Sunday morning twenty-four young people stood across the front of the auditorium dedicating their lives to the Lord for service on the foreign fields wherever the Lord would lead them. There were six other young people that also surrendered their lives for missionary service, making a total of thirty precious young people dedicated to the Lord, to be used to win those that have never heard. May God richly bless these lives to the glory of our Saviour Jesus Christ. Pledge them your prayers.

"Sunday evening's service was climaxed by the totaling of the pledges for the following year. Our hearts were thrilled as the total was read—$10,077. Brother Ange then read Brother Merkh's resignation and the church readily responded to pledge an additional $3,000 for his equipment to the field. We praise God for this wonderful response, and we are looking for great things to be done for the Lord in the days to come.

"Continue to remember all the missionaries in your prayers. Be a prayer warrior for the foreign fields."

Questions and Answers ON THE BIBLE

Conducted by J. F. BARROW
3824 Richland Avenue, Nashville 5, Tennessee

Question: I have been a Christian something over a year and have been working with a rough crowd in the county highway department for the past five years. Several of the men delight in asking me questions, some of them Bible questions, that I can only partially answer without giving them the chapter and verse in which to find the answers. Most of these are members of the Church of Christ. How may I improve myself so as to give correct Bible answers with the right chapter and verse location. Should I refrain from an attempt to answer them?—T. G.

Answer: I have been embarrassed many times with this same problem and have not, after forty years of Christian experience, become entirely immune to such a predicament. The noted evangelist, Dwight L. Moody, offered his students the following advice, which is found on Pages 491-493 in "The Life of Dwight L. Moody," by his son, W. R. Moody:

"(1) Have for constant use a portable reference Bible, a Cruden's Concordance and a topical text book.

"(2) Always carry a Bible or Testament in your pocket, and do not be ashamed of people seeing you read it on trains, etc.

"(3) Do not be afraid of marking it or making marginal notes. Mark texts that contain promises, exhortation, warnings to sinners and to Christians, gospel invitations to the unconverted, and so on.

"(4) Set apart at least fifteen minutes a day for study and meditation. This little time will have great results and will never be regretted.

"(5) 'Prepare your heart to know the way of the Lord, and to do it' (Ezra 7:10).

"(6) Always ask God to open the eyes of your understanding that you may see the truth, and expect that He will answer your prayer.

"(7) Cast every burden of doubt upon the Lord. 'He will never suffer the righteous to be moved.' Do not be afraid to look for a reason for the hope that is in you.

"(8) Believe in the Bible as God's revelation to you, and act accordingly. Do not reject any portion because it contains the supernatural or because you cannot understand it. Reverence all Scripture. Remember God's own estimate of it: 'Thou hast magnified Thy Word above all Thy Name.'

"(9) Learn at least one verse of the Scripture each day. Verses committed to memory will be wonderfully useful in your daily life and walk. 'Thy Word have I hid in mine heart, that I might not sin against Thee.' Some Christians can quote Shakespeare and Longfellow better than the Bible.

"(10) If you are a preacher or a Sunday school teacher try at any cost to master your Bible. You ought to know it better than any one in your congregation or class.

"(11) Strive to be exact in quoting Scripture.

"(12) Adopt some systematic plan of Bible study: either topical, or by subjects, like 'The Blood,' 'Prayer,' 'Hope,' etc., or by books, or by some other plan outlined in the preceding pages.

"(13) Study to know for what and to whom each book of the Bible was written. Combine the Old Testament with the New. Study Hebrews and Leviticus together, the Acts of the apostles and the epistles, the prophets and the historical books of the Old Testament.

"(14) Study how to use the Bible so as to 'walk with God' in closer communion, also so as to gain a working knowledge of Scripture for leading others to Christ. An old minister used to say that the cries of neglected texts were always sounding in his ears, asking why he did not show how important they were.

"(15) Do not be satisfied with simply reading a chapter daily. Study the meaning of at least one verse."

About thirty-five years ago I accepted from a Bible teacher and adopted a similar plan that I have been more or less faithful in following. It has well paid. Satan will see to it that you will have times of discouragement if you are not more careful than the average Christian. He will influence you into such periods of despondence often if you are not wise to recognize his wiles and will even tempt you to think that you are such a miserable failure that you might as well give up. Do not be discouraged. Keep doing the best you can and frankly admit your inability to answer all questions. If you are wise enough to ward Satan off at every appearance of evil or tendency toward discouragement you will so keep him on the go that he will feel defeated and leave you as he did Christ in Matthew 4:11. We should also remember that every person who is not a Christian is an agent of the devil and that even though they may appear in sheep's clothing, as probably these church members are doing that inwardly they are ravening wolves. The Bible also tells us that Satan appears as an angel of light. "And no marvel; for Satan himself is transformed into an angel of light" (2 Corinthians 11:14). See Matthew 13:25, 28, 38, 39. All the cults' false doctrine and unfair questions to Christians are means of Satan's propagand scheme which should be dealt with in a similar method to that used by Christ as He dealt with His enemies the Pharisees, Sadducees, Herodians, etc. See Matthew 12:38-42.

You should pray for these unsaved people with whom you work as often as possible. Exercise a spirit of forgiveness, love and kindness in every way possible and God will begin through you to bring conviction upon them and then salvation to them. Remember as you work, pray and live so as to be an example that souls are being weighed in the balance for their eternal destiny. If you were to work a whole life time under the worst of circumstances and one soul should be saved from an eternal hell by your efforts it would well be worth it. "For what shall it profit a man, if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul? Or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?" (Mark 8:36, 37). See Matthew 18:13, 14.

Thanksgiving Nugget

Give thanks in everything! Is it possible? Yes, if we acknowledge God as supreme in our lives. Circumstances may rise against us and our plans thwarted. But God, no doubt, has something better for us. He is love to us, heads us off from the fulfillment of our plans into His paths. His ways are so much higher than our ways, though we cannot see. In all your ways acknowledge God, and your life will be a continual fountain of joy and thanksgiving, bringing happiness and blessing to others.—Gospel Herald.

How to Be a Leader

I have three precious things which I hold fast and prize. The first is gentleness, the second is frugality, and the third is humility, which keeps me from putting myself before others. Be gentle, and you can be bold; be frugal, and you can be liberal; avoid putting yourself before others, and you can become a leader among men.

The Lighted Pathway

Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path
(PSALM 119:105).

REV. WILLET L. MORETZ
SWANNANOA, N. C.

"Now when Daniel knew that the writing was signed, he went into his house; and his windows being open in his chamber toward Jerusalem, he kneeled upon his knees three times a day, and prayed, and gave thanks before his God, as he did aforetime" (Daniel 6:10).

What did Daniel, a captive in a strange and unfriendly land, have to be thankful for? The reading of the whole book of Daniel will answer the question. He could have said in the words of the poet:

"Thine infinite goodness our tongues shall employ;
Thou givest us richly all things to enjoy;
We'll follow Thy footsteps, we'll rest in Thy love,
And soon we shall praise Thee in mansions above."

Though Daniel had to suffer for awhile, and he encountered things he did not understand, his faith and trust in his God was never shaken—not even to escape the lions' den. Instead he kneeled upon his knees three times a day, and prayed, and gave thanks before his God.

Once more we come to the day of special thanksgiving. We turn our thoughts backward and reflect the blessings of the past year. We must once more realize that the days have rolled on into seasons, and the seasons into another year. Each day has been crowded with many things. Many good things. Some bad ones. But more good than bad, I am persuaded, for each day and each season has brought forth new proofs of the loving forethought and goodness of God. As we turn our thoughts backward and reflect upon the blessings of God and with grateful hearts express to Him our gratitude for all His loving kindnesses, we should look to the future and trust Him to continue to surround us with His care and blessings. As we thank Him for blessings, enjoyments, and for all the good that has been given to this generation in its manifold forms, we should ask Him to help us to realize how many greater and better things He has waiting for us in the future.

In these days of uncertainty I hear people say, "What have we to be thankful for?" I answer, "We have our homes and loved ones. We have health and plenty to eat. We have friends, without which life would be miserable. We are privileged to live in the greatest and best country in the world. We should all appreciate these and thank God for them. But," I continue, "we have greater than these to be grateful to God for. We have our spiritual blessings. We should thank God for His love and mercy for us. We should thank Him for His Son, our Saviour. We should be grateful for faith and salvation, and for membership in the Church, His Body, for fellowship with Jesus and other born-again Christians. We should be thankful for the opportunities we have to serve God and man."

In Psalm 103:2 the psalmist said, "Bless the LORD, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits." Now, please read Verses 3, 4, 5, and 6 to learn what the benefits are that we must not forget. A well nigh universal tendency of human nature is to forget the good and remember the bad. In the verses cited above the psalmist lists a number of blessings to be remembered. Read them again and count them for yourselves. They are precious to all those who are His.

Are these following lines our attitude toward God? I pray not:

"Mid pleasure plenty, and success,
Freely we take from Him who lends:
We boast the blessings we possess,
Yet scarcely thank the One who sends.

"But let affliction pour its smart,
How soon we quail beneath the rod!
With shattered pride, and prostrate heart,
We seek the long-forgotten God."
—Eliza Cook.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

Full Accreditation Seen By 1958 For Mount Olive College

The North Carolina College Conference's committee on standards said last week that a change in the curriculum and improvements in the library will virtually assure Mount Olive Junior College, Mount Olive, North Carolina, full accreditation for the 1958-59 school year.

And college president, W. Burkette Raper, said that it would be done.

Present progress now indicates that students who enroll in September, 1957, will be virtually assured of graduation under accredited standards and thus would find that credits earned at Mount Olive Junior College would be accepted by any other college in North Carolina. Students transferring from Mount Olive Junior College are now being accepted at East Carolina College, Atlantic Christian College and the Free Will Baptist Bible College in Nashville, Tennessee.

The committee on standards reported to the College Conference in session last week at Winston-Salem that Mount Olive College should delete its education courses and add mathematics courses and bring its library up to standards before being given an accredited status.

The committee told the conference that it was well pleased with the progress made by the school and said it hoped the college would make the necessary improvements for the 1957 session, "... and thus operate up to standard conditions as of that year."

"This would entitle them to full accreditation as a junior college for the 1958-59 year," the committee reported.

Raper said the committee members expressed confidence that the school is on a firm academic basis, is operating on sound educational principles, and "is moving entirely in the right direction."

Even before the conference convened, college officials had launched a drive to obtain enough books to bring the library up to standards.

Mount Olive Junior College was established three years ago. It was given strong community support in a fund-raising campaign conducted earlier this year.

THANKSGIVING

We are now at the threshold of another Thanksgiving Day. We have a great many things to thank our Lord for. Personally, I want to thank the Lord for the physical strength and spiritual strength that my Lord has given to me. I am so unworthy of all the blessings that He has showered upon me. I thank the Lord that I am able to preach three times Sunday after Sunday. At 8:00 a. m. each Sunday morning, rain or shine, I am at the WOOW Broadcasting Station witnessing for my Lord. Then at 9:45 a. m. I attend Sunday school, at 11:00 a. m. worship service, at 6:15 p. m., the league, and at 7:30 p. m., preaching services again. Sometimes in the afternoons I conduct a funeral, administer baptism, or visit and pray for some sick or lost person. So I thank God for a busy life.

We thank God for health and strength. We thank the Lord for keeping us busy. We thank God for friends. We thank God for letting us know that we are more than conquerors through Christ, our Lord.

Overcoming Grace

We thank the Lord for overcoming grace. "For whatsoever is born of God overcometh the world: and this is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith" (1 John 5:4). The true child of God has something that is greater than all the temporal blessings. There is nothing so great as the joy that fills the heart of the truly born again child of God. While we thank God for the food for our physical man, we thank Him more for the Bread of Life. That Bread that came down from heaven.

The Psalmist gave thanks thus: "O give thanks unto the LORD; for he is good: because his mercy endureth for ever. Let Israel now say, that his mercy endureth for ever. Let the house of Aaron now say, that his mercy endureth for ever. Let them now that fear the LORD say, that his mercy endureth for ever. I called upon the LORD in distress: the LORD answered me, and set me in a large place. The LORD is on my side; I will not fear: what can man do unto me? The LORD taketh my part with them that help me: therefore shall I see my desire upon them that hate me. It is better to trust in the LORD than to put confidence in man" (Psalm 118:1-8).

It is imagined and told as a story that the Lord sent out two angels with baskets. One was to collect a basket of petitions and the other was to get a basket of thanks. The one that was sent out to the earth for petitions soon returned to heaven with a basket full of petitions, while the other angel was gone for days and finally returned with a few thanks in his basket.

We are so prone to covet and pray for the richest blessings that God has in store for those who meet the conditions for receiving, but when we get the blessings that we sought, and perhaps begged God to give us, then we forget to thank Him for that which we received. Jesus healed ten lepers. There were ten of them, but listen to what Jesus said. "And Jesus answering said, Were there not ten cleansed? but where are the nine? There are not found that returned to give glory to God, save this stranger. And he said unto him, Arise, go thy way: thy faith hath made thee whole" (Luke 17:17-19).

The story of these lepers is about like humanity as a whole. We are always wanting to get a blessing from the One who is able to give, but we are so prone to forget that blessing. There are people who sit down to their tables and gobble up the food prepared for the sustenance of the natural body and never so much as ask God to bless and sanctify the food, thus eating like a pig eating acorns as fast as he can open his mouth to swallow them and never looking up to see where the acorns come from. Yes, there are a lot of members of the human family who never thank God for the blessing of food.

The Unsaved Cannot Give Thanks

Only those who have been born again can really give thanks. Those who are saved have to be Spirit filled before they can really give thanks in the Spirit of our God. Christ give thanks unto God the Father for the fellowship existing between Father and Son. And since God is a Spirit, we have to be in the Spirit of God, even possessed by the Spirit, not half way filled, but completely filled in order to render without reservations, the full and complete thanks that is acceptable unto God. Thus the Psalmist writes again: "O give thanks unto the LORD, for he is good: for his mercy endureth for ever. Let the redeemed of the LORD say so, whom he hath redeemed from the hand of the enemy" (Psalm 107:1, 2). Now if we are redeemed we ought to say, "O give thanks unto the Lord, . . . for his mercy endureth for ever."

We Should Talk His Praises

Psalm 105:1, 2 reads: "O give thanks unto the LORD; call upon his name: make known his deeds among the people. Sing unto him, sing psalms unto him: talk ye of all his wondrous works."

If we would only talk about Jesus as much as we talk about football and baseball! We hear news on Monday mornings from the field of sports telling who won and who lost the games played on the Lord's Day. Thousands and thousands of people think more of these games than they do the salvation of lost men and women. Yes, they are willing to give their souls in exchange for the games on Sunday. In many instances they are church members, but they love baseball and football and other sports better than they love the Lord. Thus they are absent from the church of the living God, and thus their praises are long and loud for the works of the flesh, but they are dumb when they should speak for the Lord Jesus. They spurn the church. They never hear a sermon. They have no use for the church except when they get married or when their funeral is to be preached. Sometimes I think it is not right to take a man after he dies to the place that he had no use for while he was living. I really do not know that God is pleased when a Christ-rejecting blasphemer, who spurned the house of worship and never had the spirit of thankfulness, is rolled down to the altar where flowers are piled around him and the preacher is at a loss as what to say. Yes, there is a question in my mind. Should the altar be occupied by a dead body whose knees never bowed before God and gave thanks for God's many blessings, especially for the gift of God's Son and the salvation that He brought to man?

"Bless the LORD, O my soul: and all that is within me, bless his holy name. Bless the LORD, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits" (Psalm 103:1, 2).

Let us thank the Lord for a free country where we can worship God according to the dictates of our conscience. Let us strive to keep that liberty and not sell it to any totalitarian powers, either religious or political. "Make a joyful noise unto God, all ye lands: Sing forth the honor of his name: make his praise glorious" (Psalm 66:1, 2).

STORIES

—FOR OUR—

BOYS and GIRLS

A New Thanksgiving

Edna Conn

Paul was crippled from polio and felt he had nothing to be thankful for until . . .

THE front door banged loudly as Fred and Jimmy bounded down the steps. They raced boyishly across the yard, their young faces flushed with happiness. With shouts of joy the fence was cleared and they landed gleefully on the sloping hillside below.

Jimmy rolled over and came up panting, "Boy! Tomorrow is Thanksgiving Day at last, I can hardly wait."

"Thanksgiving at Grandmother's!" shouted Fred. "Let's hurry home and see if Mother has everything about ready."

As the two boys hurried up the street, the strained face of their cousin remained at the window. When the last sounds of their exuberant laughter had gone Paul relaxed and lay back on his pillow. The large tears that slid so easily down the pallid face were not enough to relieve the bursting ache of his heart. For he, too, had wonderful memories of Thanksgiving at Grandmother Bruce's. But he would not be there tomorrow! No, the delights of the autumn woodlands and the festive gaiety of the loved occasion would not be his this time. Jimmy and Fred would have to enjoy them without him now. Since the dreadful time early in the summer, when he had been stricken with polio, Paul had been a cripple. All through the long summer the terrible sickness and pain had been there. But now that he was improving, his crippled condition distressed him more than ever. The brisk, invigorating tang of the autumn air stirred him, and the adventuresome vigor of his spirit rose in rebellion against the crippled body.

For a long time he lay there sobbing, his heart crushed with the hopelessness of his desire to be normal again. Then, as if by force of habit, he reached for the radio dial.

The soft strains of a familiar hymn came forth. As the beautiful music continued, his mind followed easily with the words,

"Praise God from whom all blessings flow, Praise Him ye creatures here below—"

He listened almost without emotion as the minister said a few words about the spirit of Thanksgiving and then began to read reverently from the hundredth Psalm,

"Make a joyful noise unto the Lord, all ye lands . . . Enter into his gates with thanksgiving, and into his courts with praise: be thankful unto him, and bless his name. For the Lord is good . . ."

Suddenly a feeling of rebellion and bitterness filled the heart of the boy as never before. Turning the radio abruptly off, he flung himself on his side, burying his face in his arm and wept violently.

"Ohoooo," he moaned aloud to himself, "What do I have to be thankful for? I can't enjoy anything when I have to lie here all the time. Why, why can't I be well and strong again? Then I could be thankful. This is one time I don't have anything to be thankful for." But soon the overwhelming bitterness of Paul's heart was so great that even words failed him and he was completely lost in his weeping. When his mother looked in a few minutes later the warm sunlight lay caressingly across his thin shoulders, and she knew by his measured breathing that he had found consolation in sleep.

Meanwhile, it was as though Paul had been restored again to his natural health, and the wonderful flow of strength and life in his legs sent him racing over the meadow toward the home of his favorite playmate. How wonderful to be free again! How thankful he was that he could actually run as the other boys did! The very feel of his agile legs in motion thrilled him. He felt as though he could never be unhappy again. Bill was a real pal and had been so faithful to visit and read with him every day. How happy he would be to see him well again.

"Hi, Bill! Bill! Look! I can run again," he shouted, as he came near the place where his chum stood.

But the surly Bill who returned his greeting was a different Bill from the one Paul had always known. "Aw, go on! Who cares. It doesn't matter to me." He muttered disagreeably.

"But, Bill, I—You—" Paul stammered uncertainly.

"You go on home. I don't have time to be bothered," mumbled Bill.

It was as though he had been slapped in the face. Suddenly it didn't matter quite so much if he could run. Paul looked at the sullen boy with dismay. Could this be his buddy? Could the best friend he had be so strange and unkind to him? Turning slowly he walked with leaden steps toward home. Mother would be there with her smile and loving care for him, and he felt now as if he needed to see her very much.

Remembering that it was lunch time, Paul began to walk faster. Mother seemed to know just what boys liked, and he always looked forward to mealtime with the family. Eagerly he opened the kitchen door and burst in, shouting loudly,

"Mother, Mot—" The words stuck in his throat. Oh, what could be wrong? Something terrible had happened! The room which had always been so clean and cheerful looked cold and barren; and instead of the expected comfort of his mother's smile he met the sullen stare of a hardfaced stranger.

"Be quiet," she said angrily, "and quit slamming the door, what do you want anyway?"

"I, I—where's Mother?" Paul whispered fearfully. "I thought it was time for lunch."

"What do you want your mother for? You were not thankful for her when she was here. After all, you should be glad I'm here to fix you some grub!"

Shuffling lazily across the room she thrust before him a bowl of cold, tasteless mush.

"Take this and be glad to get it," she snorted. "Some people have less."

Frightened almost beyond understanding, Paul sat down weakly on a nearby chair and struggled to swallow the sticky mush. Overcome with heaviness of heart, he longed for Miss Arnold, his private teacher. For the past few weeks she had spent two hours with Paul every afternoon. Her patient teaching and kindness had so endeared her to the heart of her pupil that he loved her and was always cheered by her visits.

"I'll go to my room now and have the books ready when my teacher comes," he said quickly, hoping to escape the foreboding presence of the grouchy old woman.

"Never mind that," the woman growled, "I've told Miss Arnold to stay away from here. There's plenty I can teach the likes of you."

On hearing this Paul jumped up, rushed wildly from the room and into his own bedroom. Blinded by tears he flung himself across his bed and gave way to the pent up flood of fear and sorrow within him.

Paul slowly became conscious of the warm November sun across his body. He rolled over with a groan. Then he sleepily opened his eyes and realized that he had been dreaming. In the kitchen he heard brisk footsteps which he knew to be those of his lovely mother. How good it was to know that she was there. He had never thought of it like that before exactly, but actually he was very thankful to have her so near.

A warm feeling welled within him because he knew that his terrible dream was not true. The good smell of fried chicken was much better than a cold bowl of mush, even though he had never been thankful for good food before.

Presently, the distant sound of a long whistle came to him through the open window, and Paul knew that his old pal, Bill, would be there soon to keep him company until time for his afternoon lessons with Miss Arnold.

"Oh, I am so very thankful," Paul said aloud. "There are so many things to be thankful for, even if I can't walk. Let's see—how does the rest of that verse go? Oh, yes, I remember now—'For the Lord is good; his mercy is everlasting; and his truth endureth to all generations.'"—The Lighted Pathway.

getting along better than I have for some time."

"I do praise God for answered prayers in the past and for prayer warriors. I know there is nothing impossible with God."

"I have felt real blessings from the fact that as I was praying, others were praying also, and above all else that we pray to a prayer-answering God whom we can stay in contact with when we keep sin out of our lives."

We also have a few prayer requests. We have a few unspoken requests from people who are especially burdened for lost loved ones, sick loved ones and other burdens. We have requests for the Free Will Baptists Church at Arapahoe, North Carolina, and the West End Free Will Baptist Mission at Morehead City, North Carolina.

S. C. District Auxiliary Holds Clinic

The South Carolina District Auxiliary met November 10, at the First Free Will Baptist Church, Florence, South Carolina, for their annual clinic. Seventy-one ladies from the various churches attended for information and inspiration.

The meeting was opened with the singing of "Saviour, Like A Shepherd Lead Us." The host church then presented the devotions. A discussion of our mission fields and missionaries was then given with the participants wearing costumes of the country which they represented. They were as follows: India, Mrs. Billy Morris; Cuba, Mrs. Norman Ard; Africa, Mrs. Myrtis Carnes; Japan, Mrs. Fletcher Johnson.

After the group sang the Co-Laborer hymn and enlistment skit, "Introducing the Woman's Auxiliary," was given. Those taking part were Mrs. Ruby Lee Saverance, Mrs. Wilbur Lee, Mrs. E. D. Coker and Mrs. Julius Vause.

A recess was held for refreshments. Following the recess discussion groups were held for the local officers and chairmen led by the district officers.

"Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity," we are told by King David. If it was true in his day, we can be sure it is true in our day. Have you ever experienced strife and misunderstanding in your home? Wasn't it a hard and bitter thing to bear? There is nothing good and nothing pleasant about a home where the members never agree on anything and where never a pleasant word or a word of praise is spoken. Paul tells us in Hebrews 13:1: "Let brotherly love continue." When we love our family we will dwell together in unity.

Now, what about our Christian family? When we were born physically we became a member of our earthly family and now bear that name. Paul tells us in 1 Corinthians 12:12-31 that when we are born again spiritually we become a member of Christ's body and bear the name of Christian. This Scripture is too long to quote here, but if you will get your Bible and read it you will see that we are all one in Christ. As a family of Christians we should remember what David has told us in Psalm 133:1 which we have already given. It is a sad thing when we look about us and see so many Christians not dwelling in unity, but making harsh accusations and criticisms of one another. Truly, as James tells us, "But the tongue can no man tame; it is an unruly evil, full of deadly poison" (James 3:8). If only we would pray more and talk less, praise more and criticize less, we would be taking the right step toward dwelling together in unity. We also need to practice letting brotherly love continue in all we do. When we really love someone we are ready and willing to overlook his faults and even find excuses for them. Prayer warriors, let us join in praying that Christians everywhere will let brotherly love continue and will sincerely strive to dwell together in unity. Thus we will experience more happiness and fellowship in our Christian family.

Here are a few short testimonies about the Prayer Band. If you feel you have been blessed through the Prayer Band, send me your testimony and let us share it:

Deep Run, N. C.—The Woman's Auxiliary of the Gray Branch Free Will Baptist Church held its regular meeting November 6, 1956. It was opened with a song, "Saviour Like a Shepherd Lead Us." Mrs. Alvin Deaver then led the group in prayer. The roll was called with fourteen members present.

During the business the following new officers were elected: Mrs. Dorothy Humphrey, president; Mrs. Betty Jean Stanley, vice-president; Mrs. J. E. Smith, secretary; Mrs. Alvin Deaver, treasurer; Mrs. W. B. Smith, program chairman; Mrs. Fleta Stroud, enlistment chairman; Mrs. J. B. Starnes, orphanage chairman; Mrs. Robert Pike, reporter.

An interesting program was presented with the following participants: Nora Smith, Adelle Deaver, Pearl Smith, Dorothy Humphrey and Fleta Stroud.

The benediction was pronounced by the president, Mildred Cauley. The ladies then enjoyed a social period with Mrs. Fleta Stroud acting as hostess.

Morehead City, N. C.—The Woman's Auxiliary of the Faith Free Will Baptist Church met Monday evening, November 5, at 7:30, for its regular monthly meeting. Following the business session, the program was presented. Participating in the program were Mrs. Jerry Rowe, Mrs. Roland Barbour, Mrs. Nettie Daniels, Mrs. John P. Morton and Mrs. Donnie Mason. After the meeting was dismissed the ladies enjoyed refreshments.

Instead of aspiring to supremacy, the child of God is self-denying and willing to serve. The most humble service is a joy because it is done through love for the Lord.—M. E. M.

Prayer and Praise Letter

November 6, 1956

Dear Friends,

As I look back over the month of October, I can hardly realize we have been so many places and had the privilege of seeing so many of you for the first time. I am speaking especially of our visit to the Arkansas, Oklahoma and Texas State Associations, the itinerate in Oklahoma and to be sure, the annual missionary conference held here in Nashville, Tennessee. Every service was blessed by the Lord and proved a challenge to my own heart. Thanks to each of you who helped to make them a success.

Since February 1948, Mrs. Hubert B. Sloan has been working with me as secretary-bookkeeper. First, in the pastorate and then with the foreign mission department. She is efficient help and we are grateful for her services.

Each piece of mail is given personal attention, and care is taken to see that your foreign mission gifts are properly posted. When in Nashville you are invited to visit our office and inspect our books at any time. We believe that we are in the greatest business in the world, and we want to do our best, but we must have your help.

Passage secured for Sparks. Steamship passage to LeHavre, France, has been secured for Rev. and Mrs. Lonnie Sparks. Their sailing date is scheduled for December 22. Please Pray that all formalities re-passports and visas will be worked out. From LaHavre, the Sparks will go to Emmaus Bible Institute, Lausanne, Switzerland, for language study before going on to Africa.

Our African Field and its People. French territory in Africa is a vast holding about the size of the U. S. A. This large territory is divided into three large provinces: French Equatorial Africa, French West Africa and Algeria. Each of these large provinces is divided into smaller states. The Ivory Coast is one of the smaller states which is a portion of French West Africa. The area ceded to the Free Will Baptists is the Bondoukou Circle of the Ivory Coast. The word Circle in no way means that the area is circular, it is merely an area which is put under the care of the French Commander located there.

The area has very few roads, and no railroads. One main road runs the full length of the territory and is supposed to be a year around road, however there is a time in the worst rainy season when sections of it are impossible. The few smaller roads are passable about eight months of the year. Great sections of the country can only be reached on foot, bicycle or possibly by motorcycle.

Except a comparatively small portion of the district in the extreme north, the country is covered with thick jungle forest. The people of the very southern portion plant cocoa and coffee beans for market. The people further north have very little income and just plant gardens for food.

Very little medical care has been provided for the people. There is nothing in the north, but in the southern portion African male nurses have been placed in a very few of the more strategic villages. These nurses only dispense medicines. There are no hospital facilities whatsoever.

Educational facilities are extremely limited, however there is a forward advance in building schools by the government in conjunction with the local chiefs. This movement is only in the southern portion where the people are more advanced. The Lobis have no schools. A limited proportion of the men have made use of available education and have gone away to distant places in French West Africa to study and now they are holding government positions, in the teaching profession, government offices, the police, the army, etc. The tremendous majority of the people are still completely illiterate.

To properly man this new field of almost 200,000 people we will need to build four mission stations. The cost of constructing mission stations in this area is fantastic. It is estimated that to build a small house for the missionaries, a school and perhaps a dispensary will cost approximately $10,000.00. We hope to start our first building just as soon as funds and personnel are available. Please pray with us that God might direct some state or states to adopt the building of one of these stations as their own project. We would be happy to work with some group or even an individual, who might be interested in this project, as a memorial for the glory of God and the salvation of souls in Africa. Please pray that the Lord will supply these needs!

Hanna's Have New Baby! October 24, 1956. "We were very glad to welcome the arrival of little Donald Timothy this morning at 1:24. He weighs seven pounds, is twenty-one inches long, has dark hair, but otherwise looks very much like Brenda Kay. Both he and Marie are fine." Carlisle Hanna, India.

Calvary's write from Japan! "We are becoming adjusted quite rapidly. We've been quite busy getting the house fixed up before winter. As it is a new house several little things were not finished, but we enjoy it so much and we should stay warm.

"The Sunday school group and Sunday night meeting meets in our house. About 50 children are coming and we've divided them into three groups with a Christian helping to teach. We've only had the Sunday night group two times and Wesley did the teaching. The language is still very difficult. The young Christian who was planning to come with us decided to go to Bible College and the girl who also planned to come became ill and is still in the hospital. We are very much in need of a language teacher and Japanese Christian help. Please pray that the Lord will supply these needs."

General Fund is Low! You will notice by the financial report that the General Fund is quite low. Actually, the bulk of our expenses are paid from the general fund after the first of each month. This means, of course, that after all checks are written we cripple our general fund tremendously. Please pray with us that we may continue to operate all accounts in the black. We need approximately $10,000.00 per month for November and December to meet our quota by December 31. HOW DOES YOUR STATE STAND?

"Be careful for nothing; but in every thing by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your requests be made known unto God" (Philippians 4:6).

Let Not Your Heart Be Troubled

(Lesson for December 2)

Lesson: John 14:1-14.

Golden Text: John 14:1.

I. INTRODUCTION

The disciples were beset with anxiety. Although Jesus had referred to His death on several occasions, they still could not seem to understand the fullness of His words. They looked for Him to set up an earthly kingdom immediately and reign forever. Thus, they became confused when He began to tell of His death. The questions of Thomas and Philip, which will be discussed later, expressed their confusion and lack of understanding concerning His identity and mission in the world.

What troubles people's hearts today? Volumes of illustrations might be given of professed Christians who do not experience the deep-seated peace which Christ offers. Let us notice some of the factors responsible for it:

(1) They are best with anxiety. Like the disciples on this occasion, they worry about what is going to happen to them in the future. They have difficulty in making decisions and, after they have made a choice, they are afraid they have decided wrongly. Often they develop a philosophy of defeatism which affects them adversely, as well as others around them.

(2) They live in constant fear of earthly loss. They attach such importance to gaining material wealth, popularity and selfish pleasures that they can never be satisfied. Because of the fear of losing these things instead of accumulating more, they drive themselves to so much activity that they have very little time for restful fellowship with God. They appear to live for this life only and are afraid of death.

(3) They let disappointment and sorrow make them indifferent, and even bitter, toward Christ and the church. They cannot see that "... all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose" (Romans 8:28).—The Bible Student (F. W. B.).

II. HELPFUL HINTS

1. The greatest ease for a troubled soul comes from tusting faith in the Lord Jesus Christ (Vs. 1).

2. When Jesus gets the heavenly mansions prepared, He will come for those who are looking for Him (Vv. 2, 3).

3. Those who know Christ as Saviour and Lord should know where He is and how to get there (Vv. 4, 5).

4. Jesus is the way to the Father's house, and those who would go there must believe on the Son (Vs. 6).

5. Those who know the Father or either His Son know the other also for the two are one (Vv. 7-9).

6. How Christ and the Father can be the same is a truth known by faith though it cannot be explained (Vv. 10, 11).

7. The miracles done by the servants of Christ seemed greater because they were done by feeble men (Vs. 12).

8. Whatever we ask of Christ He will do, if we ask it in faith and according to His will (Vv. 13, 14).—The Bible Teacher (F. W. B.).

III. ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

1. One day the writer was visiting in a Jewish home in Western Michigan with a lady missionary. Our Jewish host seemed quite genial and open to the truth but suddenly he turned on us and said, "Where was God when Hitler killed six and a half million Jews?" Then he pictured in their gruesome details the terrible tortures which the Jewish people had endured under the Nazi regime. With each detail which he recounted, he threw out a fresh suggestion that God was unrighteous. For a moment I was taken aback, but my companion had had a similar experience before, and she was ready for him.

With equal vehemence she queried, "When the Children of Israel came out of Egypt how many were killed? When they were taken out of Pharaoh's clutches, how many perished?" He had to admit that there were none. "Why?" she flung at him. "Because God was with them." Then she made him face the inevitable alternative, "If the Children of Israel came out of Egypt without one perishing, because God was with them, then six and a half million Jews died in Germany because God was not with them." Our host was silenced and then the way was open for me to step in and preach Christ, the only One who could bring comfort to troubled hearts.—T. R. Kendall, D. D.

3. "I am the Way, the Truth, and the Life: no man cometh unto the Father, but by me." Man, in his spiritual blindness, says, "All religions are good. They all lead to the same place." It is true that all false religions lead to the same place: hell! There is but one Way to heaven: "I am the Way," said Jesus.

A man, who trusted in his own imagined goodness for salvation, dreamed one night that he was occupied with the task of constructing a ladder which was to reach from earth to heaven. Whenever the dreamer did a good deed, the ladder went up higher. When an extra good deed was performed, the progress toward the skies was correspondingly accelerated. So, in the course of the years, the ladder passed out of sight of the earth, clear up into the clouds. But, at last, when the "do-gooder" was about to step off the topmost round onto the golden street in glory, a voice cried out, "He that . . . climbeth up some other way . . . is a thief and a robber!" Down came the ladder with a mighty crash! The startled dreamer awoke. He had learned his lesson: "Not by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to his mercy he saved us" (Titus 3:5).—The Bible Expositor.

3. His words, "I will come again" (Vs. 3), give present meaning to the future promise. He not only prepared the place but it is He who will bring us there. The blessed hope of Christ's return is the Christian's greatest comfort and his mightiest incentive to useful and holy living.

4. This world is one which magnifies power, and it is good to remember that Christ's followers are not here in a world of sin and need as a little group of pious, hymn-singing weaklings, hoping that some time in the future there shall be a glorious day in a brighter land.

Note the blessed words of Jesus, "He that believeth on me" (Vs. 12). The army of God carries the royal banner of faith in a living Christ. They are told by the Lord that they shall do greater works (Vs. 12) than He. As a matter of fact, He only began His work on earth; its greatest development was to be the joyous privilege of His followers.

5. We have not lived up to this great promise, but the resources are there, and by His grace we shall do better. Note the "blank check" on all the resources of God which is given to us in Verse 14: "If ye shall ask anything in my name, I will do it." Faith fills in this check under the guidance of the Holy Spirit. Men of God have known how to use it. Moody did. So did Muller, Livingstone, Hudson Taylor—and we might add to the list indefinitely. Shall we dare to trust God in our day and add another name to the list of those who have dared to ask by faith and receive the promise?—Moody Monthly.

Thanksgiving

LIBRARY
DUKE UNIVERSITY
DURHAM, N. C.

COM

MORE than three hundred years ago, in the early fall in 1621, the first Thanksgiving Day was observed.

Governor Bradford, the governor of Massachusetts, issued a proclamation setting aside a day "For thanksgiving unto God for the plenteous harvest." On the appointed day, after attending church and listening to a three-hour sermon, the colonists and friendly Indians came together for the Thanksgiving dinner.

What a wonderful time they had, with wild turkey, pumpkin pie and scores of other tempting foods. But with all their feasting and their merry-makings they did not forget to thank God for His blessings.

Today, more than three hundred years later, Christians can enter into the spirit of that first Thanksgiving Day.

What do Christians have to be thankful for? In the first place they are thankful because they know that they are sinners. The Lord Jesus Christ said: "I am come not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance" (Luke 5:32). The truth about this matter is that everyone is a sinner, and that no one will ever be saved except they recognize their wretched condition and cry "God be merciful to me a sinner" (Luke 18:13).

Christians are also thankful because they do not have to save themselves. If they were saved by their own efforts, they could never have any peace or assurance, because they would never know when they had done enough to save themselves. God makes it very plain in His Book that it is "not by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to his mercy he saved us" (Titus 3:5), and that "it is the gift of God: not of works, lest any man should boast" (Ephesians 2:8, 9).

Christians are also thankful for the blessings that their God showers upon them as He "daily loadeth us with benefits." He supplies every need, and He makes "all things (whether of joy or sorrow) work together for good to them that love God" (Romans 8:28).

Christians are also thankful for the glorious future that awaits them for "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him" (1 Corinthians 2:9).

Even if you are not a Christian you have much to be thankful for. All the temporal blessings that you enjoy come from God's hand, for "He maketh his sun to rise on the evil and on the good, and sendeth rain on the just and on the unjust" (Matthew 5:45).

Then, too, you ought to be thankful that you have been spared to hear God's message of salvation. Although God hates your sin, He does love you and He "is longsuffering to usward, not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance" (2 Peter 3:9). "For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him, should not perish, but have everlasting life" (John 3:16). Accept this gift, believe God's Word, receive God's Son, the Lord Jesus Christ, as your personal Saviour and you will be able to say with all born again Christians: "Thanks be unto God for his unspeakable gift" (2 Corinthians 9:15).—Color-Tone.

ROCKY MOUNT CHURCH DEDICATES CHURCH AUDITORIUM

The First Free Will Baptist Church of Rocky Mount, North Carolina, dedicated its church auditorium in a very impressive service Sunday, November 18, 1956. The dedication service was held at 1:15 p. m., followed by the burning of the mortgage and the laying of the corner stone. The Rev. Billy B. Walker is pastor of the Rocky Mount Church.

EDITORIAL

BROADER CHURCH AFFILIATIONS

In recent issues we have dedicated two editorials to church government as it is generally administered in our denomination. One article dealt essentially with government within the local church, while the other discussed chiefly the relationship of the local church to the district body with which it was affiliated. We shall now consider the flow of this fellowship from the local church through the district body on to the state organization and thence to the national organization.

The state organization is of vital importance in that it is designed to coordinate the efforts and activities of all the churches. Union meetings and district bodies into one general state program of work. Just as the local church is enabled to engage in certain activities by affiliating itself with the district body which it could not undertake alone, so the churches within a given state are enabled to administer certain undertakings from this level which are too large for any single district body. Observation of our work over the years has appeared to indicate that sponsorship of such ventures as establishing orphanages, educational institutions, youth camps and church extension within the given state has been best administered from the state level. Since district organizations, for the most part, have not appeared able to finance these endeavors upon a large enough scale to meet the requirements in terms of facilities, state organizations have combined the financial strength of all the districts to render outstanding service in most of these fields.

Perhaps one of the greatest challenges to our denominational growth lies at this state level. Most of the states in which our work has grown beyond one district organization have state organizations; however, in all the states from which we have information, there are churches and district bodies which are not affiliated with the state bodies. In such cases the state programs are losing financial support which they might be receiving, and the nonaffiliated bodies are losing the inspiration and opportunity of being contributors to, and sharers in, the worthwhile endeavors of the state bodies. Every state officer, together with every person officially connected with the state institutions and enterprises, should constantly strive to bring all Free Will Baptist groups in their state into active participation in the state organization. To neglect any group because it is small or is not strong financially is mercenary. The weaker groups perhaps need the ministry of the state organization worse than many of the stronger district organizations. Here is an opportunity to obey the injunction of the apostle, "We then that are strong ought to bear the infirmities of the weak, . . ." (Romans 15:1).

On the other hand, many church groups are outside the state organizations, not because the state group is not anxious that they should be affiliated but because they themselves fail to affiliate. They offer various excuses for not belonging to their state organizations; but when all is said and done, the real reason is that they just do not comprehend the full purpose of the state body or the added service they might render to Christ through cooperative effort with others of like precious faith in their state.

From the state organization the fellowship and cooperative efforts of Free Will Baptists extend to the National Association. This organization is designed to administer those phases of denominational service to Christ which cannot be most effectively executed at any lower level.

In our opinion, the administration of our program of foreign missions must be handled from this highest level. No state organization can be strong enough to open mission fields, station and equip the field and support the work adequately. This will remain so, at least until some state becomes much stronger than any one of them is at the present time. We believe it would weaken the over-all program of the denomination if any state should attempt it. What we must do is to gear all our state programs to support the National Foreign Mission Board in its program.

That phase of home missions which sends workers into other countries of our continent, and which strives to organize churches in states where we have none, is rightfully charged to the National Board of Home Missions. Each state should put forth every effort possible to organize churches within its boundaries; but at the present time the national board is engaging in such work in cooperation with some state organization which perhaps could not accomplish the task alone. All state bodies should develop the programs to the point that they would not need to call upon the national board for help. The national board will need to use its funds to expand our work in areas where we are not already established. When churches and individuals give money to home missions, they should be sure to give proportionately to both the program in their state and to the national program.

It seems that the educational program of the denomination is pointing toward a national program of higher education for ministers and full-time Christian workers. Free Will Baptist Bible College of Nashville, Tennessee, is doing a very effective work in this field. It is receiving students from all over the denomination and giving them Bible college training to equip them for the ministry and other full-time Christian work. In addition to this, the State Convention of North Carolina has organized Mount Olive College, Mount Olive, North Carolina, and has set up its curriculum to offer standard junior college work in the field of arts and sciences. This is a noble undertaking, offering college education which is devoutly Christian and not only to ministerial students but to all young people who plan to enter business, industry or the professions. The aim of the college is to continue its efforts until it can become an accredited four-year college to which all students may go for their college education before specializing in the selected fields.

Space will not permit a discussion of other vitally important phases of our national program. Perhaps, at another time, we shall discuss these for the information of our people.

Little Boat in a Big Storm

Rev. John G. Balyo

BLUE Galilee was catching the last rays of the evening sun when Christ stepped into a little boat and asked to be taken to the other side. It had been a long and a busy day preaching to the multitudes and then explaining in private to His disciples. Christ was tired, weary, utterly fatigued. The day had taken its toll of mind, body and emotions, so Christ sends the multitude away and steps into a little boat and promptly goes to sleep. The boat was well out in the sea when one of those storms so typical of Galilee descended. The wind screeched and moaned and beat the sea into a wild fury. The waves leaped high against the little boat and almost covered it. Water poured in and the boat began to fill. Here's the picture now: A sinking ship, the wind howling in the darkness, veteran sailors panicky with fear, and Christ sleeps on. That was too much for the disciples. They rush over, awaken the Lord Jesus, and then rebuke Him for sleeping. They say, in effect, "If You cared for us, You would not be sleeping: while You sleep we are perishing."

Now, before you censure these disciples too much, ask yourself the question, "Am I also sometimes tempted to believe the Lord Jesus doesn't care?" I know a woman who had a great tragedy come into her life. Her little boy was crippled by polio. She said to me on one occasion, "Sometimes when I look at those little legs, I hate God." Was her bitterness justified? Is there a God in the world who loves us and is concerned about us? Does God care? Can we rebuke Christ and rebuke God for not caring because the world has terrified us and we seem to be perishing? Is the world just a vast machine where we are apt to get caught in the gears? Is the world a clock that God wound up, took His hands off, and is allowing to run down again, and if we get caught in the machinery, then that is just our tough luck?

Several years ago there was a terrible mine disaster W. Frankfort, Illinois. A hundred and nineteen men lost their lives. One of them wrote a note to his wife and he said, "I love you all the way. I go tonight to be with Christ. I love Him too." Tell me now, did he get caught in the machinery of an erratic world or is there a design mechanic who is moving the levers? And if God is moving the levers, does He love us when we get hurt in His world? Is He, after all, worthy of our confidence and trust? Look at Verse 35 in Chapter 4 of the book of Mark. Christ has said to these disciples, "Let us pass over unto the other side." That's why He now turns to these disciples and says, "Have ye not yet faith?" In other words, "Have you forgotten that My Word has never failed? When I said to the paralyzed man, 'Arise, take up thy bed and walk,' did he not walk? When I said to the man with the withered hand, 'Stretch forth thy hand,' was he not able to stretch it forth? So when I say, 'We are going across to the other side,' are we not going across? And you say we are perishing." He calls them down for lack of faith because they had not believed His Word and in His Word He had said, "We are going all the way across the sea, and we'll make it to the other side." "Of course," He says, "I care. Of course I will take you through. Trust Me." He is saying "Trust Me, will you not trust Me? Have confidence in Me."

NOT EASY

Perhaps it's not always easy to trust the one we say we trust. Perhaps it sounds easy in church. Perhaps we are well comforted while we're hearing the music and the message and the melody of the Twenty-third Psalm. But the storm comes and in the midst of the storm we wonder whether or not the Shepherd has failed. Perhaps our comfort is often like a jewel a woman wears on just special occasions. She might say, "I would be so happy if I could wear it all the time. Its bright sparkle cheers me." Is God's cheer only Sunday dress, or is it something we can have all the time? "God loves us." We hear that in church. We hear it from Christ, we hear it from the Bible; but now we are out where the storms have come, do we still believe that God is good, that only goodness and mercy shall follow us? The message sounds good all right, it gives us peace—for a while, perhaps for a little while in church; but—we are not in church now. We're outside—in a storm. Is this storm goodness? Is this trouble mercy? Is God trying to make me see His face in this seeming disaster?

We will come back to that, but let's go on for now. We read that the Lord Jesus rebuked the winds and muzzled the sea. I use that word "muzzled" because that's the best translation of the word that's used by Mark. He "muzzled" the sea. Now, I can't imagine the Lord Jesus addressing nature like that. He wasn't addressing wind and waves and muzzling wind and muzzling waves. No, I think this storm was one that was engineered by demons. We never know how much opposition stems from the unseen world. There are spirit personalities, unclean and evil; and these demons are opposing the Lord Jesus. Tell me, what if these disciples had been lost? After all, the whole of Christianity is in that boat. But there is no need to fear, God's ship always moves on and all hell can't stop it. It is going to the other side. We read in Chapter 5 and Verse 1 of Mark that it got to the other side, too.

GOING OVER?

Perhaps you are in God's boat. Because you have come to Jesus Christ, you have accepted Him as your own personal Saviour, you are in God's boat, the boat of salvation. Then you need not fret. You are going all the way through, and all hell can't stop the boat where Jesus is the Pilot. But perhaps you are not in the boat. Perhaps you have come to a storm. You have been piloting your own little ship; it's the craft of your own making, it's your little philosophy of life, it's your little boat of good deeds. It's some little ship of your own manufacturing and it isn't enough in the storm. When opposition comes, when the wrath of a Holy God descends as a mighty storm, your little boat won't be enough. No divine personality who is adequate for all you will face in this world and in the world to come! Only in Christ's boat do you get to the other side.

The panicky disciples in our story get through the storm and the boat reaches the desired shore, but their hearts are filled with new question marks: Who is this? What kind of man is He? We must move close and discover. We thought we knew Him, and we did not know Him at all. He amazes us no end. At first they were afraid of the storm, but the storm is past and the Word says they are still afraid. They were afraid of the storm, but here they're overwhelmed with awe. They will never forget in all the days to come, this night on Galilee. There will be other storms, Christ knew. And then they would remember this one. Yes, there would be storms of opposition, storms of heartache and storms of testing—Peter in prison, John on an island—and they would remember another night and another storm and they would be at peace. And so Christ has shown them Himself. Blessed is the storm that turns our eyes toward Him. Blessed is the experience that furnishes the opportunity to find Him sufficient.

This miracle, however, is not for everyone. Not everyone has a right to the peace and consolation of this story. It has no application to those not in Christ's boat. Psalm 23 doesn't belong to the world either.

The Lust of the Eye

Rev. L. E. Winter, Cordova, Alabama

LOVE not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him. For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life, is not of the Father, but is of the world" (1 John 2:15, 16).

Since having to face the fact that so many church members are patronizing the movie industry, I would like to point out some plain teaching of God's Word concerning this great evil. First, let me say that the lust of the eye was the beginning of sin. It started in the Garden of Eden. "And when the woman saw that the tree was good for food, and that it was pleasant to the eyes, and a tree to be desired to make one wise, she took of the fruit thereof, and did eat, and gave also unto her husband with her; and he did eat" (Genesis 3:6).

So you see, my dear church member, that Eve looked on the thing that God had forbidden her to until she was conformed to the evil temptation. "And be not conformed to this world: but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect, will of God" (Romans 12:2). Not only did she eat, but she gave to her husband and he did eat. He willfully yielded to the temptation and did that which he knew he ought not to do, for God had told him not to do it.

Again, God's Word teaches us plainly not to support any business that is influential in causing little children to be born into the world not knowing who their daddy is. The modern movie industry is just that kind of business—the way it is operated. It could be a great blessing to mankind. The machinery is a wonderful invention. But alas! the ungodly, indecent, immoral, sex-arousing pictures that are projected through the machine!

"Abstain from all appearance of evil" (1 Thessalonians 5:22). I have never heard anyone deny the fact that there is appearance of evil in the modern picture show.

It was the lust of the eye that made Achan yield and steal the beautiful Babylonian garment, two hundred shekels of silver and the wedge of gold. (Read Joshua 7:21.) He saw those things, coveted them and took them, knowing all the time that he ought not to do it because he had to hide them in his tent.

I believe the American people are civilized enough to know they ought not to fill the coffers of the movie houses with their hard-earned money which goes to support a bunch of harlots, whoremongers, hypocrites, idolaters, dope addicts, divorcees, drunks, gamblers and murderers. But they go because it is pleasant to the lustful eye, and they covet such scenes as they see on the screen.

Ezekiel well prophesied of this modern generation when he said, "And they come unto thee as the people cometh, and they sit before thee as my people, and they hear thy words, but they will not do them: for with their mouth they shew much love, but their heart goeth after their covetousness" (Ezekiel 33:31).

It was the lust of the eye that caused Lot to pitch his tent toward Sodom. (Read Genesis 13:10.) It was the lust of the eye that caused King David to take another man's wife. (Read 2 Samuel 11:2.) Judas looked on the money in the treasury until he decided to sell the Lord for thirty pieces of silver. It was the lust of the eye in King Herod that caused John the Baptist to lose his head.

I believe that any true Christian had much rather give his money to the cause of Christ than to give it to see indecently dressed movie stars put on acts that jeopardize the virtue of young girls, lead young men into crime, and help to separate husbands and wives, making children orphans. Yet, some church members will try to justify themselves by saying, "Some movies are good ones." That may be true, but there are some good pieces of bread thrown into the garbage can, and I wouldn't want to go there to get a sandwich.

Other arguments might be that some modern movies are clear of the appearance of evil. That could also be true, but there is some clear water that goes into the sewage line, and I certainly would not want to drink from the septic tank. There is so much evil in the modern movies until there is great danger of getting contaminated while trying to pick out the good—if there be any.

People also try to justify themselves by saying, "You can walk down the streets and see the appearance of evil." This is very true, for much evil that used to be in the dark room projected on the screen has hatched out on the streets, and we don't have to pay our hard-earned money to see it. John 3:16 is a lovely verse of Scripture. It is one of our favorites, but the nineteenth verse of the same chapter is just as true: "And this is the condemnation, that light is come into the world, and men loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds were evil." God's cause ought to have the money that church members give to the movie crowd.

"This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come. For men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, Without natural affection, trucebreakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good, Traitors, heady, highminded, lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God" (2 Timothy 3:1-4).

If the modern movie machinery was converted into the use of promoting decency and Christian living, it could be a great instrument in helping to enlarge spiritual vision. But instead, it is helping to blind the minds of people so that they cannot understand the truth of God's Word.

Church members, please take warning. "If my people, which are called by my name, shall humble themselves, and pray, and seek my face, and turn from their wicked ways; then will I hear from heaven, and will forgive their sin, and will heal their land" (2 Chronicles 7:14).

How to Make a Life and Get a Living

Elder A. L. Sellers, Quitman, Georgia

THIS is a decision that every person with a rational mind has to make, many make the mistake of deciding to make a living and get sadly disappointed, for making a living does not take care of the life. Solomon warns that the ways that seem right to man are the ways of death (Proverbs 14:12).

Christ gives us the parable of a certain rich man whose ground brought forth so plentifully until he decided to build greater barns in which to bestow his goods. Then he said to his soul, "... Soul, thou has much goods laid up for many years; take thine ease, eat, drink, and be merry. But God said unto him, Thou fool, this night thy soul shall be required of thee: the whose shall those things be, which thou hast provided?" (Luke 12:19, 20). He was taken from his living and was left with nothing for his life. This is illustrative of the mistake that thousands of people have made. They are working to make a living and are not giving the making of a life any consideration. In making a life, the living will be taken care of; but don't depend on the life being taken care of in the making of a living.

Christ gives the way in Matthew 6:33: "But seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you." Do this and you will build a life that will bless you as long as eternity lasts. You will have a life full of joy; for it matters not what may happen to you, there will always be something to be thankful for which will give you joy in the greatest of trouble. That is why Christ could say, "Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you: not as the world giveth, give I unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid" (John 14:27).

Everyone would like to be in a kingdom where they could have the assurance of all their needs being supplied. That is just what Christ is promising here; but the conditions don't suit them. They must seek God's righteousness—that is, they must let His ways be their ways. They had rather do without this promise than to do without their ways, even if they are taught that their ways will lead to destruction. The sad part of it is that there are so many who are not willing to be taught, but their unwillingness is not going to keep them from learning someday that it is true. It will be too late then to do them any good. The door will be shut.

To get into God's Kingdom is to get where the material and the power are for making the life. To get His righteousness is to get instructions as how to use the material and power in constructing the life. To be successful you must follow the instructions, for God knows how to use that material and power in the construction of a life that will bless you. He furnishes the material, the power and the instructions, but you have to do the work. The way that you follow the instructions will determine the kind of work that you will do; and the kind of work that you do will determine the kind of life you will make here and hereafter.

Adam and Eve were placed in the garden and given the material and power for making a life and the instructions for building it. They failed to follow the instructions. Read the third chapter of Genesis to find out what happened to them, and let that be a warning to you.

In Chapter 16 of Luke the record is given of two men, one that made a living and another that made a life. We are not told anything about them until they had about finished their stay here. The man that made the living fared sumptuously every day and was clothed in fine purple and linen. The man that made the life was a beggar full of sores who lay at the rich man's gate desiring to be fed with the crumbs from the rich man's table.

Were this the end of the story, it would appear that the man who made the living was successful, but this is only one side of it. Let's get to the other side. "And it came to pass, that the beggar died and was carried by the angels into Abraham's bosom: the rich man also died, and was buried; And in hell he lift up his eyes, being in torments, and seeth Abraham afar off, and Lazarus in his bosom. And he cried and said, Father Abraham, have mercy on me, and send Lazarus, that he may dip the tip of his finger in water, and cool my tongue; for I am tormented in this flame. But Abraham said, Son, remember that thou in thy lifetime receivedst thy good things, and likewise Lazarus evil things: but now he is comforted, and thou art tormented" (Vv. 22-25).

Lazarus has left his evil things and gone to enjoy the blessings of an angelic home throughout eternity, while the rich man has had to leave his home of sumptuous living and go to a place of torment to spend eternity. Thus he became a beggar, not because he wanted to and not because he had to, but because he was fooled.

Dear reader, are you being fooled into just making a living and not a life?

My Experience at Camp Mt. Bethel

Joan McKinney

ALMOST ten years ago I made my first visit to Mt. Bethel Free Will Baptist Youth Camp, Ashburn, Georgia.

I was only a grammar school girl with dreams that I had no idea would ever become a reality in life. Neither did I know at this time that Camp Mt. Bethel would ever hold a place so dear in my heart, and perhaps even cause a complete change in my life.

Perhaps many will be amazed at the fact that for several years I attended the activities there, took an active part in all the services, but yet deep down inside I knew something was wrong. The trouble was that for seven years I had professed to be a Christian, but I had fallen far short of the qualifications. Many times even now, I am reminded of what Jesus meant when He said in Matthew 15:14, "... if the blind lead the blind, both shall fall into the ditch." I wonder perhaps if I have lead some into the ditch.

I am reminded here of what Paul said in writing to the Romans, and as I think of the law that the Jews lived under, I am grateful that I am not saved by the law. We know that Christ in His death on the Cross did not overlook the law but settled it. Now I can truthfully say that I am justified freely by His grace through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus.

There are many highlights in my experiences at camp that I shall never forget, I would like to mention a few of them.

Behind the camp, down the hill on which the camp sits, is a beautiful natural formation of rocks. It was there that we built an altar. Each evening the campers gather there for vespers. Many times we stood there beneath the beautiful blue of the heavens, facing the setting sun of the western horizon, with all of our voices lifted high in praises to God. This is enough to inspire even the hardest of hearts.

As I stood and watched the sun slowly sinking down behind the trees in the west, I was reminded of the sunset of life. The end of life's journey is nearing its sunset. But there are millions and millions who have not yet had the opportunity that we have today. The opportunity has never been theirs once, when it has been ours so many times. As the sun sets, it seems so calm and peaceful, but not so with these millions as they approach the end of life. After a hard day's work here, even more turmoil and misery await them in eternity.

Our hearts were blessed as many young people gave their testimonies as to how the Lord saved them. It was our privilege to see some give their lives to the Lord around the altar. It was a blessed experience that rings in many of our hearts even today.

Another highlight is the Thursday night service. This is what we call campers' night. It has been the real highlight of many young peoples' lives, for I know of many who have found my Saviour to be their Saviour and a very present Helper in time of need.

I feel that these few words (and truly it is a few words, when I try to tell you what the camp has meant to me) would never be complete without mentioning the directors, cooks and others who play such an important part in making the camp possible for us. Truly they have played and important part, and have done a wonderful job in carrying out their responsibilities.

As I look back over the wonderful days at Camp Mt. Bethel, I see now that each experience was leading up to what the Lord had waiting for me in the future. I never dreamed that I would be privileged to attend our Free Will Baptist Bible College in Nashville, Tennessee; but as I sit here tonight my heart is filled with praises to our Lord for each opportunity that has been mine. Yes, there has been many decisions, and what we call hardships, but I praise the Lord for them too. It is through these I have learned to depend completely on Him for guidance.

The following is submitted by Roy Earl Collie, reporter:

"We at Barnes Hill Church realize that it takes more than good preaching to have a revival. It takes a lot of praying as well. Though our crowd started out rather small, we had a nice revival. As the crowd increased from day to day, we saw things beginning to change. The preaching grew much stronger, and the sinners grew weak and weary as the gospel was preached to them.

"There were two converts and two rededications, but many left with tears in their eyes, lost and undone. We pray for a spiritual awakening for our church as well as an increase in number."

Unity In the Church

A. N. McElmon

Morehead City, North Carolina

HAVING given ourselves to God, by faith in Christ, and adopted the Word of God as our rule of faith and practice, we now give ourselves to one another by the will of God in this solemn covenant.

We promise, by His grace, to love and obey Him in all things, to avoid all appearance of evil, to abstain from all sinful amusements and unholy conformity to the world, from all sanction of the use and sale of intoxicating beverages, and to "provide things honest in the sight of all men."

We agree faithfully to discharge our obligations in reference to the study of the Scriptures, secret prayer, family devotions, and social worship; and by self-denial, faith, and good works endeavor to "grow in grace and the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ."

We will not forsake the assembling of ourselves together for church conferences, public worship, and the observance of the ordinances of the Gospel; nor fail to pay according to our ability for the support of the church, of its poor, and all its benevolent work.

We agree to accept Christian admonition and reproof with meekness, and to watch over one another in love, endeavoring to "keep the unity of the Spirit" in the bonds of peace. To be careful of one another's happiness and reputation, and seek to strengthen the weak, encourage the afflicted, admonish the erring, and as far as we are able, promote the success of the church and of the Gospel.

We will everywhere hold Christian principles sacred and Christian obligations and enterprises supreme; counting it our chief

The program for the day will feature special music, the presentation of "The Cragmont Story of 1956" in readings and song, a playlet entitled "Packin' for Cragmont" by Cragmonters of Pleasant Plains Church, a rally message by Rev. R. T. Sasser, and testimonies and talks by a number of staff members and campers.

Everybody is invited to join the youth in this rally. Lunches, served for 60 cents per plate by the woman's auxiliary, may be reserved by writing Rev. L. E. Ballard, Box 83, Selma, North Carolina, or by calling Selma 3103. If preferred, groups may bring picnic lunches or take a chance on getting lunches without reservations.

All members of the Executive Board of the North Carolina State Sunday School Convention and of the Cragmont Assembly Board of Directors are invited as special guests at the rally.

business in life to extend the influence of Christ in society, constantly praying and toiling that the Kingdom of God may come, and His will be done on earth as it is in heaven.

To this end we agree to labor for the promotion of educational and denominational enterprises, the support of missions, the success of Sunday schools, and evangelistic efforts for the salvation of the world. And may the God of peace sanctify us wholly, and preserve us blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ.

Above is the Free Will Baptist Church Covenant. How do we as church members read the covenant? Do you leave off the things you don't like and add what you want to?

One part of this covenant makes me think of our own church—the part that states, We agree to accept Christian admonition and reproof with meekness, and to watch over one another in love, endeavoring to "keep the unity of the Spirit" in bonds of peace. In Jude 11 we read, "Woe unto them! for they have gone in the way of Cain, and ran greedily after the error of Balaam for reward, and perished in the gainsaying of Core." As we look in the life of Cain we find that He was wicked. In Verse 3 Jude says that we should earnestly contend for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints. We are warned against deceivers also by Jude. The word deceiver is defined as someone who misleads one or causes one to err.

Remember, Christians, you are in the wrong when you break your word to God.

Questions and Answers ON THE BIBLE

Conducted by J. F. BARROW
3824 Richland Avenue, Nashville 5, Tennessee

Question: Please explain: "For I testify unto every man that heareth the words of the prophecy of this book, If any man shall add unto these things, God shall add unto him the plagues that are written in this book: And if any man shall take away from the words of the book of this prophecy, God shall take away his part out of the book of life, and out of the holy city, and from the things which are written in this book" (Revelation 22:18, 19). To what extent do these verses apply to the whole Bible and to what extent to only the book of Revelation?—M. J.

Answer: This passage applies to the book of Revelation. Early in the first chapter of this marvelous book the Holy Spirit pronounces blessings upon the readers, the hearers and the keepers of this prophecy. "Blessed is he that readeth, and they that hear the words of this prophecy, and keep those things which are written therein: for the time is at hand" (Revelation 1:3). It is noteworthy that the passage which threatens with eternal punishment the abusers of the message of this book appears almost the same distance from the conclusion as the one promising blessings from the beginning of the book.

There are quite a number of passages throughout the Old and New Testaments that give emphasis to the same truth, viz., that the written word of God is expressing the utterances of God and therefore carries with it both sanction to those who obey it and judgment for those who disregard its authority. "Add thou not unto his words, lest he reprove thee, and thou be found a liar" (Proverbs 30:6); "Ye shall not add unto the word which I command you, neither shall ye diminish ought from it, that ye may keep the commandments of the LORD your God which I command you" (Deuteronomy 4:2); "What thing soever I command you, observe to do it: thou shalt not add thereto, nor diminish from it" (Deuteronomy 12:32); "But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed" (Galatians 1:8).

The following quotations from recognized authorities on interpretation of the Scriptures may be of help here:

Charles Simeon, in his "Expository Outlines on the Whole Bible" (Volume XXI, Page 276, says: "If we add to the inspired writings, God will lay on us all the plagues which are there denounced against sin and sinners: and, if we take from them, 'God will take away our part from the book of life,' and never suffer us to taste any of those blessings which they hold forth in rich abundance to the upright soul. In many other places we read of specific judgments denounced against sin; but in no place are the denunciations of God's wrath so full and comprehensive as in the passage before us. It was necessary that a fiery sword should be thus waved before our eyes, to prevent us from trespassing on that hallowed ground: and though some slight alterations might seem allowable for the purpose of accommodating the expressions of Scripture more to our own apprehensions or desires, yet will God on no account suffer us to suppress or add one single word."

Gray and Adams in this "Bible Commentary," volume on Romans to Revelation, Page 745: "Once more the Seer—for it seems to be he that speaks—turns to the book which he has written. In the Prologue he had said, 'Blessed is he that readeth, and they that hear the words of the prophecy, and keep the things which are written therein.' In the same spirit he now denounces a woe upon him who takes from.—W. Milligan. If . . . things, if any one, to suit personal or party views, shall add to the words, or wrest the sense. And . . . prophecy, it is certain that the curse is designed to guard the integrity of this book of the Revelation, not to close the New Testament canon."

A. T. Robertson, in his "Word Pictures," Volume 6, Page 487, says: "This warning is directed against perversions of this book, not about the New Testament or the Bible as a whole, though it may be true there also. Surely no warning was more needed when we consider the treatment accorded the Apocalypse."

Satan has always done all he has been able to do in perverting the truth of God. The great and dismal darkness of the middle ages which produced the Roman Catholic church is a fair example. This was accomplished in part by the substitution of heathen ritual and Roman hierarchy for the simple preaching of the gospel and the fel-lowshipping of the saints. Many so-called Protestants today might substitute hierarchy ritualistic services etc., for the simple preaching and fellowship enjoyed by our forefathers a half century ago, if they could get by with it. Of course they would not like to be a second Roman Catholic church right away, but if encouraged for a generation or so it could grow into that. Instead of the simple feet washing services that could substitute the eucharist. Instead of baptism into water they could substitute the pouring of a little water and instead of preaching the unadulterated word they might have a few pictures or possibly molten or carved images, etc.

Then there is the Watch Tower outfit that some others could copy after or join for don't the Watch Tower patrons quote from the Bible and don't they give a lot of good instructions in their Watch Tower books, tracts, etc., some will say. As I see it, both Roman Catholics and Watch Towerists are doing just what Revelation 22:18, 19 teaches against. And what is said of these may be said of Christian Scientists, Mormons, Seventh-Day Adventists, so-called liberal Protestants and those holding the neo-orthodox view in theology or Bible doctrine. I am afraid that our own church is more likely to be deceived by a new liberalism or neo-orthodoxy than any other false view since so many Free Will Baptists who are college students come into contact with it as they attend state or church schools other than our own.

My Experiences at Camp Mt. Bethel

Many times I have quoted Proverbs 3:6, but as I think of the work Christ has intrusted to me, I can truly say that these verses have become a part of my everyday life: "Trust in the Lord with all thine heart; and lean not unto thine own understanding. In all thy way acknowledge him and he shall direct thy paths." I know as I trust Him, I can claim the promise in Romans 8:28, "And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose."

The Lighted Pathway

Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path
(PSALM 119:105).

REV. WILLET L. MORETZ
SWANNANOVA, N. C.

"Behold, a king shall reign in righteousness, . . ." (Isaiah 32:1).

There are many beautiful pictures of the coming Christ, whose birthday we will soon be remembering in our services and in every phase of our thinking, in the book of Isaiah. Below is a poetical paraphrase of forty-second chapter which will be good to put our minds in condition to think truly of the love God had for us in giving us a Saviour:

"Behold my Servant! see him rise
Exalted in my might!
Him have I chosen, and in him
I place supreme delight.
On him, in rich effusion pour'd,
My spirit shall descend;
My truths and judgments he shall show
To earth's remotest end.

"Gentle and still shall be his voice,
No threats from him proceed;
The smoking flax he shall not quench,
Nor brake the bruised reed.
The feeble spark to flames he'll raise;
The weak will not despise;
Judgment he shall bring forth to truth,
And make the fallen rise.

"The progress of his zeal and pow'r
Shall never know decline,
Till foreign lands and distant isles
Receive the law divine.
He who erected heav'n's bright arch,
And bade the planets roll,
Who peopled, all the climes of earth,
And form'd the human soul.

"Thus saith the Lord, Thee have I rais'd,
My Prophet thee install;
In right I've raised thee, and in strength
I'll succour whom I call.
I will establish with the lands
A covenant in thee,
To give the Gentile nations light;
And set the pris'ners free.

"Asunder burst the gates of brass;
The iron fetters fall;
And gladsome light and liberty
Are straight restor'd to all.
I am the Lord, and by the name
Of great Jehovah known;
No idol shall usurp my praise,
Nor mount into my throne.

"Lo! former scenes, predicted once,
Conspicuous rise to view;
And future scenes predicted now,
Shall be accomplish'd too.
Sing to the Lord in joyful strains!
Let earth his praise resound,
Ye who upon the ocean dwell,
And fill the isles around!

"O city of the Lord! begin
The universal song;
And let the scatter'd villages
The cheerful notes prolong.
Let Kedar's wilderness afar
Lift up its lonely voice;
And let the tenants of the rock
With accents rude rejoice.

"Till 'midst the streams of distant lands
The islands sound his praise;
And all combin'd, with one accord,
Jehovah's glories raise."—Selected.

And when Jesus came He said:
"For the Son of man is not come to destroy men's lives, but to save them . . ." (Luke 9:56).

The Power of Influence

A Seattle paper tells how a little clock in a jeweler's window in a certain western town stopped one day for half an hour at fifteen minutes to nine. School children, noticing the time, stopped to play; people hurrying to the train, looking at the clock, began to walk leisurely; professional men, after a look at the clock, stopped to chat a minute with one another. And all were half an hour late because one small clock stopped.

Where can we find a better example of the fact of influence? Every life has an influence. What is yours? Does it lead others astray?—Herald of Holiness.

Unity in the Church

God's plan is the only way. When you join a church you want to be saved. Jesus saves all who come to him. In Romans Paul teaches us that all have sinned and the whole world is under condemnation, but salvation is open to all believers. Romans 10:9 says, "That if thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved."

Jesus spoke to Nicodemus and explained to him how to be saved (John 3). We have much Scripture explaining to us how to live a Christian life. Neither keeping our church covenant or having our names on the church roll will save us. We can be saved only through Jesus Christ, but if we can't keep our pledge to the church which is really a pledge to God, how do we expect to be Christlike?

Nowhere in the Word of God can you find that our Saviour broke a promise. We today have to keep our promises too. Judas Iscariot betrayed Jesus 1923 years ago. Today church members are betraying Jesus by not living as He would want us to, by not assembling together for church meetings, by forgetting to watch over one another in love, by not supporting the church, by not endeavoring to keep the unity of the spirit in the bonds of peace, and by forgetting the care of one another's happiness and reputation.

You cannot break your pledges to God, and be Christlike. We must not tear down the Church of Jesus Christ for the glory and honor of man here on earth. We find so much of this very thing today. We must build for the glory of God in number in order to have strength so that more may witness to the saving power of Jesus Christ. Let us give God the glory!

PRAYERS SOLICITED

"I am now in the Veterans Hospital in Fayetteville, and will remain here for about 30 days. Then I will return home, Route 5, Box 97, New Bern, North Carolina. The doctor says that I will be just as well off at home since rest and contentment are my only hope. I solicit the prayers of all Christian people."—Rev. B. F. ## The Builder

I watched them tearing a building down,
A gang of men in a busy town;
With a ho-heave-ho and a lusty yell
They swung a beam and the side wall fell.
I asked the foreman: Are these men skilled
As the men you'd hire if you had to build?
He gave a laugh and said, No indeed!
Just common labor is all I need.
I can easily wreck in a day or two
What builders have taken a year to do!
And I thought to myself as I went my way,
Which of these roles have I tried to play?
Am I a builder who works with care
Measuring life by the rule and square?
Am I shaping my deeds to a well made plan,
Patiently doing the best I can?
Or am I a wrecker, who walks the town,
Content with the labor of tearing down?

How to Overcome

There is only one way by which the tempter can be met. He laughs at our good resolutions and ridicules the pledges with which we fortify ourselves. There is only One whom he fears; One who in the hour of greatest weakness conquered him; and who has been raised far above all principality and power, that He may succour and deliver all frail and tempted souls. He conquered the prince of this world in the days of His flesh; and He is prepared to do as much again, in each one of us, if only we will truly surrender ourselves to His gracious and mighty indwelling.—F. B. Meyer.

NOTES — AND — QUOTES

By J. C. Griffin

TEN EASY WAYS TO KILL YOUR CHURCH

Recently we read an article in The Western Voice, entitled "Ten Easy Ways to Kill Your Church," which we are giving in our columns today. But before we quote these ways, we want to think of other ways that are effective in killing a church. We will also notice Scripture concerning these ways.

(1) The hireling preacher. Jesus said, "The hireling fleeth, because he is an hireling, and careth not for the sheep" (John 10:13). The preacher that is after the money more than after souls puts a price on the gospel rather than following the path of faith and complete confidence in Christ and His promise. We know that no one approves of this.

(2) A worldly set of officers. The first deacons were not worldly. These men were different from many deacons of our day. Their qualifications were set forth by the apostles and written in Acts 6:3: "Wherefore, brethren, look ye out among you seven men of honest report, full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom, whom we may appoint over this business." If the deacon board is full of worldliness and the deacons think more of the material things than of the spiritual things or those pertaining to the church, the church is on the way to spiritual decay. As long as such people are ruling over the church, there can be no spiritual life manifested.

(3) A lack of missionary fervor. When a church ceases to have a missionary spirit, it ceases to be the church of the Lord Jesus. The church openly disobeys the command of the Lord Jesus when it loses an interest in the salvation of all men everywhere. Jesus said, "... All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth. Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world. ..." (Matthew 28:18-20). To ignorantly or willfully disobey the command of Jesus is death to any church or denomination. There are many Scriptures we might quote on missions; but if we disobey the above, we are condemned. So why quote others?

(4) A top heavy church of members that have never been born again. Such church members lack wisdom of spiritual values. They are a dead weight to the spirituality of the church. They are good for natural things, but an unconverted church member is as worthless to the spiritual activities of the church as a fountain pen is with no ink, as an electric light bulb is in a home that is not wired or one that is not connected with a power line.

(5) Unsaved teachers in your Sunday school. Unsaved teachers can never lead their students to Christ, and in the course of time the whole class loses interest. They walk by sight, knowing nothing of walking by faith. Death gradually appears on the scene due to a lack of recruits coming in from the Sunday school.

(6) A church that does not cooperate in its activities. Such a church has leaders who work independently, making bargains and independent transactions. There must be cooperation in the church or there will be death in the long run.

(7) A church must have real Christian fellowship. "But if ye bite and devour one another, take heed that ye be not consumed one of another" (Galatians 5:15).

Now let us quote the ten things from The Western Voice which will destroy a church:

"(1) Talk about the preacher adversely.

"(2) Make no preparation for your God-given responsibilities.

"(3) Tell your class how disappointed you are in the attendance.

"(4) Don't give. What does the church need money for?

"(5) Go places on Sunday—go anywhere but to church.

"(6) Don't visit. That is the preacher's job.

"(7) Take poor care of the church property.

"(8) Refuse to hold an office. Think how little time you would have left for yourself.

"(9) If you go to Sunday school, never remain for the worship service.

"(10) No matter what proposition comes up, object. There must be something wrong with it."

The editor of The Western Voice says, "This procedure will eliminate you with your church."

God's Woe Pronounced

"Woe be unto the pastors that destroy and scatter the sheep of my pasture! saith the LORD. Therefore thus saith the LORD God of Israel against the pastors that feed my people; Ye have scattered my flock, and driven them away, and have not visited them: behold, I will visit upon you the evil of your doings, saith the LORD" (Jeremiah 23:1, 2).

Qualifications of a New Testament Preacher

Paul says, "For a bishop must be blameless, as the steward of God; not selfwilled, not soon angry, not given to wine, no striker, not given to filthy lucre; But a lover of hospitality, a lover of good men, sober, just, holy, temperate; Holding fast the faithful word as he hath been taught, that he may be able by sound doctrine both to exhort and to convince the gainsayers" (Titus 1:7-9).

Peter says, "The elders which are among you I exhort, who am also an elder, and a witness of the sufferings of Christ, and also a partaker of the glory that shall be revealed: Feed the flock of God which is among you, taking the oversight thereof, not by constraint, but willingly; not for filthy lucre, but of a ready mind; Neither as being lords over God's heritage, but being ensamples to the flock" (1 Peter 5:1-3).

Again Paul says, "Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth" (2 Timothy 2:15). If God calls a man to preach, God places upon that man the responsibility of preparation to preach. God wants us to know what is true and what is needful to be preached. If we study the Word of God carefully and prayerfully, God will reveal to us the truth contained therein. God cannot use ignorance to His glory. Ignorance has caused many isms and scisms in the world that have hurt the life of men and women. It is a sin to try to preach without first studying. There is an old doctrine saying that God will fill your mouth—meaning that you do not have to think or study. When that is our condition, God will let our mouths be filled with air.

I once heard a man preach who said when he arose, "I have not prepared anything for this occasion. What I shall preach will be given to me by the Lord." Well, I am no judge, but I cannot believe that God will tell a man to misquote Scripture, misappropriate Scripture and break every rule of speech like this man did. Perhaps he was sincere, but his sincerity did not make sense in the presentation of the gospel. I cannot believe that God made those mistakes.

God's Light

A beautiful story is told of a little girl whose faith in God may teach us a lesson.

The lamp had just been put out, and the little girl was rather afraid of the dark. But presently she saw the bright moon out of her window, and she asked her mother, "Is the moon God's light?"

"Yes, Ethel," the mother replied. "The moon and the stars are all God's light."

"Will God blow out His light and go to sleep, too?" she asked again.

"No, my child," replied the mother. "God's lights are always burning."

"Well, Mamma," said Ethel, "while God's awake, I'm not afraid."—Exchange.

TOMMY PRACTICES THE "GOLDEN RULE"

Velma B. McConnell

TOMMY Taylor was looking for Tumbler, his pet puppy. The little dog had broken his leash and run away. Tommy did not blame the little fellow for wanting to run and play, but unfortunately, all dogs in town had to be held on a leash or kept tied in the back yard.

"I think it would be hard to be a dog and be kept tied all the time," Tommy thought to himself. "I am glad that I can be free to run about and do what I please. To do what is right, of course," he corrected himself. Tommy was a Christian, and was trying hard to do what Jesus wanted him to do.

"Here, Tumbler, here, Tumbler!" he called. Then he caught sight of a friendly little tail wagging among some rose bushes in front of a large brick house. Tommy began to hurry. Perhaps the little dog was his Tumbler.

Suddenly the boy heard a cross voice. "You old dog, go home! Don't come around here again!" Tommy looked up in surprise as he saw a boy his own age running down the walk that led from the house. He had a stick and was chasing a dog. Tommy looked again. The dog was Tumbler.

"Here, you! Don't you dare hit my dog!" shouted Tommy. He began to run toward the boy and the dog.

The other boy dropped his stick and started back toward the house. "Then keep your dog home where he belongs," he called over his shoulder.

Tommy picked up his pet and started home. "It must be a very mean boy who would hit a nice little dog," he grumbled. "Tumbler, don't you ever run away again, and don't you ever again go near that house!"

For a few days Tommy and Tumbler played at home, in the Taylor yard. Tommy was very careful to keep Tumbler tied when he was not romping with him. One day Mrs. Taylor asked her son to do an errand for her. The boy and dog started down the street. As they drew near the brick house on the corner, Tommy held tight to Tumbler's leash. "You aren't going to get away from me this time and meet up with a boy and a stick," he warned the dog.

As they began to pass the house, Tommy spied a large red and green rubber ball half hidden in the grass. The ball was near the street.

"This ball must belong to the boy who chased Tumbler," Tommy said to himself. "Well, I won't give it to him. Let him hunt his old ball if he wants it!" Tommy gave the ball a little kick and went on down the street.

Suddenly he did not feel as happy as he had when he started his errand. "Remember the Golden Rule," a little voice seemed to say to him. Tommy understood the Golden Rule very well. He knew that it meant that one should do to others what he wanted others to do to him. He had learned the Bible verse: "All things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them" (Matthew 7:12).

"Well," said Tommy to himself, "that other boy didn't practice the Golden Rule when he chased Tumbler!" He walked a little more slowly, kicking at the sidewalk and scuffling along, "but—maybe—if I do what is right, perhaps he will be sorry that he chased my dog. And anyway," his face brightened now, "a Christian is supposed to return good for evil!"

He turned back, a prancing Tumbler pulling on the leash. "Here, Tumbler," he said cheerfully, "we will find that ball and return it to the boy. Maybe we will be friends then. He looked as if he might be a nice boy—if he liked dogs a little more!"

When Tommy and Tumbler came to the ball, Tommy picked it up and started up the sidewalk to the brick house. He had nearly reached the front porch when he saw the other boy crossing the lawn. The boy looked surprised as he walked toward Tommy and Tumbler. Tommy held out the ball.

"Is this yours?" he asked. "I found it near the street."

"Yes, it is mine. I lost it while playing this morning. Thank you very much." The boy from the brick house looked uncomfortable.

A little silence followed, each boy eyeing the other. Finally Tommy spoke. "My name is Tommy Taylor," he offered, standing on one foot and holding tight to Tumbler.

"Mine is Jimmy Young. Won't you—won't you stay and play ball with me?"

Tommy looked pleased. "I have to do an errand for my mother. Then I will come back and play ball with you. But first, won't you tell me why you tried to hit my dog? Don't you like dogs?"

Jimmy hesitated a moment, then said, "Sure I like dogs. I like them very much. I used to live in the country, and always had a dog of my own. Sometimes I had two or three of them. But Mother and I are living here with Grandmother now, and she does not like dogs. I had to give mine away before we came. Grandmother said she would not have a dog around the house. I—I am sorry I chased your dog the other day. I was feeling so badly about not having my Towzer that I didn't want to see your dog, either."

Tommy nodded. "I understand now. If your grandmother doesn't mind, you and Tumbler and I will have a ball game. Tumbler likes to play ball, too. Perhaps when she sees how nice a dog can be, if he is well-trained, she may change her mind."

The other boy grinned. "I sure do hope so," he said fervently. "But you tell me something now, Tommy. How does it happen that you brought back my ball when I was so mean to your dog?"

It was Tommy's turn to look a little uncomfortable. Then he looked straight at Jimmy and said, "Well, at first I wasn't going to bring it to you. In fact, I kicked it toward the street. Then I remembered that God told us to do good to those that weren't kind to us, and I knew it was not the right way for a Christian to act to return an unkind deed by being unkind ourselves, so—well, so I just brought back your ball."

There was a little pause while the other boy took in Tommy's words. Then Tommy continued, "Say, Jimmy, how about going to Sunday school with me tomorrow, if you haven't found one of your own yet?"

"Sure I will!" exclaimed the other boy, "Grandmother doesn't go anywhere. I'll be glad to go with a boy who acts the way you do! Hurry up with your errand, Tommy, let's have that game of ball!"—Gospel Herald.

Backbone of Character

Character is made up of small duties faithfully performed, of denial, of self-sacrifice, of kindly acts, of love and duty. The backbone of character is laid at home, and whether the constitutional tendencies be good or bad, home influences will, as a rule, fan them into activity. Kindness begets kindness, and truth and trust will bear a rich harvest of truth and trust. There are many trivial acts of kindness which teach us more about a man's character than many vague phrases.—Scottish American.

LIVING BREAD FOR WAITING SOULS

Rev. G. C. Timyan

When the Preacher declared, "Cast thy bread upon the waters, for thou shalt find it after many days," he aptly described an interesting chapter in Ivory Coast missionary history. The late George Powell cast the Living Bread on Agni waters in 1935 and last July, 21 years later, the results of his labors were found after many days. How it happened sounds like fiction.

On Tuesday morning, July 31, we were heading south on the famous Cocoa Road from Bondoukou towards Agniblekro. It was just a week since we had left our station at Bouake with Mr. and Mrs. Harold Stevens representing the Free Will Baptist Mission Board. Our purpose was to survey the northeaster corner of the colony for possible bases for missionary work. We had found one of the most neglected areas of French West Africa. Several entire tribes representing major language groups had never been touched with the gospel. Our first reaction was to settle immediately upon a site among them. Yet we knew that there was a responsibility to the south that had not been discharged. Now we were moving into Agni territory.

As we drove through the prosperous villages of the rain forest we were struck by the contrast with the poorer and drier north. But what impressed us most were the crosses and crucifixes everywhere—every village had a Roman Catholic church! As we passed these large, well-built structures we asked, "Wherefore do ye spend money for that which is not bread?" The answer was that the bearers of the Living Bread had tarried too long, as we were to find out soon.

Finally we came to a sizeable village that we judged must be close to our destination. Upon inquiry whether there were any Protestants in town the answer came, "Yes, this is Koun! Our church is straight ahead!" At the edge of town we stopped in front of a small chapel decorated with a Huguenot cross. Soon a crowd was gathered around the car and when they heard we were missionaries there were smiles, greetings and hand shakes from all sides. A tall Agni man introduced himself as Noah, one of the church elders. With joy he welcomed us when he heard that we were friends of the man who had baptized him, "Monsieur Poell." His gladness turned to sorrow momentarily when he learned of the death of his spiritual father, but he added, "We will see him again someday."

It was then that I realized I was talking to the man who had walked eight days through the forest in search of the missionary 21 years before. But the story goes back farther still. In 1922 a man from Koun had returned from a Fanti town in the Gold Coast where he had been converted. He had taken the Christian name of Paul at his baptism and became a real apostle to his own Agni people of the Koun section. No one knows how many converts Paul won but he faithfully taught them all to pray, to witness and to sing. What few Scriptures he had learned were the basis of his preaching. Time after time he sent telegrams to the Gold Coast asking for a white teacher to come. They never came.

Although Paul died without seeing a missionary in his village, his testimony had borne fruit and he left a group of believers behind who worshiped regularly in their own chapel. One of his converts, Abraham, took up the leadership of the group and served faithfully until his death a few years later. Then a young man named Thomas became chief elder of the church and, although as illiterate as the others, he continued to preach Christ to his people. In 1935 Thomas became desperate for help as some of the untaught Christians returned to their old pagan practices. He walked to the nearest trading center and asked a French merchant where he could find a missionary. He was told that an American missionary had recently come to Bouake, 200 miles away. After persuading the trader to write a plea for help, Paul gave the letter to one of his young men and sent him on the quest for the white man.

When he reached Bouake after a difficult trip on foot during the heavy rains, he found the station vacant. Mr. Powell was away at a conference. The letter was left, Noe returned, and in a few weeks the missionary started out only to be turned back by swollen rivers. Several months later Mr.

Powell finally stood in Koun, 13 years after the gospel had penetrated the Agni forest. The missionary had not come too late but he came for too short a time! Three years later responsibility for the Koun section was transferred to a British missionary society working on the coast, in an exchange for territory bordering the Alliance work in Dimbokro. From 300 miles away the new missionaries in charge rarely visited them and when World War II followed the Agni believers were left completely alone.

The young man who had taken the message to Bouake was now old by African standards, and as I stood in his presence I was humbled. The welcome Mr. Powell had received 21 years before could not have been any more thrilling than the way we were honored. They escorted us to another elder's yard for the official greetings. They first asked us our news and we told them that the American missionaries were returning to continue the work interrupted by 18 years of isolation. Following Agni custom we asked them their news and they told us of the pagan and Catholic persecution of their group, the defection and death of some of their number since they had been left orphans. Then they proudly announced that they had already started to build a newer and bigger church building! They were determined to carry on faithfully whether the white missionary visited them or not!

They had only one request to make of the missionaries after we had been told to arrange our baggage in the traditional gesture of hospitality. They begged us to sing a new song for them about Jesus! They had sung the few songs that they were able to learn from Paul, Abraham, Thomas and Mr. Powell so many times through the years that they longed to hear a new one! In praise to God for His faithfulness and appreciation for their steadfastness, we sang "Constantly Abiding" and then translated the message for them. How thankful we had been that the Living Bread had come to Koun—cast upon the waters by a faithful pioneer who heeded the Macedonian call of the Agni people, and came far away from his own work to feed them.

It was a great privilege to be there and find it after many days. It was a pleasure to help measure the site for a new mission station to be built by the Baptists under Alliance sponsorship on a beautiful hill-top overlooking Koun. It was a joy to feed this hungry flock during the days of mission business as the transfer was effected.

That this new move into the Bouna Agni tribe is being contested by the enemy is not surprising. The Roman church is determined to persuade the village fathers, many of them Catholics, to renege on their promise to cede the land to us. They have

High Hill Church, Host to South Carolina Auxiliary Convention

The South Carolina State Woman's Auxiliary Convention met October 13, 1956, at the High Hill Free Will Baptist Church near Scranton, South Carolina, with 20 auxiliaries represented. The speaker for this occasion was Mrs. John Moehlman, whom we know as Barbara Willey. Mrs. Rufus Coffey presided over the day's activities.

The following officers were elected at the convention: Mrs. Reedy Saverance, president; Mrs. Carl Shook, vice-president; Mrs. F. M. Johnson, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Ronald Creech, recording secretary; Mrs. Liston Williams, assistant recording secretary; Mrs. Vernie Stone, youth chairman; Mrs. Julius Vause, assistant youth chairman; Mrs. L. C. DeFee, study course chairman; Mrs. Sherman Branch, stewardship-prayer chairman; Mrs. Thomas Brown, personal service chairman; Mrs. Dewey Jones, treasurer; Mrs. Rufus Coffey, field worker.

Lockhart, S. C.—The Woman's Auxiliary of the Lockhart Free Will Baptist Church met on Tuesday, November 6, at the home of Mrs. Jessie Canupps. The meeting opened with the group singing, "Oh, How I Love Jesus." Mrs. Loretta Canupps led the opening prayer followed with devotions by Mrs. A. F. Lawter. Those taking part in the program were Mrs. Shirley Brannon, Mrs. Grady Brannon, Mrs. Loretta Canupps and Mrs. Effie Taylor.

Mrs. Grady Brannon dismissed the group with prayer. The hostess, Mrs. Canupps, then served delicious refreshments.

Morrisville, N. C.—The Woman's Auxiliary of Shady Grove Church recently met at the Fellowship House for their November meeting. Mrs. Linwood Clements and Mrs. C. E. Parrish were hostesses to the three visitors and twelve members present. Officers for the new year will be: President, Mrs. Buck George; vice-president, Mrs. Dwight Ferrell; secretary, Mrs. Buck Carpenter; assistant secretary, Mrs. James Keen; treasurer, Mrs. Linwood Clements. Directors of Y. P. A. will be Mrs. D. C. Knowles and Mrs. Arthur Clayton. Directors of G. T. A. will be Mrs. Ward Ferrell and Mrs. C. E. Parish. The following were elected to be chairmen: Mrs. J. R. Hildebran, program and publicity; Mrs. E. R. Phipps, prayer; Mrs. Joe Haas, personal service; Miss Ella Ferrell, study course.

Plans were made to sponsor a pre-Thanksgiving week of prayer and study course in the church auditorium. Mrs. Gertrude Ballard was the speaker on the nights of November 20, 21. A pounding will be taken to Mount Olive College, Mount Olive, North Carolina, the week following Thanksgiving. Instead of a Christmas gift exchange at our December meeting, members will bring children's gifts for those at the Free Will Baptist Children's Home, Middlesex, North Carolina. Martha Lou, from the home, will be visiting in the homes of our auxiliary members, during the Thanksgiving season.

"Our Need, for Such a Time as This" was the inspiring program title, that was given by Mrs. Hildebran, Maria Carpenter, Patty Ferrell, Mildred Parrish and Gladys George.

visited the village incessantly since our land request in an attempt to block the new mission station. An urgent request for help has just been received by mail from the Koun elders three months after our visit. It will be another full year before a resident missionary arrives. The first Baptist missionaries sail for French study in Europe around January 1, 1957. Could not the believing prayer of an aroused Alliance constituency hold this land for the Lord of the harvest? Shall not the society sponsoring this advance before the French government also sponsor this cause before the throne?

Only those who have Christ as Shepherd can say "The Lord is my Shepherd." Neither is what is known as the Lord's Prayer for everybody. It's only for those who can say "Our Father," because they have yielded to His Son and allowed Him to save them. John 14 is not public property either. It says "In My Father's house are many mansions," but the Father's house is for the Father's children. Don't try to do the really foolish thing and attempt to extract a little solace and some measure of security from this story if you are not a Christian. The thing for you to do is to receive Christ as your Saviour from sin and judgment and then, of course, you can trust Him for anything.—The Ohio Independent Baptist.

More Than Conquerors

(Lesson for December 9)

Lesson: Romans 8:26-39.

Golden Text: Romans 8:37.

I. INTRODUCTION

The eighth chapter of Romans is beloved by Bible readers because it announces the victory of believers in Christ. This passage is particularly dear because it tells how all the members of the Holy Trinity combine to make the believer a conqueror over all the forces which tend to defeat him.

The student should be diligent to read the entire chapter to establish a concept of who is victorious. He must not be misled to think that everyone who has been regenerated is an overcoming Christian. This concept would not allow for backsliding and apostasy which are so clearly taught in the Scriptures. The very first verse of the chapter makes clear that only those persons are free from condemnation "... which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit." Notice the present tense of the verbs are and walk. Verses 5-16 bear out this thought. Let us quote Verses 14 and 16 for emphasis: "For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God. . . . The Spirit itself beareth witness with our spirit, that we are the children of God."—The Bible Student (F. W. B.).

II. HELPFUL HINTS

1. When Christians are confused and don't know how to pray, the Holy Spirit begins to intercede for them (Vv. 26, 27).

2. There is no greater comfort for troubled souls than to know that all things work together for good to them (Vs. 28).

But let us be careful lest we make the application of this glorious blessing too broad. The fact that all things work together for good is limited to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose.

3. If the Lord is for us, the inference is plain that nothing can defeat our victory through Him (Vv. 31, 32).

4. Men may bring charges against God's elect, but false accusations can never change their state (Vv. 33, 34).

5. Heartaches, and troubles, and sorrows of earth only draw God's children a little closer to His breast (Vv. 35, 36).

6. God's people don't merely escape with their lives, but they come from the battle more than conquerors through Christ (Vs. 37).

7. Though nothing can separate God's people from His love, unforgiven sins will send them to hell (Vv. 38, 39).—The Bible Teacher (F. W. B.).

III. ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

1. Previously in Romans 8, in speaking of the work of the Holy Spirit, the apostle declares that the believer is made conscious of his place in the family of God by the Holy Spirit's witnessing with his spirit that he is a child of God (comp. Vv. 15-17). Now here the apostle teaches that not only does the Holy Spirit make us conscious of the fact that we are children of God by witnessing with our spirit, but He also helps our infirmities ("infirmity," A. S. V.). By infirmity here we are possibly not to think so much of one single peculiar infirmity, as of our general state of weakness as believers in our present state in the body, of which Paul speaks in the preceding verses (Vv. 18-25).—The Bible Expositor.

2. And he that searcheth the hearts knoweth what is the mind of the Spirit, because he maketh intercession for the saints according to the will of God.

The Holy Spirit dwells within the saint, and as he is given the place of control in the heart, he utters in the saint's behalf the petitions which please the Father. From this it is indicated that prayer on the part of the Christian is essentially a matter of yielding whole heartedly to the Spirit of God. A Spirit initiated prayer is a prayer that is right, and such a prayer has the inherent guarantee of its answer.—Selected.

This may explain 1 Thessalonians 5:17. Even if a Christian is asleep, or too busy with his daily labor to pray, the Holy Spirit can keep a constant prayer going up to God.

3. He "maketh intercession for us." According to this chapter (Romans 8) we have two Intercessors. In Verse 34 we read that Christ is our Intercessor at the right hand of God, and here we read that it is the Holy Spirit who makes intercession for us, "with groanings which cannot be uttered." One Intercessor is in heaven, the other is on earth. Christ represents us in heaven, and the Spirit within us sees our deepest need and brings it before God in "groanings which cannot be uttered." We may be conscious of this, or not. Let us not be concerned about the "groanings" but leave them to the Spirit.—Selected.

4. A wasp got into a little girl's buggy. The little girl tried to catch the wasp. The maid kept saying, "No! No!" The mother, hearing the crying, called out, "What's that child crying for? Let her have it!" A few minutes later, the mother heard an awful scream and asked in alarm, "What's the matter now?" "She got it," said the maid. "She got the wasp. That was what she wanted!" Sometimes we cry for things that will bring us only sorrow and trouble. God knows it. If we keep crying, sometimes God allows us to have what we cry for, and then we learn through pain that God's will is best, after all, for us!

Take the case of Sarah, the wife of Abraham, as told in Genesis 16. The Arabs are descendants of Ishmael, and the Jews of Isaac. Sarah's lack of faith is causing plenty of trouble yet in 1956. We should pray in the Spirit and be led by Him.

5. Two businessmen were talking as the day in the office was about over. One, worn and tired, said: "If only I could go home tonight and sleep, and forget this office! I haven't had a good night's sleep for months." The other man said: "That's easy, when you know how. I sleep from the moment my head hits the pillow. I just get into bed, turn the light out, and say, 'Well Lord, I'll let You take the night shift,' and go to sleep!"—Defender Magazine.

6. Dr. John Henry Jowett says: "When Paul speaks of being a 'conqueror' he means that he is on the top of his circumstances and not beneath them. To be more than conquerors is to be on the top of your wealth, and not beneath it; to be on the top of your poverty and not beneath it; to be on the top of your joy and not beneath it; to be on the top of your sorrow and not beneath it; to be on the top of your disappointment and not beneath it. To be more than conqueror is to be on the top of the old serpent, and, as Browning says, to stand upon him and feel him wriggle beneath your feet!

"The real conqueror, the only one worthy of that royal name, is he who makes every circumstance his subject, permitting no circumstance to be the lord and master of his soul. He is 'more than conqueror.' And what is the secret of such conquest? Here is the secret: 'We are more than conquerors through Christ that loved us.' It is conquest through the energy of an imparted love."—Selected.

"Our son, then, forever shall be,

The Shepherd who gave Himself thus;
No subject's so glorious as He,

No theme so affecting to us."

No "If" In It

A young girl was asked how she became a Christian. She said she read in the Bible about the leper who said, "Thou, if Thou wilt, Thou canst make me clean." Jesus put forth His hand and touched him and said, "I will; be thou clean."

The girl said she noticed there was an if in what the leper said, but no if in what Jesus said. "So I knelt down and prayed," she said. "I took out the if. I said, 'Lord Jesus, You can, You will, make me clean.' And Jesus took me just as I was."—Our Young People.

TARBORO, NORTH CAROLINA, CHURCH PARSONAGE

On June 1, 1956, the Rev. Raymond T. Sasser moved into the above parsonage, as the second full-time pastor of the First Free Will Baptist Church of Tarboro, North Carolina, and the first occupant of the parsonage. The parsonage was planned and built by the men of the church under the supervision of deacons, A. L. Summerlin and Ralph Williamson. It is valued at $12,000, but was constructed at a cost of $7,700 which included the actual cost of the building materials and necessary hired labor. It is composed of three bedrooms, living room, den and kitchen, one and a half baths, several closets and an upstairs which will later be completed to add two or three more rooms.

The church reports much spiritual growth with twenty-two baptized and an increase in Sunday school and church membership, since Rev. Sasser was elected pastor in January of this year. The interior of the church's educational building, which was constructed during the pastorate of the first pastor, the Rev. Frank Davenport, is now being worked on. This building has fifteen rooms and two baths, which includes three large assembly rooms for a departmentalized Sunday school. One of these rooms is now serving as an assembly room for church worship services with a seating capacity of 200.

The Rev. Raymond Sasser, pastor, requests the prayers of all Christians that the church, which was three years old the fourth Sunday in August, may continue to grow and witness for Jesus.

EDITORIAL

THE PASTOR

The November issue of Reader's Digest carried an article, "Why Ministers Are Breaking Down," by the Rev. Wesley Shrader, a Baptist minister of nineteen years and assistant professor of pastoral theology at Yale Divinity School, which brought into focus very clearly one of the most serious problems facing the Church today. He expressed keen concern of the alarming rate which ministers are cracking up mentally and emotionally because of the strain placed upon them by the ever-increasing demands of their parish requirements. He also urged congregations to give more consideration to the health of their pastors by making the load of their duties as light as possible.

This is just one in a growing list of articles appearing in daily newspapers and periodicals on the subject. Not many weeks ago, a reader sent us a clipping from a Tennessee daily newspaper which gave a good description of this problem. We wanted to publish it for information to our readers but, upon asking for privilege of reprinting it, found that it was syndicated by the Associated Press for publication only by its affiliated members.

Concerning the duties of the present-day pastor, Mr. Shrader says, "And he is expected to be a specialist in six separate roles: administrator, organizer, pastor, preacher, priest, teacher." It is true that the conscientious minister will want to assume the chief responsibility in all of these areas, but the church should be careful not to leave all the work to him. For practically every one of these tasks there are members in almost every church who are well qualified to serve as helpers to the pastor, taking a great deal of the load of actual work from his shoulders.

If the office work of the minister begins to consume too much of his time, the church should employ a secretary to help with it. If the Sunday school or any other auxiliary is too large for the officers to administer without having to call upon the pastor for a great deal of help, the church should employ an educational director. Above all things, direction of the choir should not be placed upon the pastor unless he particularly desires it. Some ministers who have a special gift and have qualified themselves in the field of music may prefer to exercise their talents in singing and directing the choir, but no church should demand it of its pastor.

The pastor can ascertain whether or not he is overworking himself by making a schedule of his activities, allocating a specific number of hours for each activity. If his duties require a greater number of hours than the average work day, he should show the schedule of his work day to the board of deacons and discuss the matter with them. If something needs to be done, the board should offer a recommendation to the church to solve the problem.

On the other hand, when the minister makes a survey of his actual activities, he may find that he is not actually putting in as many hours as the average man works per day; or he may find that too much of his time is spent upon frivolous or unnecessary activities. Just as there are some pastors who are actually overworking themselves in necessary pastoral tasks, there are some who may be wasting much time and energy which could be used much more profitably; while others may be actually idling away many precious hours.

The minister is under contract to Christ, as well as his congregation, to give an honest day's work and earn the salary which he is paid. If his parish is small and his pastoral duties do not require all his working hours, he should find some other constructive work to supplement his pastoral tasks, lest he be justly accused by his people of being an idler.

Dr. W. W. Melton, pastor of Columbus Baptist Church Waco, Texas, in his book entitled The Making of a Preacher, devotes one chapter to the dangers which the preacher faces. He says, "If all the little thieves that steal the preacher's power were caught and strung up, they would make quite a display." Some of these thieves which he names are:

(1) Laziness, or spending time wastefully instead of constructively.

(2) Lack of study, or failure to develop good study habits. He points out that wide reading is not necessarily synonymous with study.

(3) His attitude toward favors and courtesies. He points out that the minister should not hint for special favor or discounts on purchases; neither should he fail to pay his debts.

(4) Inclining his ear toward flattery, or showing favoritism to the wealthier families of his flock.

(5) Attempting to be all the people want him to be, and trying to do all they want him to do.

Before leaving a consideration of this work, let us quote one more statement of the author, "Loud talk and a glamorous fanfare are usually the proof of emptiness." Let every minister ponder over the significance of this pertinent statement.

With reference to the life and work of the minister in his parish, perhaps the point of prime importance which should be thoroughly understood by both pastor and people is that, above all else, the pastor is the spiritual leader of the congregation. His duty of all duties is to preach and teach the Word. If he fails in this, his whole mission is a failure. He must give himself sufficient time in prayer and study to be prepared for every occasion upon which he stands before his people in a service. He must not let any other activity, no matter how important it may seem, deprive him of the necessary hours of preparation each week. This is why the apostles said to the early Church, "... It is not reason that we should leave the word of God, and serve tables. Wherefore brethren, look ye out among you seven men of honest report, full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom, whom we may appoint over this business. But we will give ourselves continually to prayer, and to the ministry of the word" (Acts 6:2-4).

God's children may not know what the future holds, but they know the One who holds the future, and in whose pierced hands reposes all power in heaven and earth!—Selected.

The Cast-Off Garment

Lois Rivers

MOMMIE, what happens to the grandmother they put in the ground?" my solemn just-turned-six-year-old asked from the depths of the big red leather chair near my desk, where I sat writing.

I looked up to find his pensive, worried eyes upon me, and a serious face cupped in tiny hands still revealing the baby, from which he was emerging too rapidly of late.

My mind had been many miles away, absorbed in my writing, but at the great urgency of my son's need, I laid aside my pencil, and called him to my side.

For a moment, I was seized with panic. What does one say to a six-year-old concerning death? How does one cloak the stark apparentness of "This is the end" and "The lips that so shortly ago spoke words of kindness and affection to a small boy—the hands that never failed to shower cookies and gifts on an adored grandchild—these are silent in death"? What words does one use?

For small John had recently had his first encounter with death.

His smaller brother, Charles, had gone searching through the rooms of the strangely silent house, now filled with soft-voiced people. Even he, in his two-year-old infancy, had sensed that something was missing. And when some relative in sympathy had picked up the wee lad, and asked, "Are you looking for Grandmother?" with wide solemn eyes he had nodded "Yes."

But John was no longer a wee lad. He had seen his beloved grandmother lying silent and still amid that pretty satin, and he could still remember the fragrance of those banked flowers.

He knew about God—and heaven—and they had told him that Grandmother had gone to heaven with God.

He loved God, and he knew that God could take care of Grandmother. But he could not forget the silence of that strange place to which they had taken her. He remembered the deep darkness of that grave. Even a six-year-old boy could tell that that grass was only make-believe and the flowers were only part-time. He had seen his mother throw away roses from their vases at home—when they had wilted, and the petals dropped on the table.

Would his beloved grandmother be like the rose petals?

It had been many months now. We thought he had forgotten. Startling to a mother who thinks she knows her child—mind, body, and soul—and suddenly discovers within that soul of his, depths she has never plumbed—doors that have been closed to her.

So the pause in me, was a prayer for guidance. Then spoke I: "John, you remember the jeans we threw away last week? The knees were patched, and even the patches were beginning to wear through. And Mother said, 'We'll put these aside. They're all worn out. And we'll go to town and buy you some new ones.'"

"You remember the fun we had in town, and the crisp newness of the jeans we brought home? They were a special kind of jeans this time—with shiny brads on the pockets. You said you would be a real cowboy in these.

"You tore off the signs—carefully. You kept the picture of the cowboy on his bucking horse . . . it would be fun for you and Charles to cut out and play with.

"Then you begged, 'May I wear them now?'"

"And I said, 'Yes.'"

"And in 'two shakes of a lamb's tail' you were dressed in your new jeans and running out to show Tommy.

"You weren't sorry about losing the old jeans at all, were you?"

"You laughed at the old worn-out patches, and you said, 'We had lots of fun together, old jeans.'"

"And I laughed, too, and said, 'I remember how you got this big rip—the day you got hung on a limb in the mulberry tree.'"

"And you said 'Good-by, old jeans!'"

"And then you slammed the screen door, and you were gone. And your eyes were all shiny and you were glad.

"Well, it was just the same way with Grandfather, long ago—and now with Grandmother. When people live here on earth a long time, their bodies, just like your old jeans, become faded, and wrinkled, and worn out; and they become very tired. Sometimes there are 'sick' places that haven't been able to heal up very good. Many times the eyes begin to get dim, and the pictures and colors of God's beautiful world become hard to see. Sometimes the ears become dull, and the voices you love are hard to hear—and pretty music, and the singing of the birds.

"Sometimes even, there have been accidents that the doctors have not been able to mend (like your old jeans with the rip too big to be mended)—and the person has limped along, crippled and helpless and unable to do the things he would like to do.

"Then one day, our loving Father looks down and sees this old worn-out garment of ours, we call our bodies, and He says: 'My! This child of Mine needs a new body! This one is getting shabby.'"

"Then He reaches down a loving hand and says, 'Come on up, dear child of Mine. Up here in My beautiful city, I'll fix you a new garment—perfect, and shining like the sun—the most beautiful one you have ever had.'"

"So, in loving thankfulness to our kind and thankful Father, we slip off the old faded garment, with its patches—its aches and pains and tiredness—and step up with Him.

"And all the angels sing in glorious hosannas as another beloved child comes home."

"And then—" (breathlessly).

"And then the old faded garment is put away for safe-keeping. (It has been a very good and useful garment for these many years.) Until one day, God will say: 'I'm going to gather them all up—these garments I made with such loving care that day many ages ago, when I first breathed into these, My children, a living soul. And I will make them like new, and hand them back to My dear ones again.'"

"And we will say, 'Thank You, dear Father; You are so kind to us.'"

He turned away—satisfied. And as he went, I heard him say, "You will take good care of Grandmother, won't You?"—Gospel Herald.

Night Visions

by Athie Sale Davis

"In the night his song shall be with me, and my prayer unto God of my life" (Psalm 42:8).

I used to dread the darkness with a childish, haunting fear and I sought to push it from me, seeking only light and cheer.

But I learned that it is better in the long and weary night to compose my soul to quiet, as I wait for morning's light. Now I know that it is better as I wait upon my bed, to turn my thoughts toward Heaven and recall God's Word instead.

Thus I found that there is comfort in the darkness—in the night; when in quiet, sweet communion my soul finds the perfect Light.

So I joy to greet the darkness, then I meditate and pray! Then my vision is turned upward when God's dark has closed the day!—Gospel Herald.

Whatsoever Thy Hands Find Do

Robert Clark

"Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might; . . ." (Ecclesiastes 9:10).

WE would like to say a word about this book from which our text is taken. It is one of the wisdom books of the Old Testament; Proverbs is the other. There is a great difference between the two books. One has called the book of Proverbs: "A collection of sententious sayings of divine wisdom applied to the earthly condition of the people of God." Another has called the book of Ecclesiastes: "The book of the natural man; it is the mirror of man under the sun held up by the wisest of men; and in its last and best conclusion is still that of the natural man." All things are seen from a human, earthly and temporal standpoint. The present good takes precedence over all else. The writer had a long and wide experience in seeing and using things under the sun (Ecclesiastes 1:12—2:26). He saw human life in its varieties and uncertainties. One may be well today and ill tomorrow. One may be in perplexity, not knowing which way to turn. In such a case there was one thing he could do, and that was: Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might. Action and energy would solve many difficulties and lead a way to a more abundant life. The book of Proverbs, while it does not use the same words, expresses the same sentiment many times. The text is as applicable today as it was in the time of the writer. There are always some who need this admonition, and we all are apt to need it occasionally.

We like the idea of the emphasis that this worldly-wise man places upon work. Man was made to work, in the creative and redemptive purposes of God (Genesis 2:15; 3:17-19). But the wise man was looking at man from a purely utilitarian standpoint. He knew that work was good for man. He was thus able to provide for himself and his family and be independent and be a useful citizen. And work is often a good antidote for depression or discouragement or for corroding cares. And the worker should put his soul into his job: do it with (all) thy might. This admonition is very pertinent today. There is a widespread tendency to avoid work, or to do it in a careless, slipshod, lackadaisical manner. As the little girl said of her father, "My mamma says my papa has no 'susiasm' for his work."

That we may get the most out of this text, there is one thing to remember; and it is this: God has given to every normal person two wonderful gifts. They are a pair of hands and a mind, or intelligence. And He has given to the most of us opportunities to develop them. And what an instrument the mind of man is. He can store his memory with the wisdom of the past. With his imagination he can probe the future. With his reasoning powers he can accumulate facts, sift them, analyze them, separate and classify them; then with his reasoning powers he can come to conclusions and enlarge his whole field of knowledge. And the hand of man is equally a marvelous instrument. Books have been written on the structure of the human hand and its adaptability to different forms of work. It is said that nearly every movement in mechanical science can be performed by the human hand. It can wield the heaviest tools of manual labor; it can be trained to hold the pen of the writer, the brush of the artist, or the fine instruments of the skillful surgeon. The mind and the hand together have given us the might, the majesty, and the manifold forms of our modern civilization. The admonition of the wise man to do whatsoever our hand finds to do is apt and pertinent today.

We can never begin too early to practice this exhortation. The kindergarten is a move in the right direction. With pencils, crayons, scissors and paper, the interests and the activities of children can be developed and directed into educational channels. We knew a little boy who became interested in a certain branch of science, electricity and radio. He began on a shoe string with the simplest tools. He kept on as he grew older, adding to his knowledge and manual skill. He is now a highly-educated scientist. We saw his picture recently. He was experimenting with a great cyclotron in a great university. He did what his hand found to do and it led him into an interesting field of labor and usefulness.

This text is pertinent to us all when we are ready to go out and earn our own living. We believe that all children in school should have aptitude tests. In this way square pegs are kept out of round holes and each person can get a fair idea of what kind of work he is best fitted to do. Nevertheless, if we cannot find the work we would like to do, we can do what our hand finds to do for the present. We knew a boy who graduated from high school. Some thought he ought to have a white collar job. There were none available. He went into a factory and did heavy manual labor. He worked faithfully and well. Later he joined a corporation. He rose to a place of trust. In the meantime he trained the city hands and was chairman of the school board. He did with all his might what his hands found to do and it led him into a useful life.

As a further illustration of the text we cite the careers of two men we knew well. The first graduated from a good college. He had the idea that he ought to begin up near the top. He never got that opportunity. He taught a few terms of district school and then worked in the home farm. The other man graduated from a small college. Then he entered a large university and graduated from that, too. When he returned home with his two diplomas, he went to work in a granite quarry. He did not stay there long but went on and became a minister. He did what his hand found to do.

We can apply this to our leisure time. We can use it to develop our hobbies. Think of David. He was a shepherd with spare time. He had a harp and a sling. He practiced and developed skill with the harp. There were plenty of stones for his sling and marks to shoot them at. Later, his harp got him entrance to the court of the king. His sling won him the hearts of the people. He did with a will what his hand found to do.

So far we have been applying our text to our temporal well-being. That is what the wise man had in view and the Word tells us we are not to be slothful in business. But the text applies equally as well to our spiritual interests. They should have the primary place in our lives. And when we come to years of understanding we should apprehend the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ. The worldly-wise man is not strong for a supernatural gospel of grace. He tells us to fear God (Ecclesiastes 12:13), but he never tells us to trust Him. Our Lord Jesus Christ told us to seek first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness.

The wonderful thing about the Gospel of Christ is that we do not have to seek long or far to find. In the providence of God He has brought the way of salvation to our doors. Some have more truth than others but we all have enough; if we put our hands to the plow and use what we have. What Cain's offering was rejected and his countenance fell, God told him that there was a salvation for him at his very door (Genesis 4:7). He had but to take that offering and he would find a way of acceptance with God and of salvation from his sin.

Later, when Moses was speaking of God's salvation for Israel, he pointed out to them how near it was to their hands, "... it is not hidden from thee, neither is it far off. It is not in heaven, that thou shouldest say, Who shall go up for us to heaven, and bring it unto us, that we may hear it, and do it? Neither is it beyond the sea, that thou shouldest say, Who shall go over the sea for us, and bring it unto us, that we may hear it, and do it? But the word is very nigh unto thee, in thy mouth, and in thy heart, that thou mayest do it" (Deuteronomy 30:11-14).

When Moses speaks here about the Word's being in the mouth and heart he means that they knew the Word; it was in their memories and they spoke about it; what they had to do was to believe it and receive it into their hearts and lives. Paul, in writing to the Romans makes it plain. He quotes this Scripture. He says: "... the word is nigh thee, even in thy mouth, and in thy heart: that is, the word of faith, which we preach; That if thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved. For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness; and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation" (Romans 10:8-10). Here is the evangelical order: Knowledge, belief, acceptance, confession, salvation. Now the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ is the first whatsoever that our hand should find to do, when we hear it. The gospel is for one, for all. It is adapted for all. It will be equally efficacious on all that receive it. And since we may receive, it becomes a categorical imperative that we ought to. Our eternal destiny rests upon our attitude to Christ (John 3:36).

And this text can apply to the work of the Lord. In His vineyard there is room for all workers, for all hands. If you cannot get the place you would like, do what you can. The spirit of Diotrephes is still prevalent in our midst. It may be in our own hearts. He loved to have the pre-eminence (3 John 1:9). Let us be willing to begin where the Psalmist was willing to be—a doorkeeper in the house of the Lord (Psalm 84:10).

If we cannot be on the boards of our church, there are things to do which others forget to do. We can begin by setting a few chairs in order. Be sure that no one who is willing to do what is nearest to his hand in the Lord's work will be long in an inconspicuous place.

Billy Sunday began his service as a tent worker in an evangelistic campaign. He soon had a tent of his own, and a big one at that. The willing humble workers will not be forgotten. In the last chapter of the book of Romans, Paul mentions thirty-five people by name. They all rendered some service to the Lord. And if Paul remembered them, much more our Lord (Isaiah 49:16).

Our hands may yet be a justification for our lack of other services. We heard recently of an aged woman who had had a long and busy life of manual labor. She was a member of a large family at home. She had to work for them. Then she had a family of her own. Then others came needing her care. She had a good mind and longed to cultivate it and know more about the things of the Spirit. She longed to be free to do something in the service of the Lord. But there was always another task waiting for her hands. Now the end was drawing near. She confessed to a friend that she had nothing to show the Lord in the way of service for Him. Her friend answered her: "Show Him your hands; He will understand."

Her hands were not massaged, manicured, and painted; they were not soft, white, romantic hands. They were red, seamed and knotted with years of incessant toil for others. Her hands had been busy in ministering physical care and comfort to many. They had been busy in the sick room. They had carressed the heads of little children as she blessed them. They had been clasped and raised in prayer as she expressed herself to the best of her understanding. They were what they were because she had done with all her might what her hands found to do. And the Lord, who had made the heavens and earth with His hands, and who fed daily all His creatures; the Lord whose own hands had been calloused by honest toil, and still bore the marks of the nails when He was a sacrifice for the sin of the world, would understand.

We like the prayer of Moses the man of God; because it fits into this picture. At the close of his life he reviews his experience and meditates over them. He sees the eternity and unchangeableness of God and the vanity of man. He sees the holiness of God and the sinfulness of man. He sees the perfection of the works of God and the imperfections of man. And he prays: "So teach us to number our days, that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom. . . . And let the beauty of the Lord our God be upon us: and establish thou the work of our hands upon us; yea, the work of our hands establish thou it" (Psalm 90:12-17).

What more could one ask than wisdom for daily living, the beauty of the Lord on us and in us, and the work of our hands acceptable unto Him?—Gospel Herald.

Weather Forecast

Raymond L. Cox
440 South Ninth Corvallis, Oregon

THERE'S hot weather ahead!

This statement may contradict much you have heard, read, and perhaps witnessed recently. For the prevailing trend during the past several winters has tended toward cooler weather, and many meteorologists are warning that this trend will continue. The next fifty years, they say, look great for skiing enthusiasts, while the prospects for outdoor ice skating appear more encouraging than ever.

From exhaustive studies of the circulation of winds around the globe, as influenced by earth's atmosphere and the atmospheric conditions on the sun, some weathermen are announcing long range predictions for a cooler half century. The possibility of occasional sizzling seasons is not ruled out, but the big weather news is expected to be the return of a series of old-fashioned winters such as our grandparents used to endure. The weather prophets indeed are forecasting that there is cold weather ahead.

Whether conditions ahead, however, are to be cold or hot depends a great deal on how far ahead a person is looking!

Meteorologists expect a cold trend to last about fifty years. After that it is predicted that warmer temperatures will gradually return. Not many who read this article will be around to welcome back the warm weather. But many now alive will enter a warmer climate long before earth's temperatures again soar.

During a heat wave in 1953 pedestrians who passed a Jersey City, New Jersey, church were startled by a sign reading, "Now that you know how hot hell is, what are you going to do to escape?"

That question was not meant to be a joke, although it did evoke many hilarious guffaws. The sign was no joke, because there is hot weather ahead for all who reject or neglect the salvation purchased by Jesus Christ and received by sinners through faith.

What is the weather report from hell?

It is far from favorable! It is completely contrary to the coming trend toward cooler climates on earth. If the Bible is true, if "There were people present on the closing night from four Free Will Baptist churches and two Baptist churches other than our own folk. Some of the people from each church represented made pledges to foreign missions. The total amounted to some over $2,000 with $1,599.65 being pledged by our own people. I had prayed and hoped that our total pledges would amount to at least $1,000. This was our first missionary conference, but we trust it will not be our last one. Many of our people have already expressed desires for another conference next year."

Growing or Groaning

Herman L. Hersey,
P. O. Box 11173,
Raleigh, North Carolina

IT has been my observation through the years that we as Christians are either growing or groaning. Many times we groan instead of grow. Peter wrote that we are to "... grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ ..." (2 Peter 3:18).

We read in Hosea 14:5 that we should grow as the lily. The lily is known for its exquisite beauty and fragrance. We often sing, "Let the beauty of Jesus be seen in me." Is His beauty seen in us? Do we have a Christlike spirit in all that we say and do? To grow as a lily is to cultivate a sweet Christian Spirit within us so that when we come in contact with sinners they can say, "Truly this man has been with Jesus."

In John 15 we read that we are to grow as the vine. Jesus said that the test of our growth is the bearing of fruit. Notice the eighth verse, "Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit; so shall ye be my disciples." If we are growing we will bear the fruits of the spirit—love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness and temperance. (Read Galatians 5:22, 23.) Many times we are prone to judge another's fruit bearing instead of examining ourselves to see what we are doing. Jesus said that we cannot be called His disciples unless we are bearing fruit. God is not glorified unless we are bearing fruit. Sinners are not saved unless we bear fruit.

Notice John 15:4-6, "Abide in me and I in you. As the branch cannot bear fruit of itself, except it abide in the vine; no more can ye, except ye abide in me. I am the vine, ye are the branches: He that abideth in me, and I in him, the same bringeth forth much fruit: for without me ye can do nothing. If a man abide not in me, he is cast forth as a branch, and is withered; and men gather them, and cast them into the fire, and they are burned." We cannot bear fruit unless we abide in Christ. What a blessed thought! When we abide in Him there will be no time for groaning—only for growing. The measure of your growth as a Christian is determined by the measure you are abiding in Christ. Without Him we can do nothing and will meet defeat.

A vine must be well cultivated and care must be given to it. Our lives must be cultivated by the reading of His word and prayer. Peter said to "... desire the sincere milk of the word, that ye may grow thereby" (1 Peter 2:2). Are we cultivating our

Foreign Missionary Activities

AMERICA is sending 25 per cent more Protestant missionaries to foreign countries than four years ago.

A new survey of the entire Protestant foreign missionary enterprise shows an all-time high total of 23,432 overseas missionaries from the United States and Canada—22,680 from the United States alone. The figure four years ago was 18,576.

The new count is more than twice that of 20 years ago, when there were 11,289.

The figures were released today by the Missionary Research Library, maintained jointly by the National Council of Churches' Division of Foreign Missions and Union Theological Seminary. They covered 213 agencies or 95 per cent of all known groups.

The survey showed that Protestant missionaries are serving in 100 foreign countries, with 35 per cent in east, southeast and southern Asia; 29 per cent in Africa south of the Sahara Desert; and 26.5 per cent in Latin America.

Despite some semi-official attempts to discourage entry of new missionaries into India, that country leads all others in the number represented, with 2,127 as reported by 82 per cent of the agencies covered.

Next is Japan, with 1,562, and the Belgian Congo with 1,195. China, once host to 4,492 American Protestant missionaries, now has one, held in prison. (He is the Rev. Paul Mackensen, United Lutheran, held by the Communists in Shanghai.)

Six out of every ten missionaries are women. However, the study showed that fewer single women are serving in foreign missions than formerly. About 28 per cent of missionaries are ordained, against 34 per cent four years ago when the last previous study was made. Missionary families average two children.

In addition to ordained missionaries, whose chief duties are evangelistic or in ministerial training, more than 2,000, roughly 11 per cent, are medical doctors and nurses. Non-ordained missionaries also include farm technicians, school teachers, literacy experts, radio broadcasters, film makers, construction engineers, architects, air pilots and ground crews. For study purposes foreign missionaries were defined as North Americans who are employed in full-time overseas service by Protestant foreign missions boards and agencies.

Announcing results of the study, begun in February this year, Dr. Frank W. Price, director of the Missionary Research Library, said the missionaries in the survey receive

For Christ in the Homeland

This article is adapted from the November 1 issue of the bulletin from the National Board of Home Missions.

The Rev. Homer E. Willis, promotional secretary for the board, makes the following request for prayer:

1. For home missionaries on the field—Mr. and Mrs. George Lee Jr. and two children in Nebraska; Mr. and Mrs. Johnnie Postlewaite and two children in Washington; Mr. and Mrs. James Timmons and three children in Mexico; Miss Bessie Yeley in Eagle Pass, Texas; Mr. and Mrs. Bob Wilfong and two children who have transferred to mission school.

2. For the new promotional secretary-treasurer and his family.

3. For our National Home Mission Board members as follows: Rev. Harry E. Staires, Oklahoma; Rev. Willard C. Day, Oklahoma; Rev. Harvey E. Hill, Missouri; Rev. R. H. Jackson, North Carolina; Rev. H. E. Willis, Tennessee.

4. For the state missions directors and all our faithful pastors.

5. That our current obligations of $2,86.86 may be met, and that sufficient funds may come in this month to pay all the missionaries.

In addition to these prayer requests, Mr. Willis suggested other ways that our work can be benefitted:

1. Send a liberal contribution to help the board pay off the accounts receivable.

2. Support one or more of the home missionary teams. The teams receive $200 per month, and $40 for rent.

3. Write and visit your home missions office in Nashville.

4. Send a home mission offering regularly from your church.

5. Sunday schools, leagues, woman's auxiliaries and men's fellowships help make Christmas for our missionary families a brighter occasion. Ages, sizes, etc. can be obtained from the office.

6. Send to the board names and addresses of Free Will Baptist people living in Washington, D. C., or in the states of Iowa, Utah, Wyoming, Colorado, North Dakota, South Dakota, Minnesota and Wisconsin.

7. Read carefully the monthly financial statement! Notice that it was necessary that the board borrow money to meet some of the delinquent accounts.

INFORMATION

The National Home Mission Board has approved the course of study prepared by Dr. Willard C. Day for ministers and Christian workers who cannot attend resident school. Your inquiries to the office are invited.

Church bulletins and news letters sent to the office are highly appreciated.

A Free Will Baptist church pastor sends a good report of a church of our faith in Amsterdam, Holland. He reports that it is the largest Baptist church in that city.

Questions and Answers ON THE BIBLE

Conducted by J. F. BARROW

3824 Richland Avenue, Nashville 5, Tennessee

Question: Please explain, "For it is impossible for those who were once enlightened, and have tasted of the heavenly gift, and were made partakers of the Holy Ghost, and have tasted the good word of God, and the powers of the world to come, if they shall fall away, to renew them again unto repentance; seeing they crucify to themselves the Son of God afresh, and put him to an open shame" (Hebrews 6:4-6)—Mrs. B. F. Coley, Route 1, Farmville, North Carolina.

Answer: To say that I fully understand all that the Holy Spirit means in the solemn words of this tremendous and heart-searching warning would be incorrect and short of good judgment. On the other hand, the language used in the passage is fairly simple and to the point similar to that used in other passages of Scripture. It was given here by the Holy Spirit to be understood, heeded and profited by in the lives of its readers. Many commentators regard this general section of Hebrews as being the third in the book and covering Chapters 5:1-8 and 6. Such titles as the following are to be found ascribed to it: "Christ Our Great High Priest," "Our Great High Priest," "Christ the Superior High Priest," etc. The verses of 5:11—6:12 of this division of that section are regarded by some commentators as a parenthesis and is entitled "Appeal, Warning, Exhortation, etc." In this division (5:11—6:12) the Holy Spirit describes the people to whom He is writing as being hard of hearing or dull of perception, a condition He attributes to a lack of skill that they possess as a result of their failure in exercising themselves in what has been given them when they became Christians. The Holy Spirit further unveils their condition which indeed seems to be bringing them with each passing day more dangerously near to a state of despair and hopeless unbelief. He admonishes them to move on toward the goal to which they are supposed to be progressing which is perfection in Christ.

It is interesting to read what different Calvinistic commentators have to say on this passage. They usually comment in harmony with their view favoring eternal security rather than giving a clear-cut exposition or exegesis of the passage, an unbiased exposition in which a correct exegesis is given clearly and without question sets forth the Armenian doctrinal view.

Dr. W. H. Griffith Thomas, an outstanding Bible scholar among the most renowned scholars for the past century, has the following to say in his book, Let Us Go On, Pages 72-74:

"These Christians are to go forward, for (Vs. 4) it is impossible to restore those who through continued spiritual babyhood fall away. The description of these people must be noticed. They were once for all enlightened. They had tasted of the heavenly gift. They had been partakers of the Holy Spirit. They had tasted the Word of God and the spiritual world. These four statements clearly imply a real and definite spiritual experience. It does not seem possible to interpret these phrases of illumination only, of light rather than of life.

"Then comes the question of the fall: If they shall fall away. The thought must be strictly limited to the text and not made general. It is no ordinary or general fall, but a deliberate apostasy, not backsliding but willful departure. Practically everything turns on the force of the word, impossible, which, of course, must not be in any way weakened. It is absolute and unqualified. Whoever may be referred to here, it is impossible to restore them. This fact alone shows clearly that the passage cannot refer to ordinary backsliding from which restoration is, of course, possible. But does it mean impossible to man or to God? Some think that the reference is to human agency only, implying that man can do nothing with apostasy, which must be left with God. As it is no question of mere relapse but a definite turning aside, it is obviously impossible for the Christian community to restore such a willful state. But it is best to take it just as it stands and interpret it of impossibility in every respect. The explanation of this impossibility is seen in Verse 6, where there is a significant change of tenses. It is pointed out that it is unfortunately possible to keep on crucifying Christ afresh, that is, after they have fallen, and on this account it is impossible to keep on renewing them to repentance. Active hostility to Christ ever persisted in cannot be a matter of restoration, though, of course, as it has often been pointed out, if the cause ceases to operate, the effect will cease to follow.

"There seems to be no doubt that this section is not concerned with mere professors of Christianity, since every prominent word used is found applied to believers in other parts of the New Testament. The word, once, means not to be repeated, as in 9:7, 26-28, while enlightened is the same as in 10:32, partakers as in 3:1, and tasted as in 2:9. Moreover, a mere professor of Christianity could not go on to maturity when he had not really started, nor could salvation in the elementary sense be denied to such a person. Then, too, a professor would not be warned, since he had never possessed grace."

R. C. H. Lenski, in his Interpretation of the Epistle to the Hebrews, has the following to say on Page 180:

"In a study of what is said here and in 10:26-31 regarding the sin against the Holy Ghost we should begin with the passages found in the Gospels, namely Matthew 12:31, 32; Mark 3:28, 29; Luke 12:10, where Jesus warns the blasphemous Pharisees against committing this sin as they were beginning to do; we should also consult 1 John 5:16. Both those who were never converted and those who have been converted may fall into a state in which they make repentance impossible. They may already in this life reach a state that is similar to that of the damned in hell, yea, a state that is similar to that of the devils, for whom there is no repentance, no pardon."

Charles Simeon in Expository Outlines on the Whole Bible, Volume 19, Pages 234, 235, says:

"How many are there who for awhile believe, and, in a time of temptation, fall away. The instance of Demas, if there were no other, is very sufficient to prove, that men may possess, not only gifts, for graces too, and yet return with the dog to his vomit, and draw back unto perdition.

"Miserable, indeed will their situation then become, on account of, . . . the extreme difficulty of renewing them again unto repentance. . . .

"But we must not confine this to avoid infidels: the same is true respecting those who decline from the ways of God, and return to a worldly and carnal life: they put Christ to an open shame: they proclaim to all around them, 'I once thought that it was my highest interest and happiness to serve Christ: but I was mistaken: I made the experiment; I became his follower; I loved Him, served Him, glorified Him; but I found, after all, that I had given up a greater good for a less: I now am assured that Christ cannot make us happy; and, therefore, I have again returned to the world, and chosen it as the better portion: and, whoever would be wise or happy, let him follow my example; let him renounce religion as a needless restraint, and despise it as an enthusiastic delusion: let him lend

The Lighted Pathway

Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path
(PSALM 119:105).

REV. WILLET L. MORETZ
SWANNAHOA, N. C.

"Therefore the LORD himself shall give you a sign; Behold, a virgin shall conceive, and bear a son, and shall call his name Immanuel" (Isaiah 7:14).

By divine inspiration Isaiah was privileged to see the greatest event that has ever taken place nearly seven hundred and fifty years before it happened. That same event we are beginning to celebrate—yes, I said celebrate—now. And I feel that many will celebrate Christ right out of Christmas. God had a purpose in giving His Son to the world. That purpose was not that men might have a time for drunkenness, reveling and untrue myths that relegate Christ out of every thought, word and act.

In the first chapter of the gospel recorded by Matthew we have the purpose set forth in two terms: "And she shall bring forth a son, and thou shalt call his name JESUS: for he shall save his people from their sins. Now all this was done, that it might be fulfilled which was spoken of the Lord by the prophet, saying, Behold, a virgin shall be with child, and shall bring forth a son, and they shall call his name Emmanuel, which being interpreted is, God with us" (Matthew 1:21-23). There then is the twofold purpose of God in giving His Son to the world, for he shall save his people from their sins. . . . and they shall call his name Emmanuel, which being interpreted is, God with us. God's first purpose was to save. His continued purpose is to bring God into our hearts and lives.

Someone has given us the following beautiful thoughts:

"What we need is God brought near and sin taken away—the very blessings guaranteed in these two precious names of our Lord. As Emmanuel, He brings God near to us, near in His own incarnate person, near in His loving life, near in His perfect sympathy, near in His perpetual presence according to the promise, 'Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world.' As Jesus, He saves us from sins. . . . For He has not only to bring God down to us, but also to lift us up to God; and while the incarnation affects the one, the atonement, followed by the work of the Holy Spirit, is necessary to secure the other. He touches man, the creature, at His cradle; He reaches down to man, the sinner, at His Cross—the end of His descent to us, the beginning of our ascent with Him to God. There we meet Him; and saved from sin, we know Him as our Jesus; and reconciled to God, we have Him with us as Emmanuel, God with us, always with us, with us throughout all life's changes, with us in death's agony, with us in the life to come."—Selected.

Shall these Scriptures and these thoughts by a great saint of God not inspire us to make the Christmas that will be here again soon, if Christ tarries, a Christmas that will be a Christ honoring one? It will be easy to leave Him out of all our celebrating. According to the Bible the early Christians were anxious to be identified with the idea that they were living in close touch with Christ. They tried to be as nearly like Him as it was possible for them to be. Christ-likeness was and still is a virtue of which the children of God can be proud. Let's strive to keep Christ in our lives, not only for these few weeks, but during all our remaining days of life.

In Christ's last prayer for His people He prayed:

"I pray not that thou shouldest take them out of the world, but that thou shouldest keep them from the evil" (John 17:15).

PARTNERSHIP

When someone asks R. G. LeTourneau how he can take time to do all the preaching he does, the gist of his answer is: "If I make the Lord's business my business, He will make my business His business; and all will be well."—Selected.

CALLED OUT AND CALLED INTO

Abraham was a type of the calling of the believer.

1. He was called from old surroundings into a new environment (Genesis 12:1).

We are called from the world into the Christ life (2 Corinthians 5:17; Colossians 3:1-10).

2. He was called from heathen worship into a worship of Jehovah (Joshua 24:2, 14, 15).

We are called from serving sin into His service (Romans 6:17, 18; 1 Thessalonians 1:9).

3. He was called from a godless religion into a pilgrim walk (Genesis 17:1).

We are called from the world into His Body, the Church (Acts 2:37, 38, 41, 47; 1 Peter 2:10, 11).

4. He was called from darkness into God's light (Genesis 12:1-3).

We are called from and to, the very same as he (1 Peter 2:9; Titus 2:11-14).

5. He was called from heathenism into separation (Genesis 12:7-9).

all his powers and faculties to the pursuits of time, and the enjoyments of sense; and let him cast off the yoke of Christ as an intolerable burthen.'

"Who can suppose that a man, after having cast such dishonour upon Christ, should ever be brought again to embrace and honour Him? While he continues to reject the Saviour, his restoration to repentance is absolutely impossible; because, there is no way to repent, but by returning to Christ. And that he should return unfeignedly to Christ is morally impossible; because his way to Christ is barred up by shame, and fear, and almost every consideration that can influence the human mind . . ."

In the Pulpit Commentary, Volume 21, Page 179, we find the following:

"Verses 4-6—The critical state of backsliders. . . Passages like this we naturally avoid. There is reluctance to face their difficulties. We dread lest a hasty admission of certain premises may lead us to terrible conclusions. But since backsliding, falling away, is a melancholy reality among believers, it is above all things needful that the possible results of backsliding should be considered. The backslider's present condition we know; but one thing we may not distinctly apprehend until it is pressed upon

We are called from worldly alliances to walk with God (1 John 2:15-17; Romans 12:1, 2).

6. He was called from the bondage of idols into freedom (Genesis 15:1, 5, 6).

We are called from the bondage of sin into the liberty of sons (Galatians 5:13; Romans 1:7).

WHEN YOU SEE JESUS

When you see Jesus the results will be—

1. You will see yourself (Isaiah 6:5).

It makes a difference by what standard you measure (Revelation 3:17; Acts 9:6).

2. You will turn away from sin (Luke 19:8).

True repentance always flees the old life (Acts 3:19; 2:38, 39).

3. You will have a spirit of humility (Luke 22:27).

Most unusual for the natural man (Mark 10:45; Luke 6:27, 28, 35).

4. You will seek a higher standard (1 Peter 1:15, 16).

You will not be content with the old order (Proverbs 4:18; Galatians 2:20).

5. You will be journeying by a new way (Matthew 2:12).

Many a journey has been changed since Christ came (Acts 9:20, 21; Psalm 40:1-4).

6. You will be able to see others (Isaiah 6:5-9).

Many who never saw the Lord—do not see others (Acts 8:4; Mark 6:34).

7. You will be looking for His Return (1 Thessalonians 1:9, 10).

If you have seen Him in Spirit you will want to meet Him in Person (1 John 3:1-3; Hebrews 9:28).

us by solemn utterance of the Holy Spirit, and that is the future into which the present may lead.

" . . . The backslider, in falling away, has fallen from exceeding great privileges. He who was enlightened by a great steady light, shining on him once for all, has yet fallen back into practical darkness. He is not in darkness because the light has gone, but because he has shut it more and more from the inward eye. The light is there, more and more rejoiced in by presevering believers, but he has become willingly negligent of the benefits. The free, peculiar gift of heaven, Jesus Christ Himself, once accepted, is now despised. The Holy Spirit of God, the great Pentecostal communication dwelling with the backslider, is yet shut out from the sympathies of his heart. Renewing and sanctifying work has ceased. The good Word of God, heavenly truth, heavenly promises, all that God has given as daily bread for the hungering inward life, all that shows how man liveth not by bread alone, but by every word proceeding out of the mouth of God,—all this has lost its relish. The powers of the age to come, so much greater than any powers of the present age, are little by little left unused. We have an actual instance of the backslider in Demas."

John Peter Lange, in Commentary on the Holy Scriptures, in the volume on Hebrews has a somewhat different approach as he expounds Hebrews 6:6 on Pages 114, 115:

" . . . And have fallen away. The author has not in mind particular gross or conscious sins, as Luther erroneously supposed, and hence took offence at the passage. He has rather in view apostasy from the recognized and experienced truth of salvation, as a sin closely allied to the sin against the Holy Ghost. The aorist participle points to the fact that this breaking off from all fellowship with Christ is a single and once for all accomplished act; while the following present participles express the condition which follows upon this falling away, characterizing its state alike of utter hopelessness and self-condemnation."

The above quotations are sufficient to convince the readers of this column that outstanding scholars of our day, as well as those of the past two centuries, have agreed with the Free Will Baptist (Arminian) view on the doctrine of the perseverance of the saints. It is just as true, however, to say that all Calvinists disagree with us. That is why they hedge so much when they come to this and similar passages of Scripture.

LIGHT IN A STORMY NIGHT

There is a story told of Adoniram Judson, the great missionary to the Burmese, who was doubtful as to the reality of God and things pertaining to eternity. How Judson became a Christian is a mystery. It looks as if God was dealing mysteriously with Judson in order to show him the truth. We are giving our readers this little bit of history, which is interesting to us and which we believe will be to you who read it. The story is given under the title of "Light in a Stormy Night," and reads as follows:

"With the name of Adoniram Judson, the great missionary among the Burmese, is associated one of the most remarkable stories of the ways of God's choosing and fitting instruments for His services and praise.

"A student of Brown University, New England, clever, cultured, vivacious but skeptical, he lived a constant round of questionable pleasure, untroubled by thoughts of the future. Joining a theatrical company of New York, on a certain occasion, Judson was journeying in New England; and on a dark stormy night, while the wind sighed and moaned among the pine-clad hills, he lost his bearing and finally found his way to a roadside tavern near Sheffield, Massachusetts. Hearing shouting, the landlord went to the door, and there saw the benighted traveler at the gate alighting from his horse. Giving the horse to a boy to be cared for, Judson was taken to the house and, his wet wraps removed, he sat down before a roaring fire in the old tavern.

"Of slender build, boyish appearance, with strength of character, neatly but not lavishly dressed, the landlord was curious to know who the youth was to be out so far from home on such a night. He apologized for his inquisitiveness, and then asked many questions, to which Judson gave sparing answers and seemed oblivious to much that was going on. After a hearty supper he became more communicative, gave his name and place of abode, stating that he was with a theatrical company. The landlord, who was of old Puritan stock, lost no time in stoutly condemning such organizations as calculated to destroy the morals and character of the younger generation. This had little effect upon Judson; for he was an avowed skeptic.

"Feigning sleep, but in reality anxious to get rid of his unwelcome interrogator, whose conversation was not to his liking, he asked to be shown to his room. Following the light of a pine knot, he was taken into a dingy apartment, for which the landlord apologized, stating that the guest chamber, which adjoined, was occupied by a young man who was very ill. After arranging everything as comfortable as possible, he bade his guest good night and left, saying that he had to watch by the bedside of the sick man all night.

"Young Judson couldn't sleep, but lay in the bed thinking. The wind howled without, shingles on the roof rattled, and constantly a groan would come from the sick room. The rooms were only separated by a thin partition and the flickering light shone through the cracks, making thin streaks of light on his own bed. Toward morning the groans increased, interspersed by a loud curse or blood-curdling yell, mingling with the sobbing of the wind.

"The restless visitor was tormented by these sounds, which seemed to find an answer in his own heart cries. As the night wore away and morning dawned, the groans became more feeble, then suddenly ceased, and the light went out. The tired traveler now tried to sleep, but only fell into a fitful slumber for a few moments. At breakfast he inquired of the landlord for the sick man. 'Dead,' he said, 'and may I never see such another deathbed, for without faith in God and hope in Christ, he has gone to meet his doom.' Judson did not care for such reflections, and tried to stop the old man by asking, 'Who was he, and where did he come from?' 'Where he came from I cannot tell,' replied the landlord, 'but he stumbled in here one day in almost a delirious condition, and could not answer questions. I put him to bed, and he got worse, I looked in his pockets and found a letter addressed to William George Saunders, Brown University.'

"Judson dropped his knife and fork on his plate and his hands went to his sides. 'What!' he cried. 'George Saunders, my old schoolmate, who graduated with me last year?' 'I suppose it must be the same,' replied the landlord, 'for the letter was dated more than a year ago, and I judged it to be from his mother. I wrote her at once, and expect her here soon.' Adoniram Judson arose greatly upset and said, 'Show me the room immediately. I wish to see for myself if it is my old-time friend.' The landlord led the way to the room, pulled back the sheet, and disclosed the distorted features of what once had been a fair youth, budding into manhood. 'Poor, poor, George, George,' said Judson, looking on the emaciated form of his old college chum. 'Who would have thought, when you graduated a year ago, the pride of your class, that you would now be lying, far from home, with no one to soothe your dying hour. Sad to think such a star of promise has gone out in darkness. Nothing accomplished in this life. And the next—alas, alas, we both denied a future existence. Your past was an opening rosebud, your present a withered flower, your future—well, God knows. Shall I ever be lying thus?'

"Turning to the old man he enquired if he had arranged for the funeral. 'Nothing definite,' was his reply, adding that he wished the relatives to come first. Judson quickly took a roll of bills from his pocket saying, 'Bury him decently and keep the rest for your trouble. With his memory I also bury my former life of sin. From this day I will, please God, strive for something nobler than either of us sought before.' Turning away, he ordered his horse, offered his hand to the old man, who took it firmly while tears ran down his furrowed cheeks, for the man who had come to the tavern an infidel, rode away truly repentant and seeking light.

"Has God ever refused a contrite cry? The Psalmist says, '... a broken and a contrite heart, O God, thou wilt not despise' (Psalm 51:17). The truth of this point Judson proved. The incident became the turning point in the young collegian's life, and the erstwhile infidel became a sincere believer, carrying the gospel, which had so signally proven itself to be, in his case, the power of God unto salvation, to foreign lands. Truly it could be said of Judson, as was said by the Lord of Saul of Tarsus, '... he is a chosen vessel unto me, to bear my name before the Gentiles, and kings, ...' (Acts 9:15).

"His self-denying missionary labor in Burma is well known.

"Reader, whoever you may be, skeptical or deeply devout, the Saviour who became Judson's Deliverance, is patiently waiting and pleading: 'Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest' (Matthew 11:28). And again, '... him that cometh unto me I will in no wise cast out' (John 6:37). Will you not turn today, and say with one of old, 'Lord, I believe?'

"... The word is nigh thee, ... the word of faith, which we preach; That if thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved' (Romans 10:8, 9).

"Repent ye therefore, and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out, ...' (Acts 3:19)."—Pilgrim Tract Society.

TUFFY FORGIVES

Z. R. SKY

BEN blew into Tuffy's ear, and the little brown and white dog shook his head, his long ears flopping from side to side. Ben laughed at the dog's discomfort, and two of the other boys, Fred and Henry, joined in. Tuffy's brown eyes looked pleadingly at Curt, his master, who was standing silently to one side.

"Come here, Tuffy," called Curt, and the dog ran to his master.

Ben followed Tuffy. "You've got a funny dog," he remarked to Curt, and bent down and pulled Tuffy's ears. Tuffy whimpered in pain.

"Let him alone," Curt said suddenly.

Ben looked up in surprise. "I'm just playing," he explained. And he grabbed Tuffy's tail, and pulled it hard. The dog yelped, and all the boys laughed, except Curt.

Curt stepped forward and pushed Ben roughly away. The boys had been teasing Tuffy for some time; he had asked them to stop, more than once, in a good-natured way, and they had only laughed. Now, he couldn't stand it any longer. His eyes flashed, as he said to Ben, "You don't know how hard to play with a dog. Keep your hands off Tuffy from now on."

Ben stared, and then an angry flush mounted to his cheeks. "All right," he said. "All right, if that's the way you want it. Only, don't expect us to share anything with you either. We don't like poor sports. Come on, boys."

Ben, Fred and Henry walked away. Curt heard one of them say, "Selfish."

Curt stood with his fingers digging into his palms. He hadn't meant to quarrel with his friends. But Tuffy was his friend also, and he couldn't let them hurt him. They just didn't understand that a dog has feelings too.

After a while, Curt began to get used to playing alone. Sometimes, he and Tuffy would take walks while he wondered how to get back his lost friends.

It was on one of these walks that Curt came across Ben, Fred and Henry teasing a stray dog. Curt stopped.

The dog's eyes were rolling from side to side, seeking a way of escape. But every-time it tried to break away, one of the boys would step in front of it. The boys seemed to be having a good deal of fun, but to Curt the dog looked desperate.

"Look out," he warned. That dog's going to bite."

The boys glanced around, but when they saw who it was, they turned right back to what they were doing, without bothering to reply.

Suddenly, the dog gave a low growl. It crouched, showing its fangs, its eyes on Ben. Ben stepped back hastily, but the dog kept watching him. In another moment, it would spring.

Curt started forward, but something flashed past him, and Tuffy leaped between Ben and the stray dog.

Tuffy advanced upon the dog; it stood its ground a moment, then turned and trotted away.

"Whew!" exclaimed Ben. "That dog would have bitten me, if Tuffy hadn't chased him away! I didn't realize we were bothering him so much." He knelt beside Tuffy. "Sorry, Tuffy," he said, "I guess I treated you just as badly once. Would you be friends with me again? And do you think you could get your master to come back to his old friends?"

Tuffy wagged his tail, and gave Ben his paw, while Curt grinned.—Story Hour.

The Robbed Nest

Three schoolboys were spending their Saturday holiday in the woods. The little birds flitting from tree to tree, and the pretty primroses growing so luxuriantly, afforded them several hours' amusement, and then one of the boys purposed looking for nests. They had been forbidden to disturb or rob birds' nest, because it was cruel and sinful. "We can look at the eggs," said the boys, "and leave them there." Soon after the search began, they found a nest with five pretty spotted eggs. For a moment the boys looked at them, then the temptation came to possess them, and they robbed the nest. All the way home they were miserable, and one proposed to return and put them back into the nest. But night was coming down, and they had to hasten home.

Next day in the Sunday school, the memory text repeated by the whole class was, "Be sure your sin will find you out." The boys looked at each other, and as the teacher pressed home the text by saying, "Things nobody knows but yourselves and God, will all be found out and brought to judgment." The youngest boy cried. He told his parents when he went home of his sin, and made a full confession: then the others were found out. So you see they could not hide their sin; it was found out, and so will all your sins be.—Our Children.

Lights for Jesus

Jesus is the Light of the world. But since He has gone to heaven He has given His light to His children. He calls His children now the light of the world.

Jesus said to His disciples one day: "Ye are the light of the world" (Matthew 5:14). A disciple means a learner. Are you a learner of Jesus? You can also be a light for Him.

There are so many dark places and sad hearts in the world, and Jesus wants lights to shine in these dark places. Will you be a little light, and shine for Him? You can make sad hearts happy if you shine upon them with your sweet smile of love.—Gospel Herald.

Look Over, Not Through

One day John Wesley was walking with a troubled man. He said: "I do not know what I shall do with all this worry and trouble." At that moment Wesley saw a cow looking over a stone wall. "Do you know," asked Wesley, "why that cow is looking over the wall?" "No," said the man who was worried. "The cow is looking over the wall because she cannot see through it. That is what you must do with your wall of trouble—look over it and above it." Looking unto Jesus.—Selected.

Hector, Ark.—The Woman's Auxiliary of the First Free Will Baptist Church met at the church on Wednesday, November 21, for its monthly session. Mrs. W. A. Crouch read the Scripture taken from Deuteronomy, Chapter 6. Mrs. Sidney Waterfield then led the group in prayer.

Mrs. J. D. Coffman gave the lesson introduction on the subject of "Family Altars." Mrs. E. H. Langford led the group in prayer preceding the topics which were reviewed and discussed by Mrs. R. B. Kimbrell, Mrs. Waterfield, Mrs. Jake Garrigus and Miss Clytie Coffman.

Officers elected to serve for the coming year were as follows: Mrs. W. A. Crouch, president; Miss Clytie Coffman, vice-president; Mrs. J. D. Coffman, secretary-treasurer; Mrs. Homer Langford, program chairman; Miss Coffman, personal service chairman and reporter.

Mrs. J. D. Coffman dismissed the ladies with prayer.

Mr. Raper said the college was prepared at present to teach the mathematics courses but there has been no demand for the subjects to date.

Mount Olive College was established three years ago. It was given strong community support in a fund-raising campaign conducted earlier this year. Credits earned at the college are now accepted by Atlantic Christian College, Wilson, North Carolina; East Carolina College, Greenville, North Carolina; and Free Will Baptist Bible College, Nashville, Tennessee.

Applications Taken for Spring Semester

Applications are being accepted by Mount Olive Junior College, Mount Olive, North Carolina, for the spring semester which gets under way on January 25, college officials report.

President W. Burkette Raper is anticipating a slight increase in enrollment for the forthcoming semester. Present enrollment is 60 regular college students.

Transferring and new students may now register for any department of study. For additional information, write or visit the college.

Excerpt From Report Of Standards Committee

The committee is pleased with the progress made by the Mount Olive Junior College, Mount Olive, North Carolina. It is pointing out to them that at the present time they fail to meet certain principles for accrediting junior colleges, largely principle 5 relating to the curriculum and principle 8 pertain to the library. The committee hopes that the college will meet these and all principles for the 1957 session and thus operate under standard conditions as of that year. This would entitle them to accreditation as a junior college in 1958-59, assuming that their reports and further study by the committee will demonstrate the above progress in the years mentioned.

BACKBONE OF CHARACTER

Character is made up of small duties faithfully performed, of denial, of self-sacrifice, of kindly acts, of love and duty. The backbone of character is laid at home, and whether the constitutional tendencies be good or bad, home influences will, as a rule, fan them into activity. Kindness begets kindness, and truth and trust will bear a rich harvest of truth and trust. There are many trivial acts of kindness which teach us more about a man's character than many vague phrases.—Scottish American.

Program of Study Changed to Meet Accreditation Specifications

The curriculum of Mount Olive Junior College, Mount Olive, North Carolina, has been ironed out to meet North Carolina Conference specifications and the new changes will be instituted before the fall term in 1957, President W. Burkette Raper announced this week.

Earlier this month, the North Carolina College Conference Committee on Standards said that a change in the curriculum and improvements in the library will virtually assure the school full accreditation by the fall of 1958.

Accreditation by the fall of 1958 will assure students entering Mount Olive Junior College in September of 1957 of graduation under accredited conditions and thus their credits would be honored by all other colleges in the state.

If the standards committee approves the changes, probationary accreditation will be granted the school next year.

Even before the standards committee handed down its decision, the college moved to improve its library.

Deciding that 1,200 additional specific titles would be needed to meet standards for an accredited library, the college launched a drive to raise $6,000 for the project. Already more than one third of this amount has been raised.

To meet the curriculum required by the standards committee, the college will delete its education courses and add advanced mathematics courses.

MISSIONS

their support from 280 different boards and agencies, including over 60 that do not send personnel.

These groups received $130,000,000 to finance the whole enterprise in 1955. About $100,000,000 was spent overseas, the remainder being used for administration, furloughs, equipment and other expenses at home.

The study showed that 43.3 per cent of the total missionaries belong to denominational boards and other agencies that co-operate in the National Council of Churches' Division of Foreign Missions. Other large groupings are the Interdenominational Foreign Missions Association, with 19.8 per cent, and the Evangelical Foreign Missions Association with 17.8 per cent. Independent societies send 12.8 per cent of all North American missionaries, while Canadian boards send 3.1 per cent.

Most of the increase in U. S. foreign missionaries since 1952 was accounted for by evangelical associations independent boards and faith societies, Dr. Price pointed out. These groups sent an additional 4,170 overseas, as compared to 631 sent by older established boards or agencies cooperating in the Division of Foreign Missions.

"In general it may be said that missionary societies connected with the National Council of Churches and its Division of Foreign Missions have a longer history and spend more on institutional and service programs," Dr. Price commented. He also noted that the cooperating boards of the older church bodies have placed greater emphasis on supporting Christian workers who are nationals of the overseas countries being served. These latter persons, including medical, nursing, teaching and other persons, are not included in the total count which refers to U. S. and Canadian personnel only, he said.

The Methodists send the most missionaries overseas, accounting for 1,513. The Seventh Day Adventists are next with 1,272. Then follow the Presbyterian Church, U. S. A. (Northern), with 1,072; and the Sudan Interior Mission (interdenominational) with 1,024.

The leading boards according to income are: Methodists, $13,000,000; Southern Baptist and Seventh Day Adventists, each with $11,000,000.

An estimated 64,000,000 Protestants in the United States and Canada each contribute an average of $2.00 per member for foreign missions in 1955. Highest per capita giving was in the Mennonite Brethren Church of North America, whose 11,920 members gave an average $37.50 to support 188 missionaries.

The study results, based on data collected in two simultaneous surveys of North American Protestant boards and agencies, were published by the Missionary Research Library this week in a 29 page bulletin. In addition, the library has published a new directory of foreign missionary agencies in North America.

Two church bodies not included in the study were the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints (Mormons) and Jehovah's Witnesses, figures for which were not available. Roman Catholic foreign missionaries from the United States are listed at 5,126. Information on contributions for their support was not available.

Longer term geographical trends revealed by the study show that in the last 30 years the number of American Protestant missionaries has increased four times in Africa, has remained about the same in the Near East and Southern Asia, and has decreased sharply in East Asia due to expulsions from Communist China. However, Southeast Asia has gained more than twice as many missionaries in that time.

Growing or Groaning

lives to the best advantage? Have we developed all the talents that God has given unto us? Have all the weeds of sin and selfishness been rooted out of our lives and have we completely yielded ourselves to the sunshine of God's grace? Let us grow as the vine.

Still another way that we should grow is recorded in Psalm 92:12, "The righteous shall flourish like the palm tree: he shall grow like a cedar in Lebanon." The cedar of Lebanon is known for its great strength and very deep roots. It is one of the strongest trees in the world and its wood is very valuable. The psalmist said that we are to grow like a cedar in Lebanon. The lesson that I see here for us is that we should grow strong and deep. There are so many weak Christians. Paul said that they are "... tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine, ..." (Ephesians 4:14). The devil is doing all within his power to defeat us. We must be strong to resist him and his temptations. Are we seeking to learn the deep things of God, or are we content with shallow lives? It is only when we are well grounded in God's word and grace that we can be strong Christians. Dear reader, if you are weak in the Christian life, and live in a constant fear of backsliding, why don't you endeavor to grow strong and deep as a cedar in Lebanon?

We have seen that we must grow as a lily, a vine and a cedar in Lebanon; but there must be a combination of all three if we are to have a well-rounded Christian experience. We can have the beauty of Jesus in us and a Christlike spirit and still bear no fruit. We can be strong in theology and in the fundamentals of our faith and yet not bear fruit. It is possible to bear fruit and yet not be as strong and well grounded as we should in our Christian experience. If one of these qualities is missing we are not properly balanced. Let us strive with God's help and grace to have a normal, steady growth. What are you doing, growing or groaning?

In Christ there is no East nor West,
In Him no South nor North,
But one great fellowship of love
Throughout the whole wide earth.

In Him shall true hearts everywhere
Their high communion find;
His service is the golden cord
Close binding all mankind.

Love from love is sure to ripen,
Hate from hate is sure to grow."

No one saw him come, no one heard him go, yet all held their breath when he had gone, for a fellow workman had, without uttering a sound, fallen lifeless to the floor. That silent visitor was death. He brought a summons abruptly, not even asking if the man's day's work were done, nor if he were ready or willing to go. Be ye also ready!" Read Hebrews 9:27.—Selected.

The Way of Christian Love

(Lesson for December 16)

Lesson: 1 Corinthians 13:1-13.

Golden Text: 1 Corinthians 13:13.

I. INTRODUCTION

In our study of the Scriptures it is always important that we should consider the setting of the particular passage we are having under consideration. Applying this principle to the thirteenth chapter of 1 Corinthians we find that it follows the apostle's rebuke of various evils found among the Corinthians. The Corinthians were rebuked for sectarianism, careless walk, indifference to the misconduct of their fellow believers, and tolerance of evil, going before heathen judges to settle disputes, self-centered practice of Christian liberty and the perversion of the Lord's Supper. They were self-inflated, self-confident, and self-conceited, and for this reason they were guilty of many fleshly evils. In their worldly, self-seeking and ambitious spirit the Corinthians abused the use of spiritual gifts, for which reason the apostle exhorts, "But covet earnestly the best gifts: and yet shew I unto you a more excellent way" (1 Corinthians 12:31). This more excellent way is set forth and described in Chapter 13; it is the way of love—Selected.

While Paul recognized the fact that the Corinthian Church was in a sad spiritual condition, yet he does not tell them that they need to be sanctified. Instead he tells them in Chapter 6:11 that they had been washed, sanctified and justified, but they were not walking worthy of their high calling.

II. HELPFUL HINTS

1. Unknown tongues will never ring true unless they are spoken with the grace of love (Vs. 1).

2. The virtue of knowledge and the power of faith are reckoned as nothing in the absence of love (Vs. 2).

3. The charity of the rich nor the martyr's blood cannot win God's approval when void of His love (Vs. 3).

4. The sum total of all the elements essential to the life that is lived wholly for Christ is love (Vv. 4-7).

5. The hope that is anchored to spiritual gifts will fall with the anchors in the passing of time (Vs. 8).

6. Spiritual gifts, with other things in part, are things of childhood and must pass away with the things of time (Vv. 9-11).

7. Love is perfect, complete and divine, and will therefore endure for all eternity (Vv. 9-11).

8. The things seen and known obscurely by faith will be seen and known in heaven in the light of God's face (Vs. 12).

9. Faith, hope and love are the three most important graces, in this life, but love is the greatest of the three. Faith and hope anchor the soul as we make our voyage to heaven, but they will vanish with the passing of time. In heaven faith will give way to endless sight, and hope will vanish with perfect knowledge. But perfect love will endure forever, but love is of God and God is eternal.—The Bible Teacher (F. W. B.).

III. ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

1. Let us not misunderstand the meaning of the word charity as it is used by the apostle in his explanation. It does not mean mere benevolence as we commonly understand it today; it carries the broader and fuller meaning of love as illustrated and taught by our Lord. As we shall see in our discussion, the apostle places love far above any other Christian gifts and graces.

Let us be reminded that love is the very essence of God's being and nature; we partake of His nature when we love in deed and in truth. John says, "Beloved, let us love one another: for love is of God; and every one that loveth is born of God, and knoweth God. He that loveth not knoweth not God; for God is love" (1 John 4:7, 8).—The Bible Student (F. W. B.).

2. Charity is love in action! The most often sung about, written about, and preached about theme is love. Yet possibly the greatest lack, even among God's children, is self-crucifying, self-denying love. How destructive to the spirituality and unity of believers is the atmosphere engendered by loveless, cutting, caustic criticism! What havoc is wrought by loveless contenders for the faith! Ill will, malice and hate cannot live in an atmosphere of unfeigned love of the brethren. We are living in a hate-filled world. Men and nations are looking daggers at each other across ever-widening chasms of hate and distrust. How imperative and urgent it is, therefore, that all who name the Name of Christ shall fully obey what has been called the eleventh commandments "A new commandment I give unto you, That ye love one another; as I have loved you, that ye also love one another" (John 13:34).—Selected.

3. It is quite evident that divine love is first of all marked by an absence of egotism and selfishness. Human nature is envious and boastful; it is conceited and rude; it is selfish and easily provoked; it does think evil and does rejoice in iniquity. But by the Holy Spirit our human nature is buried with Christ and does not exert itself; all of which makes us easier to live with. After all, selfishness does spoil most homes; but the children of God do not always insist on having their own way. Here is the testimony of a woman from Indiana. She was much upset by a criticism which was offered by one of her fellow officers in a women's society. Instead of getting into an argument, or telling her friends how very much she had been hurt, she told her heavenly Father, and He gave her that word from Ephesians 4:32, "Be ye kind one to another, tenderhearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you." And here is the rest of the story: "I cannot now recall what the upset was about; nor do I have the slightest resentment toward the woman."—The Bible Expositor.

4. Charles Finney designated disinterested benevolence as the essence of love. It is good will without an axe of one's own to grind.

Easily provoked is an unfortunate translation of the word parozunetai. The word is absolute and should be is not exasperated or provoked (Vincent).

We are studying about God's love and it cannot be provoked to sinful anger. Let us review the arrest, the trials and the Crucifixion of our Saviour. Can you find any place where He was provoked to sinful anger? None at all.

But what about the quarrel between Paul and Barnabas in Acts 15:36-41? Here it was the old man that was provoked to sinful anger, not the love of God. The old carnal nature is not eradicated in this world, and will assert himself whenever the Holy Spirit is not in full control of the believer's life.

A Parable

A little girl at Christmas had ten cents given her—ten bright, new pennies. "This," she said, laying aside one, "is for Jesus."

"But," said her mother, "you have already given one to Jesus."

"Yes," said the child, "but that belonged to Him; this is a present."—Selected.

Weather Forecast

Jesus Christ and His apostles knew what they were talking about, hell is hot! There is hot weather ahead for the sinner.

Jesus thundered more warnings about hell than he uttered promises of heaven. He warned of hell fire (Matthew 18:9), a furnace of fire (Matthew 13:42), and everlasting fire. According to our Lord, hell is a place where the fire is not quenched (Mark 9:48).

Not only will the weather be unbearably warm, but the atmosphere will also be suffocating far beyond the unpleasantness of the worst earthly smog for "... the smoke of their torment ascendeth up for ever and ever: ..." (Revelation 14:11).

In this world the misery of hot days is often mitigated by cool, refreshing nights, but not so in perdition for "... they have no rest day nor night, ..." (Revelation 14:11). The Bible presents the picture of a lake of fire where weeping and wailing resound. Scalding tears may heighten hell's humidity.

How horrible the thought that human beings will ride damnation's crested waves as they are whipped by blistering blasts of the winds of wrath. Yet according to Revelation 20:15 that will be the fate of all whose names are missing from the Lamb's Book of Life. They will be "... cast into the lake of fire."

Moreover, hell's heat wave will last forever and forever. No cooling cycle, such as earth may now be entering, will ever mitigate the torment of the doomed. There is hot weather ahead! But it need not be hot for you!

Anyone who acts in time will enjoy a comfortable climate hereafter. It will be too late for those who wait until they arrive in the flame. The people who populate perdition can install no air-conditioning devices. Neither will they find any fire escapes. But those who accept Christ now are "... saved from wrath through him"

Romans 5:9). Jesus Himself announced that "He that believeth ... shall be saved: ..." (Mark 16:16). The weather forecast from heaven is quite reassuring. For those who come to Christ there will be a glorious promise fulfilled: "... neither shall the sun light on them, nor any heat" (Revelation 7:16).

There is hot weather ahead for all who neglect so great salvation. But there is wonderful weather ahead for those who wash their robes and make them white in the blood of the Lamb.

Working Together

Let a good understanding be cultivated among sincere Christians of different denominations. Let the friends of Christ know one another; and let not shades of difference keep them at variance. The enemies of Christianity know how to avail themselves of our discords. The union which is here recommended is not a merely nominal one, much less one that requires a sacrifice of principle. Let us unite, in promoting the interests of Christ; and hold ourselves open to conviction with regard to other things.—Andrew Fuller.

EDITORIAL

DEACONS

If inquiries coming to our desk during recent months can be accepted as the indication of a vital need in the denomination, we judge that our people want specific instruction in church administration. Among these inquiries we have had a number of requests to outline the duties of deacons. Therefore, we shall give a brief discussion of the deacons and their work. This particular article will deal principally with the qualifications of deacons and the manner in which they are selected and set apart for their work; in a later article we shall deal with their duties.

Let us first go to the New Testament to find the authority for this office in the Christian Church. Since the church in Jerusalem had experienced such phenomenal growth following the coming of the Holy Spirit on the Day of Pentecost, the responsibility for the care of the congregation had outgrown the ability of the apostles to administer it. Then a segment of the congregation began to murmur and complain that its members were neglected. The apostles, recognizing this problem, took action, "Then the twelve called the multitude of the disciples unto them, and said, It is not reason that we should leave the word of God, and serve tables. Wherefore, brethren, look ye out among you seven men of honest report, full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom, whom we may appoint over this business. But we will give ourselves continually to prayer, and to the ministry of the word" (Acts 6:2-4).

We notice that the recommendation of the apostles listed certain qualifications which the deacons should have:

(1) They should be men of honest report. Since this office was to carry a sacred trust exceeded only by that of the minister, the men selected should be of excellent character. They should have such a reputation as to command the highest respect and confidence of the membership.

(2) They should be full of the Holy Ghost. There is a difference in possessing the Holy Spirit and being filled with the Holy Spirit. Every believer comes into possession of the Holy Spirit at his regeneration. Only those Christians are filled with the Spirit who let the Holy Spirit possess them to the extent that the Spirit controls their desires and directs their activities. These have experienced growth in grace so that they are no longer babes in Christ.

(3) They should be men of wisdom. They should have ability to analyze the problems which arise in the church and bring about the proper solution. Since all people are not endowed with equal mental ability, they should be selected from among the members who display evidence of greater intelligence. Education, though not necessarily a requirement, may be an indication that the person has had some training in solving problems objectively.

To have the respect and confidence of the people, to be filled with the Spirit, and to be able to render wise and unbiased judgment in church matters should make a person invaluable to the cause of Christ as he fills the office of a deacon.

Paul also wrote Timothy about the qualifications of a deacon. After he had described the qualifications of a bishop or minister, he said, "Likewise must the deacons be grave, not doubletongued, not given to much wine, not greedy of filthy lucre; Holding the mystery of the faith in a pure conscience. And let these also first be proved; then let them use the office of a deacon, being found blameless. Even so must their wives be grave, not slanderers, sober, faithful in all things. Let the deacons be the husbands of one wife, ruling their children and their own houses well. For they that have used the office of a deacon well purchase to themselves a good degree, and great boldness in the faith which is in Christ Jesus" (1 Timothy 3:8-13).

In this passage we have three additional qualifications of a deacon:

(1) He must have been proved. A person must not be selected for a deacon who has recently accepted Christ as his Saviour. He must have been a Christian long enough to have proven to the members that he is established in the faith and mature enough to reflect that stability in all his activities.

(2) He must be the husband of one wife. It is generally accepted that this Scripture means he should not be a polygamist—living with more than one wife. However, consideration may be given to the interpretation of some that this applies to a divorced person whose first wife is still living. We do not hold the belief personally that this requirement excludes a single person from qualifying as a deacon, since he could not have violated either of the interpretations given above.

(3) The deacon must have a faithful wife and an obedient household. To us, it is necessary that this qualification be not overlooked, because the deacon's influence can be severely curtailed by his family. If a man cannot command the respect of his family and be the leader of his household, it would seem folly to elect him to leadership in the church. Perhaps we should use the same parenthetical expression of the apostle in making application to the deacon as to the minister, "(For if a man know not how to rule his own house, how shall he take care of the church of God?)" (1 Timothy 3:5).

The church in Jerusalem accepted the recommendation of the apostles and selected the seven men, "Whom they set before the apostles: and when they had prayed, they laid their hands on them. And the word of God increased; and the number of the disciples multiplied in Jerusalem greatly; . . ." (Acts 6:6, 7). It may be assumed that the congregation selected these deacons by casting votes according to the custom which had already been established among the believers. (Read Acts 1:15-26.)

When the deacons were selected by the congregation, they were ordained by the apostles. The ordination service was simple: the apostles prayed and laid their hands on the deacons as an act of setting them apart for their special work.

Give Glory to God

Albert M. Ezell, Searcy, Arkansas

"Hear ye, and give ear; be not proud: for the LORD hath spoken. Give glory to the LORD your God, before he cause darkness, and before your feet stumble upon the dark mountains, and, while ye look for light, he turn it into the shadow of death, and make it gross darkness" (Jeremiah 13: 5, 16).

SURELY if God found occasion to speak thus to the children of Israel, we of this present day really ought to heed earnestly that admonition.

If there was ever a time in the history of our nation that the people have failed to give God the glory, it is now. Many times we see those that are blessed with wonderful God-given talent, that fail to use it to the glory of God. And many times if we are able to accomplish much, and go far with these talents, we find ourselves so flattered with the praise of the people, that rather than lose this opportunity to satisfy the craving of our own egotistic appetites, we take to ourselves the praise and honor that should have gone to God.

"And upon a set day Herod, arrayed in royal apparel, sat upon his throne, and made an oration unto them. And the people gave a shout, saying, It is the voice of god, and not of a man. And immediately the angel of the Lord smote him, because he gave not God the glory: and he was eaten of worms, and gave up the ghost" (Acts 12: 1-23). Here we can see, without a doubt, the danger of accepting praise and honor to ourselves that can only be attributed to God.

I believe that we should never come to God in prayer without thanking Him for the talents that He has given us. True, some of us may feel that we have no talent, or that if we do, they are so small they can be of no use to anyone or no glory to God. But when you begin to become discouraged with your lack of talent and your dearth of ability, and feel that you are just not able to do anything worthwhile, remember that in most cases the little things really count. If you will be willing, God will make you able.

The widow who cast into the treasury had very little to offer, but she gave all that she had, and Jesus said that she had cast in more than they all. So you see, the little that we have to give, or the few words that we have to say, are sometimes the very thing that someone might need. When we begin to erect a beautiful mansion, the first thing that must be done is lay the foundation. When God wants to grow a tree, the first thing He must do is plant a tiny seed. So you see the little things that seem so insignificant to us, and would hardly seem to be of help to anyone, could tower into a thing that might be the means of helping many. But when we make our little effort, let us do it in all humility and prayerfulness; and as we gain victory after victory, let us not forget to give God the glory; for, after all, it is He that made us, and all we can ever accomplish we owe to Him.

The people, now in these troubled times, seem to be continually in search for a surcease from their troubles and their fears. They seek relief through the works of the

THE PEOPLE OF HUNGARY ARE HUNGRY

Any one who has heart at all has been sympathetic with the people in Hungary and their pathetic plight. All of this has come about because the people there are hungry.

They are hungry for food. The Russians have been taking much and giving little. The people there are tired of this type of oppression and are now struggling for release. They are hungry for freedom. They want a government that is by the people and for the people. They want this so very badly they are willing to pay the extreme penalty of death to obtain freedom for the future generation.

They are hungry for the gospel. This is proved by release of Cardinal Minshenski. But the people are groping blindly because you and I know that the gospel cannot and will not be provided by the Catholic church. No one at the present knows the future of Hungary except our God. But let's pray to Him that Hungary might obtain its freedom and that the doors might be thrown open to missionaries who will carry the true message of Christ's redeeming love for these people.

Let us compare our plight with that of the people of Hungary. There is really little to compare because we have fared so well and they so poor. As we pray for the needs of Hungary let's include our thanks to God for His blessings on America and pray that United Nations. They try to find forgetfulness in worldly pleasures and amusements. They imagine that a strong bloc of military might would be able to bring peace and serenity to a troubled world and a fearful people; but alas, they overlook the one thing that is able to help them: that is a return to God, who is abundantly able to deliver. ". . . Return unto me, and I will return unto you, . . ." (Malachi 3:7), "Blessed is the nation whose God is the LORD . . ." (Psalm 33:12), "Come unto me all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest" (Matthew 11:28), are just a few of the formulas for curing the ills of the world. Thousands more are to be found in the Word of God.

May God hasten the day when those that are groping in darkness, seeking to find a promise of security for themselves, hoping for an answer to the fear that is ever before them, may soon find that there is no lasting security but the security of God's love.

Help them to see, Lord, that the greatest fear they can know is that of bartering their souls for vain hopes and empty promises; help them to find that the greatest darkness they will ever have to meet is the darkness within their own minds and hearts.

God may continue to bless America—the land of the free.—Roger C. Reeds.

The Man with the Consecrated Car

He couldn't speak before a crowd,
He couldn't teach a class,
But when he came to Sunday school
He brought the folds en masse.
He couldn't sing to save his life;
In public couldn't pray,
But always his jealousy was just Crammed on each Lord's Day.

And although he couldn't sing or talk,
Or teach or lead in prayer,
He listened well and had a smile
And he was always there.
With all the others whom he brought,
Who lived both near and far,
And God's work prospered for he had
A consecrated car.

Mrs. S. T. Dunning, Jakin, Georgia

"They that sow in tears shall reap in joy. He that goeth forth and weepeth, bearing precious seed, shall doubtless come again with rejoicing, bringing his sheaves with him" (Psalm 126:5, 6).

SOUL winning is the main mission of Christians. Remember the words of Jesus to His disciples, "... Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature" (Mark 16:15). First to be a soul winner we must be a born again Christian ourselves, and we must know our mission, the gospel story, and then go tell it to others.

We are to be witnesses for our Saviour as Jesus' last words to His disciples were, "But ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you: and ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judaea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth" (Acts 1:8).

It is impossible to live the Christian life in secret, and the only way to live a successful Christian life is to live it out in the open. We are not to hide our Christianity, but put it on a candlestick that it may not be hidden, like a city set on a hill. Not only are we to show Christ in our daily lives before others, but we are to confess Him before men. We might ask, why must we openly confess Christ before men? Jesus Himself gives us the answer as "Whosoever therefore shall confess me before men, him will I confess also before my Father which is in heaven" (Matthew 10:32). To confess Christ openly gives us added strength and courage. Every-time a Christian confesses Christ he is strengthened spiritually. Confess Christ faithfully, first to our own relatives and friends. Begin to talk about Christ. Witness for Him in our Jerusalem, our own home circle, for how can we expect to live a true Christian life and obey the command of our Lord if we don't let those who are close and dear to us know that we belong to Christ, and that we are a soul winner for Him. The successful soul winner, the one who has the love for God, first in his heart, and then for his fellow man, will never be ashamed before all people that he comes in contact with that he loves and serves Christ, and his heart is burdened and broken for the lost.

To be a witness for Christ we must know something by personal contact. First, we must know by personal experience that we are saved before we can bear effective witness to anyone else that Jesus saves. We must also know by our own Christian experience that Christ can satisfy all our needs before we can testify to others to that effect. We must know personally that Christ gives victory over sin if we would convince others of that fact. We first came to Christ as a lost sinner. No doubt the object of our coming was that our own soul might be saved, but now that we are saved we are equipped to serve in Christ's work, the winning of souls.

The reason Christ is so eager to have us confess Him before others is that through our confession others might come to know Him as their personal Saviour. The heart of the soul winner must be clean and pure. It must be washed in the blood of the Lamb. There is marvelous power in the blood that was shed on Calvary. It not only washes the heart once, but it is continuous in its cleansing actions, as the Christian walks in the light and as he confesses to God his sins. The lives of some Christian people flow along with a quiet power that makes them magnetic. This magnetism is greatly to be desired in soul winning. There was something compelling about our Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ, as He lived here on earth. This compelling force was so great that when He said to a busy tax collector, "Follow Me," that busy one immediately left all and followed Him. There was something so attractive about the very person of that great Soul Winner that those disciples of old, forgot everything and went with Him. That outward attractiveness is the quality of heart shining out through the face and life. It stands to reason that if we wish to lead someone else to Christ that someone must see in us something that he does not himself possess. That something is the indwelling Holy Spirit shown through love, joy, peace, long-suffering, kindness, goodness, faithfulness, meekness and self control. (Read Galatians 5:22.)

Great soul winners have always been men and women with broken hearts for those who are lost and on their way to a Christless eternity. The Lord Jesus Christ, the great Soul Winner, possessed this compassion. When He saw the multitudes He was moved with compassion on them for they were as sheep having no shepherd. Again we see Him weeping over Jerusalem, pictured as the father seeking the lost son, the good shepherd seeking the lost sheep. It was the broken heart of love and compassion that caused the great Soul Winner, our Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ, to leave a home of happiness and come to earth in the form of a Babe born of the virgin, Mary, and live among sinful men, for He came into the world to save sinners. Winning the lost, having compassion on them, was His chief mission in the world. And when He died on the Cross, He gave us, His followers, that mission of winning the lost.

Only deep tender love can make us "Weep o'er the erring one, lift up the fallen," and give us power to "tell them of Jesus, the mighty to save." They may forget our words, as we attempt to tell them of Christ and His power to save them from their sins, but they can never forget our tears, however deep in sin they may go, love's cords will draw them back to God.

A real Christian can be nothing less than a soul-winning Christian, and no soul-winning Christian who has a broken heart for the lost ever becomes a backslider. Furthermore no Christian who counts soul winning as his chief and most important mission in life is ever overcome with discouragement, and we might truthfully add that a soul-winning Christian is neither an unhappy or a defeated one.

Of course a life of prayer is the secret behind all soul winning. If we start about the task of soul winning without praying that God will really and fully bless our effort and break our hearts for the lost, as He enables us to win others to Him, our selfish efforts will end in failure. But as we pray to Him, for real power, grace, compassion and love in our lives so that we can win souls, believing that our prayers will be answered, we will be a successful soul winner.

The apostle, Paul, wept over the Ephesian church, as we read in Acts 20:31. "Therefore watch, and remember, that by the space of three years I ceased not to warn every one night and day with tears. Paul never grew tired of being a soul winner. Under all circumstances, and at all times, he was an anxious soul winner with a broken heart for the lost. Many Christians are ashamed to weep; maybe our hearts are too cold to weep over sinners. Gypsy Smith, a great gospel preacher, who won thousands to Christ, is said to have wept continually as he preached to great co gregations. The great evangelist, Mel Trotter, could never see a staggering, drunken man along the street without going to him with love, tenderness and tears, seeking to win him to Christ.

Our heavenly Father does not have favorites in the mission of soul winning for He is no respecter of persons. He who has really given himself to Christ and has an anxious and a broken heart for the lost can be a soul winner. Do we, as Christians today, have compassion for the lost? Are our hearts often broken as we see so many who do not seem to care? How can any Christian who loves the lost keep from shedding tears, if need be to win them to Christ. There is not much weeping over the lost today, and consequently not many being saved. Let us never be ashamed of tears in relation to winning the lost to our Saviour.

They that sow in tears shall reap in joy. The tears of a broken heart are necessary equipment of the soul winner. We must first go, bearing precious seed, but the thing so often forgotten in our efforts to win others to Christ is the broken heart. The broken heart drives the soul winner out to seek the lost; the broken heart will sow the seed that will bring forth fruit; the same broken heart will make the home-coming joyful. The broken and compassionate heart, the humble and contrite spirit, pleases God, attracts the sinner, and makes the contact between the sinner and God, that results in a changed heart and a saved soul of the sinner, bringing honor and glory to the Saviour.

Never was there such a compassionate Winner as Jesus Christ. He saw the people without a shepherd, lost and undone, and He had compassion on them. He wept over Jerusalem, He sought the fallen woman to forgive, and the publican to make him a soul winner. His compassion for the lost would not let Him eat for He found meat that His disciples knew not of—soul winning. His compassionate soul would not let Him sleep as He must needs go often to the mountain and pray if needs be all night or rise up early in the morning and pray for the lost. His compassionate heart would not let Him die until He had won the dying thief that was crucified with Him.

So we know the personal soul winner needs a broken heart. The sinner may be able to answer all of our questions, and may not listen to all our pleas to come to Christ. But he has no argument against tears. After all, nothing can prove us and our message better than a love like Christ had for sinners. It is not hard to believe the truth found in John 3:16, "For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." If those of us who tell this truth in our mission of soul winning really have some of the same love our message to the lost will have that same meaning. May God give us more tears and more broken hearts as we seek to win the lost to Him.

Cragmont Board Meeting

The Board of Directors of Cragmont Assembly located near Black Mountain, North Carolina, met November 6, 1956, in the Cherry Hotel in Wilson, North Carolina, with the following present: Rev. J. A. Evans, Rev. Wayne Smith, Mrs. L. E. Ballard, Mrs. J. C. Moye; visitors were Rev. L. E. Ballard, Rev. and Mrs. J. E. Wooten.

The meeting was called to order by the president, Rev. J. A. Evans.

Prayer was offered by Rev. Wayne Smith.

The minutes of previous meetings were read and approved.

A round table discussion of the possibility of purchasing the Royal League property was entered into, and the board agreed to dismiss this at present and seek further to develop the present property.

Due to the interest, especially of our young people in Cragmont, it is necessary that we do some more building to take care of our youth conferences in the summer. The director stated he would have to have some more space or plan more than two conferences to take care of those who wished to go. This is certainly a challenge to our people to support and plan a suitable program for our youth in order to educate and train them in our church work.

To those of you who have not been supporting Cragmont, may we urge you to awaken and see the possibilities for the future of our church program as taught to our youth there if no other branch of our church profits from it all. Ask the churches who have had young people to go, and see what they tell you of the effect that it had on their church.

Rev. and Mrs. Wooten were present and made their report as business manager-treasurer and hostess. The report was very gratifying. He stated all bills were paid, and we still have some cash in the bank. They are still doing some painting and trying to keep it in good shape.

The board agreed to try to build a barracks to take care of at least forty people with and assembly room on the front. Rev. Wayne Smith was appointed to draw up plans for same, select a spot and present plans to the Board of Stockholders of Cragmont Assembly in January.

Rev. Wayne Smith made a motion to recommend to the Board of Stockholders the employment of a general director for the summer conferences. Motion was carried.

The vice-president took the chair, and Rev. James Evans made a motion that our manager send out a notice that applications for conferences close January 1. All applications later will be expected to take only the available time left. The motion was carried.

A motion was carried to ask the State Woman's Auxiliary Convention to use their Founder's Day offering on the new cottage. Mr. Evans made a motion to requisition the State League Convention to appropriate $500 toward the present indebtedness of Cragmont. The motion was carried.

A motion was made by Mrs. Ballard to ask the editors of the Free Will Baptist Sunday school quarterlies to give us the back page of the second quarter of the quarterlies to print dates of conferences. The motion was carried.

The board agreed to buy a hot water heater to take care of the needs of the institution. It was agreed by the board to purchase a fireproof cabinet to preserve the records of Cragmont.

The committee appointed to revise the constitution and bylaws recommending that a legal document concerning the change of the home office from Ayden to Black Mountain be drawn up and presented to the stockholders for ratification and by laws will be changed in keeping with the charter.

Mrs. Ballard made her report as campaign representative and stated funds had not come in as she had hoped, but were still coming in.

Mrs. Ballard made a motion that we seek to hire Brother and Sister Wooten as manager-treasurer and hostess of Cragmont for the year 1957. The motion was carried.

The meeting was adjourned with prayer.

"Once there was a man who lived upon a great prairie. When told of a vast ocean of water thousands of miles in extent, he laughed and scoffed at the idea. But the ocean rolled on majestically just the same. When people deny God, it does not change the majesty of God in the least. But it does make us sorry that anyone can be so hemmed in by the horizon of ignorance."

Questions and Answers ON THE BIBLE

Conducted by J. P. BARROW

3824 RICHLAND AVENUE, NASHVILLE 5, TENNESSEE

Question: What does the Bible teach concerning marriage? Does God sanction polygamy? If not why did He not somewhere condemn Jacob for having two sisters and their two maids as wives, all of whom he had children by?—Nancy Swabs.

Answer: The direct definite teaching of the Bible is one man and only one for one woman throughout the lifetime of the two persons. Either of these is bound to the other as long as they both live. When either one dies the other is allowed to marry another mate to whom he or she is bound as long as these two live. "Know ye not, brethren, (for I speak to them that know the law,) how that the law hath dominion over a man as long as he liveth? For the woman which hath an husband is bound by the law to her husband so long as he liveth; but if the husband be dead, she is loosed from the law of her husband. So then if, while her husband liveth, she be married to another man, she shall be called an adulteress: but if her husband be dead, she is free from that law; so that she is no adulteress, though she be married to another man" (Romans 7:1-3). See Genesis 2:20-25; Proverbs 18:22; Jeremiah 29:6; 1 Timothy 3:12; 5:14; Matthew 5:22; Deuteronomy 22:22-24; Numbers 5:11-29.

The Pharisees provoked Jesus by questioning Him on this subject. He in turn gave a full discussion on it, clear enough for any person with average intelligence to understand. "And the Pharisees came to him, and asked him, Is it lawful for a man to put away his wife? tempting him. And he answered and said unto them, What did Moses command you? And they said, Moses suffered to write a bill of divorcement, and put her away. And Jesus answered and said unto them, For the hardness of your heart he wrote you this precept. But from the beginning of the creation God made them male and female. For this cause shall a man leave his father and mother, and cleave to his wife; And they twain shall be one flesh: so then they are no more twain, but one flesh. What therefore God hath joined together, let not man put asunder. . . . And he saith unto them, Whosoever shall put away his wife, and marry another, committeth adultery against her. And if a woman shall put away her husband, and be married to another, she committeth adultery" (Mark 10:2-12). See 1 Corinthians 7:10, 11; Hebrews 13:4.

The Scripture nowhere teaches promiscuity between the sexes. The kind of activities that some dating couples exercise themselves in today are nowhere sanctioned in the Bible, but are altogether condemned. In Matthew 5:28 Jesus says that if a man looks on a woman to lust after her, he has committed adultery in his heart. The adulterers or whoremongers, according to Revelation 21:8, will have their eternal dwelling in the lake of fire. In 1 Corinthians 5:10, 11 we are warned not to keep company or to eat with a fornicator. In 1 Corinthians 6:9, fornicators and adulterers are declared to be among those who shall not inherit the Kingdom of God.

When it comes to Jacob and others who practiced polygamy and were not condemned directly, or where nothing is recorded as being said personally to them about the act, we are first to consider the day in which they lived. We are told that Abraham, only two generations before Jacob, was taken from his fathers who worshiped idols. God makes it clear in the Bible that He expects holy living among people according to their knowledge. Jacob did not have a single chapter of any book in our Bible. God winked at or refused to hold those men accountable for deeds that He held the Jews accountable for after they had the law given to them, and He holds us much more strictly accountable for what we do; we are even to be judged according to our thought life because we have the Holy Spirit who lashes our conscience with both the Old and the New Testament truths. The law of God in general, and tradition when not polluted with some form of heathen darkness, condemns any form of adultery, including polygamy.

We of today have the Old Testament and are responsible to God for obeying its moral code. We have the Scriptures quoted above from both Jesus and Paul and are responsible to God for obedience to all such precepts. The following quotations from some of the most eminent sources should give us added light on the subject. John D. Davis, in Dictionary of the Bible, Page 476, says, "Marriage is a divine institution, constituted at the beginning before the origin of human society. The Creator made man male and female, and ordained marriage as the indispensable condition of the continuance of the race (Genesis 1:27, 28). He implanted social affections and desires in man's nature. He made marriage and ennobling influence, powerfully contributing to the development of a complete life in man and woman. He declared it to be not good for man to be alone and provided a help meet for him (Genesis 2:18). Abstinence from marriage is commendable at the call of duty (Matthew 19:12; 1 Corinthians 7:8, 26), but its ascetic prohibition is a sign of departure from the faith (1 Timothy 4:3).

"Monogamy is the divine ideal. The Creator constituted marriage as a union between one man and one woman."

William Smith says, on Page 382 in his Bible Dictionary, "Mosaic law discouraged polygamy, restricted divorce, was aimed to enforce purity of life. It was the best civil law possible at the time, and sought to bring the people up to the pure standard of the moral law."

In Alleged Discrepancies of the Bible by John W. Haley, Pages 295, 296, he says, "Only this need be said,—that God, on account of 'the hardness of men's hearts,' suffered polygamy among his people for a time, but 'from the beginning it was not so.' And as previously intimated, the patriarchs must be judged by the degree of light which they possessed. Too, it must be remembered that their polygamy differed materially from the 'free love' systems of other times. In polygamy, each wife of the 'much-married' man was nevertheless his wife, and, together with her offspring, entitled to be cared for and maintained by him. Moreover, a 'concubine,' in those days, was not simply a kept mistress, as the word might imply, but was a wife of lower rank, who was wedded with somewhat less than the ordinary formalities. Dr. Jahn says: 'Although this connection was, in fact, a marriage, and a legitimate one, it was not, nevertheless, celebrated and confirmed by the ceremonies above related.' So Mr. Newman: 'A concubine, in ancient time, was only a wife of inferior rank, and the union was just as permanent as with a wife.'"

How Is Your Christian Influence?

A Christian is a living sermon whether or not he preaches a word.

A Christian may be a blot or a blessing—a blank he cannot be.

You cannot lift others to a higher level than that on which you live yourself.

Examples hasten deeds to good effects.

Men trust rather to their eyes than to their ears.—Highland Park, Michigan, F. W. B. Church.

The Lighted Pathway

Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path
(PSALM 119:105).

REV. WILLET L. MORETZ
SWANNANOA, N. C.

"... for without me ye can do nothing" (John 15:5).

"I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me" (Philippians 4:13).

The two texts above give us the foundation and structure for a worshipful and Christ-honoring Christmas. It is fervent prayer that all Christians will refrain from celebrating the season and make it a season for worship—the holiest season of the year.

Recently there came to my study a tract written by Sam J. Gallagher which expresses my thoughts regarding the greatness of the period upon which we are entering far better than I can express them in my own words; therefore, I pass it on to you with the prayer that it will mean as much to you as it does to me:

No Real Christmas Without Him

Amid the hurried throng of shoppers in a snow-covered town in Alaska strolled a young man. The gay colors and festive decorations of Christmas were all about him, but his head was bent in troubled thought and his gait was measured and slow. Pausing for a moment in the falling snow, he drew a wrinkled and worn letter from his pocket. His eyes rested on these words, "We can have no real Christmas without you. Please come home. Mother and I are advancing in years and we desire above all to see your face once again." Hurriedly wiping away the gathering tears, his decision was made. He would spend Christmas with those who loved him.

Throughout this highly privileged country of America, millions will be celebrating during this Christmas season. There will be trees, tinsel, twinkling lights and gaily-wrapped gifts. But can there be any real Christmas without Him for whom Christmas was instituted? Jesus Christ came to this earth over 1900 years ago as a Babe in Bethlehem. His bodily presence is no longer with us, for He is seated at the Father's right hand, but being the omnipresent Son of God, His presence in spirit pervades the universe. His eyes penetrate far beyond the glitter, the glamor and the festivities of the Christmas season to the heart of each of us. He will spend Christmas with those who love Him; those who have made a place for Him in their hearts and lives. These are the ones who have placed their trust in Him and who know the peace He came to bring. "Therefore being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ" (Romans 5:1).

Yes, Christmas will be empty without Him in your heart. Life itself is but one long round of despair and anxiety without a personal relationship with the majestic Christ of the ages. He alone has the power to forgive sins, and thus grant peace to the troubled soul. It was for this purpose that He was born in Bethlehem. "... thou shalt call his name JESUS: for he shall save his people from their sins" (Matthew 1:21). For the same purpose He gave His life on the Cross for us. "In whom we have redemption through his blood, the forgiveness of sins, ..." (Ephesians 1:7). For this purpose also He rose again from the tomb, "... raised again for our justification" (Romans 4:25).

There is abundant living for those who by faith accept Jesus Christ as their Saviour, "... I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly" (John 10:10). "... He that heareth my word, and believeth on him that sent me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation; but is passed from death unto life" (John 5:24). "He that hath the Son hath life; and he that hath not the Son of God hath not life" (1 John 5:12).

To live without Him is forfeiting the only real and lasting joy that is offered to mankind and is also sealing your destiny for all eternity in the regions of the lost.

CHRIST IS THE WAY

1. Christ is the way to salvation (Acts 4:12).

There are not many ways, only one way (1 Corinthians 3:11; 1 Timothy 2:5, 6).

2. Christ is the way to the Father (John 14:6).

We can only approach through a Mediator (1 Timothy 2:5, 6; Hebrews 7:25).

3. Christ is the way to service (John 12:26).

Service essential to true discipleship (John 15:7-11; Matthew 6:24).

4. Christ is the way to the reward (John 12:26).

Reward from the Father through the Son (Jude 1:24; John 14:21-23).

5. Christ is the way to true happiness (Ephesians 1:3).

Happy is the man who discovers this key (Psalms 16:11; 1:1-6).

Life is in Christ—He came to give life (Colossians 3:3, 4; 1 John 5:11-13).

Children's Home, Middlesex, North Carolina, on Saturday, December 1. Twelve members of the Y. P. A. and seven adults of the church were in the group. They were as follows: Gloria Pittman, Johnice Doshier, Phillis and Wanda Purifoy, Mrs. Seldon Bullard, Mrs. D. F. Jones Jr., Clara Jo Gaskins, Doris Buck, Mr. and Mrs. Waldon Fulcher, Mr. and Mrs. A. The girls made dolls for the children of the home for Christmas, with the help of Mrs. D. F. Jones, director of the Y. P. A., and some of the mothers. Dinner was served to the group visiting the home, and the Rev. S. A. Smith, superintendent of the home, directed them around the campus. The girls spent some time talking to the children they met and returned home around 6:00 p. m.

TWO BEARS DID IT!

An old couple quarreled so frequently that the whole village knew it. Suddenly they ceased their bickering! One neighbor approached them to ask what had happened. "Two bears did it," said the wife. The neighbor replied, "We thought two

7. Christ is the way to the future home (Matthew 25:34).

With the home we have a position with Him (Revelation 3:21; Daniel 7:13, 18, 27; Hebrews 9:28).

GROWING IN GRACE

We are exhorted to grow in grace but the question today is how are we to grow?

1. We grow through the study of God's Word (1 Peter 2:2).

I never saw much growth when it was neglected (2 Timothy 2:15; 3:16, 17).

2. We grow through the means of prayer (Colossians 4:2).

Talking with God, not merely talking to Him (Philippians 3:10; Ephesians 6:18).

3. We grow through divine worship (James 4:8).

We have public worship and private worship (Hebrews 10:25; Daniel 6:10).

4. We grow through Christian fellowship (1 John 1:7).

We receive encouragement, warning, examples (Romans 15:1; Acts 2:42; 11:22-24).

5. We grow through observance of the Lord's Supper (Acts 20:7).

Keeping Him in memory; His death, presence, coming (1 Corinthians 10:16, 17; 11:24, 26).

6. We grow through living the Christ life (Titus 2:11-14).

Christian living means progress—development (2 Peter 1:5-7; Romans 12:1, 2).

7. We grow through waiting for His Return (1 John 3:1-3).

Faith in His coming leads to preparation (Luke 19:13; Mark 13:37).

OUR THANKSGIVING

We had the happy privilege of attending the annual Thanksgiving service at the Children's Home at Middlesex, North Carolina, on Thanksgiving Day. Our hearts were made to rejoice for what we saw and heard. The children were dressed nicely. They were so well trained! The superintendent seemed to be so happy in his position of responsibility!

When the Rev. William Burkette Raper presented his brother, the Rev. James Earl Raper, as the minister to preach the Thanksgiving sermon, I felt tears of joy slipping down my cheeks. I well remember those boys when they were small tots. I remember just how things were going in those days when we had no church edifice to worship in. I remember how we had to worship in a small crowded room in the old building that was the home of the girls, both large and small. Those were trying days. Those were days when actually there were not enough of the comforts of life to make the children happy in every respect, yet they loved the home. They loved the association with each other. I remember how the children would stand around us when we went to the home for board meetings and actually invite our love to be lavished upon them. They were so sweet and precious!

When we think of those days and then think of what we have at the home now and the great blessings that God has bestowed upon us, our hearts leap with joy. Many of those who then shared their hard-earned savings are gone. If they could only see what has been done since those days when it was so hard to keep going, they would shout praises for what the Lord has done through the feeble efforts of a small denomination which started in a small way, that which is an honor to the Free Will Baptist church and its friends in North Carolina.

We find many people who are members of a Free Will Baptist church who have never been to the home. Those who have never been there have missed great blessings, for almost everyone who goes to the home receives a blessing and rejoices for the way that God has blessed it. We urge everybody to make at least one visit a year and be able to say, "The Lord hath done great things wherein we are glad."

Missions

Occasionally we find someone who does not believe in foreign missions. They say, "We need missions at home." That is true. We do have a lot to do here at home, but the Lord Jesus said, "Go ye into all the world." The Great Commission as recorded in Matthew 28:18-20 places a grave responsibility on every believer in Christ. May we notice the words of the Master: "... All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth. Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world. Amen."

I once heard of a minister who had a member in his church that claimed he did not believe in foreign missions. So this minister went to the field where his member was at work and asked for a gift for foreign missions. The man refused to help. Then the minister asked for a gift for home missions, and finally after being refused, the minister said, "Let us pray." And the minister prayed thus, "Father, You have been good to this our brother. You have given him abundance of harvest. He has prospered, and he is in fine financial shape. Now he says that he is cutting down on his giving; so, Lord, as he cuts down on giving to You, You cut down on Your giving to him." It is said that the poor fellow whom the Lord had blessed so wonderfully said, "Stop, preacher, I have changed my mind!" So the right kind of praying will change your mind, my friend, about supporting foreign missions and all other kind of missions. We need to carry on the work of the Lord.

Dr. William Adams Brown has strikingly summed up the fourteen points of missionary emphasis in the New Testament by showing that: "(1) Every book in the New Testament was written by a foreign missionary; (2) every epistle in the New Testament that was written to a church was written to a foreign missionary church; (3) every letter in the New Testament that was written to an individual was written to the convert of a foreign missionary; (4) every book in the New Testament that was written to a community of believers was written to a general group of foreign missionary churches; (5) the one book of prophecy in the New Testament was written to seven foreign missionary churches in Asia; (6) the only authoritative history of the early Christian church is a foreign missionary journal; (7) the disciples were called Christians first in a foreign missionary community; (8) the language of the books of the New Testament is the missionary's language; (9) the map of the early Christian world is the tracing of the missionary journeys of the apostles; (10) the problems which arose in the early church were largely questions of missionary procedure; (11) of the twelve apostles chosen by Jesus, every apostle except one became a missionary; (12) the only man among the twelve apostles who did not become a missionary became a traitor; (13) only a foreign missionary could write an evangelistic gospel; (14) according to the apostle, the missionary is the highest expression of the Christian life."

As we scan the reports that are given to us by the promotional secretaries for home and foreign missions, we find there is an awful lack of financial help which is necessary for the spreading of the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ. May I ask you, my reader, what is your status in the support of the gospel? Now let us reason, for I believe that many of us ought to think. When you bought your high-priced television set, how much did you give for the support of missions? Which was most necessary, the salvation of lost men and women, or your pleasure in seeing the programs on television? I am not condemning you for having a television set, but is the Lord satisfied with your giving to the cause of Christ?

We could go on naming many things we spend our money for that we could do without, but deep inside we are afraid that if we think and take an inventory of our giving we will know we have robbed God in order to satisfy self.

Accept Jesus Christ as your Saviour today. Be among the number that love Him, enjoy Him and serve Him. When eternity calls you will then be with Him in the land of the blest. Only those who love Him will spend eternity with Him. "And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also" (John 14:3).—Selected.

Friends, let's keep Christ in Christmas, for there can be "No Real Christmas Without Him."

Twenty Years a Church Member But Lost!

A faithful minister was called hastily to the bedside of an officer of his church. "Oh, Pastor," gasped the dying man, "I have sent for you to tell me how to be saved!" "What," exclaimed the pastor, "is it possible that you have sat under my ministry for these many years and do not know the way of salvation?" Said the dying man, "It is true, Pastor. While you preached, my thoughts were on business. Rarely did I give attention to anything you said!"—Gospel Herald.

STORIES

—FOR OUR—

BOYS and GIRLS

Faithful Nalphi

(A Story of Inida)

Martin Wrain

NALPHI rested his hand upon his pick handle and looked down the long, narrow ditch he was digging. The brown earth, fresh turned to the sun, glistened with dampness in the hot morning air. Another hundred feet to go and Nalphi would reach the river. Then the water would run down the ditch and water Mr. Luwan's rice and hemp paddies.

Nalphi wished the digging were done. The mission school in the neighborhood was opening today. The missionaries from America would start enrolling children at ten o'clock, and Nalphi wished he could go. There would be room for one hundred pupils. Surely that number would show up before Nalphi could finish the digging and run to the schoolhouse.

Nalphi had attended a mission school when his family lived north of the Ganges. He liked the school very much. The boys played baseball, but best of all they learned about the great Man, Jesus, and His teachings. Nalphi was sorry when his family had to move south, but Father was sick and there was nothing to do but come to live with Grandfather Gui. Grandfather was old and not able to work much, so Nalphi had accepted employment from Mr. Luwan. He was thankful for the chance to work and help earn food and clothing for the family. Mr. Luwan was a kind man. He paid Nalphi at the end of each day for the work he did. He gave him clothes which his own son, Bulva Dia, had outgrown. They were good clothes, and Nalphi thought that it must look strange to the people passing that a lad so well dressed would be digging an irrigation ditch. What they didn't know was that the outfit was a gift from Mr. Luwan.

As he stood resting on the pick handle, Nalphi saw someone coming across the field. In a few minutes he recognized Ladu, a neighbor boy who lived not far away. Ladu was in a hurry and seemed excited.

"I'm going to the mission school to enroll for classes," Ladu explained. "I want to learn to play ball."

"Baseball is fun," voiced Nalphi, "but the best part of school is the stories which the teachers tell about the great Man, Jesus, and how He loves everyone. I wish I could enroll for school, too."

"Then why don't you come with me?" Ladu asked.

"I can't," Nalphi said slowly; "I must finish this ditch for Mr. Luwan. He wants to turn the water on his fields today."

"You could go and enroll for classes and then hurry back to work," Ladu was quick to suggest. "School doesn't really start until tomorrow. Mr. Luwan would never know."

What a clever idea, Nalphi thought at first. He could enroll at the mission school after all! He could slip across the fields, and then hurry back. But then he thought of the lesson he had learned in the mission school up north—a lesson on honesty and faithfulness. Remembering, Nalphi knew he couldn't leave his work. It would be just like cheating—and cheating was one thing of which Jesus disapproved.

"I can't go," Nalphi decided, starting to dig again.

Nalphi worked steadily and two hours later the ditch was completed. When he reached the river bank, the water gushed into the mouth of the ditch and trickled down the slope toward the hemp field.

Nalphi followed the ditch back across the field and then walked over to the warehouse where Mr. Luwan kept his tools and supplies. Mr. Luwan was there changing the front tires on his jeep.

"The ditch is done," Nalphi announced, dropping down upon a pile of sacks. He was very tired, and there was no need to go to the mission school now. Registration was over half an hour ago.

"You're a good worker," Mr. Luwan praised, sitting down to talk to Nalphi. "You've come regularly and on time each day. You never loiter. What's more, you're a faithful worker, Nalphi. You don't let folks tempt you away from work."

Nalphi sat up, surprised. Could Mr. Luwan know about Ladu's suggestion? But how? No one had been near to hear them talking.

"Ladu rode with me down the road this morning," Mr. Luwan went on. "He was going to enroll at the mission school. He told me about his attempt to get you to go with him. Why didn't you, Nalphi?"

"Well, I—I," Nalphi said, embarrassed, "I attended a mission school once and I remembered a lesson about a man and his servants, some faithful, some unfaithful. The teacher said that the faithful servants pleased the master, and Jesus. I wanted to please Him and you, too, Sir."

"Didn't you want to go to the mission school?"

"Oh, yes," Nalphi quickly replied, "but it would have been wrong to slip away from work. I—I couldn't do it!"

There was a light in Mr. Luwan's eyes, Nalphi noticed. He looked pleased, too. He reached over and took Nalphi's hand.

"How would you like to go to school, after all?" he asked.

"But it's too late—registration is over!" Nalphi replied.

"It isn't too late for a faithful lad like you," Mr. Luwan beamed. "I went down to the school this morning, too. I talked with the teachers, Mr. and Mrs. Walton. They inquired about a boy whom they could hire to be school janitor, someone to keep the building and grounds clean. I told them what a good worker you are, how you refused to leave the job to enroll this morning. They would like for you to take the job, Nalphi. You'll get pay for your work and you can attend most of the classes."

Nalphi, too happy to speak, just stared at Mr. Luwan. This wonderful news was almost too good to be true. He had a job with pay, so he could still help support his family. He had a chance to go to school, to learn more about the teachings of Jesus.

"Thank you so much!" Nalphi said, squeezing Mr. Luwan's hand. "I'll try my best to please the teachers at the mission school. If I please them, I guess I'll please Jesus, too."

"I know you will," concluded Mr. Luwan.—Junior Challenge.

WHEN THE STORMS ARE PAST

What tranquility will there be in heaven! Who can express the fullness and blessedness of this peace! What a calm is this! How sweet and holy and joyous! What a haven of rest to enter, after having passed through the storms and tempests of this world, in which pride and selfishness and envy and malice and scorn and contempt and contention and vice are as waves of a restless ocean, always rolling, and often dashed about in violence and fury! What a Canaan of rest to come to, after going through this waste and howling wilderness, full of snares and pitfalls and poisonous serpents, where no rest could be found.—Jonathan Edwards.

A Revival Will Come

Everywhere in religious circles we cry, "Revival!" There is a great need for revival. Can it come? Someone has said:

If all the sleeping folks will wake up
And all the lukewarm folks will fire up
And all the dishonest folks will confess up
And all the disgruntled folks will sweeten up
And all the discouraged folks will look up
And all the estranged folks will make up
And all the gossipers will shut up
And all the dry bones will shake up
And all the true soldiers will stand up
A revival will come!

But is that all? No, a thousand times no! Christians who stand up, must stand up with complete dedication to the will of God in Christ Jesus.—Ruth's Chapel F. W. B. Church, New Bern, N. C.

Missionary Conferences A Success

Raymond Riggs

First Church, Darlington, South Carolina; Rufus Coffey, pastor.

Bay Branch Church, Timmons ville, South Carolina; Billy Morris, pastor.

First Church, Savannah, Georgia; Louis Moulton, pastor.

In addition to these missionary conferences, one night itinerate services were conducted by our missionaries on furlough and Rev. and Mrs. Lonnie Sparks in the following churches:

Itinerate services were also conducted at the following associations:

Georgia State Association, Ashburn, Georgia.

Alabama State Association, Cordova, Alabama.

Florida State Association.

Space would not permit to record the testimonies of blessings enjoyed in these meetings. For instance, the Edgemont Church reports two first-time decisions and twenty-two rededications, and the church pledged $10,077 for foreign missions. Then too, upon receipt of the resignation of their educational director, Dan Merkh, who had made application to go to Africa, and additional $3,000 was pledged for his equipment.

The following letter from Ronald Creech indicates the Spirit that prevails with every true missionary conference:

"Well, brother, our missionary conference was really good. It is amazing how God works, turns your eyes on regions beyond, and invariably works here.

"In one of our services one of our backslidden men came back to the Lord Jesus and has really been on the ball since. This decision was worth the whole conference.

"We had people on the last night from several churches and our pledges were over $2,000 to missions. Of this amount $1,599.65 was pledged by our own people. I had hoped for $1,000. God always rebukes our small faith. Our folk want another conference next year.

"Who will be home next year and on what dates? Please let me know soon so if we have someone home from the fields so I can be the first to speak; and if we will not, I can contact someone else."

Why not plan a missionary conference for your church this year?

From the Field

Florence, S. C.—Mrs. A. W. Baxley, treasurer of the Florence Free Will Baptist Church, writes: "Enclosed please find two checks from our church, one in the amount of $28.38, which is our tithe for the month of November. The other in the amount of $50.00 is from our missionary conference that was held here last week. This conference was a challenge to us Free Will Baptists here in Florence. May this be only the beginning of our launching out for Christ through giving to missions."

Florence, Ala.—Eustice A. Riggs says, "We had a special missionary service for Lonnie and Anita Sparks last week at our church, although Lonnie and Anita could not be with us personally. The Lord blessed us and with His help we were able to raise $31.15 for their fund. It is our plan to have a monthly fund for them, and we hope that it will help to take the gospel to those who have never heard it in Africa. May God richly bless the department and our missionaries and use us all to bring a great harvest of souls to Him."

Arapahoe, N. C.—Mattie Mae Beacham of the Arapahoe Free Will Baptist Church reports use being made of the missionary place mats. She says, "Enclosed find remittance for the three dozen place mats I received plus a small offering. These place mats are being used of the Lord. The primary teacher told me, 'They are paying off. One pupil says he knows all but three of the missionaries.' So may God continue His blessings upon this work. We want the children to learn to love this phase of our Lord's work. I am requesting that you send me fifteen more missionary place mats for a class of juniors."

The Hit Dog Hollers!

"If you shoot into a dark hole and something hollers and runs out," said Sam Jones, the outspoken evangelist of the other years, "it is because something has been hit!" People don't like to be hit especially the backslidden ones. The thoughts of their slumbering souls are admirably expressed in the words sometimes seen on Pullman berths, "Do Not Disturb!" At church, the ones at ease in God's spiritual Zion, hoist, as it were, an umbrella and shed onto others the truths their cold, calloused hearts desperately need.—Selected.

Travailing Over Souls!

A consecrated Sunday school teacher came to her pastor. She taught a class of young college boys. Twenty-four of them were unsaved! She sat speechless and sobbing before the pastor. "What is the matter?" asked the pastor. She exclaimed, "My boys, twenty-four of them, are standing on my heart like the weight of a lost world. I did not sleep last night. I cannot eat. I must have them or I cannot live!" Prayer followed, prayer immersed in tears. In less than two weeks, every one of those twenty-four boys gave glowing, personal testimonies about the saving power of the Lord Jesus! —Selected.

The Word Became Flesh

(Lesson for December 23)

Lesson: John 1:1-18.

Golden Text: John 1:14.

I. INTRODUCTION

John begins this account and his first epistle, 1 John, on the same note of the eternity of Jesus. Here he calls Jesus the Word. It is a fitting title for our Master since He is the manifestation of God, the revelation of the will of God, the voice of the authority of God and indeed the very essence of God.

Jesus was with God in the beginning (Vv. 1, 2). Let us know assuredly that the birth of Jesus in Bethlehem was not the beginning of Jesus. He was with the Father as the second Person of the Holy Trinity before the foundation of the world "When the morning stars sang together, and all the sons of God shouted for joy" (Job 38:7). When He came to the earth to be born of the virgin, Mary, He merely gave up for a time His heavenly position and humbled Himself to be made in the likeness of sinful man that He might save man from sin.—The Bible Student (F. W. B.).

II. HELPFUL HINTS

1. Christ not only is the eternal Word, but as God is Creator and Maker of all things (Vv. 1-3).

2. From beginning of time the light of Christ has continued to shine in a sin-darkened world (Vv. 4, 5).

3. As a ray of light at early dawn, John gave witness to the rising of the Son (Vv. 6-8).

4. Though unknown, unwanted, and unclaimed by His own, Christ died to save those who believe on His name (Vv. 10-13).

5. The Maker of men, that He might save them, took a body of flesh and sacrificed for sin (Vs. 14).

6. A testimony for Christ is always in order if it honors and glorifies His holy name (Vs. 15).

7. Of the grace and truth revealed in Christ all men are partakers through faith in His name (Vv. 16, 17).

8. Though No man hath seen God at any time, they can see His likeness in the Lord Jesus Christ (Vs. 18).—The Bible Teacher (F. W. B.).

III. ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

1. The Word (Christ) was the Creator of all things, whether seen or unseen, whether they be thrones, dominions and principalities, whether they be things on earth or things in heaven (Ephesians 3:9; Colossians 1:16; Hebrews 1:2). All things were created by Christ as the creative power, and not as the instrument merely. The Creator of all things must of necessity be God, for only an eternal, self-existent and omnipotent Being could bring into being a creation so vast, and so great, so well ordered, and designed, and so well adapted and regulated. Every single thing in God's wonderful universe came into existence by and through the Lord Jesus Christ. It is evident therefore, that He Himself cannot possibly be a creature. Christ was the Originator and Creator of all things, and therefore, He is omnipotent!—W. S. Hottel, D. D.

2. All things were made by Him. A recent Associated Press dispatch, was headed thus, "Hint Universe Is Based on a Set Pattern." It said in part, "An enormous photographic map of the skies indicates the universe is an orderly system of galaxies in clusters. . . . This new concept yields for the first time statistical evidence that the whole of creation has a pattern. . . . It means that there must be some great design!" Exactly! We know the great Designer. Of Him the eternal Word of God says, "For by Him were all things created, that are in heaven, and that are in earth" (Colossians 1:16).

3. A famous professor gave a stereopticon lecture to some children on plants and flowers. He explained how the seeds became plants; how the plants become leaves and flowers; how the flowers developed seeds again. He then told how the different parts of a plant were built up of tiny cells, and how all these cells were filled with a wonderful substance called protoplasm. Finally he said that no one knew what gave to protoplasm its power of living and growing. That was a closed door, and behind the door was unfathomable mystery! Then one little child asked a question: "Please, sir, does God live behind the door?"—Bible Expositor.

4. The owl, the bat and the skulking jackal are the sole inhabitants of the once glorious Babylon. Pompeii has been buried under the ashes of Vesuvius for centuries. Nineveh is a relic of the past. Of Christ's Kingdom only can it be said, "Of the increase of His government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon His kingdom to order it, and to establish it with judgment and with justice."—Selected.

5. Herod's Last Orders. Herod died in the spring of B. C. 4, not long after the visit of the wise men and the cruel decree that all the male children in Bethlehem and its borders should be slain, from two years old and under. Very shortly before his death he gave another cruel order which, fortunately, was not carried out. He had gone to a place afterward called the baths of Herod, where there were hot sulphur springs, the water of which runs into the eastern part of the Dead Sea. The waters did not do him much good, and he sensed not only the fact that he was about to die, but also that there would be rejoicing when he was gone. Hence, according to Josephus, he told a sister of his and her husband to shut up the principal Jews in the circus at Jericho and to put them to death whenever he expired, that there might be mourning at the time of his death, though of course it would not be mourning for him. The Jews were imprisoned as directed, but when news of his death came they were set free instead of killed, and his departure was welcomed with rejoicing as a relief from tyranny, instead of being attended with mourning.—Selected.

6. Upon the statement that His own received Him not, there follows this blessed revelation in John 1:12, 13. Even though the world did not know Him, and His own did not recognize Him, there were nevertheless those who did receive Him, and believe on His name. And what about these? "To them gave He the right to become children of God, even to them that believe on His Name" (A. S. V.). What a blessed revelation! Here it is that grace shines out. The world knew Him not; the gentile world had turned away from Him, and the Jews had rejected and crucified Him; the whole world is therefore guilty before God. Now in His infinite, sovereign and boundless grace, God makes out of guilty sinners children of God of all who receive Jesus Christ His Son and believe on His name. This is a new revelation. It is here for the first time we read in Scripture that those believing on the name of Christ, the name of the rejected, crucified and risen Christ, are made the children of God.—Selected.

"If every home were an altar,

Where holiest vows were paid,
And life's best gifts in sacrament

Of purest love were laid;
Then solved would be earth's problems,
Banished sin's curse and blight;
For God's own love would radiate
From every altar light."—Selected.

College Making Progress In Library Fund Drive

More than one third of the $6,000 needed to bring the Mount Olive College, Mount Olive, North Carolina, library to the accreditation level has been raised, President W. Burkette Raper announced.

With approximately 1,200 additional specific titles needed to meet standards for an accredited library, the college earlier this month launched a campaign to raise $6,000 for the project. Cost of each book is about $5, and residents of the community and members of the Free Will Baptist denomination which sponsors the school are encouraged to contribute for the purchase of at least one book.

The library is one of two major projects of the college in its bid for full accreditation by 1958. The other is a change in curriculum with more emphasis on mathematics.

President Raper reported this week that the curriculum has been corrected to meet the North Carolina College Conference's specifications and that the new curriculum changes will be instituted before the fall term of 1957. Earlier this month, the North Carolina College Conference's Committee of Standards said that a change in the curriculum and improvements in the library would virtually assure the school of full accreditation by the fall of 1958. If the standards committee approves the change, probationary accreditation will be granted the school next year.

Accreditation by the fall of 1958, President Raper said, will assure students entering Mount Olive college next fall of graduation under accredited conditions and thus their credits would be honored at all other colleges in the state. At present only two colleges, East Carolina and Atlantic Christian, recognize courses taken here.

As far as the curriculum is concerned, Raper said the college was prepared at present to teach the mathematics course, but there had been no demand for the subjects to date.

The college was established here three years ago, and, if it is accredited in 1958, will become one of the youngest colleges to be accredited so quickly since the North Carolina College Conference, the accrediting agency, was established.

O, Little Town of Bethlehem

O little town of Bethlehem,
How still we see thee lie!
Above the deep and dreamless sleep
The silent stars go by;
Yet in thy dark streets shineth
The everlasting Light;
The hopes and fears of all the years
Are met in thee tonight.

For Christ is born of Mary,
And gathered all above,
While mortals sleep, the angels keep
Their watch of wond'ring love.
O morning stars, together
Proclaim the holy birth!
And praises sing to God the King,
And peace to men on earth.

How silently, how silently,
The wondrous gift is giv'n!
So God imparts to human hearts
The blessings of His heav'n.
No ear may hear His coming,
But in this world of sin,
Where meek souls will receive Him still,
The dear Christ enters in.

CHRISTMAS

(We have selected this article as our guest editorial for this issue. The writer is the Rev. Naaman Borders, Waverly, Ohio.)

Christmas, which is the greatest holiday of the year, will soon be here; and all the good children will be getting presents. (And by the way, all of them are good at that time!) It would be a great thing if all of us would celebrate it in the way that it is intended to be celebrated. But I'm sorry to see that many people have seized upon it as a day to commercialize, profit and squeeze every penny out of the other fellow that they can. Some will be eating and drinking with little thought of its real meaning.

There was a lady walking down the street who looked into a window and saw the little Child, Jesus, lying in a manger. This lady remarked, "I hope they will not try to work religion into the day and spoil Christmas."

I have also known of a young man who sent his dad a bottle of liquor for a Christmas present. That was just as much out of order as if you would sing, "Old Joe Clark" or "Turkey in the Straw" at your mother's funeral. Why not celebrate each holiday in the way that would be appropriate? Let's be consistent in all our celebrations.

We celebrate Thanksgiving by thanking God for a bountiful harvest. We celebrate Labor Day by giving the bread winners a day's rest from their toils, which is proper and fitting. We celebrate the Fourth of July by making speeches, by flying the stars and stripes, and by shooting firecrackers. We do that to keep our memories refreshed of the Declaration of Independence. We honor the birthday of Washington because he made good that declaration. We honor the birthday of Lincoln because he set the slaves free.

Should we not honor the birthday of Jesus Christ because He came to set the devil's captives free from the shackles of sin and death? Did He not come to give peace on earth and good will to men? Did He not come to give life more abundant to all of us? Then let us celebrate the day of Christmas in an appropriate manner.

Some will make a great feast and gorge like gluttons with little regard for the less fortunate about them. Some will fall into debauchery and drunkenness and will revel and riot like the prodigal son. Rather than honor the day, they will disgrace it. O, consistency, thou art a jewel! We can say the same thing about appropriateness.

It is said that when the slaves got the news that they were set free, they shouted and went wild with joy. Should we not rejoice and be exceedingly glad because the great Emancipator came down from the skies to set at liberty those who are bruised and set the captives free. He became poor that we may be made rich. He became the Son of man that we may become the sons of God. He died that we may live forever.

You may ask, "What way should we celebrate Christmas?" One way is to read the account of the birth of Jesus Christ in the Bible and discuss it with your family. You may go to church and hear your minister preach the Christmas message. You may sing Christmas carols.

I saw a unique dramatization in Foley, Alabama, which made a great impression upon me. A great host of people took part in a parade. A man stood on top of a high building with a loud speaker and read the account of Christ's birth and announced the proceedings. First there came a float drawn by some donkeys. In it lay the Child, representing Jesus, lying in a manger. By the manger stood some small oxen eating straw. Over the Child stood an angel with snow white wings. The mother, Mary, watched over the Child. Several floats depicting the shepherds and the host of angels came by. Then these were followed by several floats representing different nationalities and tribes of the earth who had been gathered into the fold of Christ.

On one float were people dressed as Indians. Others had on Chinese costumes. Behind them were a band of Negroes wearing costumes similar to those worn in Africa. Still behind these were floats representing the Eskimos, others representing those cannibals from the islands of the sea, some from India's coral strand, others from Iceland's icy mountains, and almost every other race. When the almost endless procession passed by, thrills of joy ran through me and tears filled my eyes. I thought of the missionaries in every nation gathering trophies for the Master for that last great day.

CHRISTMAS BY DR. LUKE

This day is Christmas, and the best diagnosis of the true meaning was given by a doctor over 1900 years ago. It simply cannot be improved upon. And it puts many other diagnoses completely to shame.

The doctor is Luke. And the diagnosis is found in the second chapter of his inspired prescription which is known to us as the Gospel according to Luke. In Verse 11, we have the crux, the core, the center, of the message "For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour which is Christ the Lord."

Note how clear, how sharp, is the doctor's diagnosis!

Unto you—that is Personal.

This day—that is Present.

A Saviour—that is Precious.

You know, of course, that there is all the difference in the world between Christmas and Christ. Millions make a holiday over the former and only a mockery over the latter. Christ is cruelly crowded out of that special day which is meant to remember Him the most. Holiness is hidden beneath the pile of holly. The wreath is hung higher than the Cross. And worst of all, the Saviour is asked to make way for Santa Claus.

And yet, without Christ, there is really no Christmas. Without Him, there really is nothing to sing about or to rejoice over. Outward merriment all too quickly becomes inward mockery to the starved soul.—Challenger.

Peace on Earth

Olive Bishop Branch

THE fire flickered in the sheet iron stove, casting dancing shadows on the walls and ceiling of the dimly lit room and across the white hair of the bent old man huddled in the rickety rocking chair. Outside the window, white snowflakes were drifting gently toward the earth, laying a mantle of white on the window sill and across the yard beyond.

From a distance the sound of singing floated through the air and the old man stirred in his chair. It was Christmas Eve, but there were no symbols of Christmas here in this barren room—no tree, no bright wreaths of holly, no stockings by the fire.

"Christmas Eve," he quavered, as he watched the snowflakes drifting through the air outside his window. He had long ago formed the habit of talking to himself, since there had been no one else to talk to for so very long. "Christmas Eve. I always miss her most at Christmas time."

He remembered best the Christmas when Dana was ten—forty years ago. "This room looked different then," he mused. He closed his eyes and the sun streamed in through the polished windowpanes and crisp curtains upon the red carpet on the floor. The room was spotless and shining, gaily decked with wreaths of holly. The smell of spicy sweetness pervaded the house as the preparation of Christmas goodies went on in the kitchen. There was an undercurrent of eager excitement and anticipation in the air.

He was enjoying it to the full as he stood near the bottom of the stairs, warmly wrapped in his outdoor clothing. "Dana," he called up the stairs, "Dana, are you ready?"

"Coming, Pop," she called back. There was a rush of steps and Dana ran down the stairs lightly, her cheeks rosy and her eyes starlike with excitement.

She buttoned the last button on her coat as he opened the front door and they stepped outside into the crisp winter day. The snow crunched beneath their feet.

"Oh, Pop, I think going after the Christmas tree is the very best part about Christmas."

"The very best, Dana?" he asked, looking at her with love and pride in his eyes.

"Well, no, Pop, not quite the best. The best part is the Baby at Bethlehem, of course."

He picked up the rope to the sled and they swung off down the street toward the little woods outside the village where they always found their tree.

"I hope my little girl will always remember that Jesus is the most important part about Christmas. The other part of the celebration wouldn't mean much without Him."

"I know. Mother says He came to bring 'peace on earth,' though I don't quite know what that means. Do you?"

"It means—it means—oh, you'll understand some day when you're older."

They had laughed and sung and enjoyed every moment as they cut down the little evergreen tree and hauled it home on the sled. Then they shook the snow out of the branches and took it inside. They set it up near a window and decked its branches with tinsel and simple homemade ornaments.

"It's beautiful!" Dana had exclaimed, her eyes sparkling with happiness. She studied the tree thoughtfully. "There's one thing I want to add." She ran to her room and was soon back with a red card, neatly lettered in green. It read: PEACE ON EARTH. She stood on tiptoe and tucked it up on the topmost bough, and then stood back to survey her handiwork. "It's perfect now."

The old man opened his eyes and sighed as he looked about the room. The spot where the tree had stood was bare and empty, as bare and empty as his heart.

He closed his eyes to shut out the sight of the room. He thought he heard the door open and a light step across the floor. When he opened his eyes, a woman was sitting in the chair opposite him. He peered at her through the dim light, but he didn't know her. She must be another of his dream people. No, she couldn't be. She was too real for that.

"Who are you?" he asked.

"I'm a Christmas visitor," she answered him.

"I never have Christmas visitors. No one has been here on Christmas for many years."

"You have no relatives or friends?"

"None."

"You had a daughter once."

"A daughter!" he said with a start. "I have no daughter."

"You had a daughter," the woman insisted.

The old man reached a shaking hand toward the table beside his chair and picked up a well-worn Bible. He laid it on his lap and turned to a flyleaf in the front.

"There," he said, placing his finger in a blank space on the page where the family birth records were listed. "There, you see. The space is blank."

The woman came quietly and looked over his shoulder. "But there was a name there once," she said. "It has been erased."

She went back to her chair and the old man sat numbly looking at the page. "Yes," he said finally, in a lifeless tone of voice, "I erased it with my own hand thirty years ago. My daughter committed a terrible sin. I no longer have a daughter."

"Do you not find it in your heart to forgive her?"

"Her sin was too great," he answered sadly.

"Didn't you care? Didn't you love your daughter?" the woman asked, almost fearfully.

The old man's white head dropped until his chin rested on his breast. His words when they finally came were faint, almost sobbing. "I loved my daughter very much. It broke my heart to blot her name from the Bible."

"Then why did you do it?"

"I felt she had disgraced the heavenly Father by her conduct and that I must vindicate His honor by removing her name from His Holy Book."

"But Christmas means the coming of the Saviour for those who have sinned, even for those who have sinned deeply. The Babe of Bethlehem came into the world because God loved sinners. The Bible says, 'For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life.' If God can forgive, surely you can too. Jesus came to bring peace

Christmas Eve in the Alley

IT was Christmas Eve as Dave Martin stood in the saloon a little unsteadily and demanded, "Fill it up again." He pushed his glass toward the bartender, put down on the counter the last piece of money he had and after draining the glass he staggered out into the darkness. His money, his wife, his children, his honor—everything was gone, he reflected.

He stumbled along the street, cold and weary and fell in an alley. Why try to get up? At least he was sheltered somewhat from the cold there. He dozed off to sleep.

"Joy to the world; the Lord is come! Let earth receive her King," voices sang.

He became partly awake. The voices became clearer. Carol after carol they sang, and the tears came to Dave's eyes as the young carolers with pure, innocent faces appeared. The carolers came so near they almost stepped on him. There was not energy enough to move. He didn't even care if they called the police.

A little girl looked like his own Elizabeth. She was like an angel. He wondered if Elizabeth was thinking of her daddy.

How he had beaten her and her mother! They had prayed for him but it had not seemed to help. He had tried to turn over a new leaf and stop drinking but each time he failed. Finally he decided it was no use trying anymore and went to another city.

"Oh—look at that man lying there!" cried a young caroler and Tom Hughes, the minister, came over.

"Are you hurt?" he asked. Then he smelled the liquor on Dave's breath. He insisted on taking Dave to the mission, though Dave kept saying there was no use. He had gone too far in sin.

At the mission they fed him, cleaned him up, and gave him a bed for the night, after praying with him and showing him there was still a chance to be saved.

The next morning they had prayer with him again and after devotions he was given the job of janitor at the mission. There were meetings every night so he had no chance to return to the saloon. He was kept so busy he hardly left the mission at all.

Little by little the power of sin began to lose its hold on him. One night at the mission the speaker quoted, "Ask, and ye shall receive" (John 16:24), and Dave did just that as he knelt at the altar. He felt so clean as through his faith the blood of Christ washed his sins away. There was no need to say he was saved. His smile and his shining eyes said so, but he told everyone he saw how Christ had saved him, and he pleaded with sinners to accept Christ.

Now he would go and tell Betty, his wife, that he was saved, ask her forgiveness, and start a Christian home. He would be the father Elizabeth and little Pete should have. At once he set off for home, and his heart pounded as he walked up the front walk and knocked on the locked door. A strange woman opened the door. She knew nothing of his wife and children. A young married couple with a baby had lived there before. There seemed to be no trace of his loved ones. He left, sick at heart.

He tried to forget by busying himself in Christian work, but the thought kept coming, "Perhaps they starved to death because I deserted them." No one knew the sorrow in his heart as he served His Saviour so faithfully, ministering to the poor and winning many drunkards to Christ.

Christmas came and his thoughts turned to the Christmas Eve he had spent lying drunk and cold in the alley.

So many people needed food the mission had almost more work than it could handle. All Christmas Eve he delivered baskets of food with a Bible or a tract in each basket. He was tired, but so were the others, so he kept on working.

Only one house was left to visit. He went to the door of the poor little shack and knocked. A child's face appeared at the window—Elizabeth's! Betty opened the door. She gasped and would have fainted if Dave had not caught her. Soon Betty, Elizabeth, Pete and Dave were in the front room and Dave was telling how Christ had saved him and how they would have a Christian home, a family altar, and win many more souls to Christ at the mission — The King's Message.

Give Christmas Back to the Children

Evelyn Pokrzywa, Beaufort, North Carolina

LET'S give Christmas back to the children this year. You may say that it already belongs to them. But does it, really? It is very true that most children will have a Christmas tree and will be visited by Santa Claus. But have your children had any part in the preparations for Christmas? In my opinion, it is the adults that get more out of Christmas these days. To most children Christmas is something that comes once a year; they are not too interested in it one way or another.

It will take a little extra work, patience and understanding; but let's begin this Christmas to make it one your children will remember. You and the children can start now planning to get things ready so you can begin when the day arrives for preparations. Give the children a box; and in it have them save string, tin foil, other pieces of paper and brown paper bags. From these they will make decorations for their Christmas tree. That's right, I said their Christmas tree, because they should have one too.

The next step is in planning your Christmas menu. Here the children should help too. Let them choose one dish which will be served at Christmas. Then, too, no Christmas is complete without cookies. It will take a little more of your time, but the children would love to help you make cookies. Even a small child can cut out the cookies and will feel he has had a big part in making them. Though you may have to take one full day to bake cookies, think of the enjoyment both you and the children will share! A child is happier when he is doing something and when he feels that he is needed. So don't "shoo" the children from the kitchen this year; let them come in and help.

Last Christmas at our house we had two Christmas trees, and my four children are looking forward to fixing their tree this year. About three weeks before Christmas the children get out the box in which they have saved string, paper and tin foil. With scissors, paste and crayons the children can make beautiful decorations. Nuts and fruit may be wrapped in tin foil and hung on the tree. A paper chain, which is very easy to make, is another beautiful decoration. Let the children use their own imagination to prepare the decorations. If your budget will permit, you can buy a few plastic bulbs which are unbreakable.

Somewhere in your house there is room for another Christmas tree: a tree for the children of their very own. The Christmas tree of today has all sorts of decorations and electric lights; and when the tree is being decorated, it is done by an adult. The children are not allowed to decorate for fear they may drop and break some of the fragile decorations; yet we say we have prepared the tree for the children. Take, for example, your going in a store to purchase a dress. Suppose that you had to sit and look at the dress and were not allowed to examine or feel the material. Just how would you feel? Or maybe your husband buys you a dress without asking your advice; you feel as though you have no choice in the selection of it. The children feel the same way about the Christmas tree.

Suppose though, that in your house there is room for only one tree, and there are children in the house; then, by all means, let it be a tree for the children, a tree that they have planned and decorated themselves. It is true that you will not receive as many compliments on the tree as you have in past years. But what is more important to you, compliments from others or the way your children's faces light up when someone mentions the tree and they can proudly say, "We fixed it"?

Since Christmas is associated with children, why not let them have the full measures of it? Notice the radiant joy on the face of your child this Christmas if he has been allowed to help in the preparations. Christmas is for children, and you should plan this year to fully give Christmas and its meaning back to your children.

should live unto righteousness: . . ." (1 Peter 2:24).

Since He was identified with our sin, He made it possible for us to be identified with His goodness. You and I, or whosoever will, can become strong in His strength, pure in His purity, and victorious in His victory. We might say, "How can these things be?" It is by identification with Him or self-surrender to Him.

We do not know the exact date or day of the birth of our Lord, and we do not think that is of great importance. We do know He had a birthday, a miraculous birth, for He was born of the virgin, Mary. As Christians, let us use this opportunity of commemorating the birthday of our Lord. Emphasize Him more, get more acquainted with Him, and don't forget the real meaning of Christmas.

At Christmas time we give gifts to our loved ones and friends, and to those who are in need. But at the first Christmas Jesus did not give gifts; He gave a Gift, the greatest Gift of all. He gave Himself to us and for us. If we just give gifts to each other and do not give ourselves unto Him, we leave Christ out of Christmas. So let us keep Christ in Christmas by rededicating ourselves to Him and to His service.

Do We Leave Christ Out Of Christmas?

Mrs. S. T. Dunning, Jakin, Georgia

"And the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us, (and we beheld his glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father,) full of grace and truth" (John 1:14).

THE greatest of all miracles found in the Bible is not the healing of the sick, the causing of the blind to see, the feeding of the hungry multitudes, or even the raising of the dead to life; but it is the incarnation.

The word, incarnation, comes from a latin word meaning in the flesh. To become incarnate then is to become flesh or to become man. This is exactly what the Son of God, the second Person in the Holy Trinity, did. Jesus Christ is not man become God, for in the first verse of the Gospel according to John we have: "In the beginning was the Word, . . . and the Word was God." So the Word, or Jesus Christ, is God become man. He could not serve and accomplish the purposed obedience apart from a human body. We couldn't get to Him so He came to us, and He became like us that we might be like Him.

In Hebrews 10:5 we find these words: ". . . a body hast thou prepared me." From these words we learn that, in incarnation, the Lord took on a body prepared. Christ lived as a man as other men did in His day, only He lived without sin. Again, in the fourth chapter of Hebrews we find that Christ was in all points tempted like as we are, yet He was without sin. The writers of the Gospels were inspired to record for us the temptations of our Saviour, the Word that was made flesh and dwelt among us, telling us what weapon He used to cause Satan to flee from Him. This weapon was the sword of the Spirit, the Holy Bible. So Christ was identified with our humanity. He went further; He was identified with our sinful humanity. The first step in this was His baptism.

He came to earth without sin, was made flesh, and dwelt among us. At the time of His baptism, John the Baptist was preaching repentance and baptizing unto a baptism of repentance. So the Word that was made flesh, who was without sin, needed no baptism of repentance, but He came as one repenting of sins and took a baptism of repentance along with those who needed and asked for it. Thus He identified Himself with us.

He goes still further in this identification. He identifies Himself with all troubled and suffering people as He said, "I was hungry and ye fed me, naked and ye clothed me, in prison and ye visited me." The people to whom He spoke these words did not understand them, as they could not remember ministering unto Him in this way. Christ knew their thoughts and said by way of explanation, ". . . Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me" (Matthew 25:40).

At the Cross the Word that was made flesh did even more. He was crucified between two sinners as a sinner Himself. Peter tells us that He became sin for us or became our substitute and died in our stead. He bore in His own body our sins. "Who his own self bare our sins in his own body on the tree, that we, being dead to sins,

The Star Still Shines

Joan Averette

'Twas the star that led the wise men
That night of grace divine,
To the manger of the Christ Child
Behold, that star still shines!

The vision of its vibrant beams,
It's mem'ry naught can dim;
Throughout the endless age of time
The star still points to Him.

Its dazzling light drove darkness back
And led them to the Prince,
The promised King—the Hope of earth;
That star shines ever since.

The star forever guides man on Through time and ages yet
To Christ, the Saviour of the world;
Its mem'ry none forget.

So let the star guide you to Him,
The Saviour, yours and mine;
Find perfect peace and joy complete
Behold, that star still shines!

"Thou shalt call his name Jesus, for he shall save his people from their sins" (Matthew 1:21).

Questions and Answers ON THE BIBLE

Conducted by J. P. BARROW

3824 RICHLAND AVENUE, NASHVILLE 5, TENNESSEE

Question: In the September 26, 1956, issue of The Free Will Baptist you state that God knew what man was going to do before He created him. That statement agrees with what I have heard from childhood, viz., that God foreknows all things. When I search the Scriptures I do not find in them a satisfactory affirmative answer to this doctrinal question. For example, "And God saw everything that he had made, and, behold, it was very good. . . ." (Genesis 1:31). Then I find "And GOD saw that the wickedness of man was great in the earth, and that every imagination of the thoughts of his heart was only evil continually. And it repented the LORD that he had made man on the earth, and it grieved him at his heart" (Genesis 6:5, 6). The question naturally arises: did God foresee what would happen in Genesis 6:5, 6, when He said what He did in Genesis 1:31? Then in Jeremiah 7:31, God said this to Jeremiah, "And they have built the high places of Tophet, which is in the valley of the son of Hinnom, to burn their sons and their daughters in the fire; which I commanded them not, neither came it into my heart." Also in Jeremiah 19:5 we have this statement of God speaking to Jeremiah: "They have built also the high places of Baal, to burn their sons with fire for burnt offerings unto Baal, which I commanded not, nor spake it, neither came it into my mind." We have this expression also from God, Jeremiah 32:35, "And they built the high places of Baal, which are in the valley of the son of Hinnom, to cause their sons and their daughters to pass through the fire unto Molech; which I commanded them not, neither came it into my mind, that they should do this abomination, to cause Judah to sin." To me these statements are plain that these people have done something that God had no knowledge of until it has happened, for twice He said it had not entered into His mind and once it had not come into His heart.—Eld. A. L. Sellers, Quitman, Georgia.

Answer: I shall first try to show you that the Scriptures teach the foreknowledge of God or that God has all knowledge including that which has to do with future events. "And all that dwell upon the earth shall worship him, whose names are not written in the book of life of the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world." Here we see Jesus given for His calvary experience before the world was founded so God knew that we were going to sin and need Him as a Saviour before Genesis 1:31 or Genesis 6:5, 6. ". . . I am God, and there is none like me, Declaring the end from the beginning, and from ancient times the things that are not yet done, . . ." (Isaiah 46:9, 10). "Behold, the former things are come to pass, and new things do I declare: before they spring forth I tell you of them" (Isaiah 42:9). ". . . there is a God in heaven that revealeth secrets, and maketh known . . . what shall be in the latter days. . . ." (Daniel 2:28). ". . . there is no man that doeth anything in secret, . . ." (John 7:4).

According to Isaiah 46:9, 10 God has declared the end from the beginning and according to Matthew 10:29 a sparrow does not fall to the ground except God knows it. And according to Luke 12:6, 7, God never forgets a sparrow and He has every hair on each person's head numbered. These passages certainly do not mean only the sparrows of a certain time nor the hairs of the people's heads in a certain age, but all the sparrows of all times and all the hairs of all heads throughout all ages. If God's knowledge were limited to any time, place, number of persons or things He would not be God. ". . . for the LORD searcheth all hearts, and understandeth all the imaginations of the thoughts: . . ." (1 Chronicles 28:9).

Emery H. Bancroft, in "Elemental Theology," Page 47, says, "God's knowledge reaches from everlasting to everlasting, comprehending all things in all places to the minutest detail." See Romans 11:33.

Dr. P. B. Fitzwater, in "Christian Theology," Page 97, says, "God knows from all eternity what shall be in all eternity." This statement agrees with "Known unto God are all his works from the beginning of the world" (Acts 15:18). See Psalm 46:9, 10.

Genesis 1:31, quoted above, is given here to advise against any thought that God is in any wise the author of evil. Instead all He makes is not only good, but very good. Of course, this includes His law as well as the way He created man who had the capacity and possibility to do evil even though he had no inclination toward evil or quality in his nature that made it as easy to do wrong as to do right. Man developed this by effort and by doing wrong—one thing done wrong conditions that conscience for another. If you do not think so follow the steps that Eve took in the process that led to the fall.

In Albert Barnes' "Notes on Genesis," Page 99, in Volume 1, we read: "The writer says with emphasis that no imperfection inhered in the work God had wrought up till this point. For after all preceding statements to the effect that individual works were good comes this stronger statement to the effect that it was 'very good,' making a total of seven times that the word is used—seven being the mark of divine operation. The thought that God might be the author of evil and imperfection must be guarded against most strenuously (Strack). The 'behold' moves the expression 'very good' prominently into the foreground."

In Genesis 6:5, 6, we have placed before us a complete and universal moral and spiritual break down of the antediluvians to which disaster God gives His immediate attention. According to the Scofield Reference Bible note on Page 973, the Hebrew word which repented in Genesis 6:6 is translated might as well be translated eased or comforted, in which case it would present quite a different view of God's attitude toward men. In several places throughout the Bible God warns that He is going to ease Himself of all His adversaries. See Isaiah 1:24. In keeping with the rest of the Bible, it is safe then, to say that God knew what was going to happen as is set forth in Genesis 6:5, 6 as He first said the word of Genesis 1:31. We need not try to fathom all the mysteries of God for we cannot, neither do we need to make every quality of God fit into our human logic, for we are not called upon to do this. Faith must be exercised. God asks us to believe and obey and to ask Him for wisdom that we lack, but need. He will give us that.

". . . I commanded them not, neither came it into my heart" (Jeremiah 7:31), as well as what is said in Jeremiah 19:5; 32:35, etc., means that God neither commanded or required them to participate in such worship, neither did He consent to it. They had not obeyed God in worshiping Him by means of the Levitical system, but had resorted to such heathen practices as those indicated here by Jeremiah. In other words, God is saying here in different words what He has said earlier. "For my people have committed two evils; they have forsaken me the fountain of living waters, and hewed them out cisterns, broken cisterns, that can hold no water." (Jeremiah 2:13), and saying, I have neither ordered this nor have I consented to it.

Pray for the homes of Christians, that they be not carried away by the spirit of lawlessness, and that reverence of law may be restored.—Seek.

The Lighted Pathway

Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path
(PSALM 119:105).

REV. WILLET L. MORETZ
SWANNANOA, N. C.

"Even so we, when we were children, were in bondage under the elements of the world: But when the fulness of the time was come, God sent forth his Son, made of a woman, made under the law, To redeem them that were under the law, that we might receive the adoption of sons" (Galatians 4:3-5).

The incarnation of God's Son was the greatest mystery of all history. A mystery the mind of man has never solved, and never will be able to solve. As the incarnation was the greatest mystery, so was it the greatest of all miracles. Men continue to ask, "How could this have happened?" Nevertheless the Christian's faith in God makes us know that the God who made all things, and with whom nothing is impossible, could and did send His only begotten Son in a most unusual and miraculous way for His glory and our redemption. Of all the births of all the world this one in Bethlehem was the most unique, but a superhuman life requires a superhuman birth. Faith in God demands that we accept it without question.

But the event we are considering stands alone in the annals of history. Such an event as that of the incarnation can have nothing like it, or parallel to it, as long as this world lasts. In it God has unveiled Himself to us, to be as man that He may be the restorer of mankind. It is impossible that such a thing could happen, and not that all things else be effected by it. The incarnation was the turning point in the history of the world. The Son of God was made man, for each man, as for the whole world, to enable every man to reach the state of perfection for which he was originally made.

The following paragraph gives a beautiful picture of the incarnation of Christ:

"Jesus was born a babe, representing our weakness and helplessness, because He is our strength; He was born in the night, typical of the moral darkness of the soul, because He is the light of the world; He was born in a manger, to show the spiritual poverty of man, because in Him is true riches; He divested Himself of the glory which He had with the Father, to show the loveliness of our humility, because He was to exalt us to share the glory which is His at the right hand of the Father."

The first fourteen verses of the first chapter of the Gospel recorded by John give the method and the purposes of the incarnation. Marcus Dods has said concerning these verses: "The Word of God is God's power, intelligence, and will in expression; not dormant and potential only, but in active exercise. By a man's word you could perfectly know him, even though you were blind and could never see him. So by the Logos whom John presents we may perfectly know God though we do not see Him. Our first thought of God then must be what the incarnation suggests, that the God with whom we have to do is one who sacrifices Himself for us and makes common cause with us in all which concerns our welfare. The second lesson of the incarnation regards our own duty. 'If God so loved us we ought also to love one another.'" other.'"

By reading the first four verses of the first chapter of the First Epistle of John we learn that we may experience the fellowship made possible by the incarnation. This fellowship is not by virtue of our reaching up to God, but because He has come down to us. He who was unknown and unseen has now become knowable and known. We are told that the Greek word for fellowship is koinoia, meaning, to share, and that is just what we who know Him desire most to do—share Him with others.

May I wish for every reader of this column the greatest Gift anyone can receive—Jesus Christ, God's incarnate Son, with all His fullness—not only for this Christmas season but through all life.

to the hearts of sinners. It has taken me a long time to learn that."

"Dana wanted me to explain 'peace on earth' to her once, but I couldn't," he mused. "I never thought of it just like that before."

He looked up with troubled eyes. "But I'm an old man and I'm very tired. Would you go away? I'll think about these things tomorrow. I won't have anything else to do then."

The woman arose reluctantly and turned toward the door.

"Wait," he said, putting out a trembling hand toward her. "Who are you? Why did you come here tonight?"

She reached into her purse and handed him a red card. He studied it in the dim, flickering light. It was carefully lettered in green in childish characters and read: PEACE ON EARTH.

"Why, you're my Dana!" he exclaimed.

The old man reached for a pencil and wrote in the blank space on the flyleaf of the Bible, in large shaky letters: DANA MONTGOMERY.—Gospel Herald.

A CHRISTMAS MESSAGE

At this season of the year we are much engaged in the work of selecting gifts for our families and friends. It takes a lot of thinking and also a lot of money, in many instances, to get around. After we do our best to get gifts suitable to everyone, we often make many blunders in our selections. Perhaps we get a tie for someone and afterwards learn that he is the owner of a large assortment of nice, beautiful ties. We look and shop from store to store to get Father a shirt; and when the shirt arrives, it is either too large or too small; and perhaps he did not need a shirt at all. We get socks for the boys and later find they are too large or too small. So it goes from one thing to another, and we are sadly disappointed that we made so many errors in the selection of presents.

We are so tired even before the day we call Christmas comes that we often say, "I'll be glad when it is all over," and some will say, "I'm tired to death." Well, many of us do just work ourselves down. And often we are financially embarrassed about the first of January when bills become due and statement after statement arrives. It is then that we say, "I cannot pay my bills," or "I wish I had not spent so much for Christmas."

Christmas Gifts That Will Last

There are some Christmas gifts we can give that will last a year, others that will last many generations to come, and still others that will be eternal. Following are four suggestions I would like to make for lasting gifts:

(1) We can give a year's subscription to one or more of our church papers to some shut-in. The Free Will Baptist will cost you only $2, and the friend to whom you send it will be reminded of Christmas with each issue. You can send Contact to a shut-in friend for only $1, and each issue will also remind that friend of Christmas and of the one who made it possible for him to receive the paper.

(2) You can send a gift to one or to both of our colleges, Free Will Baptist Bible College at Nashville, Tennessee, and Mount Olive Junior College, Mount Olive, North Carolina. If so, you will be helping to prepare young men and women for useful lives and perhaps some to preach the gospel of the Lord Jesus to thousands. The value of gifts to our colleges can never be known in this life.

(3) We can make a gift to our Children's Homes and thus help to make men and women who will be able to take their places in the church and state as useful, worthwhile citizens.

(4) We can send a Christmas gift to the treasurers of our various mission boards; and in so doing we will help to support the missionaries on the field; and perhaps many of those who sit in darkness will be brought to the saving knowledge of the Lord Jesus. Only eternity will be able to reveal the value of such a gift.

Useless Gifts

We are so prone to spend money for useless and sometimes dangerous gifts for our children and friends. Instead of useless, dangerous gifts, why not make gifts of beautiful storybooks about great men of the Bible and others who have been a blessing to humanity? By so doing you will instill into the mind of the child a worthwhile truth that will be a blessing to him and also to those to whom the truth will be imparted in after years. I have known children to be seriously wounded by a dangerous toy, and especially by fireworks. Fireworks should never be used in connection with Christmas—the very idea of celebrating the birthday of Jesus with fireworks! It may be suitable to enjoy fireworks on the Fourth of July, but I cannot see any place for them on the Lord's birthday.

The Abominable Thing

There are those who think they must have their tody or their eggnog. Some even want that abominable thing that makes men wild and causes wrecks, murders and many other sins. They drink away the season celebrating Christmas. I have actually known people who were religious (notice that I said religious, not Christian) to get drunk on Christmas Day. What a shame, yes, what a shame!

A Rebuke by a Jew

Years ago I heard of a Jew who said to a half drunk church member, calling him by name, "———, do you really believe that your Jesus was born on this day, and that He really saves men from sin?" The half drunk church member said, "Yes." The Jew returned, "If I believed that, I would certainly observe the day differently from the way you do." This brings to my mind a question I heard sometime in the past when a little boy asked, "I wonder if they believe what they preach and sing?"

Observe Christmas with Thanksgiving

The name Christmas is derived from the Person who is called Christ or the One who Christians say is the Saviour of sinners. The promise was to this effect: "Now the birth of Jesus Christ was on this wise: When as his mother Mary was espoused to Joseph, before they came together, she was found with child of the Holy Ghost" (Matthew 1:18). Any doctrine which denies that Jesus Christ was begotten of the Holy Ghost is a doctrine of antichrist.

Let us notice the rest of the promise: "Then Joseph her husband, being a just man, and not willing to make her a publick example, was minded to put her away privily. But while he thought on these things, behold, the angel of the Lord appeared unto him in a dream, saying, Joseph, thou son of David, fear not to take unto thee Mary thy wife: for that which is conceived in her is of the Holy Ghost. And she shall bring forth a son, and thou shalt call his name JESUS: for he shall save his people from their sins" (Matthew 1:19-21).

The very idea of getting drunk, cursing, fighting, destroying property, abusing and misusing the valuable time given to us that we may observe and celebrate Christmas Day to the glory of God for a Saviour who can take the worst of sinners, clean them up and make them to be holy! It is an abomination in the sight of God!

Good Advice

"Ho, every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters, and he that hath no money; come ye, buy, and eat; yea, come, buy wine and milk without money and without price. Wherefore do ye spend money for that which is not bread? and your labor for that which satisfieth not? hearken diligently unto me, and eat ye that which is good, and let your soul delight itself in fatness" (Isaiah 55:1, 2). In this instance the wine mentioned represents that spiritual food that satisfieth the soul of man. No man can be satisfied with a guilty conscience. Everyone who has not accepted the Lord Jesus Christ and is not worshiping in His name abideth under the wrath of God (John 3:36).

"For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord.

"And this shall be a sign unto you; Ye shall find the babe wrapped in swaddling clothes, lying in a manger.

"And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God, and saying,

"Glory to God in the highest, and on earth, peace, goodwill toward men" (Luke 2:11-14).

Sin is a clinched fist, and its object is the face of God.—Selected.

"Every day is a happy day to those who love and obey the Lord Jesus."—Selected.

STORIES

FOR OUR

BOYS and GIRLS

No Christmas Gifts

Sarah Schuster

IT was nine weeks before Christmas when Mrs. Mueller one day said to her ten-year-old daughter, Barbara, "I'm afraid, Barbara, that we cannot have any Christmas gifts this year."

Mother strangely looked happy with just a twinge of sadness in her eye as she said this. Barbara understood immediately, for she knew Mother had just finished giving Daddy his breakfast and that she was more than delighted that Daddy was recovering so nicely.

Mr. Mueller had lain in a big white caste ever since the accident when their automobile had skidded off the highway into a big horrible ditch. The doctor had said that he would walk and work again, but it would take a long time and excellent care to bring his strength back to normal.

"You won't mind if we skip Christmas presents this year, will you, dear?" said Mother quietly. "The Lord Jesus has been so good to us that certainly we need no gifts to help us remember His birthday with joy and thanksgiving."

"No, Mother, I won't mind not getting any gifts and surely no one will expect anything from us this Christmas," said Barbara bravely. Her big brown eyes looked wistful with Christmas memories. Unbelievably plain pictures flashed before her eyes and she felt Granny's tight hug and the many kisses she had pressed on her forehead when, last year she had brought a basketful of goodies and little gifts which she and Mother had made especially for Grandma. This year there was not one cent to spend and, of course, no time to make anything. Mother was well nigh exhausted with the care of Daddy and the days when she worried whether he would get well.

"No present for teacher when all the other children would proudly bring a handkerchief or some little thing for her," thought Barbara with a twinge of pain in her heart.

"Nothing for Miss Brewster, her Sunday school teacher," mused Barbara, and swallowed hard.

"Miss Brewster, of all people, would understand and sympathize," thought the ten-year-old, but somehow she loved Miss Brewster best, too, and that made no gift harder to bear.

"No gifts for the two sick girls in her room at school who had been in the hospital almost all term," reflected Barbara silently. "That seems terrible," she thought, "But I'll tell Jesus I couldn't help it and maybe He'll tell the girls Himself and help them to understand."

Her lips actually quavered, but she said resolutely to Mother who was busy with a dressing for Daddy's leg, "Of course, everybody will understand and realize that with all our doctor bills and medicines so high, and bandages, and even nurses at first, we haven't one penny to spend."

Barbara was, to be sure, genuinely happy at the thought that Daddy was slowly getting better day by day. Never for a single solitary fleeting moment did she ever let Daddy see even a puzzled or disappointed look on her face. The first thing every morning she tripped into his room to greet him with a smile and a big warm kiss. Indeed, she was more than thankful, too, that she and Mother had escaped the accident with hardly a bruise. Suppose they, too, had been injured, who would have taken care of all of them? Grandma was altogether too old and nervous to undertake anything like that, and besides, she was getting cataracts on her kind, lovely eyes, and try as she would, she saw things double and crisscross and even hit or miss. "My!" she often thought, "Aren't we glad Mother and I can take good care of Daddy and see him through? We'll fill our minds with Christmas thoughts this year and be more than satisfied with real Christmas joy in our hearts."

In the broad daylight Barbara could easily see her way through a Christmas without any gifts, for she was a good sensible little girl, if ever there was one, but somehow, at night her dreams were full of Christmases with all kinds of beautiful gifts that she was carrying around briskly. When morning came and she awakened to the fact that this year it would not be so, she had to reason and think everything through again from the beginning.

"You ought, Barbara, my child, begin to practice the Christmas carols and the hymns and songs on the piano," said Daddy one morning as his little girl stood at his bedside. "I'd love to hear you practice them and you could read to me the story of the birth of our Lord, a part of it, every day until Christmas. You know, dear, Daddy never, never gets tired of hearing the Bible read over and over again."

So it was that exactly eight weeks before Christmas Barbara sat reading the verses where the angel Gabriel came to the virgin, Mary, and announced that she should be the mother of our Lord. Oh, it was a magnificent story and Barbara's flesh grew goose pimply, young as she was, at the thrill of the words. Suddenly she read, "For with God nothing shall be impossible."

She stopped abruptly and Daddy, thinking that she was perhaps tired, said, "That's enough for today, my darling."

That night Barbara said her usual prayer of great thanksgiving for Daddy and asked for strength for Mother, and then suddenly the verse flashed again before her mind, "For with God nothing shall be impossible."

"Could it mean, Jesus, that You might in some way make it possible to give Christmas gifts?" she asked in childlike trust. A feeling of peace settled over her and quickly she went into a quiet, peaceful, dreamless sleep.

The next morning Mother said, "Barbara, seeing this is Saturday and you do not go to school, let's clean up the basement. We'll want to be nice and clean for Christmas and you know we have to do a little every day to get all the work done."

And what do you think, they had scarcely gotten downstairs when Mother stumbled over a large wooden box.

"Look here, Barbara, here are those Narcissus and hyacinth bulbs we packed away to get ready for Christmas blooming."

Barbara clapped her hands and danced up and down crying out almost, but not quite, loud enough for Daddy to hear up stairs, "God has answered my Christmas prayer, 'For with God nothing shall be impossible.'"

"Yes, dear, you are right, and we'll let the basement cleaning go and get the pots and bowls and the pebbles and everything ready, for there are enough bulbs here that Daddy and Grandma and all your friends can have Christmas presents."

"And we found them just in time, too," said Mother, "for it takes eight weeks to get them in good blooming shape."

Oh, the happiness that those simple bulbs brought! Just watching them secretly so that they'd be a great surprise to Daddy and everyone, filled the air with Christmas magic. But, best of all, was the fact that those august words of God about His only begotten Son, in great condescension, He brought to bear upon the problem of the sad ten-year-old child who wanted to celebrate Christmas in His name.—Gospel Herald.

SPIRITUAL EMPHASIS AT MOUNT OLIVE JUNIOR COLLEGE

Mount Olive Junior College, Mount Olive, North Carolina, has just completed a week of spiritual emphasis activities under the leadership of the Reverend Michael Pelt, pastor of Hull Road Free Will Baptist Church, Snow Hill, North Carolina. In every respect the week's program was successful. Here are the evaluations of two of the college students with reference to Spiritual Emphasis Program.

This Week in Review

Hilda Boykin
Wilson, N. C.

My impression of this week is that it has been a week of real spiritual thought presented to us as students which we can accept or reject. I believe we have been shown some very vital things to think about in Christian living. Therefore, I believe what each person has received from our spiritual emphasis week really depends on the individual—his needs, attitudes, and whether or not he is willing to think about these things and apply them to his own life or just to listen to what has been said and then forget it.

I believe each of us has received blessings from the services and that we will continue to receive blessings if we retain these spiritual thoughts and live our Christian lives as it has been suggested to us during this week—in our personal devotions, studying, in our church, our vocation and our relations with others.

I think we have been challenged to live a more dedicated, consecrated Christian life.

My Evaluation of Spiritual Emphasis Week

Allen P. Overman
Pikeville, N. C.

Within the life of each individual is found something of the nature of God. Especially is this true for the student in college who is looking for truth. In biology we are looking for the truth about man's existence and his environment. This is related to God because He is truth and the Creator of all truth. Math teaches us to use basic principles to achieve a goal and likewise we must follow certain patterns as set forth by our Lord and Master. English teaches us how to express our feelings and views.

This program of spiritual emphasis has helped me to see more fully my relationship to God in my chosen vocation and how I can serve God and my fellow man.

Much emphasis throughout the week has been placed on the word think. The type of messages Mr. Pelt delivered certainly was challenging to the mind.

May I say that I have been well pleased with the student participation in these programs because I realize that this is very essential to stimulate interest on the part of the student body. I would suggest that those in charge from time to time make use of special talents. An example was the special music provided by Mr. Pendergraft which strengthened my confidence in the interest of faculty members toward religious affairs.

I believe the time of year the program was held was just right. It arouses the spiritual interest within each student just before the Christmas season.

I am fully interested in seeing this program continued as it stimulates the spiritual interest of students and is evidenced to those who have an eye on the college that the cause of Christ is an inclusive part of college life here at Mount Olive Junior College

Campaign Drive for Bible College

This is a report of the response for gifts to pay off the note on the Dunbar property. On October 6 the Free Will Baptist Bible College, Nashville, Tennessee, mailed 11,000 letters telling of the need to meet a $15,000 note on November 10. We appreciate the gifts that many of you sent but as the report shows, the response was not nearly enough to meet the need.

We kept as accurate a record as possible of every gift that came as a response to our letter. To date we have received 205 gifts for a total of $3,286.82. Of these 205 gifts, 170 came from individuals and 35 from churches or church organizations. The average amount of the gift was $16.04. The percentage of response was about 2%. That is, almost 2 people out of 100 who received the letter responded with a gift. If we could have a 10% response we could easily pay for the property.

I feel that we can have better than a 10% response. I believe if all who intended to send a gift when the first letter was received will sit down and send your gift today, enough will come in by Christmas to pay the balance. The Bible College took enough out of its general fund to pay $5,000 on the note. This has drained our general fund to a low point and we need enough gifts to pay the $10,000 still owed on the property and reimburse our general fund.

Let me ask you who have not made your gift to do so if you possibly can so this indebtedness of our Bible College can be taken care of.

As I have checked over the list of those who have already sent in their gifts I saw so many names of people I know personally, and of course some of you I do not know personally, but I thank God for everyone of you and for the gift. I know there are hundreds of others who realize the importance of the work that Free Will Baptist Bible College is doing and are just as interested as these whose names are already listed. Let us all join together in enjoying another victory for our Bible College.

May God bless you.

His Mother's Christmas Gift

MARY S. STOVER

A young American of twenty-three was taking a postgraduate year at Waseda University, Tokyo. As winter drew on, the contrast between his pagan surroundings and old home scenes awoke in him such keen gratitude for his Christian upbringing that he penned a poem which he named, "My Creed" to send as a Christmas greeting to his mother in New England.

She sent the lines to Harper's Magazine, where they were printed in 1906. Their author's Oriental experiences led him into training for service as a foreign missionary. In 1918 influenza put an end to his direct missionary work in India, but the little poem continues to inspire young folks all over the world. We know it as the hymn, "I Would Be True."—Gospel Herald.

It Illustrates

Said a beautifully-dressed woman to her pastor, "Did you see my two new diamond rings I received for my Christmas present?"

"Yes," said her pastor, "I saw them when you dropped that dime in the missionary collection plate."

Perhaps that story is apocryphal; probably it is. But it illustrates.

Prayer and Praise Letter

December 4, 1956

Dear Friends,

FROM SOUTH INDIA WE RECEIVED THIS REPORT: "Kotagiri is draped in mourning this week end, as 31 men from one village are dead and 15 are missing, while 18 are wounded from a train accident between Madras and Tuticorin. 64 men left here on pilgrimage to worship at a shrine down on the southeast coast. Due to unprecedented heavy rainfall these past weeks a bridge across a river gave way and 7 bogies and the engine of the train capsized into the river. Upwards of 150 were killed, the above number from here. The entire 64 were from Aravenu (the first village just outside of Kotagiri on Mettupalayam road) and the adjoining village, which means practically the entire citizenry of prominent men. Surely it is a visitation from God. Some Christian man commented sorrowfully, 'And God was right here in their midst, they need not have gone away to search for Him.' Pray that this may turn out to the furtherance of the gospel somehow in His infinite wisdom and providence. Who would ever imagine that a train wreck several hundred miles away would so affect a little obscure place like Kotagiri in such an outstanding way?"

RAY TURNAGE, league secretary, reports visit to Cuba: "On November 17, 18, I was privileged to attend the Free Will Baptist Young People's Convention in Pinar del Rio, Cuba. After seeing the work carried on by our missionaries it was very easy to comprehend what they speak about at conferences, associations and other meetings. The needs for better school facilities and better transportation could be seen without effort.

"The graduates of our Cuban school seem to be faithful and consecrated workers. They too labor under many difficulties. One Cuban pastor had nine preaching points and his only source of transportation was a horse. After seeing one of the small Cuban churches, 16' by 16', where at least 250 people gather to worship, I was convinced that our "Chapels for Cuba" goal of $10,000 was rather short.

"The Cubans are grateful to those leaguers who contributed so generously to the Chapel Fund. They need many chapels in order to accomodate thousands of Cubans the graduates of our Cuban school are trying to shepherd.

"Not everyone can go to visit our work in Cuba, but believe me the Lord is blessing the work and the needs are great."

TWO NEW STATIONS IN JAPAN, from our missionaries, Wesley and Aileen Calvery: "Our work now is divided into two stations. They are Abashiri City, where we live, and Bihoro town, which is about 40 minutes away by train. I have told you about these places before but now we have actually started work in both places. Abashiri (40,000) has a Catholic, Episcopal and Holiness church. Bihoro (25,000) has no church at all. We plan to visit every house with the gospel in both of these towns. The meetings in Abashiri at present are held in our home. For these meetings we use Japanese style and sit on the floor. On Sunday morning from 7 a. m. to 11:30 a. m. we have Sunday school in Abashiri. We have about 90 children who come regularly to these meetings. Aileen and I do the teaching with the help of two Japanese Christians. On Sunday night we have our adult Bible class with about 15 in attendance. I do the teaching for this meeting. Now for Bihoro: We have rented a small building in the center of town which we use for our meeting place. We spend Saturday in Bihoro. Saturday afternoon we have children's meetings with about 35 children and Saturday night we have our adult meeting with about 30 in attendance. The meetings in Bihoro were only started 3 weeks ago so we are expecting it to grow."

FLASH: The appointment of Miss Esther Ruehle, R. N., to our mission work in Cuba has just been made. She hopes to accompany Miss Lucy Wisheart to Cuba shortly after January 1, 1957.

For some time we have needed a nurse in Cuba and we praise the Lord for this appointment.

MY CHRISTMAS GIFT TO FOREIGN MISSIONS: Surely no Christian would miss the opportunity of making a generous contribution to foreign missions at Christmas time. Our department faces the new year with the greatest challenge and responsibility in our history. For your Christmas offering give through your local church or send direct to the foreign mission office. We must have your help to reach those who have never heard.

MARTYRED MEN: A new 16 millimeter sound motion picture in color, has been added to our film library. This is the account of the five missionaries who were slain in the jungle of Ecuador in their attempt to reach the Auca Indians with the gospel. Official color photographs taken of the pagan Auca Indians, plus the unforgettable testimony of Marilou and T. E. McCulley, wife and father of Ed McCully, one of the five slain missionaries. Did these five missionaries die in vain? See this film and find the answer. Available for showing in our churches on a freewill offering basis for foreign missions.

DID YOU KNOW? That the highest per member giving in the United States in 1955 was recorded by Seventh Day Adventist whose per capita total contributions amounted to $194.12. Also they sent 377 new missionaries overseas last year. They carry on mission work in 184 of the 205 countries and political subdivisions recognized by the United Nations, and in 731 languages.

WE PRAISE THE LORD for the attached financial report and we regret that limited space prevents us from telling you more! Thanks to all of you who are faithful to this work and may the riches of His grace invade each of your hearts during this season.

Sincerely yours,
Raymond Riggs

The New Heaven and Earth

(Lesson for December 30)

Lesson: Revelation 21:1-27.

Golden Text: Revelation 21:4.

I. INTRODUCTION

The fact that God will dwell among His redeemed people is assurance that heaven will be perfect. God, being altogether righteous and holy, will not permit that which is imperfect, sinful or hurtful in His presence. These heavenly relationships will surpass in grandeur the power of words to describe them. However, John attempts to picture its glories by telling some things which will not be there.

All distasteful experiences will be banished forever (Vs. 4). We can grasp, at least in some measure, the glories of a place free from heartache and pain.

For whom is this wonderful place prepared? One of the tragedies of time and eternity is that all people will not be there. The Lord tells John, "He that overcometh shall inherit all things! and I will be his God, and he shall be my son" (Vs. 7).—The Bible Student (F. W. B.).

II. HELPFUL HINTS

1. The new heaven and earth and the new Jerusalem will together make the glorious world to come (Vv. 1, 2).

2. It is not the location nor the grandeur of a place, but the presence and care of the Lord that make it heaven (Vv. 3, 4).

3. When the purpose of God through time is finished, He will again make all things new (Vv. 5, 6).

4. Only those who overcome will enjoy heaven's blessings, and each will inherit an equal share (Vs. 7).

5. Those who deny the reality of hell still face the problem of a burning lake of fire (20:10; 21:8).

6. There will be no need of a church house in heaven, for God in person will dwell with His people (Vs. 22).

7. In heaven where the light of God will prevail the sun's feeble light could not even be seen (Vv. 23-26).

8. Those whose names are in the book of life are such as will never defile the holy city (Vs. 27).—The Bible Teacher (F. W. B.).

III. ADDITIONAL TRUTHS

1. Why is a new creation necessary? We might be willing to grant that we need a new earth because of the unrighteousness and the moral defilement of the present one. But what of heaven? We need to remember that heaven also became defiled when Lucifer rebelled against God and became the devil. God is not in the reforming business but in regenerating. He regenerates the human soul, and He will also regenerate, or recreate, heaven and earth for a regenerated population.

2. Kind friends say comforting words and do all in their power to assuage the pangs of sorrow; but human comfort, at its best is imperfect and inadequate. The tears are wiped away but the tender hand of love, but they soon begin to flow again. One wound of sorrow is hardly healed before another comes.

How gloriously different it will be in eternity when God shall wipe away all tears from our eyes! That will be perfection of comfort. Grief will never come again. Sorrow shall be unknown. There will be no disappointment in heaven.—Selected.

3. In this Scripture and in any other we fail to find the doctrine of universalism, that all men will finally be saved. The offer of salvation is to "whosoever will, let him take the Water of Life freely." But there must be a personal faith and reception to make it effective. We are not trying to shut anyone out of the new heaven or the new earth, or to discourage anyone from coming to Christ, we are telling what the Word of God says and what we know by experience and observation. Anyone who advocates this heresy is doing a disservice to men. He has to begin to deny the authority and divine inspiration of the Word of God; for we have seen that the Word teaches the blessedness of believers and the eternal misery of unbelievers. It lulls men into a false security that ends in everlasting loss.—The Bible Expositor.

4. It is noticeable that the Bible lays emphasis upon the free moral agency of man, at the opening of the Old Testament and the closing of the New. Unless one is classed with little children or people without responsible minds, he has to give his life to God and have a purpose. This is implied in the word overcometh which is a favorite expression in Revelation. Salvation is not by works, and eternal life is not a reward but a gift. He that overcometh shall inherit all things.—Selected.

5. In this new heaven and new earth there is a complete and final separation from the presence of sin and sinners. Between them there is a great gulf fixed which is impassable (Luke 16). There is an eternal abode for the saved and one for the lost. Here, saints and sinners are mixed and live together. But that state will come to an end definitely, once for all. The new heaven will consist of the redeemed of the past ages, and the new earth will be peopled by the nations that were saved. The Word of God is quite explicit about this final separation between the saved and the lost.—Selected.

6. Meet me there! Oh, meet me there!
In the heavenly world so fair,
Where our Lord has entered in,
And there comes no taint of sin,
With our friends of long ago,
Clad in raiment white as snow,
Such as all the ransomed wear,—
Meet me there! Yes, meet me there!

Meet me there! Oh, meet me there!
Far beyond this world of care;
When this troubled life shall cease,
Meet me where is perfect peace;
Where our sorrows we lay down
For the kingdom and the crown,
Jesus doth a home prepare,—
Meet me there! Yes, meet me there

Meet me there! Oh, meet me there!
No bereavements we shall bear;
There no sighings for the dead,
There no farewell tear is shed;
We shall, safe from all alarms,
Clasp our loved ones in our arms,
And in Jesus' glory share,—
Meet me there! Yes, meet me there!
—Selected from Gospel Hymns.
